Club Reports.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting at Mr. Hannighan's; Mr. R. Hutchinson chair. Mr. J. Mason, Oxhill, was enrolled a member. Decided that Mr. W. H. Butler, South Shields, be judge for young bird show, June 27, and Mr. T. Dixon, Bedlington Station, for annual show Dec. 12. We invite fanciers to join our society, which is going very strong at present; we have two cups for competition at our annual show, and several specials are promised already.—W. Thompson, Sec.

PENICUIK O.S.

Meeting in Cowan Institute, April 11. Mr. George Greig, vice-pres., in chair, and a good attendance. Three new members were elected to the cage bird section—Messrs. Douglas, Gilchrist, and Steel. Decided to hold the show on the third Saturday of November if a suitable hall can be got for that day. Judges were nominated, and their names will be announced after they accept office. Classification for the Canary section was drawn up:—7 Borders, 4 Scotch Fancy, 4 Nor. Two British, one Mule or Hybrid, and a Foreign bird class will be added if required.—Jas. Weir, Sec.

TREDEGAR C.B.S.

Meeting April 25, Mr. E. Powell in chair. Auditors' report of year's working accepted. Decided to hold open show Jan. 11. Classification: Crests, 2; Nor., 8 (novice 2); Yorks, 10 (novice, 4); Bord., 2; Sell., 2; Brit., 7; Hyb., 2; For., 2; Local, 1; Members', 4. Election of judge will take place next meeting, also a paper will be read on general management of Canaries by our worthy treasurer, Mr. E. G. Bevan. I trust we shall have a good muster of members and friends, as I am certain with the experience Mr. Bevan has we shall hear something good. Now, novices, don't forget your questions.—W. B. Watkins, Hon. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting at headquarters, Oldham Hall, April 23. Letter read from Mr. Young resigning from the committee. New members elected: Messrs. W. Lamby, Alex. Forest, A. Pugh, Hockliss, and E. Ewin. The following were proposed: Messrs. Rothwell, Hartley, Pullin. Applications for patronage read from London C.B.A., Bradford, Newcastle,. Officers for ensuing year:—Chair, J. W. Metcalfe; vice, J. Walker; sec. and treas., Fredk. Handley; assist. sec., J. Lloyd; auditors, T. R. Jones, Ewing; committee, J. Abbott, T. Evans, T. R. Jones, R. Brotherton, W. Carruthers, D. Steinart, J. Handley. The election of pres. and vice-pres. is left to the sec. Members who have not paid up, please do so at once. In the Border Section Mr. Little wins cash special with 47 points. We are running the novice scheme again, and our next meeting, May 28, is for the purpose of settling matters.—F. Handley, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Annual general meeting in Nelson's Temp. Hotel, Ap. 21, Mr. J. F. Park presiding over a fair attendance. Sec. submitted financial statement, which was considered satisfactory. The question of again running an open show was considered, and it was unanimously agreed to do so on same dates as formerly, Nov. 20 and 21. The question of raising a guarantee fund was discussed, and it was decided to raise same, and to ask the co-operation of the various Glasgow clubs towards that object. Election of office-bearers: Pres., Mr. J. F. Park; vice-pres., Messrs. A. Sloan and McLay; treas., Mr. Wm. Gunion; assist. sec., Mr. D. F. Webster; sec., W. Hutchison; auditors, Messrs. Heggie and Maxwell; comm. of 13, Messrs. Craig, F. Taylor, E. Barron, E. Taylor, R. Watson, T. Fraser, A. Swann, P. Huston, C. Martin, A. Walker, J. C. Sinclair, Wm. Priest, D. Wyllis. Decided to hold half-yearly meeting May 28 for election of judges etc. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting, Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, April 21. President, Mr. A. W. Watson, in chair, and a large turnout of members. Sec. gave a report as to the letting of Lynecastle Hall for annual show. The society are again fortunate in securing the said hall for annual show, as although the price of same is a little more than previous years, yet, considering the size of hall, and its convenience, it is well worth the money. Sec.'s action was endorsed by the members as to the booking of hall for Nov. 28. Two new members elected: Mr. A. Bell, jun., and Mr. A. Morrison. Sec. was instructed to try to arrange for a ramble some Saturday afternoon a few weeks hence. Members wrote questions on slips of paper, which were afterward drawn from a hat, each member giving an answer to the question which he had drawn, some other members also giving their methods of feeding, etc., and answering the questions. The members spent an hour and a half on questions, and answers were very interesting and instructive.—J. C. Charlton, Sec.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Meeting, Spencer Hall, April 27. Mr. R. T. Dann, chair. Mr. G. E. Weston gave a very interesting chat on Mule Breeding. He considered a cage 40 inches long, 12 high, and 10 deep, divided into three compartments, was a good size to use, and this, after the breeding season is over, could be used as three stock cages by inserting the partitions. He preferred to have the nest boxes outside the cage; this had many advantages, not only saving room, but from personal experience he found that the Finches seldom, if ever, entered the nest box, and it did away with the bad habit of the Finches breaking the eggs. The boxes he used were made of wood—top, back, and bottom, with wire sides, with a hole cut in the bottom in which to fix the nest. The nest he used was a blocked leather one, as the earthenware ones he considered were too deep. When the hen had finished building they were often cone shaped, and all you could see of her was the tip of the tail and beak; also it not only hampered the hen in feeding the young, but he believed was in many cases the cause of sweating, as the young ones had not the same chance of helping themselves as in the more shallow nest. He thought the Goldfinch was most used for muling, also that birds which had not bred in a wild state were the most reliable mulers. He preferred purchasing his birds in October; good sized Siberian Greypates suited him best, a good choice of which you can get at many shops in that month. As regards the hens, the ones to use were good sized yellow Norwich, bred from clears in preference to the much-talked-of Sib.-bred pink-eyed ones. He firmly believed that the Finch was the dominating factor as regards obtaining light Mules. For the Canary-Bullfinch cross he preferred a hen more of the Yorkshire type, one that is lively in the cage, to the thick set bird, as the latter kind had a tendency to develop fat, which was detrimental to them as breeders. For green food he much preferred the taraxacum (dandelion leaves) to any other. He strongly recommended the use of safflower seed in preference to hemp, which was too oily and fattening. Also, he considered that bad hemp was often the cause of fatalities amongst our birds. For other foods we can all read in CAGE BIRDS from week to week those which are suitable to bring our birds into condition. Mr. Weston also spoke of many other interesting points too numerous to mention. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Weston was passed unanimously, and brought a very enjoyable and instructive evening to a close. Four new members were elected: Messrs. K. Harley, B. Wales, J. C. Brown, and W. C. Overton.—J. Hyd , Hon. Sec.

BARRY F. AND F.S.

Meeting, April 8, Mr. W. W. Marshall, chair. Decided to join the South Wales and Mon. Federation. Mr. J. Tenlett elected member of committee. Next meeting, May 13, 7.30, at Rosser's Restaurant, Holton Road, Barry Dock.—H. P. Thomas

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting Headquarters, April 27, Mr. H. Norman chair, and a goodly number present. Sec. read letters from a number of clubs applying for patronage. Decided to allot the patronage to Watford, Plymouth, Palace Autumn Show, Cheltenham, Bournemouth, Portsmouth, L.C.B.A., Llanelly. It will be seen that the committee have done their best to consider the claims of all members by distributing the patronage, so that each district is fairly represented. No two shows take place in any one week, and there will be six different judges officiating at the eight shows selected. It is to be regretted that we were not able to allot the patronage to all those clubs which received it last year, but several dates clashed, and as it is too great a strain on some of the members to show at two shows on the same date, the committee selected those which they thought would best suit the majority of the members. Members elected: Messrs. Green, Owen, Preece, and Elston. No new members were nominated, this being the first blank meeting in this respect. The secretary would be pleased to forward particulars of membership to any fancier of the Border Canary in the South. A considerable discussion arose on the model adopted by the club, several of the members stating that they did not think it wise for the club to adopt a model which differed from the models of the older clubs, and they thought it might be the cause of some friction. Decided that for the present the model should be withdrawn, but should it be found in the future that there was still a feeling that the existing model required some alteration, the Northern clubs should be approached with a view to all falling in line. A very lengthy meeting was brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the chairman.—F. W. Burton, Hon. Sec., 91, Forest-road, Dalston, N.E.

Cage Birds last week and the Coloured Plate were excellent.—J. B. Lothian (Edinburgh).

I congratulate Cage Birds on the splendid spring double number and the beautiful coloured plate.—John Craig (Beith).

Mr. R. E. Helliwell, Halifax, will judge the Yorkshire section at the Liverpool Bird Breeders' Association show, Nov. 28.

Miss Kirk Bullock, hon. sec. and treas. Hastings and St. Leonards C.B.S., is removing to 6, Holmesdale Gardens, Hastings.

We hear from Mr. J. C. Mossop, hon. sec., that the annual show of the Grange-over-Sands P.P. and C.B.S. is fixed for Dec. 3.

Mr. J. Raynes will judge Stockport and Hazel Grove Members' N.F. show, June 20, at Trinity House, Stockport, writes Mr. W. Stafford, hon. sec.

Mr. G. Siddoun, sec. Ilkeston C.B.S., writes that he is removing to No. 45, Lower Granby Street, Ilkeston. Correspondence should be addressed accordingly.

Permit me to state that one of your readers has again been returned as a member of Newbattle School Board, writes Mr. A. Anderson (Newtongrange).

The Spring Issue was extra good, the articles being of great interest. I learned a lot from this one issue. Good luck to Cage Birds.—E. Davies (Manchester).

The May issue of "British Birds," Witherby and Co., High Holborn, 1s. monthly, contains a very complete index to Vol. 7, June 1913 to May 1914. The number opens with an article, "Snipe and Redshank Nesting in Sussex," by Col. H. W. Fielden, and the rest of the issue is occupied by records of the recovery of marked birds, some interesting letters, and a list of occurrences of rare birds in Scotland.

For hand-rearing young birds, either Canaries or British birds, there is probably no better implement than the "Filnp" feeder, made by Messrs. Goodman and Co. Messrs. Goodman, owing to the splendid reception given to their feeders by cage bird fanciers, are enabled to sell them on a 14 days' free trial basis. Full particulars may be had from Messrs. Goodman at 24, Bedford Road, Kempston, Bedford.

At the City and Suburban A.C.B. meeting on Monday next, May 11th, a lecture entitled the "Bird Within the Egg" is to be given by Mr. G. E. Weston, who will deal with the fertilising of the egg and the progress of the embryo bird until hatched, while causes of clear eggs, young failing to hatch or dying in the egg at an early stage, etc., and why pedigree breeding is essential, will be discussed. All fanciers are invited to attend. Meeting at 8.15 p.m., at headquarters, Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, High Street, Marylobone, W. (near Baker Street Tube Station and motor 'buses).

EGGS WANTED FOR THE HOSPITALS.

Hospital Egg Week, organised by our sister paper, The Poultry World, commences next Tuesday, the inclusive dates being May 12 to May 19. During this week poultry-keepers throughout the United Kingdom send new-laid eggs to the offices of The Poultry World, and these are in turn distributed amongst the inmates of the Great Metropolitan Hospitals. Last year over 27,000 new-laid eggs were collected, but it is hoped that this number will be exceeded during the coming Egg-Week.

We quote below the words of the Secretary of the Great Northern Hospital:—

"A gift of new laid eggs is one of the most acceptable that can be made to any hospital."

Many readers of Cage Birds keep poultry, and we appeal to them to spare as many eggs as they can for the Hospitals. Others, too, who have poultry keeping friends, would be conferring a favour on us if they would ask them to send new laid eggs during the Hospital Egg Week. All eggs should be sent carefully packed and carriage paid to The Poultry World, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., to reach the offices between May 12 and May 19.

We are pleased to see from the annual report that the Wimbledon C.B.S. is in a very flourishing condition. Despite a slight loss on the annual show, they have a cash balance of £25 12s. 9d., and assets altogether totalling £44 17s. 9d. This excellent society is also very much alive from the point of view of membership, 125 fanciers being on the books. The unavoidable secession of their tried and trusted secretary, Mr. H. Smith, is regretted by all, but in Mr. G. Griffiths (The Yews, Kingston Road, Merton Park) the society has secured an enthusiastic and capable successor, who will be glad to hear from anyone desirous of becoming a member.

We have read the balance sheet of the Sheffield O.S. for 1913. This sets forth details of receipts and expenditure over the members', N.F., and open shows, and also the management account. The members' show resulted in a loss of £5 14s. 7d., and 19s. 10d. was lost over the N.F. show. The open show, however, produced the very satisfactory profit balance of £14 17s. 11d., and the management account, which includes the £47 13s. brought forward from 1912, and all items of revenue and expenditure, shows that the present cash balance in hand is £65 4s. 6d. In addition there is an asset of £3 15s. 6d. for cash owing for advts. We congratulate the officials of the Sheffield O.S. upon the satisfactory results of their year's work.

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. Hodgson (Idle).

It is with profound sorrow, writes Mr. C. E. Hylton, Sec. Idle C.B.S., I have to report the tragic death of one of our members, Mr. J. A. Hodgson, whose death has cast a pall over the whole district. He went out to his work as usual on May 2nd, in robust health, and just before dinner-time, having to descend a ladder, he missed his hold and fell some 30 feet, dying at the Bradford Infirmary between 6 and 7 o'clock. I am sure all fanciers will extend with us their deepest sympathy to his widow and two young children.

Mr. J. McLean (Coppull).

The Chorley and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. J. H. Welch, hon. sec., regrets to announce the death of one of its oldest members, Mr. J. McLean, of Coppull, nr. Chorley. He had always taken a deep interest in the Society, and was one of our best exhibitors. He had been a member of our society since its foundation, and his loss will be greatly felt by all the members.

The Jackdaw' Egg Diet.

Jackdaws now visit the British Museum daily to feast on the eggs of the Pigeons that nest over the portico, says "The Standard."

A Rare Visitor.

Mr. W. Wells Bladen writes to "British Birds" that on April 16 a Hoopoe paid a short visit to the lawn of Trentham Vicarage (Staffordshire).

Like Father Like Daughter.

The winning Yorkshire at the Palace of Messrs. Fisher and Dyson (Skelmanthorpe), depicted on our front page this week, was the father of the buff hen which also won 1st prize for them at the Crystal Palace show.

Sharing the Toil.

In the "Scotsman" a correspondent mentions a case of co-operative bird-nesting in which he found a nest with three Hedge Sparrow's eggs and two Thrush's eggs. The Hedge Sparrow sat in the morning and the Thrush in the afternoon. The correspondent was away before the eggs were hatched, so does not know the end of the tale. [We should hesitate to describe this as a "tale."—Editor, Cage Birds.]

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: West Bromwich C.B.S., May 10, to Clent Hills, etc., meet 8.30 a.m., King's Head, Hagley Road; Huddersfield O.S., May 11, meet 2 p.m., top of King Street; Poplar C.B.S., May 10, to Laindon, meet East Ham Station, 9.35; and Woolwich C.B.S., May 17, to Swanley, via Bexley, meet 8.15 a.m., at the Fountain, Wickham Lane, Plumstead. Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not.

A Winner from Winners.

My winning unflighted buff Yorkshire Canary (see portrait on front page) is a grandson of my old wing-ticked yellow cock that won the silver cup at Bristol Fanciers' Show in 1908 in a very strong class, also 1st Cardiff, 1st and S.Y.C.C. diploma Swansea National, 1909. I consider this bird one of the best I ever bred, as he possesses in a marked degree all the essential qualities required to make a really typical Yorkshire. It may be of interest to note that the parents of this bird are both winners, as also were his great-grandparents, and it is apparent I have a predeliction for in breeding. I am fully convinced one must work on scientific lines, and that pedigree breeding must be our motto if success is desired, no matter what the variety may be.—George Thomson (Cardiff).

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES.

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

More Guineas for Bird Breeders; A Lady Aviculturist Generously Swells the Prize List.

OUR scheme to provide some recognition of the efforts of bird-lovers who break new ground in the breeding of birds—whether Canaries, Mules, Hybrids, British, or Foreign—would seem to find favour in the eyes of our readers. Last week, when we first printed details of the scheme in our columns we invited expressions of opinion, whether favourable or otherwise, and up to the time of going to press no adverse comment of any kind, or even suggestions of amendments, has reached us; congratulations, on the other hand, have been numerous.

We are chary of thinking, however, that Cage Birds' latest scheme is so perfect that improvement in some particular or particulars cannot be effected. We would, therefore, again ask kindly readers who may see some point or points which in their opinion could be advantageously altered, or some direction in which the scheme could be extended in scope, to write us at once. We shall welcome all suggestions; and every one shall be given full consideration.

A very handsome addition to the prize-list is the welcome announcement we have to make this week. Mrs. E. Warren Vernon, whose interest in the cage breeding of British birds we referred to in our last issue, has written us saying that she will give

A Cash Prize of One Guinea yearly, over a term of not less than five years, to the fancier who breeds the rarest British Softbill in a cage.

The decision is to be left to the Editor or committee, as per rule 6. The generous donor expresses the hope that these prizes may lead to a large number of successes. We, too, hope so; at any rate Mrs. Warren Vernon is assured that her offer will be widely appreciated by British bird enthusiasts.

Several fanciers have notified us of their intention to do their utmost to win certificates or medals in one or other of the sections. Most gratifying of all, we hear already that there is a possibility of a claimant appearing for an award in the section covering new varieties of Canaries.

We are not now at liberty to divulge the name of the breeder (a lady, by the way) but feel that we cannot resist the temptation to make public this item of information, as it should stimulate others to think out how departures from the present breeds may be secured, and in this way to endeavour to add a new spice of interest to the exhibitions of the 1914-15 season.

Revised particulars of Cage Birds Prizes for Breeders are appended. To encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in cages and aviaries, Cage Birds suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to the sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

which is presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in Cage Birds, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of Cage Birds will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

The Wheatear in London.

That well-known British bird enthusiast, Mr. W. A. Lott, who worked so hard in the early days of the N.B.B. & M.C. as its secretary, tells us of a happening which seems well worthy of being put on record, namely, the capture of a fine male Wheatear in his garden in Clapham, not far from the heart of the city! On April 19th Mr. Lott discovered this bird crawling about in a crippled condition, obviously having been mauled by a cat, one wing being badly torn. Mr. Lott naturally did everything he could to get the bird to survive, but unfortunately without success; it succumbed within twenty-four hours. It was a really fine specimen.

Elderly Cage Birds.

In recent issues of a daily contemporary, several readers have given interesting details of elderly pet birds.

"I have a Goldfinch Mule which will be eighteen years old next month. Is this a record?"—C. Cook (Wellingboro.).

I am the happy possessor of a Bullfinch, now in his thirteenth year, in perfect health and condition, who occupies the same cage he was put into twelve and half years ago, but he is allowed a certain amount of freedom, which he makes full use of, for bathing, etc. —C. Boulnois (Chertsey).

I think I can beat all records up to now, for I had a Goldfinch Mule live to twenty-four years of age. As a curiosity I had it put in the Swindon Bird Show when it was twenty-three years old.—M. Warburton (Swindon).

I read that Miss Cocking, of Harlington, has a Canary fourteen years old. I thought that you would like to know that I possess a bird (a cross between a Goldfinch and Canary) which is twenty-one years' old. He is in perfect health, but his eyesight is failing. He sang beautifully up to as late as last summer. He is very fond of sponge-cake and walnuts. I do not know whether you would consider this a very great age for a Mule bird, but I should think it is very rare to find one so old. He has thus lived in three reigns—Queen Victoria, Edward VII., and George V.—D. E. Houghton (Caversham).

I have had a yellow African Weaver since Sept. 7, 1895. He also has lived in three reigns, and he was not a young bird when I bought him. Every day he takes a bath, and never leaves his cage, which he decorates in a wonderful way with bits of cotton which are given to him. He is unique in one thing, I fancy; in that he escaped and flew out of one window lately, coming in very soon by another which was only open about four inches.—M. M. Furlong (St. Andrews, Bridport) in the "Daily Express."

The Fascinating Pursuit of Mule and Hybrid Breeding.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

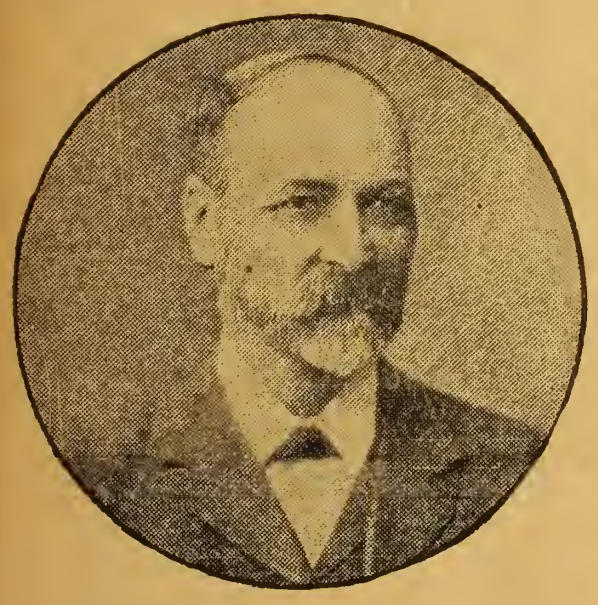
A splendidly helpful article by one of our most successful breeders and exhibitors.

SOME breeders advise the use of hand-reared Finches for breeding, especially the British hens, and I at once admit that there is one great advantage in this. Hand-reared specimens have never known any other life than that of the cage or aviary and more readily settle down to breeding, whereas the wild caught birds have to be gradually steadied and accustomed to their new mode of life, which often requires considerable time and patience. But here the advantage of the hand-reared specimen ends.

Once your wild-caught bird has adapted itself to its new conditions of life it is, in my opinion, much to be preferred for the purposes of breeding. As a general rule British birds which have been hand-reared lack the size and stamina of wild-caught birds, and both these qualities are essential in a bird which is to be successful either in the breeding room or on the show-bench.

In my earlier day of Hybrid breeding I reared several nests of Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Greenfinches, and Linnets, but almost without exception I found the birds quite unsuitable for breeding, and since those early days I have not troubled to experiment any further in this direction, rather choosing to select my prospective breeders from wild-caught specimens. In selecting your Finches always choose the big, bold birds, of good type and colour, and be as careful in your choice of hens as of the cocks. You are not likely to produce a good Mule or Hybrid from small parents of poor type and colour.



Mr. Jas. B. Richardson, of Dumfries, first president of the Border Fancy C.C., and recently honoured by its members (see page 415.). Mr. Richardson named this variety of Canary the "Border Fancy."

As I have already pointed out, it is not necessary to pay a very big price, nor do you require an exhibition specimen. A striking illustration of the truth of this statement is provided by my Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrid so ably depicted in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, which has won over forty prizes at the leading shows, including 1st prize Crystal Palace 1911, and which last season, in his eighth year, was still able to hold his own in the best of company, standing in the money cards at the L.C.B.A. (Horticultural Hall), Scottish National, and Crystal Palace Shows. Yet the parents of this bird were bought for less than half-a-sovereign.

To give another instance, the Linnet from which I bred my well-known Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrid was not by any means an exhibition specimen. It failed in breast markings, and was not so prominent in whites as some I have seen, but I have yet to see the Linnet I would sooner have for breeding. Of great size, with fine head and chest, and wonderfully rich in colour, he was an ideal bird for the work required of him.

When Exhibition Points Don't Count.

In selecting a Goldfinch, rather choose a big Finch without the square blaze, than a smaller bird because he possesses that quality. One often sees a very small Finch winning at a show because of its good exhibition points, which would be quite unsuitable for the breeding cage.

I have dealt at some length with this matter of selection as it is of great importance. In the great majority of cases Mule and Hybrid breeders are content to purchase the first Finches that come their way and then pair them up in haphazard fashion without any thought as to their suitability to one another. This method can only lead to failure; and nothing discourages more than repeated failures. Many young beginners in the Fancy have thrown up their hobby in disgust because the results of their first season's work were disappointing, when a little care would have made all the difference.

The next important matter is the housing of our birds. Before deciding upon the kind of cages to be used we must settle whether we intend to carry out our breeding operations in an indoor room or out of doors. I have given both methods a fair trial, and I do not hesitate to give my verdict in favour of the open-air treatment. All my Hybrids and most of my Mules were bred in the open air. There is nothing like fresh air for your Britishers, and for Hybrid breeding, at any rate, I would strongly recommend pairing your birds outside.

Of course, you will have to protect your birds from the attacks of the feline tribe, and afford them shelter from rain. You will also find it necessary to have larger cages, as the birds will require plenty of exercise.

The Hybrid Cages Described.

My Hybrid breeding-cages are each five feet long, two feet high, and eighteen inches from front to back. Each cage can be divided into two compartments by a sliding partition, and there is a separate wiro front to each compartment, so that there is no difficulty in cleansing, removing the eggs, or the nest-box, etc., as the birds may be shut off during these operations.

Each compartment is provided with a drawer 1½ inches deep, which should run freely so that the work of cleaning, etc., may be carried out without disturbing the birds more than is necessary. You will find these drawers indispensable during breeding operations, for British hens, though they generally make a lot of fuss at nest-building, almost invariably drop their eggs from the perches, and unless some floor protection is afforded, these eggs are broken. Hence the necessity for the drawers, which should be kept full of coarse pine sawdust during the breeding season; at other times grit and sand should be used for the bottoms.

As breeding time approaches the perches should be brought to a lower level, about two inches above the sawdust, to prevent the breaking of eggs dropped from the perches.

Contriving the Nest.

When arranging your nesting receptacles for your Hybrid pairs it would be advisable to give your British hens a choice of building sites, say an old Hartz Roller travelling-cage, or small back cage, with the two ends removed, and branches of fir fixed along the front and top, containing a nest pan, or an old Blackbird's nest fixed firmly in the bottom. Or use an ordinary square nesting box containing a clod of turf beaten into the shape of a nest, the grass forming a lining. Round the outside of this box fasten some branches of fir, leaving an opening on either side for the hen to enter or leave the nest. These receptacles should bo placed on a level with the perches. In addition to these, a nest pan may be placed in a secluded corner on the floor of the cage.

All my cages are arranged under a lean-to roof of wood and felting, supported in front by four posts and at the back and sides by thick walls. The whole front is covered with ½-inch wire-netting, with a door at one end. This structure is 18 feet long, 8 feet high, and 6 feet from front to back. The cages are always dry and the birds safe from the attacks of cats.

If you have no convenient spot for the erection of such a structure, and are compelled to breed your birds indoors, then your cages need not be quite so large, though I am a great believer in large, roomy cages which will allow the birds plenty of exercise.

The cages for Mule breeding do not require the deep drawers, as the Canary hens can generally be trusted to carry out their parental duties in a satisfactory manner. There must be a sliding partition, however, for it will often be found necessary to shut off the Finch, while the hen is laying, and during incubation and the early days of rearing of the young brood. My Mule breeding-cages are each 4 feet long, 16 inches high, and 11 inches from front to back.

In constructing your cages, however, you will be guided to a very great extent by the room at your disposal. A cage 30 inches by 15 inches by 10 inches is quite a nice size for Mule breeding, and this cage has the advantage that it can be easily moved. There should be seed-boxes and drinking-vessels to each compartment.

All the nesting boxes or pans, and, in the case of the Hybrid pairs, the sawdust, low perches, and nesting receptacles should be introduced some little time before the breeding season begins, and not just as your hens are commencing nesting operations, or you will possibly upset your hens for the remainder of the season.

OUT OF CONDITION AND THE WAY IN.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

A contribution of the greatest importance to Breeders of Birds of every kind.

SOME are composed largely of seeds which I have never seen a bird partake of. Wild seed I bought and exhibited to the members of a society to which I was lecturing was found to contain about 50 per cent. of hemlock, and the germinating test, which, I may state, is the best possible method of determining the qualities of a sample, proved it to be almost entirely devoid of feeding qualities. I would strongly advise the British bird fancier to provide himself with one of these glasses (they are procurable from opticians for about 1s. 6d.), and familiarise himself with the appearance of the various species by gathering samples from the plants when in season; the various shapes and forms which they present when magnified are a study in geometry.

Apropos of these wild seeds, and the fact that the value thereof is now recognised by the majority of fanciers, I have, after many experiments and careful observation, arrived at the opinion that many which are eaten greedily while in the succulent or germinating state, are worthless when in the dry, preserved state, inasmuch as the birds either ignore them entirely or partake of them in a manner which plainly reveals the lack of relish. But this is a subject to which I hope to return on another occasion, and I will now describe my method of germinating and some of the seeds I use to bring Finches into condition.

Some Good Hints on Feeding.

For Linnets, Twites, and 'Polls a mixture of two parts German rape, one part English rape, two parts teazle, and three parts fine screenings. The latter, if a good sample, will consist largely of poppy, sorrell, plume thistle, redshank, mouse-ear, and various grasses, but it will be found that scarcely two samples are alike. If, in the country just before harvesting, the fancier should see a cornfield which is foul with weeds, and the borders of which reveal the presence of such desirable seeds as shepherd's-purse, etc., he should strike a bargain with the owner or a farm hand to send him all the fine screenings.

The Goldfinch and Siskin may have the rapes withheld, and a supply of Scotch and sow thistle substituted, these being more favoured by those species. These thistles may be withheld from the Bullfinch, a supply of meadowsweet (queen of the meadow) being more to her taste, and thistle is rather too expensive to be wasted. No opportunity should be neglected of providing the three last-named species, and also a plenteous supply of aphides (green-fly) which will be found in quantity upon such plants and bushes as sow thistle, nettle, shepherd's-purse, currant, and rose. These are supplied on the spray, and constitute in addition to such germinating seeds as I have mentioned, the natural food at this period, and that largely supplied to their nestlings at a later date.

The Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, and Greenfinch will appreciate the addition of a few oats, and the insectivorous tastes of the two first-named run more to such live fare as earwigs, grubs, and the larger larvæ; a supply of the former may be secured by stripping the bark from fallen and decayed trees, posts, etc., and the latter, by spreading a large sheet of paper under the branches of trees or bushes infested with them. Willows are very liable to such pests; striking the branches smartly with a stick will dislodge these crawling critters, which, falling on the paper, are transferred to a box to form as welcome an addition to the birdy menu as they are the reverse to that of picnickers.

How to Prepare "Soft" Seeds.

And now to describe the germinator. Take sheets of felt or close woven flannel, about nine inches square, or larger if the stock be numerous, dip the sheets in tepid water, and wring out surplus, sprinkle each with the seed mixture, and lay another on top; sprinkle this also, and proceed thus till seven have been prepared, place in a warm and dark situation, and at the termination of a few days it will be found that the seeds have swollen and begun to germinate, when they may be distributed among the stock. Care must be taken never to supply more than the bird or birds can consume daily and before nightfall, and also that the supply is arranged in the cage or aviary where the light permits of even the smallest seeds being discerned.

The seeds are at their best when the germ is just visible, and over-development should be avoided; a little experience will soon indicate the time and quality necessary for a particular stock. As each sheet is emptied it should be well rinsed, re-sprinkled with seed, and placed at the bottom of the pack, thus a continual supply is ensured. The usual supply of canary seed should be allowed, and if it is desired to ascertain the preferment of the birds, place a pot containing a supply of the dry seed mixture alongside that containing the prepared, and watch.

I have omitted dandelion in the dried mixture, for the reason that it is so easily procured in the succulent state at this season, and a plentiful supply should be maintained, but it is advisable to begin with one or two heads per bird and gradually increase the quantity. If these are unprocurable, a portion of the preserved seed may be added to the germinating mixture. Given such treatment, in addition to plenty of light, air, and opportunities to bathe, a very short period will suffice to bring all the Finches into full song and the height of breeding condition.

When Hens Refuse to Sit.

Sir,—I often see in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, the question asked: what are we to do with hens that refuse to sit? Well, here is a tip. At dusk, when the birds have gone to sleep quietly put your hand in cage, catch the hen gently and place her on the nest, keeping your hand over her until she has nicely settled down. A night on the nest seems to work wonders. If she does not settle down at once, repeat the following night. I have saved many rounds this way and have never had a hen that would not take to the nest after the second time of asking.

Linnet Singing in Durham

Sir,—Durham Linnet fanciers are getting down-hearted at so many of the champions singing together. I think it very unfair to the member with one box. We intend holding a meeting at Broom Park, on May 9 to arrange some rules as to how many birds a member should be allowed to sing. I propose one member one box of four birds. I would like to see present some of the old fanciers to arrange how a bird should be judged, as there are so many fanciers of different opinions. Anyone wishing to join the club should please bring their birds. One member one box.

Is the Modern Exhibition Norwich Plainhead Satisfactory?

Sir,—My sketch of a Norwich Canary and the accompanying letter published Feb. 28, have not raised much discussion. Two friends —truly fancierlike—suggest a little longer bird, and give their reason in support of their scale. To these I lift my hat and thank them because they are fanciers. Some one else wrote you, but had not the heart to append his name. He had a deal to say at me and if his vituperative eloquence relieved him I do not mind. He says "He would like to breed one like my model." I heartily wish him luck, and if he ("Sub Rosa") will write you again and allow you to publish his name and address I will make him an offer through your esteemed paper, with your kind permission. There are far too many nom-de-plumes in our Fancy. Every good wish for Cage Birds and all fanciers.

Performances of a Wonderful Hen.

Sir,—I was agreeably surprised to see my noted buff hen depicted on the front page of your valuable paper, Cage Birds. I might say she has had a successful career so far. She was bred in 1912, and that show season, when unflighted, she was 1st Cheltenham, 1st Bristol, 1st Newport, 1st Frome, 2nd L.C.B.A., etc. In 1913 she was mated to my 3-pointed yellow cock (also a well-known winner; 2nd Palace this year), which produced some good birds, one of them a yellow which was second L.C.B.A., also another yellow which was second Palace, only time shown, and which I sold to a well-known fancier for a good price. Last show season (1913) she was 1st Leyton, 1st Plymouth, 1st Cheltenham, 1st Cardiff, 1st L.C.B.A., and finished up with 1st and gold medal at the Palace. She is mated again this year to the same cock, and is the proud mother of three promising youngsters, which will be on the sticks by the time this letter appears.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

Sir,—While admitting many of Mr. Allsopp's arguments re the novice to be well-founded I must take exception to the manner in which he deals with the novices as a body, and as one of the oldest fanciers in Wales, and one of the original founders of the Cardiff Society I should like to say a few words to him. Mr. Allsopp, you have recently been elected chairman of the Cardiff Society, you have a great opportunity before you to deal with the vexed question of the novice, but let me advise you as an old hand not to get up on your heels and show fight to all and sundry. Sponge cakes, etc., are luxuries too soft for some of the Welsh boys, who have had to dig coal. You may arouse Tonypandy; and, remember, Freddy Welsh was bred near Cardiff, and some of your novice members may be getting him back from America, as they are afraid Jimmy Wilde would be too light for such a Goliath as yourself. Your meetings will be lively then! Now about the grabbing novice, surely you cannot begrudge the small price he gets for his surplus. Have you never been glad to buy a decent bird from time to time from the despised novice? You had a good price for your "Welsh Queen," and in the five years you have been in Cardiff, according to your own admission, you have sold stock and winners and have got a good price. Remember, there are breeders of Plainheads in Cardiff who win and win again. Unfortunately we cannot get them to write articles; if we could, what a treat it would be. Take my advice and go easy. May you breed a few good 'uns this year is the wish of Old Fogey.

Sir,—Yes, Mr. Allsopp, I have been stung into answering your letter. I do not admit that "I toil not, neither do I spin." There is no harder worker than the novice, and we all have to start at the bottom some time. As to your article—what is there in it to help the novice? I have nothing to say against Mr. Allsopp whatever, but I do say that his article is pure swank.

Despised Novice.

The Great Record of a Yellow Norwich.

Sir,—I was more than pleased to see my Yellow Norwich cock (now the property of Mr. Crawshaw, of Accrington) on the front page of Cage Birds last week. He had eight firsts last show season, including the specials for best Norwich at Middlesbrough, Blaydon, Cramlington, and the Scottish National Show. He was second for Mr. Crawshaw at the Crystal Palace Show. I thank you for the honour and wish Cage Birds every success.

Proposed British Bird Society for Glasgow and W. of Scotland

Sir,—In view of the general feeling in Glasgow that a British bird society or club should be formed and worked on similar lines to the N.P.C., or other specialist societies, I shall be glad if anyone interested will communicate with me. In the event of a sufficient number expressing their desire to turn up to discuss same I propose to call a meeting towards the end of the present month, when I hope to hear a unanimous decision to constitute such a society at once.

VICTORIA

Egg & Biscuit FOOD FOR CAGE BIRDS

BECAUSE hardboiled Eggs and breadcrumbs or biscuits have become, by long usage, considered by many Fanciers as being the one and only medium for successfully rearing Cage-birds, is no criterion that such is really the case.

Why incur unnecessary trouble and expense by preparing Food in the old-fashioned way, with the attendant risks of the Food soon becoming sour, when you have at your disposal Victoria Egg and Biscuit Food? This is reliable in every way, is quickly prepared, does not become sour and is infinitely more economical.

Canaries and other Cage Birds welcome it, and rear strong, well-developed chicks. Made crumbly-moist with hot or cold water or scalded milk, is ever ready for use.

Serenaded by Nightingale from Bedroom Window-sill.

Sir,—I thought perhaps the unusual event I am about to relate might be of some interest to readers, as it seems to me to be such an unaccountable thing, and quite unique. For the last week I have had a Nightingale come and sing on my bedroom window-sill every night from 12 midnight until 1 a.m. I have never heard of a similar occurrence, of a bird to come to a window at midnight and sing, especially in a large town like Brighton, as they mostly prefer a wood. I was wondering if any of the readers of your interesting paper, Cage Birds, have heard of a similar case at any time. It is the first time in my life that I have heard or read of such a case.

The Champion Heavy-weight of the British Wagtails.

Mealworms as a Bait.

Sir,—My observations confirm Mr. Teschemaker's statement that the Grey is the most assertive of Wagtails, and I have often wondered at the cowardice of the Pied, as he almost invariably shuns an encounter with his less bulky but more agile relative. An instance of this occurred under my notice when a pair of Greys chose a site for their second nest in close proximity to that of a pair of Pieds, and ultimately drove the latter away, although the hen Pied was sitting on eggs!

The utter failure which followed all my attempts to take Wagtails with traps baited with mealworms led me to experiment by counting and placing mealworms where scores of Wagtails and Pipits could be observed to run over them, and though the experiment was made during conditions which placed insects among the apparently desirable items, not one was touched! This I have repeated at various times, and in the presence of well-known fanciers. Yet I find that the first day in captivity suffices to create a desire for mealworms, to the exclusion of almost any form of preserved food.

J, Steel.

Sir,—I quite understand that Mr. Teschemaker meant the Grey Wagtail was the most doughty warrior of the three British Wagtails referred to, and was not thinking of the actual weight of the birds. Nor did I doubt his statement. I wanted to make my description clear and definite. My remarks, indeed, were in no way intended to throw doubt on Mr. Teschemaker's statement. I can only suggest that his experience is exceptional.

In my opinion the reasoning power of birds is just the same in kind as that of human beings, but different in degree. I am glad to see that Mr. T. Johnson agrees with me that the nest I referred to in the ploughed field was a Yellow Wagtail's, and not a Grey Wagtail's. I think the reasons given why the Hedge Sparrow's eggs are blue are purely fanciful, and Mr. Johnson's remarks on the subject are to the point.

John Craig.

Sir,—I find in Mudie's "British Birds" (1834) that the Grey Wagtail is the same size as the Pied, i.e. 7½ inches long, about 1 foot in stretch of wings, and 6 drachms in weight. In this book the Pied Wagtail is called Motacilla alba, and the Grey Wagtail M. boarula. The illustration accompanying the description is that of M. lugubris in the cast of the former bird. M. alba (Linn) is the White Wagtail, a summer migrant. In leaflet No. 50 issued by the Board of Agriculture, I find it stated that the Pied Wagtail is rather more than 7 inches in length, and that the Grey Wagtail is not quite so large as the Pied. I regret I cannot find any weight of the Pied, but Mudie's weight of the Grey is more than that of Mr. Teschemaker's bird. This might be accounted for in several ways. Personally I should think from observation that the Pied Wagtail's egg is the larger. I am, however, writing to a friend of mine, an eminent oologist who has one of the finest private collections of eggs in Great Britain, and I will report his valuable opinion upon the eggs and weights of the two Wagtails in question in another issue of your paper.

A Twite that Preferred Cage to Liberty.

Sir,—I think this goes to prove how much happier birds are in cages than when free; it is an extract from a letter I received from one of the men on the North Unst Lighthouse, Shetland.

"One of the Twites we have has been troubled with asthma all winter, so to-day being fine we thought it a good opportunity of letting it away; it took a fly round for an hour or two, but then came back to its cage, so we took it in again."

I know they have not had these birds long, so they must like their cages.

Ardwick's Good Fancier.

Sir,—May I encroach on your valuable space to pen a few lines in honour of one who is worthy of recognition, viz., Mr. W. Robinson, Chairman of the Ardwick and Dist. C.B.S. This gentleman is one of those wholehearted men who keep the cage-bird Fancy ician; an ardent Norwich fancier, who is never more happy than when assisting a novice or, in fact, any more experienced fancier who may be in doubt. His lectures on the Norwich Plainhead, both at Altrincham and Middleton, were acknowledged by those lucky enough to hear them to be the best they had ever heard. The special points he dealt with at those lectures were "Inbreeding" (a practice to which he has a decided antipathy) and "Double Buffing" (of which he is an ardent devotee). If all fanciers were to study these two points as Mr. Robinson has done, we should soon see a vast difference in fanciers generally. I trust that these few lines will rouse his co-workers to that pitch of enthusiasm necessary to assist him in his endeavours to improve the Fancy. I wish Cage Birds a still more bumping circulation.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Another Precocious Youngster.

SIR,—This is the first season I have attempted breeding Canaries. I had one nest of two eggs and hatched out one bird, which I think is even more precocious than the one mentioned by a reader in a recent CAGE BIRDS, as it was out of the nest, well feathered, when 12 days old (April 17). It was three weeks old last Sunday, and is now entirely on its own and is 4½ inches long.

The Affiliation of Rochdale and District C.B. Societies.

SIR,—In connection with the above there will be a meeting on May 16, at 6.30 p.m., in the rooms of the R.O.C. who have kindly granted the free use of their rooms for the above purpose. It is the intention to have lectures during the season at the societies' headquarters (in rotation) by well-known people. Up to the present I have had favourable replies from six societies, so I hope the affiliation scheme will turn out a success, as we shall endeavour to push it forward.

Two Hens with Only One Nest.

SIR,—I should like to say that I also have two hens occupying one nest, with six eggs. One is a Green and the other a Norwich. I am going to let them do as they like, for last year I had two Norwich do the same thing, and I took No. 1 away, when the other, No. 2, left the eggs. With the next nest I took the other (No. 2) away and the other (No. 1) then left the nest, so I took both hens out of the aviary. By trying to save one nest I lost all my others. This year I am going to trust to luck and leave well alone. I started reading CAGE BIRDS last November. Up till then I had little hope of ever doing any Canary breeding. But since I have taken in CAGE BIRDS I have built a large aviary 10ft. x 4ft. x 5ft. 6in. high, and have bred up to to-day 5 youngsters 3 weeks old and I have 3 nests of eggs.

Supplying Birds with Reflected Sunshine.

SIR,—As most of our well-known contributors to CAGE BIRDS are great upholders of light and heat for the benefit of our little pets, the following experiment may be tried with satisfaction by many of my fellow fanciers. Noticing that a large cage 4ft. 6ins. x 2ft. 6ins., in which I keep my special pair of Green Budgerigars was not receiving its full share of light, I wondered how I could move it from its present position to better that state of affairs. Its great bulk, however, was a problem which I failed to solve in the limited space of my bird room. At that moment there was a scream of great excitement from Mrs. Budgie. On turning round I saw my little boy, nearly four years old, holding a small round mirror, about 2ins. in diameter, in the rays of the sun. Its reflection fell upon the ceiling and that was the cause of Mrs. Budgie's fright. The thought occurred to me that a larger mirror, which would give a greater reflection, might be used to supply the sunlight! So I straightway obtained the looking-glass and focussed the sun's rays until they fell on to that portion of the cage that otherwise received none. The birds stared at the light for a while and then suddenly brightened up and began to play in its full glare. Of course, as time passes the sun moves, and one needs to be continually placing the mirror. This difficulty may be overcome by putting a few small mirrors, about 8ins. square, in a wooden slot frame (easily made by oneself) of semi-circular shape.

Has a Bird a Conscience?

SIR,—I quite agree with Mr. Johnson about this being a weary world, at least, for some of us, but I fail to see what there was in Mr. Teschemaker's letter to make Mr. Johnson write such an absurd "reply." What Mr. Teschemaker says about Rooks is perfectly true. I, too, have been brought up close to a Rookery and have times out of number seen birds attempt to make a new Rookery a few hundred yards away, but the nests have always been destroyed by the other Rooks. I can't say that I have actually seen any killed in the fighting that takes place during these upsets, but I have seen them knocked to the ground badly injured and I have picked one up that was blinded in both eyes. Mr. Teschemaker's letter proved to the hilt that birds have a conscience, and I have seen birds do some remarkable things. I have a three-year-old hen Canary now that won't build a nest unless I give her charpie; no charpie no nest is her motto, and she sticks to it. Any schoolboy knows about the two kinds, crooked and straight sticks, that Rooks build with. 'Tis a weary world; for the last three weeks I have had a blood-poisoned hand. I have suffered intensely, and just when my first round of young are hatching. It has made things very bad for me. But, worst of all, I have lost my deaf old father after only a three weeks' illness. In his younger days he was, no doubt, a good birdman, but as he never showed any his name will only be known to local men. His favourite breeds were Lizards and Dutch Frills; he was also a great admirer of Scotch Fancies. He was a successful keeper of Skylarks, and hand-reared hundreds. He was a keen naturalist, and I feel his loss very much.

How a Reader Helps His Favourite Paper.

SIR,—I received the parcel of specimen copies of CAGE BIRDS quite safely. Allow me to thank you very much for same. You see I'm often asked for the loan of my "C.B.," and I consider letting it go is worse than lending a shilling and never getting it back, because I keep all my CAGE BIRDS as a sort of general encyclopaedia; should I wish to know something (I don't know everything yet), I always stand 99 chances of finding it in my back numbers of "C.B." Therefore, you see, by being in a position to distribute a specimen copy I kill two or three birds with the same stone, namely: (1) Retain that which I most value of all my literary treasures, "C.B." (2) Claim another bird-lover to the Fancy. (3) Find a probable customer for my own bred birds, and still another reader of our dear old CAGE BIRDS.

I had a letter only the other day from a customer in Shrewsbury who said he had been a regular reader of "C.B." since I gave him a copy two years ago. He has now over 30 Budgerigars bred from the first pair I sold him when a novice at that time. I wish the best of prosperity to CAGE BIRDS.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Is it a Hardship to Some Members?

SIR,—The few faddists in the above club have got their point carried, which they had all cut and dried before the meeting, as I was told two months ago that they were to carry the ring farce through. But they should have the rings round their own necks, so that we would know them at all the shows. Will they answer this honestly, and explain how this meeting has been kept until so far back in the season? If the ring farce is to be in force this season the faddists have the pull by being "in the know." They have their first rounds of birds all rung, whereas to members not in the know their first rounds of birds will be of no use for competition in the above S.P.C. shows. In Musselburgh alone we have over 30 young birds between the members which will be of no use for the above competition. Why didn't they act sportsmanlike and give us all a chance by having this meeting six weeks ago? As far as Musselburgh is concerned, there will be no members for the S.P.C., and I hope other districts will follow in our wake. There is plenty of competition outside of this circle.

Will Finches Rear a Young Cuckoo?

SIR,—Having been favoured with a copy of report giving results of the bird-migration inquiry undertaken by the Scottish Natural History Society, an instance recorded therein of a Cuckoo having been reared by Brown Linnets is, in view of the feeding habits of the species being so dissimilar, open to question. Surely such a departure would have been worthy of confirmation by someone capable of discriminating (as almost any schoolboy could) between a Brown Linnet and Meadow Pipit—position and construction of nest, hovering and Lark-like flight, colour, bill, and the fact that the continual repetition of a double note has given to the latter species its most common name, making identification an easy matter. I wonder if such a learned body as the S.N.H.S. has seen nothing out of the common in such a happening! Has any of your readers an authentic instance on record of either Brown Linnet or any of the Finch species rearing a Cuckoo?

I may remind those of your readers who may be tempted by the successes with Cuckoos, recorded last year, to attempt keeping them, that a hairy caterpillar, very plentiful on gooseberry bushes, is greedily devoured, and, so far as I have observed, the Cuckoo is not likely to have his rights to them challenged by any other Britisher, including the unfortunate owner of the bushes!

J. STEEL.

[I have myself found a Cuckoo's egg in a Greenfinch's nest (many instances of the egg in Finch and Bunting nests have been, of course, recorded), but whether a Cuckoo has been reared by a Hardbill I cannot say from personal knowledge.—Editor "C.B."]

TWO VETERANS DESERVEDLY HONOURED.

The Border Fancy C.C. Presentation of Testimonials to the late Secretary and President.

At a smoking concert held under the auspices of the Border Fancy C.C. occasion was taken to do honour to two of the club's oldest and most respected members—Mr. J. B. Richardson and Mr. M. Jamieson. Genuine regret was expressed on all hands when these gentlemen discontinued in office as President and Secretary respectively, and it was the feeling of the members that something should be done to mark their appreciation of these gentlemen's valuable services to the club and the Border Fancy in general.

These feelings found happy expression last Saturday in the Cathedral Hotel, Edinburgh, when Mr. George W. Brown, president of the club, presided over a good-sized company. The proceedings opened with the pledging of the loyal toast, after which the Chairman explained that Mr. Richardson had little time to spare, having to catch an early train, and after proceeding with a few opening remarks, he called upon ex-Bailie Lambie to make the presentation to Mr. Richardson. In doing so the ex-Bailie said it gave him the greatest possible pleasure to be present on that occasion. They were met to do honour to an old servant, and one who had been President of the Border Fancy Club since its inception. He was sure they would all agree that Mr. Richardson had been a most presevering President. (Applause.) He did not wish to take up any time, so he would simply call upon their old and respected friend, Mr. Richardson, who had done so much to promote the success of the club, to accept their gift. He knew that he should be expressing the wish of the whole club in saying that he hoped Mr. Richardson would be long spared to come amongst them and to follow his homely and harmless hobby. (Applause.) He then asked Mr. Richardson, in the name of the club, to accept a purse of sovereigns. Mr. Richardson accepted the gift amid applause and the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," which testified to his great popularity.

Border Fancies for Paris.

Mr. Richardson, in replying, said he did not know what he had done to merit such kindness. The club had had a strenuous uphill fight since its inception, but every member had done his bit in furthering its interest, and now the club had spread far and wide, with the result that it was known from Lands End to John O' Groats. (Laughter and Applause.) It had even taken root in Paris, and he himself had sent five pairs over to the French capital. He regretted he had little time to spare for he could say a good deal that would interest them. However, he had just to conclude by saying he hoped that although he was getting old—74 years on the 12th August—he would always maintain his usual fancy for breeding. (Applause.) He had been at it for over forty years and he was just as enthusiastic about it now as he was the first day he took to it. He trusted that he would be able to meet them in the Grassmarket on each New Year's Day for a long time to come. Once more he thanked them heartily for their gifts. (Applause.) Mr. Richardson then left the gathering amid scenes of warm enthusiasm.

Following upon a few enjoyable musical items the other presentation was entered upon. It fell to Mr. Bennett, in the unavoidable absence of Mr. J. Patterson, to hand the purse of sovereigns to Mr. Jamieson. Mr. Bennett said he had been called upon very unexpectedly to perform the duty, but nevertheless he undertook it with the greatest possible pleasure. In the matter of secretarial duties Mr. Jamieson had been ideal. To all with whom he (Mr. Jamieson) had come into contact he had been most courteous, and he had made things as happy for everyone as he could. He had given the greatest satisfaction to the club, and had assisted materially in bringing it up to the present healthy state. He had very much pleasure in handing over the gift on behalf of the Border Fancy Club. Mr. Bennett also gave Mr. Jamieson a handsome umbrella for his better-half.

Secretary for Twenty-One Years.

Mr. Jamieson, in reply, said he could only return thanks on behalf of Mrs. Jamieson and himself for the kind presents. Twenty-one years—he had held the office of secretary for that period—was not a short time to look back upon, but during the whole of the time he had been treated by all with the utmost kindness and civility. It was with deep regret that he gave up the secretaryship, for he might have completed twenty-five years, but when the doctor said no, he had to give way. He could only, through the medium of the Press, thank every member of the club for their kindness and for their gifts. (Loud applause.) The singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" brought this pleasant little ceremony to a close.

A lengthy programme of songs and toasts was then entered upon. In submitting the toast of the Border Fancy C.C., Mr. James Winter, president Scottish National C.B.S., said the club was now, and had been for some time, the strongest specialist club in the country, for under the able guidance of their old friend Mr. Jamieson it had gone on increasing by leaps and bounds. They owed a deep debt of gratitude to their retiring President and Secretary. He counselled them to support their present President and Secretary in the same manner, for if they did, he had no doubt that these gentlemen would spare no energy to keep up the god name of the club. He called upon them to drink the toast of the Border Fancy C.C., coupling it with the name of Mr. Arnott (Kirkcaldy) in place of Mr. Arnot (Hawick) who was to have replied.

A Study in Progression.

Replying to the toast Mr. Arnott (Kirkcaldy) read an interesting communication he had received from his namesake in Hawick. In it he expressed regret for his non-attendance owing to illness. In giving a few statistics regarding the club Mr. Arnot (Hawick) said the club was formed in 1890 in opposition to the Cumberland Club which it afterwards destroyed. A year later the membership stood at 39 and the income at £2 11s. 10d. The expenditure for the year was £1 18s. 4d., which left the club with a credit balance of 14s. 11d. The last balance-sheet showed the membership to be 350, and the income £61 16s. 11d. A sum of £47 4s. was expended which left a balance of £14 12s. 11d. The number of specials granted last year was eighty, as against none in 1891. Proceeding, the writer referred them to a recent lecture. He endorsed everything that Mr. Robson had said, and thought it deplorable that any young club taking the name of Border Fancy should attempt to adopt a model other than that which had served the club for twenty-four years. (Applause.) He trusted all present would give that their best attention. Referring to these latter remarks Mr. Arnott (Kirkcaldy) said he was of the same opinion himself. There should be only one club, and one model. It would be a hopeless mix up if each club were to have a different model. Continuing, Mr. Arnott submitted that if there was a little more respect paid to the officials of the club and a little less jealousy displayed among the members it would be better for the club itself. It seemed unkind, and served no good purpose at any time. In conclusion, he appealed to the members to support the Fancy Press and expressed the pleasure it gave him to be there to pay respect to Mr. Jamieson and Mr. Richardson.

"The Fancy Press" was proposed by Mr. J. Charlton, who said they were all indebted to the Fancy Press in one way or another for the various articles and the good advice they received through them. Mr. Watson replied to the toast. Various other toasts were pledged during the evening which proved to be thoroughly enjoyable.

The concert part of the programme was as excellent as it was varied, and that the company extracted abundant pleasure from the various items was fully manifested. The artistes included Messrs. Matthews, W. J. Harvey, Muir, A. Thomson, Stirling, Douglas, Hamilton, W. C. Reilly, J. T. Kelly, Charlton, Noble, Easton, Jamieson, Jas. Winter, Arnott, Murray, Hutchinson, Broad, and G. Broad. Mr. Peter Williamson made a capital accompanist.

In replying to the vote of thanks to the Chairman, Mr. Brown said he had to thank them for electing him President of the Club, an honour which he felt very proud of indeed, especially so when it was in succession to the gentleman who had taken no small part in the club's formation, and who was the originator of the name Border Fancy Canary.

Ex-Bailie Lambie proposed a vote of thanks to the Secretary, Mr. Walter B. Smart, while a similar compliment was also extended to the artistes. This included a most successful and enjoyable function.

In the Courts.

Bristol Bird-catchers Fined.

Arthur Skinner and James Skinner were summoned at Bristol Police Court on April 16, for having in their possession recently-taken Goldfinches and Linnets, contrary to the Wild Birds' Protection Order.

Mr. Green prosecuted, and stated that on April 2nd P.C. Coleman met defendants at Parsons-st., Bedminster. They had baskets and nets in their possession, and were evidently returning from a bird-catching foray. The officer examined one of the baskets, and saw it contained Finches and Linnets. One of the defendants suddenly threw the basket wide open, releasing 20 or 30 birds which flew away. Defendants said the birds they had were sparrows, but such was not the case.

P.C. Coleman gave evidence in support of Mr. Green's statement, and produced feathers he found in the basket, showing it had contained Linnets and Finches.

Defendants denied that they had anything other than Sparrows, which they had caught on the ash-tip at the Marsh, one said for a shooting match and the other for pie purposes. As to the feathers in the basket, they said, it was sent to them with Linnets and Finches from Weston-super-Mare some weeks ago, and that explained their presence. It was no offence to take wild birds in Somerset.

Detective-Sergt. A. Wall, said defendants were well known to him as men who lived by bird-catching, and the elder advertised song birds for sale in a fanciers' paper.

Defendants were fined each 40s. and costs, with the option of a month's imprisonment, and the Magistrates ordered the confiscation of the bird-catching paraphernalia.

Bird Catching at Chingford.

At Waltham Abbey Petty Sessions on April 21, Alfred Poulden, of Woolmer Road, Edmonton, was summoned for causing unnecessary suffering to a Chaffinch and a Linnet by bracing and pinioning them, at Chingford, on April 3rd. Defendant was summoned also for using nets for the purpose of taking wild birds at the same time and place, and a third summons alleged that when asked by the police for his name and address he gave false answers. Accused pleaded not guilty to the first summons, and guilty in the other two cases.

Two police officers stated that they saw defendant on April 3rd bird-catching with nets on Chingford Marshes. He had a number of cages containing birds, and a Chaffinch and a Linnet were braced and pinioned between the nets to act as decoy birds. When questioned, defendant gave a false name and address.

Defendant pleaded that owing to the builders' trade dispute he had been out of work for 11 weeks. He had a widowed mother to keep, and as they were practically starving he tried to catch a few birds to earn a little money. This was the first time he had been "locked up." He had kept his mother for 16 years.

In fining defendant 20s. inclusive, the chairman said he had made himself liable to a much heavier penalty. The Bench were dealing leniently with him because he said he was out of work. A fortnight was allowed the defendant in which to find the money.

Defendant asked that the nets and two birds (which were produced in cages) should be returned to him. The police opposed this request, and asked that the nets should be confiscated and the birds liberated.

The Bench made an order for the confiscation of the nets, but came to the conclusion that the birds were tame cage birds, and the chairman said they would not be confiscated.

CLUB REPORTS.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, May 1, Mr. Faulkner, chair, before a large attendance. Decided to have a table show first Friday in June: 2 Yorks., 2 Nor., 1 Green, 1 A.O.V., 1 Mules, for champions; 2 Yorks., 2 Nor., 1 Green, 1 A.O.V., for novices. Mr. J. Guy to judge Yorkshires and A.O.V., Mr. C. Boots the others. Mr. Jones will give special for most entries; birds staged at 7. Please do not leave them till the last minute.—E. Rone.

COLINTON AND CURRIE PARISHES O.S.

Meeting Village Hall, Juniper Green, May 2nd. Vice-pres. M. Michie in the chair. Pres., Mr. Begbie, was absent through illness, and hope was expressed that he would have a quick recovery and be among us soon in good health. New members elected:—W. Messer, Slateford, and W. Hynd, Juniper Green. Decided to have ramble June 27 and to ask liberty to get through Riccarton Estate. Members present hooked their hens.—Jas. Napier, Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting April 25, at Mail Coach Inn, Mr. Brotherton presiding over a good attendance. It was proposed to leave the half-yearly and cup subs. over until next meeting night. Also that Mr. J. Warrender (Hoyland) judge our first N.F. show, and Mr. F. Gregory the second; 23 classes were scheduled for our show, with plenty of British classes, so it is to be hoped we get a good entry. Proposed that sec. write Mr. Toulson, of Barnsley, to see if he would give us a lecture on British birds. We should have a good meeting next month.—Taylor and Bailey, Secs.

PORTSMOUTH AND SOUTHERN COUNTIES C.B.S.

Meeting at headquarters, Long's Memorial Hall, April 29, table show of British birds and Mules. Mr. C. Lean (of Lean and Son) judged. There was a good show of birds, although the attendance might have been better. The three specials offered were won by Mr. Walker (Hardbills), Mr. Hall (Softbills), and Mr. Hunsby (Mules). Before the judge's awards were posted, a judging competition was held, resulting in Mr. Tout and Mr. Moore ticing for first place, each making 16 points out of a possible 18. Several other members ran pretty close, thus emphasising the judge's awards. Mr. Lean then answered questions on the various birds staged, giving his reasons for placing the birds, and at the same time giving friendly hints and not a few tips as to the successful staging of British birds. A vote of thanks to Mr. Lean concluded an enjoyable and instructive evening.—G. T. Hall, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

A Lecture on the Norwich Plainhead by Mr. J. Hazell.

Meeting, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street, E.C., May 2, Mr. R. J. Pretty presiding. Although Mr. Hazell had not yet recovered from his illness, it did not prevent him giving us some helpful hints and opening an enthusiastic discussion on the Norwich Plainhead. A very good muster of members attended, and a most pleasant evening was passed. Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, said Mr. Hazell, the Norwich Plainhead has been my particular fancy now for over 15 years. I first began breeding with both Norwich and Yorkshire, but I soon found that if you want to get to the top it is best to stick to one variety. I consider the Norwich is one of the best varieties to breed, as you can always find classes at any show. The Norwich is generally placed first in the catalogue, which goes to prove it is the most popular. In fact, I consider it the king of the Fancy. There is nothing in the Fancy that can equal a good bred specimen for shape, colour or quality. It is no wonder that there are more breeders of this variety than of any other, for they are good hardy feeders and breeders, and the youngsters that do not come up to the required standard are easily disposed of as songsters. The Norwich should have a good broad round head, with a short thick neck, body short and chubby, with wide back, well filled in, deep, broad, and full chest. The most difficult point to breed in a good specimen is the head, so it is necessary to pair together birds that are well up in head properties; select birds that are free from browing, with a nice clean skull. It is no use putting together one bird with a good head and another that fails in this point, as by so doing you make no progress, and most likely the young will come up with bad heads. Always try to improve the heads of any you may be breeding, as I consider that a good head on any birds of any variety is half the battle. Having selected your birds with good heads, the next important point is to have them with good bodies. Now a Norwich Plainhead should have a short thick body; in fact, it should be short all over, with a wide back and full neck, chest deep, full and well rounded. A bird with a body of that description would most likely have short wings and tail, so by paying attention to that particular point you would be getting another very desirable one—that is, short wings and tail. Long bodied birds generally carry long wings and tail. In the Norwich Plainhead the difficulty is to get the short wings and tail, just as in the Yorkshire it is to get them as long as possible. The Norwich should stand well over the perch; you want as much again in front as behind. I like to see a Norwich cut well away behind from the leg to the tail, not one with a long distance, as it were, from the legs to the tail, but short and well filled in, standing on a clean pair of legs, not too long and not too short. If you pay attention to the points you are well on the road to breed a good one. I like the hen to be a good medium size, not too small and not too large. Large hens are generally lazy and make bad feeders, and do not stick to their duties as well as the smaller ones; they are more typical, and if joined to a good-sized cock, with plenty of colour, you have what I consider a good pair. Colour being one of the most important points in a Norwich, it is necessary you should breed for colour. Ticked or variegated birds should be joined to clears, so as not to get them too heavy in marking. By doing so you will get more colour in the clears, and will also breed a few marked or variegated birds to again pair to clears, and in this way you will keep up your colour without getting them too heavily marked. I have found that the cocks bred from a variegated yellow hen generally have good rich colour. I like a lightly marked variegated buff as a show bird, one that is marked on one wing and a small patch on the body, and if it has plenty of colour I think it is a very taking bird much better than a heavily marked bird for a variegated class. Double buffing can be resorted to with advantage if you have two richly coloured buffs to pair together; they must be short in feather and chubby and nicely cut away behind, with a good head. I have very often bred some nice show birds from double buffs, but these buffs bred from buffs must the next year be paired to good coloured yellows. This concluded Mr. Hazell's lecture, and a hearty discussion ensued, questions pouring in from all round, which were answered by the lecturer in a most concise and brief manner to everybody's satisfaction. G. G. Stubbs, Hon. Sec.

LINTON AND WOODHORN C.B.S.

Meeting, May 2, Mr. Jos. Armstrong, chair, and a good turn-out of members. We have 20 now on our books, and any members or affiliated members of social clubs around the district wishing to join will be made welcome. Subs. only 5s. a year. Entrance fee for birds at annual show, 3d. Next meeting, May 30, headquarters, 7.30. Fanciers can become members either by giving their names to the steward of the club, or sec. of C.B.S.—James Anderson, 13, West St., North Seaton.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Rye Buck Hotel, March 27, with a good attendance; Mr. Ratcliffe, chair. Mr. Lockett, sen., elected a member. Mr. W. Bowyer, Leek, elected to judge Nor. at open show. Decided that rule 3 be rescinded on sub. cards, subs. to be 4s. the first, 2s. to be paid on or before June meeting, and remainder on or before September meeting. Classes for the N.F. show, June 13:—Nor. Yell., Nor. Buff, Yorks. yell., Yorks. buff, Mule or Hybrid (these are young birds); Goldf., Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, A.O.V. Brit hardbill, Mule or Hybrid, Nor. A.V., Yorks. A.V. (old birds), and two open classes at 1s. per entry, Norwich A.V., Yorkshire A.V. Next meeting, May 12. We should like everyone to attend this very important meeting.—P. E. Barker.

HALIFAX C.B.S.

Meeting, April 30, with a capital attendance. Syllabus for the series of members shows, lectures, rambles, etc., was drawn up and approved, and is now in the printer's hands. Members will receive same in the course of a few days, and it should prove very interesting to all fanciers. Schedule for the first Annual Open Show, Oct. 3, under Yorkshire Union rules and patronage, was decided upon, also that the patronage of the Y.C.C. and N.G.M.Y.C.C. be applied for. Usual prize money will be given, with a special in each class for most points, and there will be other specials. Members are very enthusiastic over the open show, and are hoping that success will follow their efforts, and that everything will be done to make the venture the success it deserves. During the evening several new members were made.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec.

POPLAR C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, All Hallows' Schoolroom, East India Dock Road, April 30. This being the first meeting of the New Year, it was gratifying to note the interest taken in the proceedings, which lasted until 10.55. New members elected: Messrs. Peeling, A. B. Seale, Frank Stagg, and Weedon. A nomination scheme was discussed, a good prize being up for competition, competitors to nominate four birds at Young Stock and Annual Shows. Most points at both shows to win. A medal is offered for the member making most points during the season (all shows). The ring question came up for discussion. Many little hints were picked up, and much was said that was interesting. Country ramble to Laindon decided for May 10, meet East Ham station 9.35. All fanciers and friends are welcome, and will be made to feel at home. The society has eight cups for competition, and starts the year with a balance in hand of £3 4s. 5d.—F. H. Marhoff.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Annual general meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, May 2, Mr. W. A. Cowgill (president) in the chair; the attendance was only moderate. Members elected:—Messrs. J. W. Storey (Leeds), G. Large (Barrow), and A. W. Hartley (Gt. Horton). Secretary's report showed that the 1913-14 patronage shows had been very well supported by members right through the season. In the four green marked classes provided at the ten shows, 435 birds had been entered, of which 371 were by members. Bradford Nat. had 66 and Sheffield O.S. 54. The balance sheet, which was adopted, showed the club to be still progressing, the cash balance being £2 19s. 11d., with several subs. still owing for last year, which we hope to receive at an early date. Result of ballot for election of officers:—Pres., Mr. W. A. Cowgill; vice-pres., Messrs. W. H. Shackleton and H. H. Towers; committee (inside Yorkshire), Messrs. H. Hill, F. Hammond, C. Morrison, L. Dykes, R. Halliday, H. J. Chittenden, J. Bailey, J. Greaves, R. Sutcliffe, F. Armstrong, H. W. Walsh, and T. Ogden; (outside) Mr. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle), Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington), Mr. J. W. Ramsden (London), Mr. J. Currie (Barrow), and Mr. C. R. Bullen (Bromley, Kent). The undersigned was again elected secretary, and although trying several excuses, was pressed into promising to serve another year. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring officers, auditors, and scrutineers, and the donors of specials. Decided that the wording of the rule as to starring birds for G.M. competitions be made more definite, and that a member showing, say, only two birds, must both star them and mark them "G.M." Competitions and allocation of patronage was left over to the next committee meeting in mid June. Societies desiring same at shows should apply at once.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec., 22, St. Anns-st., Burley Hill, Leeds.

The Exhibiting of British Birds and Hybrids.

Sensational and Progressive Scheme Adopted by the National British Bird and Mule Club.

THE N.B.B. and M.C. on April 30th came to an arrangement with the L.C.B.A. to fully guarantee and organise the British bird section at the show to be held on November 26th, 27th, and 28th, at the Horticultural Hall. The classification, which they are guaranteeing against loss, is one of no fewer than 38 classes for British birds, 18 for Hybrids, and 3 for Continental birds, in all 59 classes, with 26s. prize-money divided as follows: 1st prize, 10/-; 2nd, 6/-; 3rd, 3/-; 4th, 2/6; 5th, 2/-; 6th, 1/6; and 7th, 1/-. These prizes are guaranteed absolutely irrespective of the number of entries.

This remarkably extensive list of classes has never before been given at any show, and comprises the following divisions: British birds: (1) Greenfinch, (2) Greenfinch (30/- limit), (3) Hawfinch, (4) Goldfinch, (5) Goldfinch (30/- limit), (6) Siskin, (7) Mealy Redpoll, (8) Lesser Redpoll and Twite, (10) Linnet, (11) Linnet (30/- limit), (12) Bullfinch cock, (13) Bullfinch hen, (14) Chaffinch, (15) Brambling, (16) Yellow Bunting, (17) Corn, Cirl, Pied, Snow, and tap land Buntings and Crossbills, (18) Hens, Yellow, Corn, Cirl, Pied, Snow, and Lapland Buntings and Crossbills, (19) all species of Finch hens other than those provided for, (20) Song Thrush, (21) Blackbird, (22) Missel Thrush, Fieldfare, Redwing, and Ring Ouzel, (23) Robin, (24) Nightingale and Garden Warbler, (25) Wheatear, Whinchat, Stonechat, Common and Black Redstarts, (26) Blackcap Warbler, Greater and Lesser Whitethroats, (27) Dartford, Grasshopper, Chiffchaff, Willow, Wood, Reed, Marsh, and Sedge Warblers, (28) Goldcrest, Firecrest, Wren, Treecreeper, Pied and Spotted Flycatchers, (29) Pied, White, Grey, Blue-headed, and Yellow Wagtails, (29) Skylark, (31) all other species Larks and Pipits, including Woodlark, Shorelark, Tree, Meadow and Rock Pipits, (32) Longtailed, Great, Cole, Marsh, Blue and Crested Tits and Bearded Reedling and Nuthatch, (33) Dipper, Great Grey and Redbacked Shrikes, Waxwing, Golden Oriole, Wryneck, Greater Spotted, Lesser Spotted, and Green Woodpeckers, and Hoopoe, (34) Starling, (35) Chough, Jay, Magpie, and Jackdaw, (36) all species British Doves, Partridge, Quails, Cranes, Rails, and Waders, including Gold and Green Plovers, Dunlins, Sandpipers, Redshank, etc., (37) Pied, Albino, Lutino, Melanistic, or other abnormally coloured British bird, (38) all species insectivorous birds, hens.

Hybrids: (1) clear, lightly ticked, and evenly marked Canary Hybrid, (2) unevenly marked and lightly variegated ditto, (3) heavily variegated ditto, (4) dark Goldfinch and Canary, yellow, (5) ditto buff, (6) dark Greenfinch and Can., (7) dark Linnet and Can., (8) Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite, (9) A.O.V. Canary Hybrid, including Canary-Bullfinch, (10) A.V. Bullfinch Hybrid, Canary-Bullf. excepted, (11) A.V. Hybrid between two British birds, (12) A.V. Canary Hybrid, hens, (13) A.V. Hybrid between two British birds, hens, (14) Limit class, Canary Hybrid, 30/-, (15) limit class, A.O.V. Hybrid, 30/-, (16) pairs for Hybrid breeding, Canary and other Finch, British, (17) pair for Hybrid breeding, two British Finches, (18) pair for Hybrid breeding, two Continental races of British Finches, or Continental race of British Finch and Canary.

Continental classes: (1) Siberian Bullfinch or Goldfinch, (2) all species not larger than and including a Sprosser, (3) all species larger than a Sprosser.

Practically every well-known bird has been catered for, and many species which heretofore have been out-classed by rarer and in some cases, more attractive birds, are on this occasion offered an opportunity of receiving the commendation they deserve, and it behoves all who are interested in this section of bird showing to support this highly progressive and very bold move. There is time and ample opportunity for all to procure and prepare their specimens for this great event, and it is hoped that all exhibitors will bear these dates in mind, and, except in those cases where they would impoverish their own shows, that they will support us far as it lies in their power (in such a worthy movement on behalf of the British Bird Fancy.

It is evident that the N.B.B. and M.C. have little to gain but fame, and it is therefore reasonable to expect that they will receive good support, not only from their own members, but from exhibitors in every part of the United Kingdom, especially as owners of birds of all kinds and grades will on this occasion stand a fair chance of receiving recompence for their entrance fees and other expenses. The N.B.B. and M.C. is not undertaking this work so much with the intent to benefit itself, as to provide once a year at least a really representative exhibition of British birds, where they may come under the notice of the general public. At a show of this magnitude it should be an honour to win.

Furthermore, in addition to the ordinary prizes, their treasurer, Mr. T. R. Trower, has most generously given to the members for competition a silver medal for the most points in each class throughout the British, Continental, and Hybrid sections (i.e., 59 medals), and, moreover, he has also given a special of five shillings for the most entries in each class, open to all (i.e., to non-members as well). With regard to the silver medals, if a non-member of the N.B.B. and M.C. should total most points in a class he would be considered the winner and receive the medal providing he joined and was accepted a member of the N.B.B. and M.C. At present the club have not allotted other help to the section, but it is believed that when they consider applications for patronage, even further recognition in the shape of medals and cups will be given.

When we consider that all this has been provided for an entrance fee of 1/6 (i.e., to members of the N.B.B. and M.C. and L.C.B.A.), it is obvious that the membership of this old and respected club (the only one that has taken a real active interest, outside patronage, in the welfare of this branch of the hobby) should considerably increase. It is the object of the N.B.B. and M.C. to hold the finest show of British birds ever seen, and they have been largely helped by the kind interest of their treasurer. Should the support fall far below expectations, those who are prepared to spend time and money to bring the matter to a successful issue will not be encouraged to repeat their offers, and it is therefore more or less in the hands of the British bird-keepers of Great Britain to make or mar the most generous offer that has ever been put before them.

The club will provide a special and competent staff to feed and attend to the receipt and despatch of exhibits, and owners of rare and delicate specimens may rest assured that no efforts will be spared to insure their safety. The following judges have been chosen:—Finches and Buntings will be divided between Mr. C. Prior and Mr. A. Silver; Hybrids and some of the insectivorous bird classes, Mr. John Robson; other insectivorous bird classes, Mr. J. Dewhurst.

The secretary of the N.B.B. and M.C., Mr. J. P. Carr (45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, London, W.), will be pleased to answer any questions with reference to the forthcoming show as far as the British and Hybrids are concerned. Those who require schedules will be able to get them from Mr. J. Bray, the sec. of the L.C.B.A., 67, St. Dunstan's Road, Hammersmith, on or about Nov. 1st, 1914.—J. P. Carr, Hon. Sec. N.B.B. and M.C.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE (East End) C.B.S.

Meeting, April 29, Leighton's School, Heaton Road; a large number present; Mr. Hutchinson, chair. Members elected: Mr. A. Montgomery, Wallsend; Mr. Bushel, Newcastle. Classification settled for annual show: Nor. 12 classes, Cinnamons 4, Yorks. 4, Borders 12, Crests 8, Lizards 2, A.O.V. 1, Mules 2, Brit. 9, For. 2. Mr. J. Milne gave his experience with the Norwich Plainhead, which proved very interesting, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him. Vote of thanks to chair closed the meeting.—J. W. Coutts, Hon. Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

Annual meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, April 25, Mr. C. Morrison presiding in the absence of Mr. P. Drake, the president. Balance-sheet for past year, showing £3 1s. 0½d. in hand, was passed and considered very satisfactory. Officers elected: C. Morrison (Brighouse), president; A. Brown (Yeadon), and W. Richmond (Rodley), vice-presidents; R. Halliday (Shipley), J. E. Hudson (Bradford), auditors; committee, T. Ogden, J. Bailey, R. Sutcliffe, A. Cooper, O. Atkinson, S. B. Grayshon, J. Firth, J. E. Hudson, W. A. Cowgill, L. Ogden, G. Snead, D. Thornton, A. Whitley, S. Binns, G. White, A. Midgley, L. C. Casey, W. Gledhill, H. H. Towers. Resolved to have open amateur and novices' competition same condition as last year. Applications for patronage close June 5. The committee were of opinion that entries last year were not good, and when applications were considered some means should be devised if possible to induce our members to show at patronage shows, even to the extent of part guaranteeing classes, as it was felt we might do more than we had done in this direction. Sec. read a list of donors to special prize fund, and thanked the members for the very substantial help they had given him, as only by their help could he continue to act as sec. This help was again needed mostly owing to the low membership subscription of 1s. 6d. per year. Every new member is a help, and all breeders of this variety are invited to become members. Subs. may be handed to any member of committee. The pres. also spoke on these two items, asking members to make his year of presidency a record one, and on his part promising to do all he could to further the interests of the club, especially pointing out the duty of novice members to join us, as we ran a novice competition with splendid prizes. It was possible to make next year a bigger success than the past, and he hoped those societies who had poor entries would again apply for our patronage, he pointed out the extra efforts we were prepared to put forth, and the splendid entries at some of our shows last year. By united effort he felt sure we should have a grand success all round. The thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. Morrison for presiding. Next meeting, June 6.—R. Garnett.

BEAMISH C.B.S.

Meeting, Bird Inn, High Hold, Mr. W. Gowland chair, with a fair attendance. New members nominated: Messrs. Jess Walker and W. McNay (Birtley), Mr. J. McDonald (Pelton). Mr. H. Seeley (Choppington) elected to judge Young Bird Show, July 18, and Mr. J. Hands (Ryton) the Annual Show, Jan. 16. Members are having a good breeding season so far, but there is the old complaint of bad feeders. Decided to hold a Table Show next meeting, May 29. Classes: Canary, Linnet, Greenf., Goldf., and Redpoll. Our society is going strong. New members invited.—J. H. Elliott, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting, May 2. Business was got through as quickly as possible, and Mr. King, having finished his task of judging the British birds (and we did not envy him the position, as there were 22 birds of all kinds in one class), commenced to explain his reason for placing the birds. He gave us his experiences and methods of staging British birds, which kept a well-attended meeting fully interested until time was called. Table show, awards: 1, S. Ike, Pyrah; 2, J. Vlie, Middleton; c, Green. Mr. J. E. Pyrah won silver medal for most points kindly presented by Mr. E. Hattersley. The leaders for the Hattersley cruets, British section, are: Middleton, 27 points; Pyrah, 11; Chambers, 11. Mr. Menard was elected to judge Norwich, and Mr. W. A. Wilson the remainder, at June F.F. show. Messrs. R. Lundy, H. Clapham, A. Kirby, T. Falkinder, and Dr. Cummings, were elected members. E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

THE MOMENTOUS QUESTION: SHALL WE WED?

RESULT OF THE COMPETITION.

On a recent front page our artist, Mr. Norman, depicted two Norwich Plainheads, and we invited readers to answer, on a postcard, the question "Shall We Wed?" A prize of 5s. was offered for the reply adjudged the best. Quite a large number of readers tackled the problem as to whether the birds should be allowed to mate, and we append a selection of "Ayes" and "Noes" from the postcards sent in.

The winning effort we have selected is that sent in by Mr. R. W. Smith, 6, Lincoln St., Gateshead, who falls into "poetry," as follows:

Shall we two wed? why, yes, for we
A well-matched pair are, you'll agree;
The reason is not far to find,
If you to cage birds are inclined;
For soon extinct would be our race,
Unless we had the mating grace;
Then what would you good bird folks do
Without our song, and plumage, too?

By all means let the courtship proceed, as they are an ideal pair.—D. R. Swainson (Ilford).

No, because both birds are clears, also the hen is too small and flat on head, and both birds stand too upright on perch for Norwich in my opinion. The cock appears rather flat on head and too arched in back. The hen also seems weak on legs.—W. Wren (Oxford).

Yes, because the cock has a good head, but bad wing carriage, and the hen has a poor head and a good wing carriage.—M. Forster (Cramlington).

No. The reason is, I think the cock bird has asthma.—E. Shaw, Beehive, Nantymoel, Glamorgan, South Wales.

Yes; the cock bird is seen singing violently to the hen, as though in proper condition for mating. The hen bird is seen sidled up close to the partition as though to respond to the cock when calling to her.—Miss Ena Bateman (Pembroke).

No. Neither are ready. The hen looks as if she did not understand it, and the cock is inclined to be quarrelsome, instead of pulling himself together and singing. They both require a stimulating diet—eggs and a little maw seed, and plenty of green food.—J. Bastock (Moseley).

Yes; the cock is in good fettle, and with lowered wings vigorously serenades his love, who is not unresponsive, provokingly paying more attention to the seed box, but has come as near to the slide as the artist could artistically portray her. Moreover, they are not sick old birds, and the sire is certainly "lord and master," for his bold demeanour contrasts promisingly with the hen's deferential bearing.—H. Classey (Teddington).

Certainly not, for the same reason one would not allow two human beings of weak intellect to marry. These birds are not healthy; should say results of very much inbreeding.—J. Wones (Norwich).

Yes. Both birds are of good type, which always ought to stand first in our minds when pairing birds, and though the hen is not so clean-cut behind as she ought to be, the cock excels in that particular point. Both birds have exceptionally good heads, one point in which many of the Norwich of to-day fail very much, but it is the part which generally catches the eye of the judge first, and though the neck of the hen appears to run a little bit thin, the cock has a good thick neck, and from such a pair of birds one ought to breed good typical birds, not long, feathery, long-barrelled ones, with lashing over eyes like Cresthreds, like one sometimes sees in a cage in Norwich classes with a red ticket on.—G. W. Saunders (Haslemere).

No. They are only on paper, and no father would consent, as there are not visible means of support.—R. E. Lever (Freshwater).

Yes, because Mr. Lloyd George's Act is offering 30s. for every youngster.—G. Adams (Wolverton).

No; they are both hen birds.—Miss L. Vaughan (London, W.).

Yes. The best birds are moulded out of faults.—E. Battersby (Aintree).

The two Canaries should not be paired, as they are both too plump about the breast, and have the same faults about the head. Pairing two birds like that would bring very bad results.—Mary H. Scott (St. Andrews).

Everything depends upon the situation where the birds are kept With our variable climatic conditions, I should be rather reluctant to pair up if I lived across the border, unless my bird room was heated to some extent, If, on the other hand, I lived further south I should certainly draw the slide, as everything points to success, for isn't the cock in a condition we all like to see, singing away to his future partner; while she, on her part, advances to the wires to be fed by him after he has finished?—H. Warburton (Warrington).

No. The cock has not reached that excited, vigorous condition indicated by passionate singing and demeanour, nor is the hen betraying any real interest by manner or invitation.—E. W. Allsopp (Cardiff).

Yes, as I think it an interesting and profitable hobby.—F. W. Neville (Hoxton).

Shall we wed? Well, dear,
Your voice has such a charm,
It makes my heart go pit-a-pat:
I really see no harm.

And those wee dainty morsels
That you offer through the wire,
They seem to fill me with delight
And strengthen my desire.

So sing your song again to me—
I glory in your pride,
And—oh! I say, here's Mr. Brown
Come to remove the slide!
—H. H. Vaughan (Pontypool).

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

DESERTING YOUNG (J. S.).—The Roller is in no way exceptional in this respect. Many hens are apt to neglect the young and begin nesting again when the cock is left with them, which act quite differently if the cock is removed when they begin to sit, and they are left to hatch out and rear the young by themselves. In some instances it may be accounted for by a fresh clutch of eggs developing in a prolific hen before the young are able to leave the nest, or it may be due in other cases to feeding the hen too highly whilst she is sitting. With the next brood remove the cock on the evening of the day the third egg is laid, when you are putting the hen to sit, and keep him out of her sight and, if convenient, hearing also, until she is ready to go to nest with the following brood. Leave her to sit and rear the young quite by herself, and whilst she is sitting, give a diet of plain canary seed only, and do not begin to give hemp for feeding the young until they are eight or ten days old. The only way you could have dealt with the young when the hen deserted them in earnest, was to hand-rear them, or transfer them to foster-parents, if any such were available.

DIARRHŒA (H. R. S.).—See that your hemp is quite sweet and sound in the kernel, and try making the egg food for these hens with crushed maizena wafer biscuits instead of bread crumb, and use equal parts of each up to the fourth day. After this time gradually increase the proportion of biscuit to twice the amount of egg. Sprinkle well with maw seed, and continue giving maw separately as now. After the fourth day give a teaspoonful of boiled summer rape each day, but see that this does not remain to become sour. Then if the looseness continues, dust the egg food with carbonate of bismuth each morning, but watch hen for a time after the first time of doing this to see whether she rejects it, which, however, is not likely, and add 20 drops of brandy and six of tincture of opium to the drinking water for one-half of each day for a few days.

WHEEZING AND BARE NECK (W. H. Bunney).—I cannot tell whether the wheezing and the bareness round the neck is due to removing the bird from one room to another without some data to go upon. The wheezing might be due to this cause under certain circumstances, but the latter is not so likely an effect of such removal. Keep the bird in a comfortable place free from cold draughts or severe fluctuations. In addition to the usual seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake dusted with flour of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a month, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece. Allow bird to bathe freely, and give a little green food in variety daily. For the wheezing, add five drops each of glycerine, ipecacuanha wine, syrup of squills, and syrup of tolu to the water every second day for a fortnight, giving this on the days when you are not giving the potash.

SITS RUFFLED UP (R. R., Wigan).—Surely it would have been more to the point had you said what you had done for the hen, instead of just saying you have tried everything. In the latter event it would seem that there is nothing left but to discard the hen altogether for breeding, which, after all, would be far the best course if your suspicion that she is an old one is correct. Try the following treatment for, say, three weeks, and if this does not have the desired effect, write again and give fuller particulars about her and the treatment you have already given. For one week give a diet of plain canary seed only, supplemented with a liberal supply of green food daily, and in the water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea each day. After this add half a teaspoonful of egg food, with about half the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a small growing stool of dandelion fresh daily. In the water after the first week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tinct. of steel every second day for a fortnight.

VARIED (My Girl).—(1) No. 1 is an excellent all-round sample canary seed, than which you need not wish for better. No. 2 is a very fair passable quality of canary, but is not nearly so good as No. 1. No. 3 is a very small seasoned sample of summer rape of very fair quality. (2) Yes, the crumbs of wholemeal bread are quite suitable for mixing with egg instead of white bread crumbs, and should be just as much preferable for birds as humans. The wholemeal bread is certainly more natural to them. (3) It would depend upon the weather prevailing at the time whether the eggs would be spoilt by the hen being off the nest for an hour-and-a-half after sitting 3 days. I should not lose hope of such eggs, and advise you to allow the hen to sit her full time before discarding them. (4) I cannot say offhand whether it is a record to breed 43 young and have 40 cocks in them. If one is breeding songsters it is, anyway, a feat to be proud of, but there are other cases where hens would have been just as desirable.

AILING CREST COCK (Miss Pratt).—The cock has in all probability got a slight chill which will, with proper care, soon pass off. Separate the cock from the hen and leave her to batch out and rear the young by herself, which she will do quite well. Keep him caged by himself, and out of sight of the hen for preference, in a fairly warm place, but quite free from draughts. In addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, daily for a week or so. In the water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for two consecutive days, and afterwards give instead 20 drops of whisky, and five each of syrup of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirits of nitre for a few days. This should suffice to set matters right.

EXCRETA OFFENSIVE (A.N.E.).—I suspect the bird is troubled with diarrhœa, though you do not mention the fact. If this is so the odour will disappear when the looseness is stopped. For one day only add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water, and after this substitute six drops of gentian and four of tincture of opium daily until the looseness is stopped. Whilst giving this also give a morsel of bread and milk dusted well with carbonate of bismuth each day. After the looseness is cured, add just enough solution of permanganate of potash to the drinking water to tinge it a light pink colour daily for a week or so afterwards. If no diarrhœa is present give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water every second day for a week, and on the alternate days the potash as above, and dust the bread and milk with powdered charcoal. Cover the cage floor well with pine sawdust for the time being.

SITS WITH CLOSED EYES (A. Reader).—It may be due to a weak low condition of health, but you should first examine its eyes to see if they are in a normal condition. If there are whitish specks in the centres it will mean that the bird is suffering from cataract, which will sufficiently explain its behaviour. The disease is incurable, and you can do nothing for it. If this is not the case give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice in the water every second day for a week, and after this give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. Keep the bird in a nice bright position, well aired, but free from cold draughts.

ROLLERS NOT LAYING (Crest).—You will find a reply to your former query under another heading. The only way in which I can account for the Roller hens not laying is that the ovaries have not been sufficiently active as yet to bring the ova forward. I think they only require a little patience and should not be surprised if some of them have laid by the time this reply appears. In any case it is, I believe, only a matter of a little time before the eggs put in an appearance, though, of course, the hens will not be available for feeding the young of the Crests, as desired. This may not be an insuperable difficulty. Let the Crest go on sitting, and when the young are hatched allow her to feed them as long as she will do so, or if she will do so let her rear them altogether. In the worst event she may keep them going until one of the Roller hens are ready to take them over and complete the rearing.

NOT LAYING (Lover of Birds).—There is yet plenty of time for the eggs to appear. Certainly it is too early by a long way to give up hope of the bird breeding this season. In addition to the staple diet give the pair a small teaspoonful of egg food every second day, and mix in it each time about half the quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. On the alternate days give a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. Give a young growing stool of dandelion, gathered fresh every day. Continue this feeding for two or three weeks, and if eggs have not appeared in, say, three weeks hence, write again, and I will advise you further.

TO GROW FEATHERS (Constant Reader). It is doubtful whether the feathers will now be reproduced until the natural moulting season. The bird is also evidently being kept in an unsuitable place, and most likely exposed to draughts as the hoarseness seems to show. This must be remedied before you can hope to do the bird any permanent good Keep it in a place where it is free from cold draughts, or impure air, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, but in a bright and healthy place. To stop the hoarseness give a morsel of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana. In the water add 20 drops of whisky, and five each of syrup of squills and ipecacuanhana wine every second day for a week or so. Give a little dandelion daily. For the baldness you may mix together one teaspoonful of glycerine and 20 drops of glacial acetic acid, and slightly moisten the bare skin with a feather dipped in this twice a week for a month. Use very sparingly, and do not allow it to get quite near the eyes. Allow the bird to bathe freely, and add a few drops of quassia essence to the bath twice a week for a time. Keep the mites at bay now and the above treatment should be all that is required.

DEAD IN SHELL (P. D. R.).—Considering the very great proportion of young dead in the shells in the first round, and the curious coincidence of the same happening in former seasons with the first round, I am strongly inclined to think that it is due to some local cause affecting the whole stock, which in some way is responsible for the chilling of the eggs, and consequent death of the embryos. Is your room a very cold one, or exposed to extreme changes of temperature during the early months of the year, or do you mate up very early? In the latter case the remedy is obvious, but in the former event you could only hope to avoid this loss either by deferring mating until the settled spring weather is come each year, which would in the end be no loss of time at all, or by making arrangements for keeping up a regular moderate temperature of, say, not less than 50 degrees, until the first nests are safely reared. A quite moderate source of heat supply, chiefly by night, would suffice for this. Do you use a light for feeding the birds in the evenings? If so, you should be careful to avoid the possibility of extinguishing it suddenly before seeing that all the hens are safely on the nests. By neglecting this precaution it is quite possible to spoil the whole round of first nests by extinguishing the light whilst hens are off the nests feeding, when they may be some time in finding their way back again.

HOW TO BRING THEM ON (Mrs. M. King).—Are you sure the birds are cocks? Any healthy cock ought to be in song now, and with very few exceptions in good breeding condition. See that they are kept in bright and healthy surroundings, free from cold cutting draughts, and treat as follows for a few weeks, which should quickly bring them forward. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition to this give to each pair a small teaspoonful of egg-food, with a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, and on the alternate days a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Each day give a freshly gathered young stool of growing dandelion. Cut off the root just below the ground, clear off the dirt, and give the whole crown to the birds. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week.

PERCHES OR FEET (E. W. B.).—The claws often get unnaturally long in an old bird, but certainly not the toes, and as you say you have already trimmed the claws, I think it far more likely that the difficulty of getting from perch to perch is probably due to the perches being insecurely fixed, and wobbling about when the bird attempts to move. See that they are of a proper size, of a flattened oval shape, made of a nice soft pine wood, and fix them securely so that they will not wriggle about under the bird's movements. Catch the bird once and bathe the feet for a few moments in a solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid in a saucerful of warm water—then dry gently, and paint the toes all over with a feather dipped in Friar's Balsam.

T'OTHER FROM WHICH (Beginner).—If, as I assume, you marked the two pure Canaries' eggs when placing them under the other hen, you will, of course, have got over the initial difficulty of being sure whether they hatch out or not. When the young are hatched you will doubtless be able to recognise them very distinctly by the Mules having perceptibly smaller beaks and feet, but the beak will be the most noticeable feature, and they will almost to a certainty be covered with a more dark-coloured down. You will be on the safe side if you ring the lightest and larger-beaked birds for Canaries.

EGGS AND YOUNG (Crest).—(1) A week is about the limit of time to keep eggs before putting them to sit in order to be on the quite safe side. If the germs are strong, and the eggs properly kept, and given a half turn daily, they might be kept a fortnight, or even longer, but in such cases the risk of them not hatching is enormously increased. You have done right to put them under the crested hen without further delay. If the Roller has laid and begun to sit, by this time you can exchange the two clutches of eggs when the Roller has been sitting a few days or a week, and thus ensure things going on the same as if she had sat them from the beginning. (2) Yes, some hens will feed a brood of chicks if given to them before their own eggs are hatched, the eggs, of course, being removed when the chicks are given, but only actual experiment can prove whether any particular hen will do so or not. (3) Most hens will sit, batch, and rear the young of any other hen without the slightest show of resentment. Occasionally, however, one may meet with a hen which will refuse to have anything to do with another hen's eggs, as yours did last year, but such cases are quite exceptional.

COLOUR FEEDING (W. G., Novice).—I take it you refer to ordinary colour-feeding. There is little or nothing to be gained by colour-feeding young in the nest, and I do not advise you to do it unless you have some definite object in doing so, which you do not say. For ordinary colour-feeding you will not require to begin giving colour food until the young are about to start moulting for the first time, which, in normal circumstances, will be about the middle of July, and by this time you will see lots of detailed information for colour-feeding if you look out for it. About the beginning of July will be soon enough to commence giving the colour in a weak form, about twice a week, until the birds show signs of beginning to cast feathers, when you gradually increase the strength, and give it about every second day until the moult seems imminent, when it is necessary to give it regularly every day until the moult is quite finished. You can buy the colour ready for mixing with the egg-food from any respectable dealer. See our advt. columns, or if you wish to blend your own, get a pound of pure tasteless pepper, two ounces Natal, six ounces soft sugar, and thoroughly blend these together and store ready for use in a glass jar, or air-tight tin. Two ounces of best salad oil may be added if desired, and the Natal may be omitted if objected to. I have had excellent results with both these omissions, and do not consider them essential. If you are in doubt upon any point which you do not see explained in our columns in due course, do not hesitate to write for the information.

ALWAYS IRRITABLE (Mat).—Using sea-sand on the cage floors would have nothing at all to do with this trouble, which is much more likely to be due to insects—either red mites or grey lice. Examine the cages well for the latter pests, and the birds themselves for grey lice, and if either are found take the necessary steps to exterminate them. If no insects are found, treat the birds the same as advised to "W. H. Bunney," in this issue, with the exception that you will not need to give the medicines for the wheezing. Also give a bath daily, in which you have dissolved a little sulphuretted potash—in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of water. If the irritation has not disappeared after, say, a fortnight of this treatment, write again, and I will advise you further.

THREE POINTS (S. C., Cheshire).—(1) If the hen shows no desire to go to nest again earlier, allow her to go on with the young until a day or two after the young have left the nest, before returning the cock. The young can then be placed in a nursery cage for a few days, and hung on the front of the breeder, and the cock returned to the hen. One or both parents will continue to do all the feeding that is essential until the young are able to do without their aid in feeding. (2) Three broods is the limit you should take from a hen in one season, and two is even better if you would be satisfied with that number. You do not say what the colour of the young Norwich cock is. But the colour of the young will depend upon the amount of green blood in the veins of this bird. Unless the hen is bred from greens, and the cock also self green, it is not very likely that all the young will be green. You will be practically certain to get a proportion of variegated young, and perhaps a stray ticked, or even clear, if there is much clear blood in the parents. (3) I take it you mean, could the progeny of the same parents be mated with one another. This implies breeding with brother and sister, which is most inadvisable, and should never be done without a very definite object in view.

YOUNG DYING (Lawrence Connell).—You omit to say whether the hens cease feeding the young, or want to go to nest again, which is rather an important detail. Also you should, if possible, remove the cock out of the sight and hearing of the hen when you take him away. But in the present circumstances I advise you to try leaving the cock with the hen when she commences to sit with the next brood. Some hens rear the young much better when the cock is with them than when he is removed, whilst others are just the reverse. You cannot tell to which class a hen belongs until you have tried her; hence it will be wise to try yours with the cock left to assist. There is nothing radically wrong with the method of feeding. But when the next young are hatched, try making the egg-food with equal parts eggs, crumb of stale bread, and sponge cake, instead of using the arrowroot biscuit. Start giving green food in small quantities fresh twice a day on the third or fourth day; a little soaked summer rape daily about the eighth day, but see that this does not become sour; and cracked hemp, about the tenth day. Offer the bath for a few minutes daily after the first week. The loss of the young is in no way caused by you being in the room constantly. You might, however, put some light cover, such as a small piece of brown paper on the cage front just before the nest if it is exposed much to view, and do not interfere with the nest any more than is quite unavoidable.

LUMP ON BACK (Mrs. F. Crawley).—It is impossible to be certain about the nature of the swelling without seeing it, and as the pricking only affords very temporary relief, I would advise you to discontinue it, and show the bird to a veterinary, or your medical man, and ask them to advise you. It will probably be useless doing anything until the growth has been excised—a simple operation, which either of these gentlemen may perform for you, though I would not advise you to attempt it yourself.

A BROKEN CYCLE (D. J.).—Have you examined the nest well? Because there is a possibility of the hen having laid in due course and continued carrying building material into the nest meantime, and thus covered the eggs from sight at a casual glance. These things happen now and again. If this surmise is not correct, the cause is a broken cycle of reproduction, for which you can do nothing but wait patiently for Nature to reassert herself, and resume the normal ordering of things. If the hen is still sitting, give her a clutch of common fertile eggs to hatch and rear the young, if she will do so. She may do this all right, and then recommence nesting again on her own account, and follow the normal course next time. It is too early to classify her as a barren hen yet.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

LINNETS DYING (Baler).—It appears to me that you are feeding your Linnets rather heavily, you had better put them on a much more simple diet. The mixture I like best is the following: Canary seed two parts, teazle two parts, rape, charlock, and linseed one part each. Then see if you can procure a good wild seed mixture and if so give a spoonful twice a week, if not, make the following mixture and use in the same way, gold of pleasure, thistle, dandelion, niger, maw, and hemp in equal quantities. You say nothing in your letter about green-food. At this time of the year and all through the summer and autumn you should use it liberally. Just now you can collect chickweed, groundsel, dandelion, both leaf and seed pods, and shepherd's purse, all these are in a flowering stage and daily ripening their seeds. Place a good big bunch in each cage, fresh every morning, and let the birds make their own selection. See that they have cages sufficiently large to exercise in, and do not forget the bath. If at any time you find one mopy a dose of glauber salts would be your best remedy, but if you follow out the above directions you will, no doubt, keep them in health.

AVIARY MATTERS (King).—Of the British birds the Greenfinches would be the most likely to breed in your aviary. With a hen Canary any of the following, Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, and Greenfinch. Your aviary is quite large enough to contain all of them, together with six or eight hen Canaries. Let your perches and nesting pans and boxes be well distributed about the place, so that the hens have a good selection. The sooner you turn the birds into the aviary the better, as many hens are now nesting.

HANGING A BULLFINCH IN THE SUN (Finchley).—There is no harm whatever in hanging your bird out in the sun for a short period; in fact it will do him good. All wild birds are out in the sun the greater part of the day, but have the advantage of being able to retire into the shade when they like. What one wants to be careful about is not to hang any bird on a blank wall fully exposed to the hot sun during all hours of a long summer's day. (2) Your bird possibly broke, or put his wing out of joint when he was young, and it is extremely doubtful if he would suffer any pain from it now. When at rest many birds have a habit of dropping their wings and standing on one foot. I do not think you need worry about him. I presume you are feeding him as advised to other readers.

JACKDAW NOT TALKING (Jack Daw). — Whatever you do do not cut your Jackdaw's tongue, nor allow anyone else to do it. If your bird is inclined to mimic sounds he hears he will do so without any interference on your part. If he does not attempt to talk and you are very anxious to have one that does, let him have his liberty, and get another young one, or better still try a Magpie or Jay. A good staple food for a Jackdaw is "Melox," or biscuit meal with a spoonful of fine crissel or meat meal soaked with it. With this you could mix a little boiled potato. You can give him any scraps from the table, and occasionally a little minced meat and any insect life you can collect, also fruit.. In fact, there is very little in the way of food that a Jackdaw will not sample and the more varied his diet the better.

HYBRID MOULTING (F. J. H.).—Change of temperature would no doubt be the cause of your bird casting his feathers. When you procured him you should have enquired where he had been kept, and treated him accordingly. All you can do now is to keep him in a room free from draughts, feed him well, and wait for his new coat to grow. In addition to his usual seeds give him a little hard-boiled egg and biscuit, and a little extra hemp and maw seed.

CHAFFINCHES BREEDING (R. H. T.). — I am very doubtful if your hen Chaffinch will incubate the eggs she has laid. Of course, one never knows how any individual bird will act. All I can advise you is to interfere with them as little as possible. As regards the feeding to rear the young, if any, it is a rather difficult problem, because in a wild state these birds rear almost entirely upon live food, especially for the first few days. If your birds will eat soft food I would advise you to give them some good insectile mixture, just a little every day while they are nesting so that they are well used to it when the young are hatched. When this occurs you could add a little hard-boiled egg to the mixture, also live ants' eggs, small mealworms, green fly, etc., and a free supply of rape, radish, and lettuce seed that has commenced to germinate, a little crushed hemp and cracked sunflower would also assist. Whatever you do leave them to themselves as much as possible, simply feed them.

WHAT BIRD (R. R.).—I am unable to identify your bird by your description. I cannot call to mind any British bird with a thin red beak and yellow breast; either you are wrong in your description or your fancier friend is wrong when he calls it a Wheatear. The latter bird has a grey back, a light breast slightly tinged with reddish, and a black patch round the eye and cheek; he has a habit of moving his tail up and down when he looks at you; he has a conspicuous white patch on the rump. If your bird is like this he should be fed on a good make of insectile food with mealworms and other insects.

SEX OF GOLDFINCH (H. Commander).—You had better part your birds, and if the Goldie is a cock he should sing almost at once. In the cock bird the blaze should come well past the eye, and the head be somewhat flat, but at this time of the year you should be able to sex your bird by examining the vent, which should be protruding or what fanciers term "well sprung." It is not an unusual occurrence for two hens to feed each other. If it turns out to be a hen why not try her with a cock Linnet, you could possibly get one even now, although it is somewhat late.

GOLDFINCH OUT OF SORTS (Novice). — Your Goldfinch is simply pining for a mate, and you had better put him with the hen at once, or give him a complete change by hanging his cage out in the open air for an hour or so each day, and also administer a dose of glauber salts. Dissolve as much as will cover a sixpence in his drinking-water one day, then miss a day and give again. (2) It is no uncommon occurrence for a hen to behave as yours does. A good tonic is the best remedy or a course of chemical food. Put a small teaspoonful in her drinker, first boiling the water, or it will not mix. Give it fresh daily. Put her in a big cage and take away all nesting material, and let her bathe daily if she will; also give plenty of grit and cuttlefish.

WHAT BIRDS? (Francais). — According to your description your first bird is a Greater Tit, called in some places a Blackcap. As far as singing goes it bears no comparison with the melodious Blackcap that visits us each spring. If you keep it include hemp and sunflower seeds to its diet, also a pinch of maw seed. (2) Your other bird appears to me to be a cock Tree Pipit, a bird that requires to be fed on an insectile food of good quality, also a few mealworms and other insects. The markings on the body of the hen bird are somewhat narrower.

TROUBLE IN AVIARY (W. Robinson). — Your aviary is, in fact, only a good-sized flight cage, and I should suggest that your trouble arises from having too many birds in it. Birds are busy-bodies and must be doing something, and when they are confined in a small area it is generally mischief. I would advise you to take out the cock Chaffinch and the hen Goldie, and then if you have any more eggs broken you will have to do without the Siskin. If you have to do this you could mate the Siskin and Goldie together in a cage, taking away the eggs as they are laid. The unfortunate part about it is that if you have to take out the Siskin it will leave you with only one cock bird, in which case I would advise you to introduce a Redpoll or cock Canary. I say Redpoll because you will possibly have less trouble in procuring one now than you would any other Finch. If you have once had mice in your place you will get them again. The Canary seed is sure to attract them. Bait some "break-back" traps with it and place them outside, behind a board leaning against the aviary.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

SPROSSER (J.W.).—I have sent you per post all the addresses I know of as being a likely source. Apart from these your best course would be to advertise in our columns, birds appear in an unexpected manner at times, also watch our columns, and as soon as you see one advertised secure it by wire, as you are not the only seeker; others are advertising for one, but I think you will secure one from one of the addresses I gave you.

BIRDS FOR CAGE (D.A.).—It all depends on what purpose you have in view. If you want to breed them you had better confine yourself to two pairs, say, Zebra Finches and Bengalese, with not more than two Canaries; but if you want merely a series of bird pets, then you could put in a dozen, or say, 2 Canaries, pair Avadavats, pair Orange-cheek Waxbills, pair Gold-breasted Waxbills, pair Bib Finches, pair Silverbills, pair Grey Singing Finches. I cannot advise putting Weavers into so small a compass, as though one would probably do no harm (this would depend largely on the demeanour of the individual you got—some of the same species are quarrelsome, others amiable). As sleeping quarters I should suspend seven or eight rush nests from the top of the cage, three of them could be put in the dome, more as sleeping quarters than for nesting purposes. I cannot advise the putting in of Budgerigars or Lovebirds in so small a space.

GREY PARROT (H.G.C.).—You must tell me what you know of how it has been fed before you had it, also how you have been dieting it since, and how long you have had it. If you give me this information I will try and help you, without it I cannot even guess at cause. In the meantime put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water every other day and half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water on the intervening day. If you suspect parasites then spray it with a tepid solution of quassia twice a week, at any rate this can do no harm, but you must keep it strictly out of reach of chill winds and draught till the plumage is dry again. It is better without the cayenne.

PURPLE SUGAR-BIRDS (Tobacco).—The cock bird is purple and black when adult; the hen is green, lighter below with whitish striation, with a patch of orange-chestnut on the chin and throat. Up to the present it has not been bred in captivity, but more than one attempt has been made, and there is no reason why ultimate success should not be attained. I think it would be safer, as you have had them but two months, to wait till the end of the month before turning them out, though at the present time there is a hen Yellow-wing Sugar Bird out in my aviary, but this is a bird I have had three years, and it is always out of doors from Easter till early November, but the special season must regulate in a measure time of putting out and taking in.

FEATHER PULLER (J. Ashcroft).—I am compelled to tell you the same as another correspondent, though your information is a little fuller. Before I can frame a helpful reply I must know how you have been feeding the bird—"sops" have rather an ominous sound. Give me this information and I will try and help you. In the meantime put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the drinking water every other day, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Also supply cuttlebone and grit, also keep a piece of a branch of a tree in the cage for it to cut up.

HOW MANY? (W.H.).—If you furnish your cage with one or two straight perches and about a dozen small rush nests you can put in the following: Pairs each of Grey (Common) Gold-breasted, Orange-cheeked and St. Helena Waxbills, 2 pairs Avadavats, 1 pair each Bib Finches and Silverbills, and a pair of Cordon Bleus or Blue-fronted Waxbills, also 1 pair Fire Finches. If you procure our two Nutshells, "Avadavats" and "Waxbills," 2½d. each post free from our manager, you will know exactly how to feed these charming and interesting mites. Just a word of warning as to stocking. Cheapest is often dearest in the long run. See your birds if possible before purchase, and pick out only alert, clear-eyed and well-feathered specimens BUDGERIGARS (Novice).—You give me no idea of size of aviary, nor yet what nesting accommodation you have supplied. According to information given it would appear that either mice have disturbed them and the parent birds have thrown out the eggs, or the two pairs have quarrelled and thrown out each others' eggs. If you have only two husks put up another four, and arrange the openings of same to be as distant from each other as size of aviary permits. With a little management as to placing and the way the opening points, it is possible even in a small aviary to keep them pretty far apart. I should say they will settle down all right with their next nest.

INDIAN MYNAHS (F. W. Lewis).—All newly imported birds of any and every species are more or less difficult to establish or acclimatise (I presume this is what you mean by "rear"), but the Hill Mynah, the large blue-black species, with orange wattles or lobes, is not unduly so, and this is the best talking species in fact the only species that talks really well. They are almost omnivorous, but the staple diet may be summed up as Insectivu mixture (soft food), ripe fruit and live insects. You can vary this with general table scraps, rice pudding, milk sop, etc. They are largish birds, and need a roomy cage, but a fly round the room daily permits the use of a smaller cage. The cage must be kept strictly clean, or the birds, being large eaters, it soon ones unpleasant. The Pagoda is small, more a Starling; its plumage is an arrangement of black, vinous-brown, grey and whitish-grey.

BUDGERIGARS BUILDING (W.A.M.). Budgerigars do not build, they simply fashion out the interior of the coco-nut husk to their liking and then, when all is ready, deposit their eggs therein. Budgerigars as a rule breed more freely when kept in a flock, and usually a single pair in a cage take longer to settle down to nesting than when kept together in numbers; but if your hen is a robust, well-feathered, and healthy bird, there is no need to change her, as it is merely a matter of patience, and they will ultimately settle down and bring up a family; and once they have started they will not try your patience further, but follow on with brood after brood. I should put another husk in the cage at the opposite end and supply them with as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat. Try them for another three months. Once started they usually only stop for the moult.

VALUE OF RED-RUMP PARRAKEETS (L.H.).—The average value is usually about 35s. to 40s., but there has been a scarcity of Australian Parrakeets for some time past, and 60s. and 70s. has been offered for a pair, and about this figure must be taken as their present value, unless there should be numbers come suddenly to hand, then the price would fall a little, but this appears rather improbable in the immediate future.

WHAT BIRD (P.S.D.).—It is a Ruddy-backed or Chinese Bunting, which were rather plentiful on the market awhile ago and are still in offer. Your diagram enabled me to recognise the bird at once. The colours of the hen bird are not so intense as those of the male. I think you would find it would appreciate two or three mealworms per diem.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. Livingston.—Death occurred from pneumonia. There was nothing infectious.

M. S. Runchman.—Congestion of the lungs. The bird was otherwise in splendid form.

G. P. Lunn.—Acute inflammation of the bowels, apparently the result of some irritant poison.

John Massey.—Septic pneumonia of an infectious character. I should advise you to carry out thorough disinfection of your cages, room, etc. It is a very virulent disease, the local symptoms being treated, whilst the real trouble is overlooked.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Far Fetched (W. Bell).—The story you send is as ancient as it is far-fetched. It is quite a hoary old joke.

Greyfriars.—Your description is too vague to help us much in answering you. Was the bird an old cock Linnet in breeding garb? Such a one would have a very crimson breast. Or it might be a Robin with white flight feathers.

AVOID UNNECESSARY TROUBLE and EXPENSE

by rearing your birds on

SPRATT'S COD LIVER OIL CAGE BIRD FOOD

THERE IS EVERY REASON WHY you should use this Food in preference to the old-fashioned egg and biscuit preparation.

It is much more efficacious.

It is more easily prepared and keeps sweet much longer.

It is far less expensive.

It improves the size of the birds fed upon it, assists them to feather quickly, and greatly increases their stamina.

For many years the most up-to-date Canary Breeders have regularly used Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food, not only as a food for fledglings, but for a number of other purposes.

IT IS INVALUABLE

(a) For feeding during the Moult. (b) As a medium for giving Colour Food. (c) For feather producing. (d) For weakly birds requiring a Tonic. (e) For Winter-feeding of Adult Birds.

POST PAID PRICES:

THE GIANT BARBET.

A CURIOUS INDIAN BIRD.

This remarkable species has occasionally been exhibited at English shows. It inhabits the temperate regions of the Himalayas, and has a very loud voice, but no song. The food consists chiefly of insects and fruit, and the nest is built in a hole excavated in a decayed tree.

F. CARL, Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-ides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent ou approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the veudor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returued the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to seud the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

The Certainty of Correctly Identifying all Birds Bred

surely well repays the small cost of these famous marking rings!

Mr. G. Thomson's ten-guinea bowl winner at Bristol was marked with my rings!

Haphazard Breeding will not produce Palace Winners;

any successful fancier will tell you so, and leading fanciers, who have used these rings for years, know from experience that the neatest, safest, and best are LECLAIR'S. Hundreds of testimonials. CAGE BIRDS says: "One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." Consecutively and distinctly numbered, with or without year, 100 2/6, 75 2/-, 50 1/6, 25 10d. Supplied with or without flanges, and in sizes for all varieties.

SUPERIOR ALUMINIUM RINGS

My practical 6d. "Pedigree Book" and cage labels will help you to keep an accurate record. Free, with 75 rings or more; send 3d. with smaller orders.

LOST VITALITY RESTORED
The greatest food for your hens when run down; it restores them to wonderful breeding condition; hens, which have hitherto been bad feeders, after having "Phosto" will feed and bring up their young in an almost surprising manner; young birds fed on "Phosto" have health and size, full of vigour, and will leave the nest in a wonderful condition. The proof of these statements can be tried for a small outlay. Once you try "Phosto" you will never be without it. Prices, in tins, 1/-, 2/6, and 4/6. Note the name: Judge Silk, Norwich Specialist, Whitstable.

Over 1,200 Birds in Stock.

Now is the Time to secure exceptional value in all varieties of Canaries. I have over 1,200 birds in stock, every one of which I guarantee to be untried and ready for immediate Breeding. I am offering EXCEPTIONAL BARGAINS in Songsters, Stock Birds, and Matched Breeding Pairs. My stock must be considerably reduced during the next few weeks to make room for this season's youngsters. As regards the quality of my stock, they have made a firm reputation during the last few years, and it is sufficient to state that during the 1914 show season, just ended, they won over 450 prizes at open champion shows in hottest open competition. In addition to this, I supplied a large number of birds that won for my clients all over the Kingdom. Letters proving this are filed here for the inspection of my numerous visitors.

If you require a real good stock bird (cock or hen), or a first-class songster, in any of the varieties named below, let me send them on approval. I am so confident I can please you that I am prepared to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on ten days' approval.

Kindly note the following prices, but remember it is not only the price you pay, but the value you get that is important. The birds I am now sending out are worth much more than the prices charged, as you will agree if you accept my offer.

'What the World Says.'

NOT WHAT I SAY.

San Sebastian, Colombo, Ceylon, April 20, 1914.—Dear Sir,—Some few years ago I brought out with me here some Canaries I purchased from you, and was entirely pleased with them, though I had not seen them before they met me at Victoria Station, and had trusted the selection to you and your good name. I now want you to send me some direct.—Yours truly, (Rev.) M.M.M.

Lordship Lane, Tottenham, May 7th, 1914.—Received bird quite safely. I am extremely pleased with him. I thank you for sending such a good one. Whenever I hear of anyone wanting a good bird, I shall recommend you without any hesitation, if they wish for good value and to do business with a straightforward gentleman.—H. YOUNG.

Box, Wilts, May 11th, 1914.—Parrot and cage arrived safely; very pleased with same.—W. BENCE.

161, Langley Road, Catford, May 10th, 1914.—Thank you for the Roller you sent me last Monday. He is a splendid songster, and I am very pleased with him.—J. F. WICKS.

18, Owen Street, Bath Row, Birmingham.—Have you got . . . The two Roller cocks that you sent me at Easter are quite satisfactory, and are going on all right.—F. HERBERT.

TALKERS!!!

Grey and Amazon Parrots, including some of the cleverest obtainable. Particulars free. My pamphlet, "The Parrot Trick Exposed," should be seen by all interested. Beware of so-called Red and Grey, also Indian Parrakeets, sold by unprincipled dealers as "Talking Parrots." See my advertisement on page 425.

W. RUDD, The Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

PARROTS, Blue-fronted Amazon, 45/-; one Amazon (rare), species unknown, 55/-; Australian Red-beaked, 35/-; all talkers and in grand plumage, thoroughly acclimatised; price includes good cages; inspection invited after 6 p.m.; no dealers; good homes desired: Mr. Emmett, 35, Albert-rd., Hounslow, Middlesex. (1609)

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published).

BUDGERIGAR breeders must not forget that best hatching and rearing results are obtained by using my "Improved Secure" cokernut breeding husks, which have withstood all competition for about 25 years; 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each; parks, zoos, and trade supplied: Harper, Husk Importer, New-st., Dudley. (1603)

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d from our agents (list published frequently).

Chapman, High-st., Birmingham. (1607)

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

Mr. J. Holroyd, Bradford, has been engaged to judge the F.F. show at Wibsey in July.

Mr. R. Fox, sec., writes that all meetings of the North Shields and Dis. C.B.C. are postponed until further notice.

At the monthly meeting of Broughty Ferry C.B.S., held May 6, it was decided to alter date of annual open show to December 12, instead of 5th as formerly arranged.—J. F. Langlands, sec.

I was pleased to see my unflighted yellow Yorkshire on the front page of CAGE BIRDS. writes Mr. H. Chew. A mistake was made, however, as the inscription should have read H. Chew, of Leeds, not H. Chew, of Manningham.

With great appreciation I thank you for depicting on the front page of CAGE BIRDS my unflighted bowl winner at the Bristol F.A. show last November. Your able artist, Mr. Norman, is greatly esteemed by all bird lovers. Best wishes to CAGE BIRDS.—George Thomson (Cardiff).

Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec., writes that at the next meeting of the L. and P.O.S., the Raglan Hotel, Aldersgate St., May 21, at 8, Mr. J. Hodder will give a lecture on the Norwich Canary. Friends will be welcome, and the comfortable and newly-furnished club room should be well filled on the occasion.

Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. country ramble takes place May 17th to Holmwood and Ranmore Common, writes Mr. A. G. Cant, hon. sec. Train leaves Peckham Rye 9.30; return rail fare 2s. 6d. to Dorking. Take own luncheon; tea at Temperance Hotel, Dorking. Hope to see a good muster.

Mr. W. Rudd, the noted dealer, of Norwich, sends us a really wonderful printed list of testimonials which have been received by him from foreign parts. It is evident that Mr. Rudd counts satisfied clients in practically every corner of the world. The originals are, every one, open to inspection.

The show of the Royal Cornwall Agricultural Association will be held at Fowey on June 10 and 11. There are twenty classes for cage-birds—Nor. 4, Crests 1, Yorks. 3, A.O.V. 1, Mules 2, Brit. 4, Group 1, For. 2, Sell 2; prizes 8s., 5s., 3s.; fee 1s. Judge, Mr. S. Tickell; ent. close June 1 to Denis Isbell, Fowey.

Our usual fortnightly meeting for May 23 has been cancelled, writes Mr. J. Peacock, hon. sec. Sunderland C.B.A., the members present at last meeting having decided to go to Corbridge on a ramble on that date. Train leaves Sunderland at 1 p.m.; fanciers and friends are invited to meet us at the North end of station a few minutes before train time.

The classification for the four shows of the Windhill C.B.S. may be had from the sec. Mr. J. A. Taylor, 36, Aireville Road, Frizinghill, Bradford. 10 classes are provided at each of the F.F. shows. Mr. J. Greaves judging on June 6, and Mr. T. Mountain on July 18. The judges for the winter shows, 28 classes in each, are Sept. 26 Mr. J. Broadley, and Dec. 19 Mr. W. Richmond.

Fanciers and friends who care to join the ramble through Epping Forest on May 16, write Messrs. Forse and Son, hon. secs. Leyton C.B.A., will be heartily welcomed. Assemble at Loughton Station, and start directly after the arrival at Loughton of the train timed for 3.25. A substantial meat tea will be provided at the "Owl" at 6, after which there will be songs given by members, and the usual jolly evening before going home. We hope to hear the Nightingales as usual on the homeward journey.

The Avicultural Magazine for May, the journal of the Avicultural Society, opens with a continuation of the very interesting article "My Birds at Brinsop Court," by Mr. H. D. Astley. "Some Hints on Parrot-keeping," by the Marquis of Tavistock, is full of advice which should prove interesting and useful to every keeper of a Parrot. Mr. G. E. Low tells of his pet Shamah, the contribution being illustrated with two charming photographs by the author. Mr. C. Barnby Smith writes on "Desirable Waders and Water Birds," and Dr. Butler continues his "Thirty two Years of Aviculture."

Mr. W. H. Butler writes that he has removed from Stanley to 33, St. Aiden's Road, S. Shields.

Will secretaries of Roller societies kindly note, writes Mr. H. Wantling, sec. Rossendale R.C.C., that we have decided to hold our annual Roller contest on Nov. 20 and 21, and avoid clashing.

The grand sketch of our Lesser Redpoll, the Palace Winner, does great credit to your artist. Every success to CAGE BIRDS.—Stuart and Dalling (Bathgate).

OBITUARY.

Mr. John Garner (Hazel Grove).

Fanciers throughout the country will regret to hear of the death, on May 4, of John Garner, of Hazel Grove, at the age of 62 years. The deceased gentleman was well known as one of the most successful breeders and exhibitors of the Giant of the Fancy, the Lancashire Canary. The Fancy has lost one of its oldest and most esteemed members. For over 40 years it has been his study and hobby to breed the very best and purest of strains, and he has won thousands of prizes on the show bench. Over many years, too, he has been acting as judge at some of the leading shows, and had already been selected to act in that capacity at the All England show of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S. Mr. Garner has been president of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A. for many years, and only recently he accepted the position for 1914. His quiet and unassuming manner endeared him to all who came in contact with him, and no man, by example and precept, could do more to further the interests of the Fancy he loved so much. A widow and grown-up family mourn the loss of a perfect gentleman and a famous fancier.

It is with heartfelt sorrow I acquaint you of another heavy loss the Lancashire and Lizard F.A. has sustained, writes Mr. J. Rukin, the hon. sec., in the death of our old and esteemed friend, John Garner. Honest John, as his intimate friends were proud to call him, was indeed the type of all that is best in a man and a fancier, and those who had the pleasure of his friendship always felt the better for the force of his example. As a breeder of high-class Lancashires, he attained to success which probably has never been equalled, and he was always a sturdy upholder of the pure type. He was interred at Norbury Church. Messrs. E. Fuller and M. Rukin (for J. Rukin) represented the L. and L.F.A., Messrs. S. Beswick, Oldham, Marsland, and J. Bell represented local fanciers, and Mr. J. Raynes, the M. and N.C.O.S. Every fancier will join me in tendering to Mrs. Garner and the family he has left behind him our sincere and loving sympathy in their bereavement.

Mr. C. Winstone, Kettering.

It is with profound sorrow, writes Mr. A. Martin, sec. Kettering C.B.S., that I have to report the death of Mr. Chas. Winstone, after a long and painful illness. The deceased was a breeder of Norwich and Crests, and for many years took a keen interest in the Fancy, several times judging at our local shows. He will be missed by a large circle of friends by whom he was held in high esteem, and his loss will be greatly felt. I am sure all fanciers will extend with us their deepest sympathy to his sorrowing mother and relatives.

Mr. J. Walsh has been engaged to judge cage-birds at Gwyrfai Show, near Carnarvon, June 27.

Hornsey, Wood Green and Dis. C.B.S. has arranged a country ramble to Amersham for May 17, writes Mr. P. Brooks, hon. sec.; meet at Finsbury Park Station (Tube) 9.30 a.m.; fanciers and friends welcome.

Grantham C.B.S. have arranged an open show on Nov. 25, writes Mr. H. Lowther, the sec. Will secretaries please note, to avoid clashing; also that I have changed my address to 44, Cambridge Street, Grantham.

Clapham and Dis. C.B.A.'s outing to Effingham Common will be on Sunday, May 24; train leaves Waterloo 9.55, stopping at Clapham Junction and Wimbledon. Fanciers wishing to join should communicate with Mr. T. J. Hose, 5, Wells Crescent, Camberwell.

24-year-old Canary.

Mr. L. W. Burnand, of Worthing, says that his Canary is now 24½ years old, in good plumage, and sings well.

The Fancy Honoured.

We hear that the Marquis of Tavistock (son and heir of the Duke of Bedford) will judge the Parrot classes at the next Horticultural Hall (L.C.B.A.) Show. His Lordship takes a great interest in the keeping and breeding of Parrots; also in the well-being of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League.

Goldfinch Sixteen Years in a Cage.

I have in my possession a Goldfinch which has been caged for sixteen years, and at present it is in lovely plumage and sings beautifully, although not quite so strongly as formerly.—H. G. Humphries (Olveston) in the "Daily Mail."

Rugby Fanciers Doing Well.

We have received a report from Mr. C. H. Webb, one of the Rugby C.B. Society's Committee, after his tour round among the fanciers in the town, and he says that everything is progressing very satisfactorily. Most of the fanciers are highly pleased with the luck they have had first round, and everything points towards a most successful season. Mr. Webb continues: "Most of the success I attribute to your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, which all good fanciers look eagerly forward to every week, and from which a great deal of benefit is being derived. Among the fanciers I have seen are Mr. J. W. Veasey, with thirty young ones nearly all on the perches and doing well. Some should be heard more of later on. Mr. H. Leng has 29 young ones, all looking the picture of health. Many more have some real fine young ones among the most successful being Messrs. Whitehouse, Salter, Clough, Nelson, White, Jones, Green, and Makepiece. We wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so rightly deserves, and all its readers a most successful season." [We shall welcome reports from other quarters. Will secretaries and readers kindly supply same?—Ed., "C.B."]

Final Appeal for Hospital Eggs.

THE POULTRY WORLD'S Hospital Egg Week closes on Tuesday next, May 19, and it is hoped that readers of CAGE BIRDS who keep poultry will send all the eggs they can spare between now and Tuesday next CARRIAGE PAID to:—

Editor THE POULTRY WORLD,
154, Fleet Street,
London, E.C.

The eggs collected during the Hospital Egg Week are distributed amongst the inmates of our Metropolitan Hospitals, and the fact that these eggs are sorely needed by the patients needs no emphasis from us. Will you help to swell this year's collection by forwarding a box of new-laid eggs to the above address—TO-DAY?

An Object Lesson.

Carrion Crows established in the high trees surrounding the Round Pond in Kensington Gardens are reported by a correspondent to have carried off several ducklings. An elderly woman (he says) was watching these proceedings with evident delight. Turning to a boy who was with her, she was heard to remark:—"Johnny, that's one of them Cuckoo birds which catches up young ducklings and brings them up as Cuckoos in her own nest."

COUNTRY RAMBLES.

The following rambles have been arranged: Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not. Woolwich C.B.S., May 17, to Swanley, via Bexley, meet 8.15 a.m., at the Fountain, Wickham Lane, Plumstead. Hornsey and Wood Green C.B.S., May 17, to Amersham, meet Finsbury Park Tube Station, 9.30; Watford C.B.S., May 17, to Chipperfield Common, meet Cassiobury Park Gates, 9.30; Radcliffe C.B.S., May 24, meet Town Hall, 2; Leyton C.B.S., May 16, to Epping Forest, meet Loughton Station, 2.35; Clapham C.B.A., May 24, to Effingham Common, train from Waterloo 9.55; Halifax O.S., May 16, to Crimsworth Dean, meet top of King Cross tram terminus, 2.15; Ashton-u-Lyne O.S., May 17, through Chadkirk Valley, meet Hyde Town Hall, 2; Sunderland C.B.A., May 23, to Corbridge, train leaves Sunderland 1; Sowerby Bridge C.B.S., May 17, to Bingley, train Sowerby Bridge, 9.50; Halifax L.Y.R., 10.5; Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., May 17, to Holmwood and Ranmore Common, train from Peckham Rye to Dorking, 9.30; National British Bird and M.C., May 23, to Clandon, Merrow and E. Horsley, trains from Waterloo, 9.20 and 2.15; East Ham C.B.S., May 17, to Epping Plain, train from Stratford 10.

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to the sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

which is presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

"CAGE BIRDS is a wonderful paper. I easily sold the Roller Hen advertised last week, and returned orders, thanks to your paper."—H. KIRTON BLAND (Sydenham).

"Through my small advert. in CAGE BIRDS, I have sold every Yorkshire Canary I had for sale, enquiries coming from all parts of England. I am more than satisfied with this result."—HERBERT L. HUGGINS (Bowes Park).

"With 2 adverts. in CAGE BIRDS we have sold 58 Yorkshires, which speaks well for your paper. We have now sold out all our surplus stock."—OWEN & SON (Wimbledon).

"Please thank all who answered my advert; they were too numerous to answer separately. I could have sold all 20 times over, which shows the value of advertising in the one paper for bird fanciers, CAGE BIRDS."—WM. LAIDLAW (Langholm).

Bird-Room Appliances Explained.

By H. NORMAN (Carshalton).

A SPRAY of some kind is an indispensable article in the bird-room, because among our stock we are certain at some time or other to possess a bird that refuses to bathe; further, there is just the few days before a show when the spray is more certain to thoroughly wet the plumage than a natural bath. The cheapest form of spray is the tin one depicted at "B" Fig. 26. This is all right if the fancier possesses good lungs and the necessary energy to use them. Unfortunately these sprays do not always act quite as nicely as one could wish; the junction of the tubes is sometimes faulty, consequently making it quite a labour to spray even a single specimen.

The Best Kind of Spray.

The best form of spray of this kind that I know of is the one shown at "C," Fig. 26. This is not procurable at any of the bird dealers' establishments, so far as I know, but can be purchased from dealers in artists' requirements. It is used to spray charcoal and pencil drawings with a fixing solution, and is made with a nickel tube and vulcan mouthpiece. It has the advantage of folding up, one can adjust it at any angle, and a good diffused spray is easily obtained without much effort. These sprays are retailed at about sixpence each.

The other form of spray depicted at "A," Fig. 26, is a much more elaborate article, consisting of a rubber ball and tube, nickel fitting, and a glass bottle. It is similar to the sprays used by hairdressers. This is easily the best of the three, and can be used with ease. All that is necessary is to hold the bottle in the left hand and take the rubber ball in the right, when by squeezing it a fine spray is ejected from the top tube.

A Board to help the Young.

By most fanciers it is considered to be desirable to get young birds to feed themselves as early as possible after they leave the nest. The old birds just at that time are getting somewhat "tired" of undertaking their care, and anxious to get on with a second nest. A good feeding cock will, of course, take charge of them, but such a one is not always available, and in that case it is certainly desirable to get the youngsters doing for themselves.

The feeding board shown at Fig. 27 is used far more freely in the North than among Southern breeders. It can be placed in a Yorkshire show cage (being utilised as a nursery cage), through the door, standing on its one leg inside; the door is then closed down into slot. A little egg food and crushed seed are placed on the board, which the young ones soon find, and when one starts feeding the others quickly follow. Be careful to keep these boards perfectly clean, and always have a fresh one ready to exchange for one that is fouled.

This feeding board can, of course, be used in the second compartment of a double breeder, where it is the practice to shut off the young in this compartment. The leg can readily be cut to any desired length. It is very useful in all cases as an aid to getting the young to pick about amongst food, and so acquire quickly the habit of feeding themselves.

The Peruvian Green Jay is a very handsome South American species, its colouring being extremely rich; specimens are occasionally seen on the show-bench.

In a properly arranged bird-room a cupboard of some kind, or medicine cabinet, is quite the correct thing, and extremely useful. The one shown at Fig. 28 is for the corner of a room, and if made large enough to contain a couple of shelves, will hold all the medicine bottles, etc., one will require. Medicine cabinets are made and sold by some dealers, but these, as a rule, are to stand about and so are not much more tidy than the loose bottles. This cupboard can be easily fixed in a corner too dark to hold cages, where it is quite out of the way. It lends an air of tidiness to the room, and has the advantage of retaining all the medicines in one place, so that the fancier can easily put his hand upon any one required.

THE FASCINATING PURSUIT OF MULE AND HYBRID BREEDING.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

IT is advisable to pair your birds early so that they shall be on thoroughly good terms when the breeding time arrives. You cannot expect British birds to pair up and settle down to housekeeping in two or three weeks, like the domesticated Canary, especially when, as in Hybrid breeding, we are pairing birds of different species.

My own plan is to pair up all my birds, as I intend breeding with them, in December, or early in January, allowing them to fly together during the remainder of the winter. As the breeding season approaches and the birds come into breeding condition I separate them by a sliding wire partition, if necessary, for special treatment in feeding. Previous to pairing I let all my hens fly together in a large outdoor aviary where they get plenty of exercise and thus do not become too fat and lazy, for one is not likely to do much successful breeding with hens which have been allowed to get into such a condition. During this time the cocks and hens must not be allowed to fly together or they will be striking up friendships other than those intended Differences of Disposition.

You will find that some pairs will settle down to a peaceful and quiet life almost at once, while others will behave in a most unfriendly manner, quarrelling from morning to night, commencing with a tussle over the early morning meal and ending with a noisy dispute as to which shall have choice of roosting sites. Do not let this worry you, however, for as a general rule they dispose of their little differences in the end, when it will be found, in most cases, that the cock has asserted his authority, though I have known Bullfinch hens which have absolutely refused to acknowledge their partner as lord and master. If either becomes too aggressive it will be wise to separate them until such time as they seem more disposed to be friendly towards each other.

The Management of Canaries.

Of course, if you are thinking of putting up pairs of British birds for Hybrid breeding it will be necessary to have several pairs of Canaries going off to nest at different times, so that there shall be always one or two hens sitting and ready to take the eggs laid by the Britishers, for, as I have already stated, the British hens are not to be trusted with the work of incubation and rearing of the young Hybrids. Common Canaries are as suitable as any for this purpose, as they generally prove to be good feeders.

If you are trying for any of the smaller crosses, such as the Goldfinch-Redpoll or Goldfinch-Siskin, it would be advisable to include a couple of pairs of small Border Fancies among your feeders, as the young from these crosses are very small when first hatched.

Put up your first pair early in April, selecting the most forward hen, and the remaining four or five pairs on the five following Saturdays, always selecting the most forward birds, as by so doing you will be sure that your hens are going off to nest at different times, a matter of great importance, as you will see later. The Canaries may be paired up in an indoor room, and supplied with the usual nesting apparatus and material. In this room it will be necessary to have a record book in which strict account must be kept of dates when each hen commenced to sit, whether on her own eggs or those brought in from outdoors.

Turning out Winners.

Having secured our Finches and Canaries, carefully paired them and provided them with suitable and well-furnished homes, we quite naturally begin to build our "castles in the air." And here let me warn the young beginner not to expect too much. We must not expect to turn out first prize Palace winners at the first time of asking, for in Hybrid breeding, as in most other things, the mill-wheel grinds slowly. But by careful selection and management, a close study of the birds themselves, their habits and food, we considerably increase our chances of success.

And we should remember that the chief delight of this, as of most other hobbies, lies in the work itself, and not in any possible reward which may result from our labours. The moment we allow the winning of prizes to become the dominant factor of our hobby we shall fail to extract from it any real and lasting pleasure. I think most breeders and exhibitors of experience will agree that the greatest pleasures of our hobby are to be found in the breeding and not in the exhibition of our birds.

Feeding and Conditioning Our Birds.

The feeding of our stock is a matter of great importance, as if we are to meet with any degree of success it is essential that our birds shall be got into breeding condition as early as possible. We often hear of Hybrids being bred so late in the season that the Canaries have gone into moult with the result that unless one resorts to hand-rearing the young Hybrids are lost. Only last season a Barnstaple fancier lost four fine young Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids as a result of late hatching, the hen Canary refusing to feed them. We tried hand-rearing as a last resort, but our efforts were doomed to failure, for the youngsters had not had a good start and all died on the third morning.

You will thus see the importance of bringing our Finches into condition early so that we may secure our clutches of eggs from them while we have the Canaries to assist us in the work of incubation and rearing. Some breeders argue that we are not likely to obtain fertile eggs from our Britishers until late in the season, but this has not been my experience. On reference to my breeding records I find that most of my Hybrids and also two Bullfinches bred in captivity were hatched before the end of June, the earliest record being May 12th, when two Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrids were hatched.

The question arises, how are we to get our birds into early breeding condition? I have often heard fanciers, about three or four weeks before the time when they should be busy with their first round of eggs, talking of getting their birds into condition as if it were a feat very easy of performance. But it is not so easily done, and especially in the case of British birds. Your birds must be in first-rate condition from the time they are first put together. Here let me say at once that I consider the moulting season the most important time for getting your birds into condition. Provided your birds come through the moult well you are not likely to get much trouble with them during the winter months.

During the moult give your Britishers a liberal supply of freshly-gathered wild seeds such as groundsel, plantain, shepherd's purse, chickweed, knapweed, charlock, thistle, etc., in addition to their ordinary diet of dried seeds. You need not be afraid of giving too much so long as it is fresh and fairly ripe and the remnant is cleared out of the cages every evening. My birds practically live on such seeds during the moult, and a glance at the seed-boxes will show what a saving is being effected in the seed bill. In addition to these seeds your Greenfinches and Bullfinches may be given an unlimited supply of haws, blackberries, privet berries and other autumn fruits as they come in season.

When giving Groundsel.

When supplying such seeds as groundsel do not gather much of the green parts of the plant, but nip off the ripe heads containing the seeds, of which fresh supplies should be given daily. Also at this season gather a store of plantain and knapweed for use during the winter months, for not only will these afford a welcome change to the ordinary diet, but will give the birds much pleasant occupation in breaking open the seed-vessels in search of the coveted seed.

As the spring advances give your Finches a plentiful supply of freshly-gathered ripe dandelion seed, which may be found in great abundance during the months of March, April and May. There is nothing to equal these seeds for getting your birds into breeding condition, and I feel confident that my success in Mule and Hybrid breeding may in a large measure be attributed to the free use of these and other wild seeds whenever obtainable.

As a staple food throughout the year I give my Finches canary, hemp, teazle, and rape. These seeds are all supplied separately and thus much waste is avoided, as if mixed the birds will scatter most of it in order to get at the seed they like best. This method also enables you to regulate your food supply, as you can keep back any particular seed for a day or two whenever you think fit.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

By J. TOMLINSON

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

"SWEATING" is assumed by some to be due to the various kinds of nesting material, such as hay, moss, and cowhair. Deer-hair and charpie are now on the market, the last-named being held to be a preventive, yet it leaves very much to be desired. It is held by some that "sweating" arises from the young birds; but I fail to see eye to eye with these fanciers, because it is only in a severe attack that traces of moisture can be found on their covering of down, which is so susceptible to damp. If the trouble arises from the young birds, it would naturally be expected that the first symptoms would be shown by them, whereas such is not the case The first intimation comes from the hen, and on those feathers that come in contact with the sides of the nest, rather than with the youngsters.

Another View of the Matter.

Still another view is held, and that is that the trouble is due to weakness on the part of the hen. I am in sympathy with the idea that it is due to the hen, yet am not convinced that it arises from weakness, because of the relaxing nature of the medicines that are usually given, for it may be assumed that they are the correct ones, as they will frequently relieve, and very often effect a cure.

It limits the field of investigation when we recollect that this trouble occurs only when the hen is brooding youngsters of a tender age. The trouble does not usually occur previous to the fourth day after hatching; it is then liable to appear at any time up to about the tenth or the twelfth day, after which it would be a rarity for it to occur, as the hen by that time commences to take longer intervals from the nest during the day-time. For a little while after she has ceased to brood them in the day-time, she will generally stand over them during the night, but no harm will accrue even from the hen that has previously been troubled with "sweating."

Many hens continue to feed the young all right during a mild attack, whereas the energy of others will commence to flag, consequently the youngsters are not fed so well as formerly. When a hen is feeling the effects of the trouble she gets loose in feather, excepting where signs of the "sweating" are showing. This portion of the plumage becomes awry, and appears to have been smeared with some kind of a greasy substance. In the case of a mild attack this would be noticeable just on the sides below the wings, and it may be also a little on the breast feathers, just where they come into contact with the sides of the nest. In more severe cases it will continue lower, extending to the feathers on the lower part of the breast, and also on the sides. In a severe attack of this kind the down on the youngsters will often be lying close to their bodies, and saturated with moisture, and it is hardly to be expected that they can thrive in this condition, so a medicine for the hen should be resorted to.

Internal and External Remedies.

It is usual to give a cooling medicine and a salt bath; the latter is made by adding a teaspoonful of common table salt to one breakfast cup of water. The medicine may be either a pinch of Epsom salts, a senna leaf, or a piece of sulphate of soda (from chemists) about the size of a marrowfat pea, added to, and well mixed in the drinking water daily until an improvement takes place. Of the three remedies I prefer the sulphate of soda, as its action on the bowels is smoother and less painful than the other two. All these three medicines will tend to produce a looseness of the bowels, and this is more or less of a weakening nature. The salt bath will have a bracing effect, but I have not found it to cure without the aid of an internal remedy, whereas I have frequently effected a cure with sulphate of soda, without the use of the salt bath.

While respecting the opinions of those who believe that the Canary cannot sweat, and that it is due to weaknoss, I cannot understand how this greasy moisture is generated if it is not emitted from the hen's body. Further, if it is due to weakness, I fail to understand how an internal remedy of a relaxing nature, which would have a tendency to produce weakness, will relieve, and how if the remedy is given on several successive days—thus tending to produce further weakness—it will ultimately effect a cure. The results of my own experiments are that this "sweating" or greasy moisture, or whatever name we like to give it, comes from the hen's body, and is caused through an overheated condition, brought about through eating, ad lib, the rich diet provided for her to feed to the youngsters

Items that Aggravate the Trouble.

There are several things which may aggravate her complaint; one has already been mentioned, i.e., diarrhoea in the young birds; a rich seed diet during incubation, or, again, the reverse, and the sudden change from this plain seed diet to the rich one partly composed of eggs. Wiser heads than mine have been puzzled over this subject; I have instructed the beginner how to detect and cure the complaint, and now leave it to deal with another little trouble that is likely to occur with young about a fortnight old.

It is only a minor trouble, yet it may cause any not conversant with it to get rather anxious, when the hen for no apparent reason, suddenly begins to leave the egg-food, and the other extra articles of diet that are provided, in the same way as she would do in a severe case of "sweating," yet in this case there is no sign of "sweating," she simply refuses to eat her food as eagerly as she has done previously. No name has yet been applied to the trouble, and I am of the opinion that the rich diet again is the cause. A cooling medicine, the quantity of sulphate of soda added to the drinking water for a few days, recommended in a case of "sweating," will effect a cure.

Correspondence.

A Lady Who Lost No Time.

SIR,—On the 15th April one of my hens hatched four young. Yesterday (5th May) the four young duly left the nest, and you may imagine my surprise when taking out the nest-pan to find three eggs in it. I replaced the eggs in a clean nest and took away the young for the cock-bird to finish off. This morning I find that the hen has laid a fourth egg and has started to sit all right. I believe the eggs are fertile, as the cock was with the hen since mating. Is this not rather unusual?

F. BULLEN.

The Song of the Nightingale.

Also a Warning Against Cockroaches.

SIR,—I would like to know if any of your readers have ever had a Nightingale that sang at night in a cage. A bird-dealer told me that a 'Gale, whose cage he kept on the window-sill, used to sing at night. I would also like to know if any of your readers have ever succeeded in getting Canaries to sing the 'Gale's song, or a good deal of it, and to the exclusion of their own song. I would warn 'Gale keepers not to give their birds too many Cockroaches. Last year one of my 'Gales got fits, and I traced the cause to an unlimited supply of cockroaches. The bird recovered his health after the cockroaches were stopped. I find one heaped teaspoonful of cockroaches is a safe quantity to give. I have lately cured a Sprosser of swollen feet by excluding egg flake from his food.

C. HARRISON.

Young Canaries Reared Without Egg or Soft Food.

SIR,—My first round of young have been entirely reared without egg or soft food (other than watercress) of any description. I mated up four pairs of Norwich in March and in all 18 eggs were laid; 17 hatched, result 16 birds now full grown and on hard seed. Two of the hens are again sitting, each on five eggs. I might state that one hen refused to feed her young after ten days, so I took three away and put them with another brood of four (which made seven) hatched the same day and the remaining one of the nest with another brood of four. All 12 are fine, healthy, robust birds, in fact bigger than the remaining four which were reared by their own parents. I should think, Mr. Editor, this is a record.

My method of feeding was as follows: Each pair, from day of hatching, constant supply of watercress, ½-spoonful each maw, inga, teazel, white and Indian millet, two each of cracked hemp and Canary. Clean water three times a day and strict attention to cleanliness in every way. All seed that was not consumed was removed at 5 a.m. every morning and thrown into my large aviary of Foreign birds, so there was no waste. I have not given any soaked food whatever. During the day my wife and daughter kept up a constant supply of watercress.

I will tell you that last year I took every possible care in the feeding of my birds, but tempt them how I would I could not induce them to take egg food in any shape or form. They reared their young on hemp seed and cress only. Result, nine birds for the two rounds from four pairs. So I thought I would try them on the various seeds instead, which has proved so great a success.

CHARLES EMMETT.

How to Adjust and Repair Bird Organs.

SIR,—A year or two ago an article appeared in CAGE BIRDS on the above subject by Mr. Tom Routledge (Stockport). I should esteem it a very great favour if Mr. Routledge, or any other Roller fancier, can help me as regards my Queck bird organ. All the tours are clear and vibrating with the exception of the rising and falling tour— the one where the lid rises and falls, that is worked by a wire attached to the top of the machine. This particular tour is very faint in tone. How can this be rectified? MEMBER B.R.C.C.

Has a Bird a Conscience?

SIR,—I am conscious of poignant feelings of regret that the sentiment expressed in my former letter have aroused Mr. Canning's contempt, but I am somewhat mollified when I notice that he hasn't regarded them with supreme indifference. No one likes to be entirely ignored. He is evidently one of those fanciers who take everything literally, as written, and whose inability to discern the satirical often leads them into pitfalls. His hen Canary that will only build with charpie stamps Mr. Canning as being an indulgent fancier who will satisfy the whims of his birds (for which nothing but praise is due to him), but that fact doesn't indicate that the hen has a conscience. She may have reasoning power, intelligence, or, as I should call it, "cussedness," but conscience, no!

With regard to his experiences of Rooks, I can only say that they are the opposite of mine. I have seen a few pairs build their nests in trees 200 and 300 yards away, and in two different directions from the recognised Rookery; not once, but dozens of times. Is it possible his Rooks are resident on some noble lord's estate, where even human beings are not allowed freedom, let alone a conscience? The fighting and quarrelling of Rooks—although showing reasoning power—are the result of petty family quarrels and jealousies, and not any indication that a bird has a conscience. The most casual student of psychology knows that there is a difference between reasoning power, intelligence—call it what you will—and conscience.

The National British Bird and Mule Club's Annual Ramble.

SIR,—The committee have decided that the annual outing shall take place on May 23rd. The morning party will leave Waterloo by the 9.20 train (South Station) for Clandon, in Surrey, and the afternoon party by the 2.15 train (South Station) also booking to Clandon. Luncheon will be provided at the Temperance Hotel, Merrow, and tea at the Station Hotel, East Horsley, as usual. The committee extend a hearty welcome to the members of all London societies to join them in this outing, also other friends. Will those desirous of going let me know by postcard which party they would like to go with, not later than the 19th inst, so that refreshments, etc., can be provided?

Will Finches Rear a Young Cuckoo?

SIR,—In last week's issue a letter appeared under the heading "Will Finches Rear Young Cuckoos?" in which the writer questions the ability of a Linnet to rear a young Cuckoo, giving as his reason the fact that "the feeding habits of the species are so dissimilar." I suppose he thinks that Finches rear their young on hard seed! I have always believed, and in fact I know from personal observation, that Finches feed their nestlings on green caterpillars, flies, grubs, and any other soft food they can obtain. What more could a Cuckoo want? I have seen Cuckoo's eggs in the nests of the Linnet and Chaffinch, and I have a fully authenticated instance of a Cuckoo being reared by Bullfinches, in 1911, in Essex. For the last four years I have records of the following Finches being victimised by the Cuckoo:—1900, 2 Linnets, 1 Chaffinch; 1911, 1 Bullfinch; 1912, 2 Linnets; 1913, 2 Linnets. These formed about 10 per cent. of the Cuckoos' eggs found by members of our society, the most remarkable being one in a Gold Crest's nest in 1911. Such a large percentage as 10 would, I think, go far to prove that the Finches are quite capable of rearing a young Cuckoo.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Breeding Small Foreign Birds in Cages.

SIR,—I would like to ask any of your readers who breed Foreign birds in cages if they would kindly tell me how they breed them. I have Canaries and have obtained valuable information, reading lectures, questions and answers, etc. Now I have some Foreigners, too, and I would like to know how to breed them. My birds at present are Zebra Finches, Cut-throats and Javas. I am wishful to get more, as they are so very interesting, and also a change from Canaries. I hope someone will give the necessary information, and so perhaps induce others to take up the fascinating hobby.

H. C. B.

The Champion Heavy-weight of the British Wagtails.

SIR,—With further reference to my letter in your issue of the 9th inst., I have heard from the eminent zoologist and naturalist, A. B. Farn, who says the Grey Wagtail is the longer bird (merely a matter of tail) but the Pied, he considers, the larger and heavier bird. Length: Grey, 7in. to 7.5in., wing 3.3in.; Pied, 7.4in., wing 3.5in. Out of 64 eggs of each species the average sizes were:—Grey, 19.0 by 14.5mm.; Pied, 20.2 by 15.2mm. This backs up my own statement that the Pied Wagtail's egg was the larger. I trust this information will be of some little interest in a discussion which now seems to be digressing somewhat from the original point.

Young Feeding Young.

SIR,—I have a cinnamon-marked Yorkshire hen, hatched on April 1 this season, thus being 5 weeks old. On Wednesday last I had a young Norwich given me by a fancier friend. This was 3 weeks old, and had not commenced to pick up for itself. My wife was going to hand-feed it. We put it with the cinnamon-marked youngster, and on the day following my brother said he had seen the latter feeding the young Norwich. I could hardly credit this, but on Saturday morning I sat for two hours watching it myself, and on Sunday morning I had several fanciers that know the age of the bird, and they all sat and watched it. As an old fancier and reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, from the first number, I have never before had, nor heard of, a similar experience. I would ask if any other fancier has ever known anything like it.

FRED S. STIRK.

A Hen that Feeds Another's Youngsters.

Sir,—I have a fine yellow Norwich cock, in a good-sized cage, who of his own accord has paired with two hens. His green wife of last year is late nesting, only now (May 6) sitting on three eggs. In the same cage is a buff hen with four of his chicks, lovely-feathered three-weeks-old birds. When fresh food is given Madam Green leaves her eggs and well feeds the four youngsters, who are, of course, delighted. Mrs. Buff is preparing her second nest, and although there is a heap of material beside her, slyly picks from Greenie's nest in her absence!

A Society for Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to say a few words about our newly-formed society known as the Winnipeg and Dist. C.B.S. This society was formed in March, 1914, and is progressing wonderfully. Meetings are held fortnightly in the Agnew Shoe Store, on Notre Dame Avenue, kindly placed at our disposal by the proprietor, Mr. James Agnew. On April 1 a members' show was held and eighty-three birds were shown, including Yorkshires, Norwich Plainheads, Crests, German Rollers, and British Finches. Mr. McQuade (late of Enniskillen, Ireland) and Mr. Woods (late of Scotland) judged. Mr. Roberts (late of Accrington C.B.S.) also assisted. The society intends holding its annual show in October.

Is the Exhibition Norwich Plainhead Satisfactory?

Sir,—I am interested in the offer that Mr. Floyd has to make me. If it is to be money, I shall have to ask him to accept my profound regrets, because, although poor, I have certain feelings of pride. If his offer is to take the form of a hen, or a couple of hens, similar in size and form to his model, then I have a few cocks which would about suit them, and I might give this conscience of mine enough of a twist to accept them without disturbing my pride. You see, sir, I have a conscience, and although it is not elastic enough to admit my signing my name here, in view of his kind offer, I will give you permission to let him have my name privately, providing he sends you a stamped envelope. By the way, I did not say that I would like to breed one like Mr. Floyd's model; I ask him to read my letter again.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Sir,—I see a letter in your valuable paper from "Yellow Green" asking for information re the above scheme. But "Yellow Green" may save himself trouble, for it would be one of the greatest surprises to me if he got any information from this body, as such as "Yellow Green" and myself are only considered when the half-crown time comes round, or any subscriptions are wanted. I could ask the same question. What am I to do with the four young birds I had on the sticks when I got the notice that birds had to be rung? They may be the best I will breed, and they may not; in any case they cannot compete. I consider the Committee have sadly blundered in being so long in advising their members. Perhaps the Committee's birds were late this season! I have no doubt the notice of the scheme was out early enough for them, but is that everything? "Yellow Green" need not think he will not get to know much of how this Club is worked. I have watched its doings as closely as I could, and I have not seen a single instance where it has done good to the Norwich Plainhead in Scotland. It offers a few specials to be won by the "Big Wigs." The members with only a few birds have to pay, but have a poor chance of winning anything out of it. The Committee may think they have scored a big thing with this closed ring scheme; time will tell. We had good shows of Norwich in Scotland long before we heard of this Club. So, "Yellow Green," just content yourself, as you will have to do, till another body manages the affairs of this club, which makes it a rule that all members are entitled to know the workings of their Committee, a thing they don't know at present.

Buff Green.

Sir,—I quite expected some correspondence on the above club's adoption of the closed ring, but I was scarcely prepared for such a letter as that written by "Yellow Green," which for sheer downright claptrap would be hard to beat. His grumble, he would have us believe, is that a few faddists, as he is pleased to call them, had made up their minds to carry the ring question, and had kept it secret, so that "Yellow Green" and others not in the know would have birds not rung, and therefore not eligible for competition. I cannot imagine a person of any intelligence believing such a fairy tale, but even on his own confession "Yellow Green" knew of this so-called plot, therefore it was obviously no secret. That being so, why did not "Yellow Green" ring his birds; and what about the second and third nests? But perhaps the faddists in their wisdom knew that "Yellow Green" would breed all his winners in the first round.

As for the meeting being kept back for this nefarious business, I am only an ordinary member, resident far from the club's meeting places, so I know nothing of its working. Perhaps the secretary would explain as to the date of the meeting. Is it not the case that a member some considerable time ago gave notice of the motion to adopt the rings?

The word "sportsman" does not come well from "Yellow Green." One has only to read his letter to observe that he is not deserving of the name. It may be that the Plainhead Club will lose its Musselburgh members, and I can only say that if they are all like "Yellow Green" (I hope they are not) the loss will not be hard to bear. I fear Musselburgh is more famous for the winners that have been bought than for those that have been bred there.

Had "Yellow Green" advanced any sensible arguments against the use of the rings he would at least have been entitled to respect for his views. Personally, I voted for the rings quite of my own free will, not having been consulted by the alleged faddists. It seems to me that the use of the rings will prevent dishonesty, and, not yet having reached the stage of wishing to show birds as bred by me which have not been so bred, I thought the scheme a good one. In fact, I know of no real objection to the use of the rings, provided, of course, that the fancier wishes to go "straight." If he does not, obviously the rings will not appeal to him. Perhaps, however, some of the members who voted against the rings will let us have some genuine argument against their use.

Buff Green (No. 2).

Another Good Start.

Sir,—I must congratulate Cage Birds on its excellent special numbers and the beautiful coloured plates, and thank you for the very useful and practical information always to be obtained from "C.B." I might say I have only been taking Cage Birds for three months, but by studying its columns and acting up to its advice I have now three of the finest young Canaries anyone could wish for. This is my first flutter, and they are two cocks and one hen (the cocks have started singing). I think this a very good start, which, I can only repeat, is due to the bird-lovers' guide, Cage Birds.

VICTORIA

Egg & Biscuit FOOD FOR CAGE BIRDS

BECAUSE hardboiled Eggs and breadcrumbs or biscuits have become, by long usage, considered by many Fanciers as being the one and only medium for successfully rearing Cage-birds, is no criterion that such is really the case.

Why incur unnecessary trouble and expense by preparing Food in the old-fashioned way, with the attendant risks of the Food soon becoming sour, when you have at your disposal Victoria Egg and Biscuit Food? This is reliable in every way, is quickly prepared, does not become sour and is infinitely more economical.

Canaries and other Cage Birds welcome it, and rear strong, well-developed chicks. Made crumbly-moist with hot or cold water or scalded milk, is ever ready for use.

Sponge Cake Replaces Egg-Food.

Sir,—I find that Canaries can be reared quite successfully on sponge cake, instead of any other kind of egg food. With sponge cake time and trouble are saved, and one avoids the risk of egg-food going sour.

An Experience with the Nightingale.

Sir,—Being an old fancier and lover of birds, your valuable paper, Cage Birds, is full of interest to me. I think your artist is deserving of great credit for the lovely coloured plate of migrants you recently gave us. I used to keep Nightingales many years ago. I kept one six years in a cage, and at the spring of the year he used to warble from April to June. After he had done singing I used to let him fly in an outdoor aviary till the weather got too cold. Then I used to catch him up and cage him indoors for the winter. He got too fat, I think, and died after six years' confinement.

The Border Fancy Canary Club's Recent Presentations.

Sir,—Allow me to thank you, on behalf of the Border Fancy Canary Club, for your share in helping to make the recent presentation the success it was. You are to be congratulated on the splendid reproduction of the photos of both Mr. J. B. Richardson and Mr. Jamieson, and I feel confident that the members will thank you for your grand report of the "smoker." The total income towards presentation was £16 14s. 6d. Expenditure: Two sovereign cases, 12s. 2d.; seven sovereigns in each, £14; umbrella, £1 1s. 6d.; postage, 12s.; envelopes, 5d.; postcards, 3d.; refreshments at presentation, 6s. 6d. Total expenditure, £16 12s. 10d., leaving a balance of 1s. 8d.; all lists were carefully gone over by Messrs. G. W. Brown and R. H. Douglas, and found correct. In conclusion, I would ask a favour of all intending members of the B.F.C.C. for 1914 to send in their annual subscriptions before the end of June, that I may have all names in the list, as it is by paid subscriptions that I will make out members' list.

Prospects of the 1914 Exhibition.

Sir,—Arrangements for the next annual show, on behalf of the Cinderella Club Funds, to be held December 4 and 5, are progressing very favourably. The hard-working committee have put in a good deal of real spade work, under the leadership of our genial chairman Mr. H. H. Towers. The classification will again be a very extended one, and the following judges have already been engaged: Messrs. J. C. Barnes, H. W. Battye, W. A. Cowgill, J. F. Dewar, T. Heath, A. Hirst, R. Halliday, W. Mundell, J. Maddison, and J. Robson. Several Specialist Clubs have already granted their patronage; others have not yet held their meetings, but we are hopeful of a favourable reply. I should like specially to draw the attention of the various specialist clubs who have patronage to give out, and fanciers generally, to the worthy object for which the show is held, viz., the benefit of the poor and destitute children, those who cannot help themselves. By our collective efforts we can bring some joy and happiness into their lives. The show this year will close on Saturday night, and all distance birds will be despatched on Sunday to reach home early on Monday morning. We think this will meet the wishes of exhibitors, in not having their birds away from home so long. The Central Baths Hall, where the show is to be held, is probably the finest hall in the United Kingdom for a cage bird show. Exhibits, as well as visitors to the show, will enjoy the highest degree of comfort that human devices can secure.

Where is the "Irish Fancy" Canary?

Sir,—Your endeavours to stimulate breeders to produce new varieties of the Canary remind me that the first contribution over the name of J. Steel, Dalkeith, dealt with that subject. Cage Birds was little more than an infant then, and the subject failed to arouse the interest hoped for. No doubt many would treat Mr. Steel's effusion as a joke, as he wrote in the brogue, and advocated the need for an Irish type, setting his plea in verse in the tune of "Father O'Flynn." I consider fanciers in Ireland should try to produce an Irish type worthy of the name. To quote from Mr. Steel:

Of Canaries no doubt there are charming varieties,
Supported by various clubs and societies.
Still may we claim, without impropriety,
Erin should yet have a type all her own.
Oi won't have a freak wid a back loik Carn Foul,
Nor a frillifoid noitmare wid fedders like wool;
But a swate little cratur
Wid grace in each fature,
And as smart and iriet as a Dub. Fusilier

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

Sir,—I regret that "Old Fogey" has introduced the Cardiff C.B.S. into this correspondence. Mr. Allsopp's article has no connection with the society, and the members of the C.C.B.S. are broadminded enough to let Mr. A. have his own opinions, even if they disagree with them. Personally I have every respect for Mr. Allsopp, but at the same time I regret that he has gone out of his way to attack the novices of the Fancy by calling them "sickly novices," "weeds," etc., also his desire to kick these "milk and water" novices out of the Fancy. It would be bad for the Fancy if we allowed Mr. A. to set himself up as a dictator. In my humble opinion the novice is the backbone of the Fancy. I am sure your readers will agree with me that without youth no society could exist very long. To the novice I give this advice: Attend your society's meetings, take your fair share of the work, help the officers all you can, and when the show season comes around give those societies which cater for novices a bumping entry, also try a few birds in the open classes, but be careful of the prices, as some of the self-styled champions like to snap up all the good things that are priced low. Now, Mr. Allsopp, tell the novice what makes them sick, and how their sickness can be cured?

SOUTHAMPTON P.P. AND C.B.A.

Whist drive and dance, St. Michael's Hall, April 29, proved a great success, the large party assembled spending a very enjoyable evening. This result was in a very great measure due to the untiring efforts of the general sec., Mr. Fanstone, who was everywhere at once, seeing to the smooth working of everything, and yet finding time to take part in the play, though no doubt his score suffered thereby. The fanciers did not shine with the cards, all the prizes going to friends. After discussing some of the goodies provided by Mr. Vase, the prizes were kindly distributed by Mrs. White, and it would have been difficult to find a lady better suited to the task. After a little music the dancers took the floor, and again Mr. Fanstone shone, Mrs. Fanstone also lending charm to the picture. The strains of the National Anthem brought an end all to soon to a "great" evening.—G. J. Slade.

MIDDLESBRO' & TEES-SIDE C.B.S

Meeting, Crown Hotel, April 18. Mr. J. Carr presided over a good number of members, and a good deal of business was got through. First came the resignation of our sec., Mr. A. Wake, who has held the position for a number of years, and right well has he stuck to his guns; a worker all through. Mr. Wake handed all books over in good condition, also £8 11s. 2d., thus making the society about £10 in hand. On behalf of the members, we tender our best thanks to Mr. Wake, and hope after a short rest we may again see him at his old post. Judges for annual show:—Nor., Mr. T. Dixon, Bedlington; Yorks, Mr. Bennett, Bradford; Brit. and For., Mr. F. Marwood, Englecliff. Date of show, Oct. 21, when we hope to have as good an entry as in the past. Mr. Carr gave a cup for the novices and has promised another for champions; we also give four medals—Canaries, British, Mules, and Novices. Arrangements made for outing to be about June, when we hope a good number will turn up. Our sec. now is Mr. J. Swinscoe, who acted as assist. sec. to Mr. Wake. He has a good idea of the work, and, like our late sec., is a worker. Assist. sec. is Mr. T. Bibby, another worker, proved at our last annual show. All meetings are arranged for first Saturday in month, and we give a hearty invitation to all fanciers. Any wishing to join can get information from sec. or any member. Entrance 1s., and 6d. per month.—C. W. Watson, vice-chairman.

A Lecture on the Norwich Plainhead.

Meeting, Old Boar's Head, April 27. It was decided to hold a young bird show July 11. Mr. Schofield (Failsworth) judge. On April 29 Mr. Furniss presided over a good attendance, when Mr. Robinson, of Manchester, gave a lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. The lecturer described the present-day Norwich, as the bulldog stamp, having a big rise from the short beak to a nice round head, round back, good, well-filled, broad, deep chest, which improves the wing carriage, short wings, and legs, well set back. He advised not to breed with ailing or consumptive birds, with an idea of getting fat on the chest, which puts them out of proportion. In mating he must have a perfect hen of medium size, and a large cock, not breeding with two exhibition birds. The lecturer also advises double buffing, and gets a green-marked cock, as he gets quality of feather and size, also double yellow once in about three years. The lecturer went strong against inbreeding, as it fastens both good and bad points, and breeds dummies, wasters, cripples, and sometimes may cause blindness; also he does not advise introducing crest, as it takes about five years to breed out. He explained that the Norwich to-day is better than ever. Then Mr. Robinson invited questions, of which several took advantage, especially on inbreeding, upon which he explained the difference between inbreeding and linebreeding. He advised giving plenty of young dandelion for feeding, in case of sweating or poor feeding, a capital remedy was black treacle in the water. Mr. Hulton moved the best thanks to Mr. Robinson for his most interesting and instructive lecture; seconded by Mr. Evans. Mr. Robinson said he was only too pleased to assist in any way, and promised to give us a washing exhibition this back-end.—Jas. Hulton, Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting May 5. Final arrangements for outing were made. Mr. W. G. Cooper nominated for membership. Sec. reported that he had applied for the patronage of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League. At next meeting there will be a discussion on the Goldfinch, opened by Mr. C. Cooper; also a judging competition on Goldfinches; members attending are requested to bring a bird.—A. R. Coe.

REDCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting May 9, headquarters, when a very interesting lecture on Norwich Canaries was given by Mr. Boothman, Manchester. He dealt with type, quality, pairing, breeding, and exhibiting, and then followed about an hour's open discussion. He answered all questions to our satisfaction, and all who heard him will have gained something. We engaged Mr. Boothman to judge F.F. show in Conservative Club, Church Street, June 27. On Sunday, May 24th, we are having a ramble. Members and friends intending going are requested to meet at Town Hall at 2 o'clock.—G. Lord, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

General meeting May 7, Mr. M. C. Potts chair. Correspondence read from B.F.C.C., Y.C.C., and N.B.B. and M.C. Members elected: Messrs. Dobson and Son, Ryton; T. Aikman, Felton; A. Smith, Gateshead. A few more classes were added for open show. N.F. show July 4, classification as last year, with an addition of three classes for novice Borders. Decided to hold table show next meeting, June 4, classification same as specialist clubs. Mr. Crawhall will give silver spoon for best bird and silver spoon for most points. Judges: Norwich, Mr. Laidlow; Borders, Mr. Espie; Mr. Crawhall will take the remainder. Members of specialist societies invited to compete. Subs. now due.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting, Prince of Wales Hotel, May 9, Mr. J. L. Parfitt chair, and a good turn-up of members. Unanimously carried to pass a vote of condolence to Mr. Hy. Phillips, of Ebbw Vale, and Mr. C. Russell (Cwmtillery), who have both been ill for some time. Business of the two F.F. shows was finally gone through. Mr. A. Moule was elected to judge Canaries, and Mr. Chas. Lewis Mules and British at our first show, June 20; and Mr. Hy. Phillips Canaries and C. Lewis Mules and British at show held July 18. Entry form will be sent to all members shortly. Decided to give 5s. special for most points in Norwich, Yorks, Borders, and Mules and British. I hope all members will do their best to put down as many young birds as possible, as the prize cards alone are worth winning. A bound volume of "Cage Birds" will be given for best bird in show. Decided to get members' photos taken with cups at our first show, as we want to get photos in Fancy papers. New members invited to next meeting; they will be in time to show at our young bird shows.—George Broome, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (W. of Scotland) O.S.

Meeting, May 2, Nelson Temp. Hote', Mr. Wm. Gunion, vice-pres., in chair, and a good attendance. Secretary read letter from Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A., asking members' support towards their guarantee. It was decided to do so, and £1 1s. was subscribed. Decided unanimously that Crest bowl be awarded to Mr. E. Barron, who stood second for same at annual show. Messrs. Scott, Coatridge, and Bannerman, Govan, elected members. Mr. R. Davidson gave a lecture, "The Study of Nature in Relation to Men and Birds." Mr. Davidson touched upon the various insects, birds, plants, etc., he had met in his 12 years' sojourn in India and the West Indies, and described their various uses and customs. His collection of pressed plants gathered in Scotland, all useful towards the feeding of British birds, and his cases of insects and Butterflies collected abroad, were very much admired, and a very enjoyable evening ended all too soon. At the close of lecture a long discussion took place on the evolution and hybridising of plants, and the lecturer was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Mr. Davidson consented to act as instructor at a ramble later on in the summer, and with his thorough knowledge of botany, geology, etc., a pleasant and profitable afternoon should be spent. Vote of thanks to chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

LANCS. AND LIZARD F.A.

Members and their wives and friends held a most successful tea and social, May 9, at Volunteer Hotel, Oldham. Present: Mr. E. Lord, Miss M. Burrows, Newchurch; Mr. E. Fuller, Rogues' Den; Mr. and Mrs. Swalwell, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Fred Hamer, Mr. John Hamer, Mr. and Mrs. Hampshire, Messrs. E. and George Fitton, Oldham; Mr. and Mrs. Redyard, Manchester; Mr. and Mrs. Hardern, Monkey Town, Heywood; Mr., Mrs. and Miss Moorbey, Broadbottom; Messrs. Ollerenshaw, Glossop; Messrs. G. Naylor and L. Butterworth, Rochdale; Mr. and Mrs. Clark, Oldham; and Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Rukin, Rawtenstall. The tea was provided by the Oldham Co-op., and was ably served by Mr. and Mrs. Clark. The artistes were in fine form. Mr. A. Lee opened the evening with a song, and got a good reception. Mr. Rukin, who acted as chairman, presented the Lancashire trophy to Mr. E. Fitton, in the unavoidable absence of his son George. We had quite a good response from Mr. Fitton, sen. Mr. A. Hordern acted deputy for Mr. Beattie, Newbey, who came second in the Lancashire Section. Mr. Hordern said he was sure Mr. Beattie would prize the special, and he was sorry that it was not the first prize instead of the second, as he believed in them going round. Mr. Fitton had again to come forward, this time to act deputy for Mr. Barnes, of Grantham, who had been successful in winning the champion Lizard trophy. The chairman, in making this presentation, expressed his pleasure that such a fine fancier as Mr. Barnes had won the trophy after trying for it so long. Second prize was won by Mr. J. Rukin, who responded in a few words. Mr. E. Lord was presented with a timepiece as champion novice, this being the second year in succession. Mr. C. F. Bosworth was runner-up for the second year. We had songs by Mr. E. Smithson, Mr. E. Lord, Mr. A. Lee. When we left the party was going strong, and seemed likely to last out for some time. Particular notice might be made of friend Teddy Fra' Glossop, who all the time seemed to command a good audience telling cracks. In the buying of specials the general opinion was that our old friend and colleague, Mr. J. Swalwell, had excelled all his previous records. There is a fine opening for novices in the L. and L.F.A., as there was not a single competitor for the novice trophies in the Lancashire Section.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

ALFRETON C.B.S.

Meeting, May 9, Red Lion, a good number of members turned up. It was decided to hold first N.F. show June 13. Judge, Mr. A. Wilson.—G. Beardall, Sec.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Meeting on May 9, at Flying Dutchman, and a good number of members. Decided to give prize money to 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th birds in all classes at our open show, Oct. 31, same to be advertised in Fancy Press in due time.—W. Helliwell, Sec.

EDINBURGH WESTERN O.S.

Meeting, Riego St. Hall, May 7, Mr. Ballantine presiding over a fair gathering. Sec. read replies from judges, B.F.C.C., etc. Agreed to hold matter of joint specials over till September meeting. Judges for annual club show, Oct. 31: Scots Fancy, R. Menzies (Edinburgh), A. Patterson (Edinburgh). Borders: J. Hamilton (Eskbank), J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh). Nor.: J. Holmes (Edinburgh).—C. Grant, Sec.

CITY OF DUNDEE C.B.S.

Meeting in Doig's Rooms, Mr. A. R. Towns presiding; a good turn-out of members. Judges for open show, Nov. 28, approved, viz., Crests and Plainheads, C. Campbell (Glasgow); Scotch Fancy, W. Muirhead (Bonnyhridge) and J. Dalgleish (Edinburgh); Borders, G. Hyslop (Stirling); Mules, Brit., and For., J. Gentleman (Avonbridge). The society has been again fortunate in securing the Gymnasium for the open show. Nomination of a judge for club show brought the meeting to a close.—Andrew Law, Hon. Sec.

BURNLEY O.S.

Meeting, Star Inn, Mr. H. Callow chair, with a good turn-up. The chief item was the selection of judge for N.F. show, June 27, at Star Inn; Mr. J. Hayhurst was elected. Decided to purchase show bills at "Cage Birds." One of our oldest fanciers, Mr. J. Baker, has promised us a good special for best bird bred by a novice. Mr. T. Edwards has promised to give us another lecture at next meeting, May 20. A vote of thanks to chair concluded one of the best meetings we have had for a long time.—G. Whittaker, Sec.

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

Meeting May 6, Railway Hotel. We were sorry to have to accept the resignation of two members owing to removal. One new member was made. Decided to hold a washing competition at Nov. meeting, judging competition at Dec. meeting, and a pair show at Jan. meeting. I can assure the members of some specials for the above, and hope they will do their utmost to make the meetings a success. Will all members who intend being members of the L.B. and T. Combination let me have their names as soon as possible?—W. H. Symes, Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Palmer Hall, May 6, before a large attendance. F.F. Show classes were fixed, and a good number of specials promised. The sec. could not say anything about the ramble, as he had not heard from Mr. Galloway, but any member wishing a nice cycle ride, then a ramble through the wood, conducted by Mr. Galloway, will they please let sec. know? Mr. Giles gave a paper on his ups and downs during his long term of service on the railway, which was much appreciated. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Giles. Some members reported good luck with their birds so far. Two members elected—Messrs. Clements and Laurence.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

Annual general meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, May 9, Mr. R. Halliday (vice-pres.) in chair, with only a moderate attendance. Balance-sheet presented, showing a small deficit, and adopted. The question of arrears in members' subs. was discussed, and sec. was instructed to get in touch with other specialist clubs in Yorkshire with an idea of carrying out by-laws 12 and 14 in the club's handbook. Result of ballot for officers:—Pres., H. H. Towers; vice, R. Halliday; sec. and treas., J. Greaves; assist. sec., W. Crabtree; committee residing in Yorkshire, Messrs. H. Hill, F. Hammond, W. A. Cowgill, H. J. Chittenden, L. Ogden, W. H. Shackleton, L. Dykes, J. Bailey, W. Crnise, and R. Garnett; outside Yorks, Messrs. A. Hirst, J. W. Ramsden, T. C. Crawhall, G. W. Cuthbertson, and J. W. Metcalfe. The following were elected by the meeting:—Committee: Messrs. T. Ogden, E. Clegg, C. Morrison, G. Snead, G. White, H. W. Battye, A. Cooper, F. Armstrong, J. Chippendale, and P. Mason; auditors, Messrs. R. W. Alderson and R. Garnett; scrutineers, Messrs. T. Ogden and H. Simonette. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring officers and donors of special prizes. Five new members were made, and ten resignations during the year accepted. Sec. reported that shows held under the club's patronage had been well supported, the members having made an aggregate entry at the ten shows of 1,992 birds. Great Horton, 182 entries; Windhill, 226; Halifax O.S., 200; Bradford East, 248; Carlisle, 80; Shelfield O.S., 196; Blaydon-on-Tyne, 79; Bradford City, 204; Bradford West, 159; Bradford National (Charity Show), 418; an average of 199 per show. The allotting of the club's patronage was deferred to May 24, and the meeting stands adjourned to that date at 6 p.m. All members please attend.—John Greaves, Sec.

YORKS. & LANCS. B.B. & M.C.

Annual general meeting, April 25, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford. Mr. W. A. Cowgill chair, and a fair number of members. Present, Messrs. W. A. Cowgill, H. J. Chittenden, F. Hammond, J. Lane, R. Jowitt, P. Cawthra, and J. W. Holmes, all of Bradford; we were also pleased to see Messrs. J. Chambers and E. Middleton, of Leeds, and J. Taylor, of Haworth. The balance-sheet showing a balance of £1 5s. 2d., 1s. 7d. over last year, was passed. Then came the election of officers. Mr. Inman agreed to act for another year. Proposed and seconded that secretary have advt. in book free, also be exempt from paying subscription; as an amendment it was proposed and seconded that secretary be granted 10s. out of the club. This was carried, but Mr. Inman declined to accept it, saying he had promised to take it on for a year and would like to see the club with more funds. Dr. M. A. Wilson was unanimously re-elected president; Mr. Fairhurst, Mr. Beswick, Mr. Parlett were elected vice-presidents, in addition to those we already have. The following were elected for committee, as per Rule 3, six in Bradford and 12 outside: Messrs. A. Ross, J. Lane, R. Jowitt, R. Halliday, J. W. Holmes, P. Cawthra; (outside) S. T. Oldham, T. Holden, Hope, Middleton, Chambers, Blanchan, Daniels, Macpherson, B. H. Wilson. Auditors, same as last year, Mr. Lane, Mr. Halliday. Eight new members made: Messrs. W. Carton (Doncaster), W. Blanchon (Doncaster), R. Jones (Bramley), R. Hetherington (Shanningley), F. Bearder (Sheffield), E. Middleton (Leeds), J. Thomas (Otley), T. Cawthra (Bradford). Next was new books, also to alter price for advts. to 3s. 6d. full page, 2s. half page, in place of 2s. 6d. full page, 1s. half page. Decided that we have ten shows for patronage. Next meeting June 6th. All present were very grateful to Mr. F. Carl for his handsome prizes to the club, also to Messrs. Martin and Archer and Messrs. Cowgill, Chittenden, and Lane for their donations, and to our worthy president for the handsome silver cup. Will all societies wishing for patronage write me at once, as I want to get new books out?—T. H. Inman, hon. sec., 43, Derby Road, Thornbury, Bradford, Yorkshire.

WINDSOR C.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, May 6. Decided to hold F.F. show, July 8, and to invite subscriptions from members and friends towards the purchase of a cup to be held by the member making the most points throughout the year. Sec. would be pleased to hear from anyone who would be good enough to help us with the same. Members elected:—Messrs. Clark (Watford) and Glenwalker (Walton-on Thames).—H. W. Simms, Hon. Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting, the Duke of York, May 7, Mr. F. J. Weaver presided over a fair attendance. The chief item on the agenda was how to get members to come to meetings during the summer months. Several suggestions were brought forward, but the one suggested by the chairman was decided upon—and a real good scheme, too. It is that a table show of young birds shall be held at the three next meetings, June 11, July 2, and Aug. 13; each member can bring as many birds as he chooses each member who brings four birds or less is to pay a shilling, and above four 1d. per bird extra. All the money gained at the three shows shall buy six prizes, to be given for most points throughout the three shows. Only the four highest awards count, whether they are in one class or not. Classes for June show: 4 Nor., 4 Yorks, 1 Mule, clear, ticked, unevenly marked, and heavily variegated or green. The classes were thus arranged to save trouble of telling yellows from buffs in artificial light.—J. Gibbons, Press Correspondent.

OLDHAM C.B.S.

Oldham Fanciers went amongst the birds in Cheshire on April 26. We left Werneth on our bicycles and made our way through Manchester. We were surprised here to see so many Larks hung outside the various shops, most of them singing finely. Going through Altrincham we heard several Song Thrushes, but it was after passing the Swan Inn, Bucklow Hill, that we made our first find, a Chaffinch's nest with five eggs, almost covered with dust. We ran another mile or so, then began nest-finding in earnest; the first was a Song Thrush with three eggs, and afterwards we found several, some with eggs, some only just being built. The next was a Hedge Sparrow's with four eggs. At this place Greenfinches and Brown Linnets were singing grandly. While walking down the lane we made the find of the afternoon, the nest of the Lesser Whitethroat with four eggs just on the road-side. We next found a nest made of moss with the entrance at the bottom, perhaps some fancier could identify it for us; also a bird about the size of a Tit, all yellow, which we saw on the hedge close by. (Probably the nest of the Willow Warbler.—Editor "Cage Birds.") After finding a nest in a tree trunk we made our way to Pickmere, landing home again at 7.30, tired and hungry. We intend making another visit on Sunday, May 17th, to see how the birds have fared with their young.—W. Beesley.

RUTHERGLEN O.A.

Members and friends met at Stonclaw School and divided into two parties, one headed by Mr. Brownlie, and the other by Mr. Hamilton. The parties went via. Cathkin Braes, passed the Old Cathkin Quarry where bird watching was soon in full swing. As we went along the Old Kilbride Road we found two Hedgesparrows nests, one with four young and the other three eggs, Yellowhammer's with three eggs, Woodlark's four eggs, and a Mavis's nest with three young ones. In Kittoch Side Road we saw a Partridge with five eggs, Pied Wagtail three eggs, Lesser Whitethroat four eggs. We arrived at Kittoch Quarry, and here we found a Pheasant's nest with four eggs. The parties met at the Kittoch Farm, where all did justice to the fare provided, and then we made our way in a crowd for the old mill where a sight was witnessed that I think no one present will ever forget. At the pond we saw two Starlings hovering over the water just for a second, and then one was in the water while the other hovered over it, dabbing at it, or trying to save it (our party took different views). One of our members threw a stone at the one that was dabbing and it flew away, and the other one managed to struggle to the side, where Mr. Hamilton laid on the ground and stretched down and rescued it, and took it into the house at the mill, where the woman gave it a warm at the fire. We went over the fields to Busby after this, and into Carmunnock where we found nests too numerous to mention. At Carmunnock we retired to the Boar's Head, where after satisfying the inner man we had songs and toasts galore.—Thomas M. Joel, Chairman.

FIFE C.B. LEAGUE.

Meeting, May 9, Recreation Rooms, High Street, Kirkcaldy, Mr. Thos. Wildridge (president) in chair. Sec. intimated that he had sent out printed letters and signature lists to all societies in Scotland asking them to appoint a delegate to attend a conference in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Perth or Galashiels. (I filled in the place which in my opinion was nearest.) The purpose of this conference is that each district will appoint two or more delegates to a supreme conference to be held in Edinburgh on June 20, and to have a discussion on the question of railway charges. The supreme conference will then make arrangements to meet the railway companies. Each society in the league was instructed to send one delegate to the Edinburgh Conference and pay his expenses; also agreed that the league sec. get his expenses paid to all meetings held under the league. Next meeting, Co-operative Hall, Dunfermline, June 6, at five. Mr. Wm. Grewar (Lochgelly) has kindly promised to give us a lecture on breeding the Norwich Plainhead, so we hope to see a good turn-out of members. Agreed to give eight rule books to each society. Subs. were received from Kelty, Coaltown of Wemyss, Buckhaven, Cowdenbeath, and Kirkcaldy. After the business the president called upon Mr. Thos. Arnott (Kirkcaldy) to go on with his paper. Mr. Arnott had for his subject the West of Fife C.B.L., from its infancy up to the present time, under the title of the Fife C.B.L. Votes of thanks to the lecturer and the president terminated a very enjoyable meeting. The July meeting is to be held in Coaltown of Wemyss. Secretaries of local societies please note that the question of whether the league or each society individually pays the hall rent will be on the agenda next meeting.—Jas. Cordery, Sec.

EAST HAM F.S.

Monthly show, Earl of Wakefield, April 30, Mr. G. Eves, judge. NOR.: 1, 2, Wells. YORKS.: 1, Potter; 2, Bosher. BRIT.: 1, sp., Wells, Goldf.; 2, Wadsworth, Bullfinch; 3, Bosher, Bullfinch; vhc, Richmond; res., Wadsworth; hc, Potter.—W. Kite, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, May 2, at Lockhart's, Briggate, Mr. Peel, chair, and a record attendance. After the ordinary business, we had the pleasure of listening to some splendid birds brought by six members. For the convenience of some visitors who gave us a call, Mr. Walton was asked to explain the different tours sung by the birds, and all present heartily agreed that he had ably fulfilled his duty. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded him.—H. Best, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting April 25, Mr. Farrer presiding. Classes for members at Open Show decided upon: Five Norwich, 4 Crests, 3 Cinnamon, 5 Borders, 5 Yorkshire, 4 Lizard, 1 pairs, not previously mentioned, 4 British (Including Softbill), 2, Mule or Hybrid, 1 Foreign. Decided that specialist clubs be written to, and if their classification is similar to last year, Sec. to make application for patronage; also that the O.N.P.C. and N.C.C. be written for classification.—John Peacock, Hon. Sec.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing May 9, at headquarters, Commercial Hotel; 26 birds sang for three prizes. 1, 3, Liversidge; 2, Bath. The winner gave a very good account of himself by scoring 122secs. to the 83secs. scored by Mr. Bath's bird, and as both birds were hung together they provided the company with the best singing heard for a long while. —A. Tomlin, Sec.

TYLDESLEY.

Contest May 9, Queen's Hotel, when a record entry for this season's contests was made. 50 birds facing the judges, Messrs. F. Kennedy, Cain, Gibson for quality; timers, Partington and Newton; tappers, Disley and Ashcroft; bird-man, J. Litherland. The contest was a grand success all through, and I hope our members will rally round the contests to come at other clubs. We hope to see many old faces at the contest at Pemberton May 16. We had a little harmony after: Mr. Hickman accompanied. Winners:—Quality: 1, Navvy Ned; 2, Darbyshire; 3, Smedley; 4, Statham. NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A DISAPPOINTMENT (Dick).—I very much doubt whether the hen began to feed the young at all after they were hatched, and consequently the actual cause of their death was starvation. Your dietary was not very good and might have contributed to the loss. As you are a new beginner you should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free, and follow the instructions given in detail therein. When the hen is beginning to sit the next clutch of eggs, take away the cock and leave her to hatch and rear the young by herself. When the young are hatched if you wish to adhere to the egg substitute you now use, give it in a slightly moistened condition, neither dry nor yet in a sodden or sticky state, but just crumbly moist, so that the crumbs will not adhere together. Give it in small quantities at a time and freshly mixed at least twice a day. On the third day give a morsel of green food, either lettuce, chickweed, or the flowering tips of groundsel. From this time give fresh green food also twice a day, morning and afternoon, but do not put on a great quantity at once. There should never be sufficient for part of it to remain to become stale. Keep on the usual supply of canary seed all the time, and if the hen feeds tolerably well let this suffice until the young are about eight days old, then give a little soaked summer rape daily, but see that it does not become sour, and from the tenth day give also a little cracked hemp daily, and see that this is quite sweet and sound in the kernel. Should the hen stop feeding at any stage, you will find details for meeting the difficulty in the handbook referred to.

SEED AND YOUNG (P. D. R.).—(1) The sample of hemp sent is of very good all-round quality, and quite good enough for young of any class to be fed with. (2) I note further particulars re young in first nests being dead in shell. It would appear from all the facts that the most likely cause is weak germs, which may be due to the birds not being quite forward enough in condition when mated, or perhaps the hens being a trifle overfed. The position of your birdroom may be accountable for the hens not coming into condition until rather late. Next season aim at getting them in good hard condition at the back-end of winter, not burdened with an excess of fat, nor yet in a half-starved condition; feed the cocks up into good vigorous condition and full song, and do not mate any earlier than you did this year. Then you should have less of this annoyance.

REMOVING THE COCK (Inexperienced).—If you allow the cock to remain with the hen during the time she is sitting, and he does not meddle too much with her affairs, you certainly should not remove him when the young are hatched. In such a case you will leave him with her permanently during the breeding season, and after the first week or so he will probably help more or less in feeding the young.

WATER AND SAWDUST (Expert).—(1) If you filtered your water through a carbon or charcoal water filter it would; I think, keep sweet and fresh under adverse conditions quite as long, if not longer, than water that has been boiled, and it would also be more wholesome and refreshing. But if this is not feasible, there would be no harm whatever in giving water that has been boiled and allowed to stand until cold. But do not do this under the impression that you need not change the water quite so often as would otherwise be necessary in hot sultry weather. Give fresh water and wash out drinkers each time, at least once a day, and twice is better in sultry weather. If your room gets so overheated that the water becomes heated and putrid, the best remedy is to get on more ventilation and a freer circulation of air while such conditions last. (2) Yes, any ordinary sawdust that is clean and sweet will do for the cage floors, and it need only be sifted if it contains a large amount of splinters. Pine sawdust is only preferable on account of its odour, which may or may not be acceptable; but, in any case, helps to keep the cages sweet and pleasant. I do not think you can buy it at bird-shops. Sawmills are the places to go for it. You can, however, buy a sanitary sawdust, which any chemist, or such firms as Spratt's, could get for you. When using sawdust do not forget to keep a shallow vessel of grit in the cage for the birds to pick over.

BREATHES THROUGH BEAK (G. B. F.).—In the first place you must be very careful to see that the bird is not exposed to severe fluctuations of temperature by being in the window. If the temperature in that position drops very much at night it would be best to remove the cage about sunset each evening and place it back in the morning. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately twice a week a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. On two other days give a morsel of banana and a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. In the water add five drops each of syrup of squills, ditto tolu, tincture of lobelia, and tincture of opium every second day for a fortnight, or you may stop it sooner if the cough is gone earlier. Then give 20 drops of Chemical Food daily for a week or so.

TOES AND SWELLING (J. R. C.).—(1) As the deformity has apparently existed now for several weeks I do not think it is likely to be done any material good by any kind of manipulative treatment, and I do not advise you to attempt any. See that the perches are of a proper size and comfortable shape for the bird's feet, and that they are securely fixed in the cage, so as not to wobble about when the birds move about on them. Also make them of a nice soft pine wood. This should prevent the young being similarly affected, and may also correct the deformity in the hen when she has done nesting, and is more frequently about the perches. (2) It is impossible to say exactly what the swelling is without seeing it. If you have marked it in the correct position on the sketch, i.e., the right side of neck, the apparent swelling may be simply a bulk of food in the crop which shows through the skin. Anyway, as the bird seems to thrive all right, I do not think you need worry at all about it, and certainly I see no necessity for destroying it. As long as it thrives well, leave well alone, and if it does not disappear when the youngster leaves the nest, write again and repeat particulars.

NESTING SITES IN AVIARY (Wherenost).—As the weather will now be more settled and warm there is no necessity whatever for having nesting sites in the sleeping portion of your aviary. It will be far more healthful, and in practically all cases more acceptable, to the birds to have them in a sheltered portion of the flight. It would do no harm to leave one or two in the sleeping place to humour any fickle-minded hen, but the bulk you may safely place in the flight. See that the nests are sheltered from strong winds, and that part of the roof over them should be covered, or covered nesting sites should be used, to protect the hens when sitting and the young from heavy rains.

LIZARDS AND ROLLERS (E. M. T.).—(1) Yes, it is certainly most vexing to lose a promising brood simply because it turns out that the hen will not feed whilst the cock is in with her, but the remedy is sufficiently obvious to be avoided next time, i.e., remove the cock when she begins to sit with her next brood, and leave her to hatch out and rear the young by herself. Continue giving egg food, also bread and milk if it seems necessary; green food fresh twice daily in small quantities, and a little soaked rape and hemp, may be added in the course of a few days, and in all probability the hen will now bring up the remainder of the brood. Yes, I should say the filup feeder is a useful appliance for use in an emergency of this kind, thought I have not personally had an opportunity of trying it yet. Between 95 and 100 degrees would, I should say, be the best heat for an incubator to keep the chicks going temporarily. (2) The Roller cock does not appear to be in sound health, apart from his not singing, so there is certainly room for doubt about the fertility of the eggs. Still, do not lose a hold on hope. It is the bedrock of all that makes life worth living. Let the hen sit her full time, then you will see what you will see.

DOES NOTHING BUT EAT (J. Bailey).—The bird's age is rather against him. Many birds when they get to this age are of little account as singers, and frequently take a long rest after moulting before they resume singing. If he appears healthy, and is fairly active, try what the following treatment will do for him. For one week give a diet of plain canary only, with a liberal supply of green food in variety each day, and in the water add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day. After this add a fourth part of the bulk of summer rape to the staple diet, and every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of crushed sponge cake with a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame, mixed in it. One the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Continue giving a little green food daily. In the water after the first week add ten drops each of glycerine, and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a fortnight.

CAUSE OF DEATH (K.L.).—Unless both parents roosted on the perches and left the young quite unprotected, it is not the least likely that the young died from cold in one night, and the age of the hen certainly has nothing to do with it. The probability is that the hen deserted the young altogether, or that she merely sat upon them without feeding them for the last few days. Most likely she would cease feeding them at the time she seemed to have a cold. But it is impossible to say definitely what was the actual cause of the deaths without much more data as to the condition of the young. Get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free, and follow directions therein, and do not [illegible] except in very small quantities, until [illegible] are a fortnight old, and I see no reason why you should not succeed all right with the next brood.

RESULT (A.W.H.).—Thanks for your letter. Am very glad to know the bird is quite recovered after the fortnight's treatment. Most queriists forget to award us the satisfaction of knowing the result of treatment advised.

AILING HEN AND MATING CREST (I.C.J.).—(1) The hen might have got a bad chill on the journey, but there are signs of older trouble than that. Keep it in a rather warm place, and see that it is quite free from cold draughts or severe and sudden fluctuations of heat and cold. Then give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for three consecutive days, and after this give five drops each of tincture of lobelia, syrup of tolu, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirits of nitre every second day for a fortnight if necessary. (2) If the non-crested yellow Norwich cock to which you refer is a crested-bred bird, it would be quite correct to mate the crested hen with him if he is suitable in other points beside colour. But if he is of the Plainhead breed, the young would be simply cross-breds, and of no particular value unless it were as singers or feeders. They would be of practically no use at all for crossing back to either of the parent breeds. The proper mate for the hen would be a yellow crest-bred cock that excels as much as possible in any feature in which the hen is either lacking or weak, so that the pair between them may possess the points of a fairly typical bird.

TROUBLE WITH HEN (F. Parker).—You did quite right to steam the hen and keep her in a warm place for a time, but she would have been better without the oil you gave her the next day. Leave the pair together now, and add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for three consecutive days, and after this substitute instead six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a week. In addition to staple diet give a teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, and on two other days a similar quantity of mixed seed. Give a little chickweed, flower buds of groundsel, or watercress daily, but do not give this pair any dandelion. Continue this treatment until the hen has gone to nest again.

TWO HENS (G.W.).—I imagine these hens are two weaklings, and think you would be best advised to discard them altogether for breeding. Still, if you wish to try them, treat as follows for two or three weeks. But do not forget that by breeding from such birds you are assuredly making trouble for yourself in years to come. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately a small teaspoonful of egg food twice a week, and mix in it each time a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure. On two other days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a little chickweed, flower-buds of groundsel, or watercress daily, but do not give these birds any dandelion at all. Add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for three consecutive days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food two days in every three for a fortnight.

GETTING HENS READY (A. Hicks).—You omit to say whether the hens are in apparently good health and active, though any hen in really good and normal condition should be in breeding condition by now. Try what the following treatment will do for them in a few weeks' time. In addition to the staple diet, give a small teaspoonful of egg food with a third of the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure mixed in it to each pair of birds every second day, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, linseed, and teazle. Give a small stool of dandelion gathered fresh daily. Just cut off the root under the surface, clear off the dirt, and give the whole crown to the birds, one stool to each pair daily. Add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for three consecutive days, and afterwards give instead six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a week.

DOMESTIC STRIFE (W.R.P.).—The hen was probably out of condition when you mated them first, and perhaps the cock also, more or less, which would account for the clear eggs. Now, however, both birds seem to be in very good condition, and all you need do is to let matters take their own course and patiently wait the result. The bickerings are not at all uncommon when birds are in vigorous condition, and must not be taken as a bad sign, and rarely cause any damage to either side. Let them alone to settle their affairs in their own way, and you will find they will soon settle down, and matters will proceed more smoothly. Give two crisp young dandelion leaves daily; that is all you need do.

A FICKLE HEN (E.M.T.).—Yes, you could certainly get another hen to hatch out and rear the young of the Lizard, but even then you would have to run the risk of the feeding hen proving a more or less bad feeder. On the whole, my advice is to give the Lizard a chance to show what she will do by herself when the cock is removed, and do not interfere more than is absolutely necessary with the young next time. Although the hen is so tractable, the constant interference is practically certain to reduce the chances of her feeding so well as she might if left more to herself. Some hens naturally allow longer intervals to elapse between feeding the young ones than others, and yet rear quite as strong youngsters. You may, if you like, try giving her a clutch of wild birds' eggs, but I have much more confidence in the above method. You would, in the latter event, be more likely to succeed with a clutch of Greenfinch or Linnet eggs than Sparrows'. The latter are not good subjects for the purpose, strange as it may appear to you. About a week is the length of time you can keep Canary eggs with safety before they are put to sit. If kept buried in a closed box of bran, in a cool dry place, and the box given a half turn daily, they may be kept a fortnight or even a little longer, but there is a vastly greater risk of their not hatching, or producing weakly chicks. "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free, is the book you want to help you over all these little difficulties.

YOUNG DYING AND LOOSE PLUMAGE (Amadis).—(1) Your surmise that the hen does not feed the young ones is almost certain to be the correct explanation of the young dying. She may possibly give them a scrap of food on rare occasions, or the cock, if with her, may give them a little now and again when she is off to feed, but even if this did not happen, it is quite possible for the young to survive solely by the heat of the hen for some time after hatching. If the cock was left with her last time, remove him with the next brood on the evening of the third day, when putting hen to sit, and take him out of sight, and hearing also, if convenient, of the hen, and leave her to hatch out and rear the young by herself. She may do this quite well, even though she refuses to feed at all when he is left with her. Do not meddle with her arrangements more than is absolutely necessary, but if she is noticed to be neglecting the young, try to tempt her with a little fresh green food two or three times a day, and make the egg-food with equal parts egg, crushed sponge cake, and stale bread crumbs, and sprinkle it with maw to induce her to eat it freely. (2) The loose feather is probably only a temporary feature of the breeding season, and will disappear with the moult. In any case, all you could do for it would be to allow the bird to bathe freely, and tone it up in condition if necessary. It should be mated with a close short-feathered bird.

FIRST ROUND LOST (T. T. Ellison).—Being in an attic, you probably mated the birds before they were in quite good condition, which would account for the poor results from the first round of eggs, and also to some extent for the hens' neglect of their duties. Besides this, there are several little flaws in your treatment. You should not have given hemp in the staple diet until the young were nearly ready to hatch, nor dandelion leaves afterwards. It would also have been best to try removing the cocks this time, but now things have gone so far they are best left alone. When the next young are hatched, sprinkle the egg-food with maw seed, and if the hens show signs of flagging in their duties, make it the same as advised to "Amadis," and begin to give a morsel of crisp tender green food at once—use lettuce, flower-buds of groundsel, chickweed, or watercress, for preference in the order named, but do not give any dandelion at all. Offer a little soaked summer rape daily when about eight days old, but be careful that it does not stand to become sour, and add a little cracked hemp about the twelfth day, but not earlier. Give no hemp whilst the hens are sitting. With these little changes, and the season being a little more advanced, I think you will do much better with this round. You would do well to provide yourself with a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager, which will help you out of these difficulties.

A COINCIDENCE (E.A.M.).—It was nothing more than a coincidence that you should notice the cock feeding the young on each occasion before they died. He probably fed them more or less all the time, as some cocks are almost as good as the best of hens in this respect. I should say the cause of the deaths in your case was too much hemp and too little green food. This is where you went wrong. See reply to "T. T. Ellison," and first part of reply to "Amadis," and follow the advice therein when the next broods arrive, and you should meet with more success. As the weather will be getting warm you should not give enough soaked rape to last the birds all day, on account of the risk of its becoming sour. Give a teaspoonful in the morning, and if any is left in the afternoon, throw it out and give a little fresh, and again at night, throw out any that remains, and do not give any more until next morning.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FOOD FOR SOFTBILLS (Toronto).—The following mixtures are all used with success in the feeding of Blackbirds and Thrushes: Fine biscuit meal as used for rearing young chicks, 6 parts; crissel or meat meal, 1 part. Soak in hot water, or you can use crushed puppy biscuits (best quality) in place of the chicken meal. Another mixture of better quality to be used two or three times a week would be: Ground biscuits (Osborne are as good as any), 4 parts; dried flies, 1 part; ants' eggs, 1 part; meat meal, 1 part; mix together and take sufficient for the day and make crumbly moist, with boiled potato, scraped raw carrot, or a little green food, such as chopped lettuce or watercress. This latter food would be suitable for a Robin, with the addition of a little hard-boiled egg. He should also have insect life of some kind, so should the Blackbird and Thrush.

HAND-REARING JACKDAW (Highland Lad).—You should have no difficulty in hand-rearing young Jackdaws. Take them just as their eyes open, and while they will gape, although they may be left rather later if you desire it; but in that case you will have to put them in a basket or box in the dark, and when you open the lid and they see light, you must be ready to feed them at once. For the first few days feed on hard boiled egg minced up with biscuit or stale bread crumbs, and made moist with new milk; afterwards substitute smashed puppy biscuit for the bread crumbs. In addition to this give mealworms, small garden worms, and tiny slugs, and occasionally a very little scraped raw lean meat; but be very careful that it is perfectly fresh. Mix a pinch of fine grit with the food and give a drink of water three or four times a day. You can give it on the end of the feeding stick. (2) It is not easy to distinguish the sexes until the breeding season, when the cock bird has rather more gloss on the plumage; and the grey patch at the nape of the neck is more distinct; but as both sexes will talk, I would advise you to retain the largest and most lusty. Jackdaws are active birds and require plenty of cage room; they are fond of bathing.

BIRDS NOT DOING WELL (Gofidus).—You have omitted to send your name and address, which is contrary to our rules. Perhaps you will kindly send them on a postcard. I am afraid there is something very wrong with your treatment for all your birds to be doing badly. Give the Goldfinch-Canary an aperient. Dissolve as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpenny-piece in his drinking water one day, then miss a day and give again. Discontinue the hemp and dandelion seeds and only give half-a-dozen sunflowers daily. In fact, feed him less heavily. Offer greenfood, such as shepherd's purse and chickweed, or watercress. You could with advantage hang him outside for a couple of hours daily. (2) Your Linnet is afflicted with asthma and I am afraid he has gone too far to do anything with him. You had better take him to a chemist and ask him to put it out of its misery with a little chloroform. He has been fed wrongly. If you have another, send for our Nutshell booklet on the Linnet. (3) I expect the trouble with your Goldfinch is caused in the same manner. Give an aperient as advised for the Goldfinch-Canary, and feed as follows: Teazle, 4 parts; canary, 3 parts; hemp, 2 parts; and linseed, 1 part. This for his staple food. In addition, make a mixture of niger, 3 parts; and maw seed, 1 part, and give a spoonful twice a week. Try to purchase a good brand of wild seed mixture containing thistle, dandelion, gold of pleasure, and other wild seeds, and offer him a spoonful of it twice a week. Give also a few sunflowers daily, and soak a little teazle and summer rape, and let him have a little fresh daily until he is in better health. After the aperient, mix a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food in the drinking water daily. Boil the water first or it will not mix. I should also advise you to get the booklet on the Goldfinch; it will assist you in your management.

CHARLOCK SEED FOR LINNET (Anxious).—Yes. You can use charlock seed for your Linnet, but only in moderate quantities, and as one ingredient in your seed mixture. Canary, teazle, summer rape, and linseed should be used with it. (2) As to your second question, "How to measure a pint of seed," any pint measure would have answered; a pint is always a pint, whether it is of water, seed, or anything else that will go into a measure.

MANAGEMENT OF NIGHTINGALE (M. McGettigan).—I cannot see very much to find fault with in the management of your 'Gale, excepting that I think you are giving him quite enough mealworms, and it is probably these that cause him to look somewhat puffy. You had better diminish them gradually and substitute a few gentles, and at this time of the year you should be able to collect some live matter from the garden, such as small maggots and greenfly from the rose trees. If you can, these should be given in place of the mealworms, as they are much more digestible. If you can get him to eat a little soft fruit, it will be to his benefit. A mild aperient occasionally is the correct thing for Softbills in captivity. They eat well and take such a little exercise that they soon become dull and out-of-sorts. The fact of your recently-purchased bird not singing does not surprise me, as a 'Gale is never very noisy, and the change of home would be quite sufficient to stop him. I am sorry I am unable to give you any written directions by which you may sex your bird. We publish two little Nutshell booklets on Softbills that might be useful to you, 2½d. each, by post. You should try to get your bird to bathe. To do so I would advise you to take away his usual water-vessel and hang on a bath. Let him drink from this and he will probably soon bathe, especially if he hears or sees another bird doing so. You can prevent him spilling his food by bending a couple of wires over the vessel containing it.

FOOD FOR SONG THRUSH (H. J.).—I do not think your mixture is suitable for a Song Thrush; the ingredient I particularly object to in all soft foods is pea meal, a hard indigestible substance fit for animals only. In addition to this, your mixture includes seeds, which, of course, are quite unsuitable. In this issue you will find particulars of soft food for feeding Thrushes and Blackbirds to "Toronto." You had better make use of these, and I would advise you to get our booklet on the Thrush.

CANARY AND LINNET.—You appear to be treating your bird well, and are rather unfortunate in the behaviour of the hen. I should advise you to part them, with a wire partition in between, and give her a course of Chemical Food, putting them together again in about ten days. Mix a small teaspoonful of the Chemical Food in the drinking water, using boiled or distilled water. Let her have it fresh daily. As green food, use chickweed and dandelion leaves, gathered out in the open, and the youngest leaves you can find They are more tender than the old ones.

LINNET-CANARY MOULTING (F. J. H.).—If you follow out the advice given you in our last issue I think you will find it successful.

MATING HYBRID AND CANARY (F. Funnell).—I fear you will only be wasting your time and be disappointed if you try to breed from your hybrid and hen Canary. Why not procure a Linnet and try him with her? There is time yet, and you may be successful.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GREY PARROT (H.G.G.).—Continue the treatment already advised, and in addition to the dietary named in our last, you can give, if it has a liking for such things, a piece of stale crust or biscuit, moistened either in clear water, or a mixture of water and Chemical Food. If the bird is at all tame, it will help matters to give it its liberty about the room at convenient periods. Give it a piece of a branch, cotton reels to play with, and scatter a pinch of grit (not sand) over the sand on cage tray daily. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage. You had better get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, and offer at intervals, so as to keep the diet as varied as possible, all the items named therein as permissible. Report progress again in a month or six weeks; there is hope that your bird will leave off this annoying habit, but progress will be slow. You can help by keeping the birds as occupied as possible, by fussing about with it, talking to it, etc., without scaring it. As the bird settles and takes more interest in his surroundings, its plumage may be left alone.

MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS (C.H.M.).—While I think it is doubtful that they will breed in a cage of that size along with Budgerigars, yet it is worth the trial. Put in a small barrel, about 6 inches diameter, by 9 inches deep, hang it up longitudinally, with a hole about 2 inches, square or round, cut in one end near the top, this hole to face the light. Supply them with leaves, thin strips of bark, and a few straws, and leave the rest to chance. As regards the Budgies, it's a case of settling down; some take quite a time to do this, and others settle down almost at once. Give them as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat. Probably the wildness of the Lovebirds is disturbing them, but the Lovebirds will settle down in due course. It's a case for the exercise of patience.

YELLOW-WINGED AMAZON (N. S. A.).—You give me no idea of how you feed, and this makes it difficult to give you a helpful reply. You had better send me these details, and in the meantime treat as follows:—Give it five drops of cod-liver oil two or three times a day on a piece of sponge cake, scone, or bread, and continue this for some time. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and give the bird a little of this daily or oftener. Smear a little on the end of a stick, and then tap the beak with the stick, and the bird is almost sure to bite the end of the stick, and will so take the mixture smeared on it. Get from your chemist the following:—Tincture of rhubarb and capsicum, essence of peppermint, spirit of camphor, and laudanum—say a pennyworth of each. Have them all put into one bottle, well shake together, and put three drops into the drinking water till relief is given. As soon as the diarrhœa yields, stop the above mixture and well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. While it continues thin, give a little milk sop for, say, a fortnight. Prepare the milk sop so:—Four pieces of sponge cake about size of walnut, one teaspoonful of condensed milk, boiling water to make it rather sloppy; then stir in one teaspoonful of cornflour, and when cool supply to the bird. Note.—This is only as a medicine, and not as part of its diet, and as soon as it begins to recover tone and takes to the seed mixture again, gradually discontinue the sop.

AVIARY QUERIES (J. V. S.).—(1) Clay is a bad soil on which to keep birds, but success is attained even under these conditions. Trench the sections all round, 18in. deep, fill in with 12in. of rubble, and on top of this sandy soil. (2) Door should be in two parts, and only the upper half kept open. In the winter drive in the birds at dusk and shut them up for the night. (3) At least half the glass should be permanently covered with felt, and the other half distempered during the summer months. (4) Use half your space of the open section for grass and the other sow with oats, wheat and barley. (5) Yes, all can fly together with safety, and the only pair which it will be advantageous to pair up in cage will be the Green Budgerigars, with a view to prevent them cross-mating with the yellows.

LAVENDER FINCHES, ETC. (Nester).—I could have given you a more definite reply had you given me dimensions of open flight and shelter, but assuming both these to be moderately roomy, Lavender and Fire Finches should safely pass the winter out of doors in your southern locality. As to the Red-headed Finches, these are successfully wintered out of doors in quite northern localities. It is good practice to keep the food hoppers in the shelter, and during the really cold months to drive them in each night and release them in the morning. It is also a wise precaution to shut them in altogether during such really arctic periods as may occur. The great fault with the shelters of many aviaries is that they are not light enough and the birds do not use them; shelters ought to be as light as a living room. The cock is easily distinguished by his red head; the head of the hen is the same colour as the body. Both male and female have cream-coloured spots or blotches on the breast and upper abdomen. They should breed with you, also the Firefinches; Lavenders are shy breeders in captivity.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. G. Richards.—Inflammation of the bowels, complicated with pneumonia, both symptoms very suspicious of ptomaine poisoning, caused by the taking in with the food of poisons.

F.M.—Very suspicious of septic fever. There were no lesions in the spleen, although this organ was enlarged. The liver, showed slight evidence of this disease. You should send me another bird to confirm this, for it is evident that if it is this disease you must expect further loss.

C. E. Nash.—Impaction of the gizzard. This organ was about six times its ordinary size. It's walls were thin and very dilated. It was impacted with hard dry food, making it impossible to carry out its proper digestive action.

C.R.G. (Cheshire).—Acute broncho-pneumonia caused death. The organs other than the lungs were quite healthy, and the bird was in good condition.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Miss Lyle, B. Reid, J. Stewart, and Others.—Many thanks for the newspaper cuttings.

J.M.—Your intentions are good, but poetry makes our printers simply furious, and we daren't try the effect of yours upon them.

THE SKYLARK.

". . . . . who, daily cheer'd
By guardian cares, repays them with a song,
Nor droops, nor deems sweet liberty resign'd."
—SHENSTONE.

From a drawing] [By W. A. Lott.

The Skylark is doubtless the most widely known and popular of all our song birds, familiar to dwellers in both town and country. It ranks high, too, as a favourite with bird-keepers, and an article dealing with its management will be found on page 445.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR
DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

Over 1,000 Birds in Stock.

Now is the Time to secure exceptional value in all varieties of Canaries. I have over 1,000 birds in stock, every one of which I guarantee to be untried and ready for immediate Breeding. I am offering EXCEPTIONAL BARGAINS in Songsters, Stock Birds, and Matched Breeding Pairs. My stock must be considerably reduced during the next few weeks to make room for this season's youngsters. As regards the quality of my stock, they have made a firm reputation during the last few years, and it is sufficient to state that during the 1914 show season, just ended, they won over 450 prizes at open champion shows in hottest open competition. In addition to this, I supplied a large number of birds that won for my clients all over the Kingdom. Letters proving this are filed here for the inspection of my numerous visitors.

If you require a real good stock bird (cock or hen), or a first-class songster, in any of the varieties named below, let me send them on approval. I am so confident I can please you that I am prepared to send one or more birds to any address in the Kingdom at my sole risk, on ten days' approval.

Kindly note the following prices, but remember it is not only the price you pay, but the value you get that is important. The birds I am now sending out are worth much more than the prices charged, as you will agree if you accept my offer.

CHAMPION NORWICH, THE BULLDOG STRAIN.

Grand, short, thick-set birds, cocks or hens, at 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/- each upwards. Matched pairs, personally selected by me for breeding winners, 20/-, 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/-, per pair. Blood is sure to tell in the end, and I am prepared to give a written guarantee that the above are bred by me from my noted strain of winners. I have also a few real good cobby birds bred from other well-known strains at the following prices: Cocks, in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- each. Grand cobby hens, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Matched breeding pairs, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- per pair.

CHAMPION YORKSHIRES.

Grand lengthy Yorkshire Cocks, with good position and in full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Erect racy hens, 3/6, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Matched breeding pairs, personally selected and ready for immediate breeding, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- per pair. Also a few special pairs bred from open winners and personally matched by me for breeding winners, at 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-, 60/- per pair. I am in a special position to give amateurs a good start with the best blood in the Fancy, or to supply the old hand with good stock birds, either Cocks or Hens, at a reasonable price.

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give it an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird room, egg food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Club Reports.

WADEBRIDGE F.A.

Annual meeting, May 6. Balance-sheet was read and adopted. The treasurer and secretary were re-elected, with Mr. E. Hill assistant sec. Decided to hold a county show October 29.—I should be pleased to hear from any fancier willing to give a special or guarantee a class.—Ed. Mitchell, Hon. Sec.

ROSSENDALE C.B.S.

Meeting, May 5. Decid d to have a ramble to Holmes Chapel and to Burnley, via Townley Park, on Whit Friday. Fanciers and friends are heartily welcome. Meet on Bull's Head Bridge, Bacup, at 10, weather permitting. Will all fanciers attend meeting on June 2, to fix and complete feather show?—H. Wantling, Hon. Sec.

HENLEY F.S.

Meeting, Oxford Temperance Hotel, May 4th. Mr. L. Murray presided over a fair attendance. Two new members were elected, and Mr. A. Lovegrove gave a very interesting demonstration of bird-washing. The evening closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Lovegrove, and to Mr. Murray for presiding. Next meeting Tuesday, June 2, at 8.—G. Machin, jun., Hon. Sec.

CRAGHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting at Mr. R. Lawson's, Blackhouse, Mr. C. Davison, chair. We had a fair turn-out of members, and got our show dates fixed. Nest Feather, Aug. 1; annual, Jan. 30. Schedule was drawn up for N.F., 20 classes. Judges nominated, N.F., J. Stanger, W. Reed, Riseborough, J. Calvert; annual, J. Stanger, W. Reed, Riseborough, J. Hands.—A. Dawson, Sec.

BIRTLEY, CHESTER-LE-STREET AND PELTON FELL (Amalg).

Meeting held at Station Hotel, Birtley, on May 9, and a very successful table show. GREENF.: 1, 2, Lindsay; 3, Wilford. BRAMBLE OR CHAFF.: 1, Lindsay; 2, Davison; 3, Wilford. GOLDF. OR BULLF.: 1, 3, Wilford; 2, Lindsay. A.O. FINCH: 1, 2, Davison. Next meeting May 23 at Pelton Fell. A table show will be held of F.M. Linnet or Twite, Redpoll or Siskin, Goldie or Bullie and Greenfinch. Mr. W. Collins (Sacriston) was nominated a member.—S. Lindsay.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, May 5, Mr. Frank Cole chair. Mr. Hodder gave a lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. There was a good attendance, and he received a warm reception. After his lecture Mr. Hodder invited a discussion, which proved a success, many members giving him a good supply of questions. Messrs. Tomsett, Clarke, Fairman, Grindell, being very interested in Mr. Hodde.'s ideas as to feeding, breeding, etc. Mr. Fairman proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hodder, and remarked that what we had heard had come from the fountain-head. This was seconded by Mr. Tomsett. Mr. Hodder replied, and said that it gave him great pleasure to be amongst them, and wished all success. With a voto of thanks to Mr. Cole, a pleasant evening closed.—A. G. Cant, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting, May 4. Mr. Ffoulks, Stoke, elected a member. Further arrangements for the young bird show were made. Mr. Pitchford promised a tea service for competition at the N.F. and annual members' shows, four highest birds to count at each show. Mr. Davis will give a gold centre silver medal for second most points. Mr. E. Ousman also promised a pair of razors to be competed for in the same manner, by members whose annual subs. are fully paid up previous to the young bird show as per rule. Sec. was instructed to apply for the patronage of the M.C.Y.C.C., and the N.B.B. and M.C. The question of purchasing some staging was further considered, and it was decided to raise a special fund for this purpose. With this object in view, it was decided that the entry fee at the young bird show should be 7d., with 1d. deducted towards the staging fund. Since the meeting Mr. Butters has promised a cash special, which will be allotted at next meeting.—J. Pitchford, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting, May 6, Pillar's Cafe, Mr. W. P. Smith chair. Decided that the classes for patronage shows be same as last year. Mr. G. F. Bates, and Mr. J. Chambers were elected members. Resolved that Newcastle Nest Feather show be granted our patronage, the points to count for table shows, and that the patronage for open shows be granted to Newcastle, Morpeth, Blaydon, and Sunderland. Haltwhistle's application was left over to another meeting. Decided that table show be held in June, four classes each section, yellow, buff, green, cinnamon. Judges, Mr. W. Espie, novice; Mr. C. Potts, champion. Mr. Espie offered to give Border hen, value 10s., to the novice member having scored most points over the table shows, and Mr. Johnstone two show cages for third most points. Mr. Robson then gave his lecture on Canary Breeding, which was listened to very attentively, and made a very enjoyable evening. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Robson brought a splendid meeting to an end.—M. C. Potts.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

General meeting, May 4, at headquarters, Mr. E. Holiday chair. Mr. Foyle was elected on the committee in place of Mr. Boyce, who has resigned the society through leaving the town. The chairman called upon Mr. Gamble to give his promised lecture on the "Breeding, Colour-feeding, and Exhibiting of Canaries." Mr. Gamble said he had great pleasure in giving a lecture, and he hoped he would be of some small use to the beginners in the hobby. He dealt with every detail from beginning to end, and impressed on the novices three very important "Dont's": Dont interfere unduly with the nest, don't invite your friends to see the young birds until they have left the nest, don't forget the bath. The bath and fresh air he considered were most important factors in a bird's life. Mr. Gamble then invited questions, which were answered very satisfactorily, and produced a good deal of discussion. In one case egg-binding was the topic, and Mr. Gamble said he had read that it was a common complaint, but he he said he had not found it so, as in his twenty years of bird-breeding he had had only two cases, and he had treated both successfully. Mr. Gamble was loudly applauded for his very interesting and instructive lecture, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him by all present. Next meeting, June 2, owing to the holiday falling on Monday.—W. L. Page, Hon. Sec.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

Meeting May 2, W. Thompson chair. Resolved that we hold young bird show July 25th. A shoal of cash specials were given by members present, and four new members made. The membership of this old society is steadily increasing.—W. L. Smith, Hon. Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting held Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, May 5, President Gillies chair. Four new members admitted. President announced judges for annual show. Mr. A. W. Donaldson gave a lecture on breeding, which proved very interesting and useful. After questions answered and a very friendly discussion, a very interesting evening was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to Mr. Donaldson.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting, May 6, Fountain Bar, Mr. J. Sneddon presiding. For our annual ramble it was agreed to go by train to the Crook of Devon, kindly granted by Mr. Mowbray. Members are very slow in handing in their names for same. Members who want their colour feed through the society, kindly hand in their order to the secretary by next meeting, May 23, Raith Arms Inn. Agreed to have an award board at next open show for the benefit of exhibitors.—A. Robertson, Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON P.P. AND C.B.A.

Meeting May 1, Bedford Hotel, Mr. Stables chair. Mr. Fanstone, general sec., reported that arrangements as to hall not being completed, the selection of judges must be postponed. Re whist drive and dance held April 29, as some nancy has yet to come in for tickets, etc., he could not give exact balance, but there would be a nice little sum to add to funds. Decided that a letter be sent to Mr. Vass, expressing entire satisfaction with his catering. A vote of thanks was heartily accorded the sec. for his hard work in making the drive a success. In reply he wished to thank the committee for the splendid manner they had assisted him. Decided to hold an "egg-week" for benefit of local hospitals, local Press to be written to on the subject. Decided to hold summer outing as usual, sec. to make preliminary arrangements and report on same.—G. J. Slade.

BRIDLINGTON & DRIFFIELD C.B.S

Meeting May 5, Dr. Williams chair, and a good attendance. Arrangements were made for F.F. show, June 19, in Driffield. Full particulars will be given at next meeting, June 2. A valuable special (a very handsome timepiece, marble stand, and glass shade) will be given by Mr. E. C. Dixon for most points gained throughout the year, but no points to count if less than six entries. Special will be on view at next meeting; it is worth a good fight. 2s. 6d. cash is promised for most points gained by birds wearing closed rings, members only. Will members or intending members who are breeders of any variety of Canaries, other than Yorks. and Norwich, please let me know, so that a class can be made if convenient; we wish everyone to be able to compete for specials. We hope to see our membership increased at next meeting. Rule cards ready, 1d. each.—J. Chadwick.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

An interesting evening was spent on May 6, when Mr. Geo. Stevens read one of his celebrated papers before the members. Mr. Stevens always goes into his subject thoroughly, and this time chose "Seeds: Their Use and Abuse." He said he did not think sufficient attention was paid to this matter by the average fancier, and recommended a frequent change of diet, provided the right kind was given. Emphasising the importance of giving the best quality food procurable. He went on to speak of the chemical properties of the various seeds in general use, and mentioned canary, hemp, rape, linseed, maw, millet, niger, teazle, thistle, gold of pleasure, various grasses, sunflower, and dandelion. An animated discussion took place at the end of the lecture. A vote of thanks to Mr. Stevens for the excellent paper was proposed from the chair.—A. S. Treasure.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, May 7, Mr. F. Jones chair. There was a good muster in anticipation of the lecture on Norwich by Mr. Waters, but unfortunately owing to the death of his brother he felt unable to attend to give his lecture. After the usual business preliminaries, including Nest Feather show, arrangements, and those for the ramble on June 6th, a most interesting discussion on line breeding led by Mr. Bevan, so engrossed the attention of the members that it was unanimously decided that he bring his charts at the July meeting, and the discussion be then continued. Decided that all specials for our N.F. show, June 27, be allocated before the June meeting, so as to stimulate entries for the show. The tinge of sadness introduced by the cause of the absence of Mr. Waters was accentuated by the news of a very serious accident whilst at work to our respected member, Mr. Chadwick, and a report of the serious indisposition of our valued assistant secretary, Mr. Woolhouse. Votes of condolence and sympathy with these members were passed by the meeting, and the kindly and feeling expressions of regard and esteem in which these members are held served to indicate that somewhat overlooked result of our hobby—the making and cementing—of brotherhood and comradeship. We all wish them a speedy return to more genial conditions of existence.—A. Hobson, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting, May 11, Church Institute, Paddington Street, Mr. F. Knight chair; Mr. V. Wynn, Hon. Sec., and 34 members present. Letter read from the Hon. Sec. of the N.B.B. and M.C., stating that they had arranged a ramble round Clandon and Horsley on Saturday, May 23rd, and inviting our members to join them. The offer was gladly accepted. Mr. Glanville was nominated for membership. Miss Elcock and Messrs. F. Smith and F. Willey were elected members. The Chairman presented medals to Messrs. W. Sanders and Salter for egg food competition. Schedule for young bird show was discussed, and it was agreed to follow on the same lines as last year. The feature of the evening was the second part of Mr. G. E. Weston's lecture, entitled, "The Bird Within the Egg." For the benefit of those not present at the previous meeting, Mr. Weston briefly touched on some of the points of the first portion of his lecture, and then explained the various stages of the young bird from commencement of life until it hatched. His scientific knowledge of the subject greatly interested members, and at its conclusion he was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks. Hon. Sec. announced that during the summer meetings will be held monthly, and at next meeting, June 8, Mr. A. C. Burn will speak on "The Lack of Organisation in the Fancy." Vote of thanks to chairman closed the meeting.—Fred Thynne, Assist. Hon. Sec.

Beaumaris Show is fixed for August 3, judge, Mr. Roberts, Penygroes.

Mr. W. P. Barnes, Grantham, writes that he has been engaged to judge at Lincoln July 4, Oakham August 3, Grantham November 26.

We hear that Mr. Peck, one of the oldest members of Cage Birds League, is opening a shop at 27, West Hill, Dartford, for the sale of birds of all kinds, cages of the best makes, and bird foods and seeds.

Will secretaries and others please note, writes Mr. T. Monday, "Glenville," Canterbury Road, Sittingbourne, that owing to Mr. Churchill, sec. Sittingbourne Cage Bird Society, moving from our district I have taken over the duties pro tem.

The Openshaw Gorton and District C.B.S., writes Mr. A. W. Newton, hon. sec., are having a ramble, May 31, through Marple, Rose Hill, Compstall and District, meet Gorton Station 2.20 train or Guide Bridge 2.30. Fanciers and friends will be heartily welcomed.

The First Feather Show of the Hastings and St. Leonards United C.B.S., writes Miss Kirk Bullock, hon. sec., will be held next Wednesday, May 27, at the Royal Oak Hotel, at 7.30. I hope to see a large attendance. At the end of the season point prizes will be given.

The North Liverpool and District C.B.S. has arranged a ramble to Kirkby and Simonswood on May 31st, writes Mr. E. S. Broadbent, hon. sec. Meet at Walton Church, County Road, 10.30 a.m. We extend a hearty welcome to the members of the Wallasey C.B.S. and all Liverpool societies.

Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland, writes that he has been engaged to judge the following shows:—June 20, South Moor; July 4, Burnhope; 11, West Stanley; 18, Birtley; Oct. 24, Newsham; Nov. 7, Ashington and Hirst; 28, Alnwick; Dec. 4, Old Shildon; 5, Stanley Victoria; Jan. 2, 1915, Pelton Fell.

I think that Cage Birds 1914 Calendar was superb and excels all others. I should esteem it a favour of you if you would forward me a supply, and I will distribute them in suitable places. I think they would adorn a mansion quite as well as a fancier's birdroom.—A. Hooton, sec. Worksop and Dist. F.A.

I beg to thank you for your kindness in publishing in your valuable paper the photo of my Border Canary; indeed to me it was a surprise to see it there, and hope it will not be the last that I shall own worthy of a place in the paper from which I derive many hours of pleasure when reading. Wishing Cage Birds success.—Wm. J. Saunders.

Mr. G. Broome, hon. sec., writes that Mr. A. E. Moule will judge Canaries and Mr. C. Lewis Mules and British at the N.F. show of the Abertillery C.B.S., at Cwm Assembly Rooms, June 20; at the second N.F. show, July 18, Mr. Hy. Phillips, Ebbw Vale, will take Canaries and Chas. Lewis Mules and British.

The St. James-the-Less F.A., Bethnal Green, executive, writes Mr. Thos. G. Bransford, hon. sec., 22, Meynell Crescent, Victoria Park, N.E., have decided at the request of many fanciers to extend the area for membership to a three-mile radius, thereby providing for fanciers in the City of London, Hoxton, Shoreditch, and Stepney.

Have You Lost a Cockatoo?

A large White Cockatoo has been found in Bushey Park, and is now in the possession of one of the park keepers, who is anxious to restore it to the owner.

A Bullfinch Returns Home.

An astonishing instance of a Bullfinch preferring captivity to freedom has come under our notice, says the "Worcestershire County Express." Nearly three years ago a Bullfinch caught at Kinver was given to Mr. John Hatton, of Washing Pool, Stourbridge, who placed it in his aviary. Five weeks ago he presented the bird to Mr. J. Pearson, of the Plough Hotel, Wollaston. Owing to an accident to its plumage three weeks ago, Mr. Pearson opened the cage and let the bird free. On Thursday Mr. Hatton was surprised to find that the Finch had returned to his aviary.

The Manchester and N.C.O.S. have engaged Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot) to judge their nest feather show, at St. Paul's Schoolroom, Bennett Street, July 4, writes Mr. F. Hayward, hon. sec.

Mr. Edwin North, late of 477, Manchester Road, Bradford, writes that he has removed to larger and more convenient premises at No. 443, where his bird rooms will be open for the inspection of anybody who cares to give him a call.

In last week's Cage Birds you published the portrait of my winning yellow Cinnamon cock, 1st at the Palace Show, 1914. The same bird was 1st at the Palace Show of 1913, in the unflighted class, therefore has won first two years in succession at the Palace. I thank you for your kindness.—Thos. Proctor (Blackburn).

OBITUARY.

It is with very deep regret, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, that fanciers throughout the country will learn of the sad bereavement that has befallen Mr. Dan Hamilton, of Hamilton, in the loss, on May 8, of his beloved daughter, aged fourteen years. The sympathy of all fanciers will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton in their sad bereavement.

It is with regret that we have to record the death, at the age of sixty-three, of Mrs. A. Howard, the beloved wife of Mr. James Howard, of Pitt Street, Norwich. The deceased had been in failing health for some time, but the end came somewhat suddenly. We feel sure that all who have come into touch with Mr. Howard will join in sympathising with him in his bereavement. Mrs. Howard, who was much respected, was a daughter of the late Frank Willis, a Norwich fancier of some repute in the last century, being at that time a large breeder and exhibitor.

Mr. A. Barnley, Denton.

We are sorry to announce, writes Mr. W. Hopwood, sec. Denton C.B.S., the death, at the age of thirty-five, of one of our noted fanciers, Mr. A. Darnley, who passed away on May 14, after a very short, but painful illness. He leaves a widow and child to mourn his loss, and our deepest sympathy goes out to Mrs. Darnley in this her sad bereavement.

Mr. A. Yannock, Mauchline.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. A. Wyper, Auchinleek, that I have to announce the death of our respected vice-president, Mr. Arthur Yannock, who died at his home in Mauchline on May 14, and was interred in the Mauchline Cemetery on May 16. I offer in the name of his brother fanciers of the Cumnock and Dis. C.B.S., our sincere sympathy to his sorrowing wife and relatives. He was a keen fancier and loved a good specimen of any variety, and at all times wrought hard in the best interests of the society.

An Important Matter.

The hon. secs. of several specialist clubs request us to ask societies desirous of patronage to apply as quickly as possible, as in many cases the patronage will be allotted at next meeting; see Twittering in another place.

Gardener "Defeats" Missel Thrush.

On May 8, while one of the South Shields Park gardeners was engaged in removing the partly-built nest of a Fieldfare in the Marine Park, in order to prevent damage by the boys, the bird attacked him in a ferocious manner, and he had some difficulty in defending himself. The bird was eventually beaten off with a hoe! [We expect the bird would be a Missel Thrush.—Ed., "C.B."]

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

To encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, Cage Birds is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

Cage Birds suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in Cage Birds, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of Cage Birds will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

A Pied Sparrow.

On May 4, near to Birmingham, I saw a House Sparrow with one pure white wing and the other partly white, writes Mr. Chas. MacDonald, of Coventry.

Hen Kills Thieving Jackdaw.

At Sutterton, a hen was in a garden with her newly-hatched brood, when a Jackdaw pounced upon a chick. The hen gave battle at once, and a sharp encounter ended in the Jackdaw being killed.

An Ancient Goldfinch.

Mr. J. Cooper, naturalist, of Birmingham, informs us that he recently stuffed for Mr. E. Hingley (Brierley Hill) a Goldfinch which had died at the age of 18 years. This is a record age in Mr. Cooper's experience.

Glasgow and West of Scotland Ramble Postponed.

Members and friends please note, writes Mr. A. K. Chalmers, sec., that the ramble of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Bird Club, arranged for May 23, is postponed; notice will be given in due course.

A Scottish Scandal.

A Glaswegian reader sends us a startling charge against a British bird exhibitor of some notoriety. He alleges that a certain bird has been faked by him, and shown at five different shows under three different names. The bird has been disqualified twice for trimming, though the judges took no notice, but waited till protests had been lodged by other exhibitors. Hot stuff—eh? if true.

To-day's Combined Ramble.

We hear that the L. and P.O.S., also the City and Suburban A.C.B. will join the National British Bird and Mule Club for their annual ramble this Saturday (23rd inst.), to visit Clandon, in Surrey. The ramblers have permission to go over Lord Onslow's estate. Morning party leave Waterloo (South Station) 9.20 o'clock, afternoon party (South Station) 2.15 o'clock. Book to Clandon. Luncheon at Temperance Hotel, Merrow, and tea at Station Hotel, East Horsley.

Congratulations from New Zealand.

I have just received the Birthday Number of Cage Birds, and feel I must write to congratulate you upon such a splendid issue—the Coloured Plates are extra fine, and the supplement is splendid. I have been a reader of your paper for the last six years, and must say it has been a great help to me, and I always look forward to receiving it each mail (it is sent out to me by my people at home). I wish Cage Birds many more years of success.—E. V. Clay (Auckland, N.Z.).

Bird Music by Telephone.

Two naturalists in Hertfordshire, says the "Daily Mail," have succeeded in transferring the song of the Nightingale from one village to another by means of the telephone. The distance between the feathered songster and the listener was about three miles, and while the high notes were not transferred, the "deep throb" carried well. It is pointed out that the telephone receiver was quite a hundred yards from where the bird was singing, and had it been possible to place the receiver within fifty yards of the bird a very fair rendering of the song, it is believed, would have been conveyed across a much greater distance than three miles. [Words fail us!—Editor, "C.B."]

COUNTRY RAMBLES

The following rambles have been arranged. Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not. Radcliffe C.B.S., May 24, meet Town Hall, 2; Clapham C.B.A., May 24, to Effingham Common, train from Waterloo 9.55; Sunderland C.B.A., May 23, to Corbridge, train leaves Sunderland 1; National British Bird and M.C., City and Suburban A.C.B., and London and Provincial O.S., May 23, to Clandon, Merrow and E. Horsley, trains from Waterloo, 9.20 and 2.15; Great Horton Good Intent O.S., June 6, to Bingley, meet under clock outside Midland for 2.30 car; Openshaw Gorton C.B.S., to Marple, etc., May 31, meet Gorton Station for 2.30 train, or Guide Bridge 2.30; N. Liverpool C.B.S., May 31, to Kirkby and Simonswood, meet Walton Church, County-rd., 10.30; Glasgow and W. Counties Norwich Club, May 30, to Bridge of Weir, train from Central Station 3.5; Halifax C.B.S., May 25, to Blackburn Valley, meet at G.P.O. 2.0 for West Vale car; S.W. London C.B.S., May 24, to Bookham Woods, train from Clapham Junction L. and S.W.R. 10.0, meet at Arding and Hobbs' corner 9.30.

THE PATRONAGE OF SPECIALIST CLUBS.

Societies desiring the patronage of the following clubs should apply to the respective secs., stating date of show, number of classes, and judges: Northern Border and S.F.C.C., M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Road, Newcastle; Midland Counties Y.C.C., W. Wells, Helmside, Erdington, Birmingham; Norwich P.H.C., F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Barnsley; Northern C.C., Geo. Dobson, 103, James Street, Blaydon-on-Tyne; Northern Norwich P.H.C., F. W. Laidlow, 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Yorkshire and Lancashire British Bird and M.C., T. H. Inman, Thornbury, Bradford; Northern Y.C.C., R. Tindale, 6, Gill Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Green Canary Association, F. Handley, 23, Coventry Road, Wavetree, Liverpool; Cinnamon-marked Y.C.C., R. Garnett, 32, Carr Lane, Windhill, Shipley; closing date, June 5; National Green-marked Y.C.C., J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds. Fife and Kinross Plainhead Club, A. Dickson, 37, Adams Terrace, Kelty; closing date, August 1. Yorks C.C. of Scotland, W. Priest, 6, Orchird Street, Partick.

MODERN CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS FOR THE NOVICE.

By THOMAS LANE (Barnstaple).

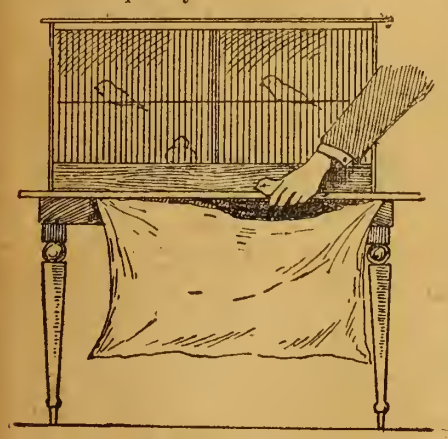
WHEN about seven weeks old I put them into a flight by themselves, giving milk sop and less egg food. If I have a large enough number I separate the young cocks from the hens, as I find the latter are not so strong as their brothers, who generally "boss" the food drawers, and in other ways annoy the ladies. This is liable to retard their growth. They remain apart until they moult.

For the moult I put them up in twos. But if I can find sufficient room I put the Crests by themselves, and also the best Crestbreds, or they may get their head feathers pulled out when quarrelling over the egg food. During this trying time I keep the birds as warm as possible, avoiding all draughts, and feeding them more liberally. In addition to the egg food and milk sop I give them plenty of mixed seed, and more hemp, adding a good supply of linseed toward the end of the month. This will give them a good gloss.

I give the birds daily use of the bath, as this helps them to get rid of their old feathers and produce a longer growth of new. I do not darken my cages, but draw down the window blind when the sun's rays are shining into the room. Breeders with bird-rooms facing south have an advantage over those whose rooms face north, inasmuch as the warmth from the sun helps the birds to get the moult over more quickly.



Mr. Lane's Pillow-case Drying Device.

We now come to the most interesting time in the novice's experiences—namely, show time. He should, if possible, attend one or two near home. He will there pick up a deal of valuable information if his variety is on view, regarding the good and bad points of the breed. If he has bred or even bought a good one he should trot it out, not hide his light under a bushel. Try the bird in the novice class—it may win. If it does don't get excited, or offer to stand drinks all round—you will want the prize-money before long to enable you to enter your "crack" at another show. But, of course, you may not win—but over that I will draw a curtain. The cash from your first win will come in useful if you have decided to show your bird. See to it that he is in the pink of condition, so that he may be sure to catch the judge's eye.

If necessary, the bird must be tubbed. This should be done four or five days before the show, and to be successful the bird or birds should be washed in the following manner. First get three bowls of hot water. To each bowl add a little powdered borax. This will soften the water admirably. Next place a piece of the best curd soap on the right-hand side of the first bowl, and also a badger hair shaving brush. During this time you should have a clear, bright fire. Get some clean warm drying cloths ready, and also a pillow-case to lay the bird in after washing. This is hung up on the drying cage before the fire. (see drawing.) Everything ready, catch your bird, hold him gently but firmly in your left hand, placing his head between your thumb and fore-finger. Do not be nervous, it is likely that you will drop him into the water. Never mind if you do. Whip him out and try again. You will have learned something, and the tyro will not gain experience except by occasional mistakes.

Now begin by dipping the shaving brush into No. 1 bowl, rubbing it well on the soap to get a good lather. Start by washing the under parts of the bird—that is of the wings and tail, using plenty of soap to get the dirt out and plying the shaving brush in the same direction as the feathers lie. Now turn the bird over and wash the back, finishing the head and neck last.

This done to your satisfaction, rinse the bird well in No. 2 bowl, getting all the soap out of the feathers, and finish off in No. 3 bowl.

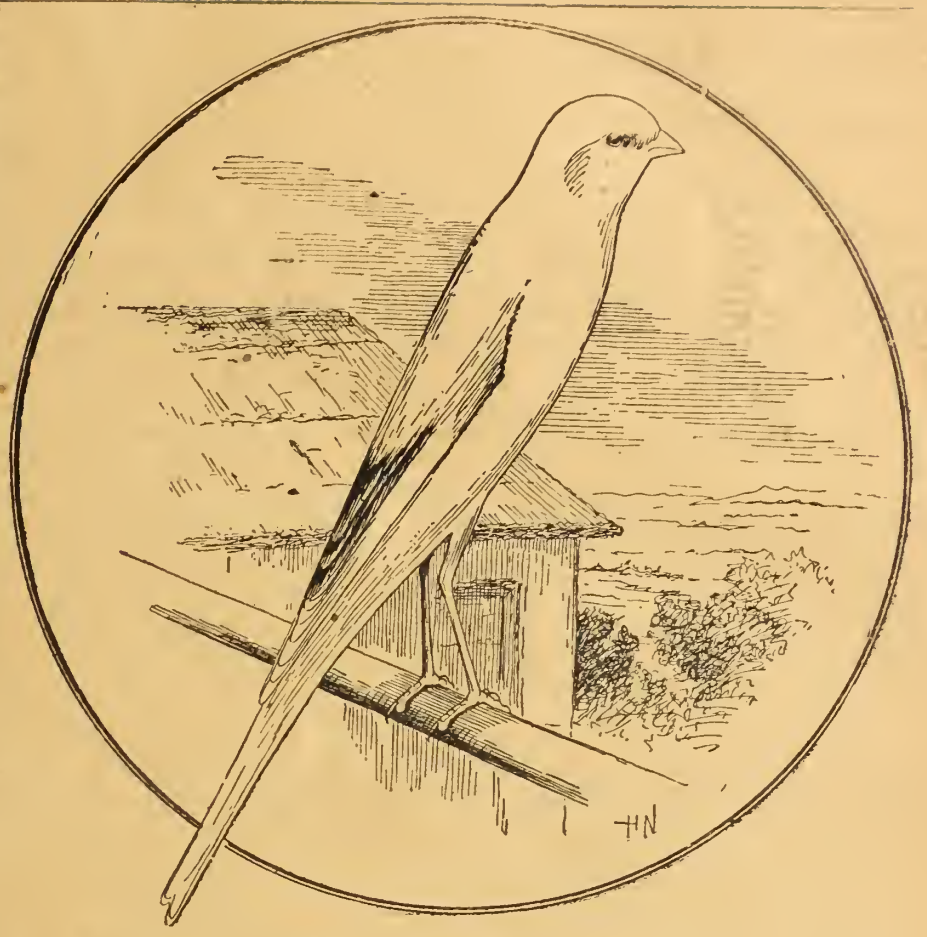
The Use of the Pillow-case.

Now take a warm drying cloth and take off as much of the moisture as possible, dabbing gently in the direction of the feathers. Then put the bird in the pillow-case before the fire, taking care the latter is not too hot, or else the feathers will dry too quickly, which will cause them to curl and become harsh and hard.

When the head is nearly dry (and it always dries first) take the bird out of the case, and if a Crest, gently groom the head feathers from the centre, using a No. 3 badger softener and brushing the feathers in the right direction. If a Crestbred, brush the feathers well over the eyes to give them the browing or lashing so essential to a winner. Finally, put them into the drying cage to finish off. The latter should have a piece of flannel on the bottom. This keeps the birds warm until they are dry and hop on the perches.

Next morning the bird should be lightly sprayed with water that has been boiled overnight, or in clean rain-water. The best time to wash your birds is in the evening, letting them stay overnight in the drying cage, returning them to the bird-room in the morning. Don't let your drinkers overflow with water just before sending to the show. The birds, after a hand-wash, will do all they can to spoil their toilet, and undo all your efforts to win the coveted First and Special.

In conclusion, I may say that there is plenty of room for the beginner in this grand hobby of breeding the Crested Canary if he will only stand to his guns. In a season or so he will find that both pleasure and profit can be derived from keeping and breeding this variety.



A Southern Yorkshire that beat the Northern Cracks.

The celebrated green marked cock, bred and exhibited by Mr. R. L. Crisp (Chelsea), and claimed at the Crystal Palace for £15. Among many other notable wins this bird secured 1st prize at the Bradford National, Horticultural Hall, and Crystal Palace Shows, also £2 special in the Finale of "Cage Birds" Coupon Competition.

OUR MOST POPULAR SONG BIRD: THE SKYLARK.

By W. A. LOTT.

One of the oldest and most successful keepers of this species gives his methods of management.

THE keeping of Skylarks has always appealed to me, and although I still keep a good variety of Britishers, the keeping, steadying, feeding, and showing of Skylarks come first, in preference to all others. I may be writing what is already known to the old 'uns, but the old Lark fanciers keep a lot of tit-bits of knowledge to themselves. Young fanciers should be encouraged to go in for Skylark singing, keeping, and showing them. Fanciers may think that there is nothing in showing a Skylark, so let me at once disabuse their minds upon the subject.

When Larks are fresh-caught in the autumn it is practically certain that they are English bred; that is, they have been with us practically all the year round, and to cater for them is fairly easy, as there is always at the time plenty of food; that is, plenty of wild soft seeds, of which they are very fond, and they will live a long time upon that fare alone. It does not fatten them up over much, and seems to be better than supplying them with fattening food and no exercise to speak of, instead of Nature's food with much exercise.

In the winter time a more generous food should be given, but it should be given with discretion according to circumstances. A bird hung outdoors all the winter will naturally want more heating food in order to stand against the rigours and changes of our climate, and, in that case, any of the standard foods as advertised in CAGE BIRDS may be given as a basis, with plenty of scraped carrot, boiled potatoes, or finely chopped green stuff; mustard and cress, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, and many other kinds of vegetables, seem to suit them admirably. I have been close to Larks in summer, autumn, and winter, and, with the aid of a field glass, have watched them marching up and down the furrows or rows of vegetables grown by the market gardeners near London, continuously pecking at the plants.

In addition to the above, a lively mealworm, spider, and even a very small slug, centipede, or ground insects will be extremely beneficial, and once a week a pot of well-soaked mixed seed, say, soaked for at least 12 hours. I must take the opportunity, as a good many other writers and fanciers have done, and continue to do, to advise the boycotting of the so-called German paste. I have come across Lark keepers, and they are still to be found, unfortunately, that keep their birds upon this stuff. Old customs die hard, but I hope that, as Pickwick said, there is no situation in life so bad but it cannot be retrieved. Some fanciers advise hard-boiled liver, scraped mutton, or beef. Of course, opinions differ, and will differ for all time, but I fail to see the equivalent of these foods in a state of nature; what can be found in England's broad acres to resemble the above articles I should be pleased to know.

Guard Against Over-Fatness.

I have found, to my cost, that Larks, like many other British birds having little to do, notwithstanding a good 24-inch runner, are apt to keep going to the food tin as they pass along to pick up a tit-bit, and so keep on week in, week out, until they get over-fat, and then, of course, comes the sequel—fits, etc. I was watching one of my Larks, a gem by the way, having a sand bath (slightly warm silver sand, or rather sea sand), and he died whilst spraying the sand about himself. On examination, the excess of fat over the whole of his body was remarkable, and would have gladdened the eye of a Lark pie enthusiast; a dealer in poultry would have been delighted if he could have had three or four rows of such festooned in front of his shop.

My own experience, where food possessing good sustenance is wanted, is that grated cheese (cream preferred) once or twice a week, and one mealworm every morning, will provide all that is necessary, but should the Lark keeper insist on giving his favourite meat, the common meat meal is the best form in which to give it. Catchers who catch Larks by the thousand for the market, poulterers, etc., and who keep them till they have a number that will pay to send to London or elsewhere, feed them simply on damp wheat and barley, so I always throw in, say, a dozen or two grains every week.

Most fanciers believe in turves for the cages; I give one occasionally, just for a change, but I find the birds really do not take much notice of it, they only tread it down. Larks in the open are generally in the ploughed fields; admittedly, they nest in the cornfields, but before and after the nesting season they are in the open fields, and not on the lawns of gentlemen's estates. They are caught in the winter in the open clayey fields, sleeping in the furrows and niches of the fresh ploughed land.

Keep Them Well in the Shade

Larks are very hardy birds when wild, as most fanciers know, but in captivity my experience is that it is necessary to be very careful of two items. The first is over-fatness, and the other extreme heat or direct sunrays; in nature they find the delicious coolness of the recesses in which our fields abound, or far up in the cooler regions of the atmosphere. So keep your Larks well in the shade during the height of summer.

A peculiarity with Skylarks, and, I may say, most birds that pass much time on the wing, is that they seem more amenable to cage life than many other species. If Skylarks, or any other kind of Larks, can have a decent long runner, they seem to settle down in quite a matter of fact way; a fresh-caught Lark I can get on with much better than, say, with the incessant fidgeting of the Redpoll, Siskin, Chaffinch, or other perchers.

I find the best Skylarks for size, carriage, and markings, are the so-called Snow Larks, but in reality these are Continental birds: that is, they come from Norway, Sweden, and various countries of Western Europe, and through stress of weather and want of food, migrate in thousands to England, to wait till more genial weather sets in. It is then that the poulterers and Lark catchers have their harvest, it is then also that the fancier, intent on finding a good show bird, should take advantage of the opportunity and select one or two good birds for the following show season. I generally send for two or three separate half-dozens at different times, select the best of each lot, and let the others go.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

THE FASCINATING PURSUIT OF MULE AND HYBRID BREEDING.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

FOR Bullfinches sunflower seed is substituted for the hemp, and this may also be supplied to your Greenfinches. Linseed should be used freely during the moult, but only occasionally at other seasons. During the winter, when freshly-gathered seed is not obtainable, give your birds as an occasional tit-bit a mixture consisting of maw, charlock, thistle, dandelion, and gold of pleasure seeds, allowing about a teaspoonful to each pair. This may be given twice a week, as may also a piece of sweet apple, as it is not safe to give green food after the frosts have set in.

Those who are trying for Mules must see that the Canaries, too, are kept in good condition through the winter. They should get a supply of egg food, say a teaspoonful to each bird, once or twice a week during the winter, in addition to their ordinary diet.

Wild Seeds for the Canaries.

It will be advisable, also, to get your Canaries used to the wild seeds, such as groundsel, dandelion, plantain, and shepherd's purse, for you will find these very useful when the young Hybrid arrives. Some Canaries, too, are very fond of ants' eggs when these are mixed with the egg food; in fact I have known some Canaries devour them greedily. Such birds should prove invaluable, for I believe we should stand a much better chance of rearing our Hybrids if they were supplied with a certain amount of insectivorous food.

Clean water should be supplied daily in thoroughly clean vessels, and all birds shoud be allowed free use of the bath. Cage bottoms, perches, etc., should be kept scrupulously clean. With such treatment of your birds there will be little trouble when the breeding season arrives.

The Canaries, too, must be brought successfully through the moult and then kept in good condition through the winter months. A litle egg food should be given once or twice a week, also a piece of sweet apple between the wires of the cages, substituting young dandelion leaves for the apple after the frosts have gone. Give your Canaries, at all times, their usual diet of canary, German rape, etc., seeds, and in addition to these get them used to the various wild seeds supplied to your Britishers, for you will find them very useful when the young Hybrid arrives.

Some Canaries, too, will not object to ants' eggs, and mealworms cut into small pieces, when these are mixed with the egg food; I have known many Canaries devour them greedily. Such birds should prove invaluable to the Hybrid Breeder, as I believe we should stand a much better chance of rearing our Hybrids if they were supplied with a certain amount of insectivorous food.

With such treatment of our birds as I have described in this and previous chapters we should encounter little trouble in inducing our birds to start breeding operations when the proper time arrives, and by the time these notes appear in print the more forward pairs among our stock will have commenced nesting operations, and, indeed, some will have made considerable advance. Many breeders are no doubt now anxiously awaiting the results from the first clutches of eggs under the tender care of the hens.

And here the real troubles of the Mule and Hybrid breeder begin. He must thus early prepare himself for the difficulties, and perhaps disappointments, which are almost certain to follow. It is of no use entering this hobby in a half-hearted manner. There must be a dogged determination to go forward notwithstanding all the difficulties we may encounter, till we have reached the goal of the breeder's ambition, and the living Hybrid stands before us as the pleasing result of our careful study and untiring patience.

Where the Difficulty Lies.

In attempting to produce Hybrids of any kind we are working contrary to the natural order of things, and herein lie its difficulties, especially when hybridising with two British birds, for not only are we pairing birds of different species, but these birds present us with another considerable difficulty in that they have been brought from the natural surroundings of their wild life and introduced into a more or less artificial life.

At this point I should like to warn breeders to use only those birds which have taken kindly to cage life. It is absolutely useless attempting to breed with a bird, such as we occasionally meet with, which is continually endeavouring to get out of its cage. Nothing is more annoying and disappointing to the breeder than to have in either his aviary or bird-room a bird which refuses to settle down. Such specimens should be given their liberty without delay, for they will be of little use either in the breeding-room or on the show-bench. I have liberated more than one for this very reason, among them being one of the biggest and handsomest cock Chaffinches I have ever seen—one indeed which I hoped would have brought many honours to my bird-room.

We will now presume that our birds, by proper care and treatment during the autumn and winter months, are in full breeding condition, and showing unmistakable signs that they are about to commence nesting operations. Even the young beginner cannot fail to observe these signs. It will be noticed that the hens are flying restlessly from perch to perch, uttering a peculiar "call" the while, in answer to the calls of her mate. A little later, perhaps, she will be very fussy with a few feathers which she has pulled from her own breast or back, paying repeated visits to the nest-pan, where she will make much pretence at nest-building.

Nor are the signs less evident in the case of the cocks. If the birds are separated by a wire partition the cock will spend the greater part of his time in close proximity to the wires, calling vigorously to the hen, and at times feeding her. Or if they are not separated he will, from a perch above the hen, pour forth his love song, at the end of which he will drive her about the cage in most ungentlemanly fashion, as if to warn her that it was time she was attending to her household duties.

A Mis'ake to Avoid.

As soon as these signs are observed the wire partition should be removed, and the hen be given a little nesting material in order to prevent her plucking herself or her mate. It will be a great mistake to keep your birds apart any longer when they are in this forward condition, as harmful, in fact, as to mate them before they are ready. Your hens will be laying before the cocks have been with them, and therefore the chances of an early success will have gone.

Nor does the trouble end here, for I generally find that when hens begin in this irregular fashion the irregularity continues through the season. When your birds, therefore, show by the symptoms I have described that they are ready for breeding lose no time in mating them, and supplying suitable building material.

Your Finches should be supplied with the disused nests of wild birds such as Linnets, Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and Bullfinches gathered the previous autumn. These nests should be pulled to pieces and the materials placed between the wires and on the cage-bottoms. Dried grass is also a favourite nesting material, and your Bullfinches may be supplied with cocoa-nut fibre, which may be obtained from old door-mats. For my Canaries I use only cow-hair which I get from a tan-yard near by, and which I can thoroughly recommend as an excellent nesting material. The material from the ordinary penny nesting bag, however, will be found quite suitable.

Having supplied your hens with the necessary nesting material your Canary hens will probably be sitting on their first nests of eggs within a fortnight, while at about the same time you will require to keep a strict watch for eggs from your British pairs.

One of the first difficulties when the breeding time arrives is that of saving the eggs. At no other period, perhaps, is the breeder confronted with so many troubles as in the early stages of his work, when he is securing the eggs and placing them under his hen Canaries to be tested. With six or seven pairs of Britishers up for breeding one's ingenuity is taxed to the uttermost, and one needs to be of an inventive turn of mind when dealing with this business of egg-collecting, or hopes will soon be shattered.

Most hens have the unhappy knack of dropping their eggs from the perches and even if eggs are laid in the nest it will be necessary to remove them as soon as possible as most Finches seem to take great delight in putting their beaks through the shell at the first opportunity.

Saving the Eggs from Breakage.

Numerous egg-saving devices have been tried and perhaps one of the best, where the hen lays her eggs in the nest, is the double nest-box, by which arrangement the egg passes through a small hole in the bottom of the nest into the box beneath, in which has been placed a layer of moss or cotton-wool to prevent the egg from being broken.

But the majority of hens do not deposit their eggs in the nest and here this device is clearly of no use. In such cases shut off your cock Finch when you are expecting the hen to lay and in the compartment where the hen is put a loose layer of moss on the floor; in this the egg will generally be lost to view and will thus be safe until such time as it can be removed. Care should be taken that the perches are so arranged that the eggs can drop only on the thick layer of sawdust or moss.

After many years of breeding experience I have come to the conclusion that the best and only safe plan is to keep a strict watch for eggs and to remove them as soon as possible. The eggs are generally laid between 6 a.m. and 8 a.m., a time when many cannot be with their birds, and in such cases the above devices will be found useful.

With your muling pairs it will be necessary to shut off your Finch each evening during the time you are taking the clutch from the hen; on the third evening place all the eggs under the hen and shut off the cock altogether until the young are reared.

A Pleasing Pet Ring Dove.

SIR,—I have a Ring Dove, flying loose, which bows and co-os to the cat and to itself in the looking-glass. It will fly to the elm trees some distance down the road, and we go and call it, when it will fly down on our heads. Strangers it will take no notice of. It "fights" at us, and has other amusing little tricks.

When Canary Breeding Pays.

SIR, Seeing in CAGE BIRDS that you would like to hear of more breeding records, I have 36 young from my first round (eight pairs), and 31 of them are on the perches. I have six hens sitting now, five hens on five eggs, and one on four. This is my second year of Canary breeding; last year I had 63 young from six pairs. I gained most of my knowledge from CAGE BIRDS, which I have taken now for nearly two years, and I wish "C.B." every success.

W. COOPER.

More Ladies Who Lost No Time.

SIR,—On the 19th April one of my Canary hens hatched three young; she only laid the three eggs. The three left the nest on the 10th, and she now has four eggs, and is due to hatch out on the 21st. I have kept the three babies in the cage, and both parents with them. The hen comes off her nest and feeds them. I think this is better than Mr. Bullen's experience.

MRS. A. BONNICK.

SIR,—I, too, have had a similar experience with my Roller Canaries to that of Mr. F. Bullen. My hen hatched two young out of three on the 17th and 18th of April, and greatly to my surprise on the 5th of May the youngsters were bundled out of the nest. On looking to see the reason I found one egg. So I put a clean felt and a bundle of nesting material close by, which was immediately used. I found a second egg the next morning. As this is my first attempt at breeding I took the advice of a friend and substituted dummies, but my hen would not go near the nest, and after four days I returned the proper eggs, since when there are two more eggs, and my hen is sitting quite tightly on them. I, too, should think the eggs are fertile, as my cock bird has been with the hen all the time. My two "babies" are doing well, and picking up for themselves.

Abertillery Fanciers Set a Splendid Example.

SIR,—I have to-day received my prize-money won at the last show held by the Abertillery and Six Bells F.F. and H.S. I think every credit is due to the members in paying the prize-money out, seeing that their last show, through the bad weather, placed them about £20 in debt. If what I have heard is correct, that the members have had to dip their hands down and pay 14s. or 15s. each to clear the debt, I must say that these are true fanciers, as many men would not do this, and go without prize-money won by themselves into the bargain. Now I appeal to all cage-bird fanciers to support them at their next show, and thus make a success of it. They are all working men, and cannot afford to keep paying a sum of money out of their own pockets to keep the Fancy in the district. Every success to their efforts, is the wish of GEORGE BROOME.

Robin Builds Nest in a Canary Cage.

SIR,—A Robin has built her nest and reared her young in a Canary cage at Grimsby. The porter of the Grimsby and District Hospital has, at his residence in Yarborough Street, an old disused Canary cage in his wash-house. A week or two ago he noticed a Robin paying frequent visits to the wash-house with materials for nest building. Undisturbed by the attentions of the residents of the house, the Robin made her home and laid four eggs. She soon became so tame that she accepted offerings of food from the members of the household. Two young birds were hatched in the cage. Mr. Robin now visits his family daily with food, which he pushes through the bars. The occupants of the house have become quite attached to their uninvited but welcome guests.

A Disaster with Closed Rings.

SIR,—I commenced Canary breeding last year for the first time. I put up one pair of Yorkshires, and reared eleven young out of twelve eggs. This year I have put up six hens, running three cocks with them. The first round came off about April 19—twenty-two fine youngsters. When at the last Palace show, I purchased three dozen closed rings, with instructions how to ring birds. I followed out same, ringing them at eight days. There was no difficulty about that. I rung eighteen. Two hours after I found rings all over the cages, every one stripped off. I rung them a second and a third time. That did it. All the hens refused to feed, or cover the youngsters. Well, the result is I have lost my youngsters, only saving two, one, the "hero," rung, the other not, but with the back claw sprained and pulled well forward, so I have tied it back to the leg.

I had five youngsters hatched yesterday (May 14), and I might add they will not see any closed rings. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS now for two years, and look forward to it every Friday morning.

Dandelion Heads as a Conditioner.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in testifying to the efficiency of dandelion heads as a conditioner, as I have got back the supposed hen mentioned by Mr. Steel, the writer of the article "Out of Condition, and the Way In," and it is in vigorous condition and full song, which is a surprise to me, as it was always supposed to be a hen.

J. CURRIE.

The Nightingale and Its Song.

SIR,—We are generally told when the Nightingales first arrive and begin to sing, but very seldom when they leave off! A correspondent at Sheringham last season advised some questioner to get there before the "end of July," otherwise it would be too late! Bechstein says they leave off in June, "generally about the time of the solstice." Another writer (Rev. J. C. Atkinson) says, "After the eggs are laid the bird only sings occasionally; after they are hatched, never" These varying statements seem hard to understand, but surely many of your readers who live in favoured quarters could say when the song ceases for the season.

I notice that one of your correspondents, a reverend gentleman in Suffolk, is especially favoured, as they breed by choice in his garden! How I envy him! Probably if he was asked to abstract a promising youngster from a brood and send it to where it would be valued, cared for, and made a pet of, the very idea would be considered outrageous! A prowling cat in the garden would not, of course, discriminate so nicely.

There are many suitable spots in Lancashire or Yorkshire for Nightingales to breed in, and where their music would be appreciated; the pity of it is they do not come!

Important Notice to Glasgow Bird-keepers.

Sir,—With reference to the attempt being made by the Fife Cage Bird League to obtain some concessions from the railway companies with regard to livo stock carriage, I havo been asked to makc arrangements for the meeting of delegates from the various Glasgow and district clubs.

I have fixed on Neilson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, for Saturday, May 30th, at 7.30 p.m., and as the matter is of great importance to all cage hird exhibitors, I trust to see a large attendance of delegates present.

Ardwick's Good Fancier.

Sir,—In your issue of May 9th, under the ahove title there appears a letter signed "Enthusiast," which for "puff and praise" I think would bc hard to beat, and if my memory serves me aright, this same gentleman, Mr. Robinson, was introduced to the Fancy with the sound of a trumpet only a very short time ago. Might I ask "Enthusiast" what this gentleman has done to have this special honour conferred upon him, and if he is the only good fancier in the Ardwick Socicty worthy of recognition? I don't know what the members think about it generally, but it is, in my opinion, an insult to those who have done quito as much and have the interests of the socicty quite as much at heart. With regard to his lectures on the Norwich Plainhead at the places named, I am very sorry indeed that I was not lucky enough to hear him and join his hearers in voting them as the best ever heard, as I like to hear a good lecture, if founded on practical experience. Who is this lecturer, however, and what is the result of his theory when put into practice? Can he be the samo Mr. Robinson who showed at the Manchester and N.C.O.S. show at Belle Vue, in the members' amateur Norwich section, seven entries and no firsts; also did he show at the Ardwick members' show early this year, where his birds again stood low down? I trust these few lines will cause "Enthusiast" to think before he rushes into print that there are other strong enthusiasts in Ardwick, who will not be carried away with the wind.

Can Finches Rear a Young Cuckoo?

Sir,—I feel I owe an apology to Mr. Steel for certain phrases in my letter in last week's issue. Having read Cage Birds 1914 Annual with great interest, I ought to have recognised his name as that of an expert on British hirds, a fact which I quite overlooked.

Might I ask Mr. Steel what forms the staple diet of an adult wild Cuckoo? I might suggest that it differed according to what birds act as foster parents; as it is helieved that a Cuckoo which is rearcd by, say, a Pied Wagtail, will almost invariably deposit its eggs next season in a Pied Wagtail's nest, so that the direct descendants of one pair of Cuckoos would have been reared hy the same species of bird. It is the same with other kinds commonly victimised, e.g., the Sedge Warhler or Hedge Sparrow.

Since Hardbills are uncommon victims compared with the above species and others allied to them; it may he that a Cuckoo falls back on one only when it can find no more nests of its own particular favourite in the neighbourhood, or at the right stage; it seldom places its egg among a clutch already partly incuhated. However, it is certainly a fact that Hardbills have been known to rear young Cuckoos.

C. H. Macklin.

Sir.—With all due deference to Mr. Macklin as a zoologist, I would like to point out the dissimilarity in the feeding habits of the Finch species as compared with the insectivorous species, which includes the Cuckoo, and the effects which follow any attempts to transfer one species to the other, a matter to which I have devoted much time and study. Firstly, the Finch family, without exception, by a process of regurgitation, supply all nourishment to their young in a more-or-less predigested state, and it varies from a creamy consistency at birth to a more complete and porridge-like mass when fledged, whereas the insectivorous species supply the food direct, minus any preparatory process. Secondly, without a single exception every attempt to get Finches to rear insectivorous species has resulted in failurc. Yet Mr. Macklin says that the food of nestling Finches comprises flies, green caterpillars, grubs, and any other soft food ohtainable, and asks, what more could an insectivorous species require?

Now, while awaro that insects are supplied to nestlings hy the parent Finches in a quantity which varies in the different species, of which the Chaffinch and Linnet may be taken as the extremes of maximum and minimum (I hase this calculation on microscopical examination of the crops of nestlings) yet if Mr. Macklin cares to experiment he will find that every attempt to foster such species as Flycatchers, Chats, Tits, Hedge Sparrows, or Wagtails by Finches, will result in failure, and this despite the three last-named being partly granivorous. The dissimilarity is illustrated by the fact that thousands of Finches are rearcd annually in confinement by hand and Canary foster-parents, minus any form of insect food, whereas it were almost impossible to rear an insectivorous species without insects. This, added to the fact that out of eight Cuckoo's eggs found in and transferred to Finches' nests, not one of the resultant young survived, was, and is still my reason for doubting the ability of Linnets in particular to perform the task.

The finding of Cuckoo eggs in Finches' nests is not a good ground for the assumption that the young Cuckoo can adapt itself to a regurgitative method of feeding, or that the parent will depart from its usual method of administration and nature of diet for its especial benefit. It is worthy of note also that though the various Finch species greatly outnumher the insectivorous, that the Cuckoo will, taking Mr. Macklin's computation, choose the latter as her victim ninety times out of a hundred. Can it be possible that she, like me, recognises the dissimilarity, and except in a few instances, shuns the unsuitable?

An Appeal for the Middleton and District C.B S.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to mako an appeal on behalf of the Middleton and District Cage Bird Society. This is very old established, but of late years has declined.

We have formulated a scheme this year which we should he pleased if all in Middleton or the district who are the least interested in ornithology would take advantage of. For the small subscription of 1s. per year, anyone may attend the meetings, shows, and lectures, but will not be entitled to exhibit. We are aware that there are a large numher of peoplo in the vicinity of Middleton who keep birds for a hobby, who would find this a great help to them. All assistance and encouragement will be offered to them. Our secretary, Mr. J. Hulton, 11, Grey Street, Middleton, is a very hard-working enthusiast, and would be pleased to call on any person who will drop him a post-card.

We should also bc pleased to welcome any fancier who would care to become a full member. We have a valuable silver cup, which may be won outright three times, not necessarily in succession. We have also opened a subscription list for a good trophy for competition at nest feather shows. I trust this appeal will bring us a few more new members, without which no society can exist for very long.

Young Feeding Young.

Sir,—Mr. Fred S. Stirk wants to know if any other fancier has had a similar experience to his own. Last year I had four young Yorkshires from one nest that I had to separate early from the hen, as she plucked them so. One of them was very small, so when it called for food the largest of the four would feed it, just like its mother. You kindly printed this experience for me in your good old Cage Birds last season.

The Champion Heavyweight of the British Wagtails.

Sir,—The following observations may he of use to some of your readers, as I notice a discussion on the subject. Pied Wagtails, length 7½in., tail measures half. Eggs, 4 to 6, greyish-white, spotted all over with ash-colour heneath warmer hrown speckles; size, .8 x .6. Grey Wagtail, length 7½in. Eggs, 5 or 6; greyish-white, softly mottled all over, with dull yellowish-hrown, sometimes having a few hlack hair lines at larger end; size, .75 x .55. Yellow Wagtail, length 6½ in. Eggs, 4 to 6, resemhling those of the Sedge Warhler, greyish-white, softly mottled all over with ash and yellowish-brown, often having a few hlack hair lines at larger end; size, .78 x .56. White Wagtail, length 7½in. Eggs, 5 to 7, usually not to he distinguished from those of the closely-allied Pied Wagtail, either in size, colour, or markings. I think Mr. Craig is right when he states that the nest found by Dr. Butler was a Yellow Wagtail's, as the Grey Wagtail's nest is always near water and is usually found in a cleft of a rock bordering a stream of running water.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

Sir,—The letter of "Old Fogey," inasmuch as it is mainly concerned with my physical and future welfare, naturally earns my appreciation and thanks. 'Tis good to receive an admission from one of the "Old Brigade" that many of my arguments in respect to the novices are well-founded. As Chairman of the Cardiff Society I agree I have a rare chance of tackling the vexed question of the novice, but if "Old Fogey" or others are anticipating my possibly endeavouring to reduce some of the novices to my way of thinking hy the gradual elimination of bits of skin and hair, etc., then I fear there is disappointment in store for them. Evidently "Old Fogey," like another of my critics, has accepted literally all I have written with regard to the novice. If so, then it is most unfortunate that I dealt wih the matter with so much realism as to effectively mask the satire and sarcasm doled out; or else their inability to read between the lines is such as would delight the quack who offers ointment guaranteed to shift anything, from little Lucy's ringworm to Aunt Martha's grand piano!

I do not begrudge the novice the small price he gets for his surplus. As a matter of fact, I have already dealt at some length with this particular point, which no doubt will appear in print in due course. My reference to the novice who exists in the Fancy merely to grab what he can easily, has nothing to do with the sale of surplus stock, hut merely refers to his behaviour as a member of a cage bird society, and as an exhibitor. 'Tis he who, when the annual show is up for discussion, wants to know where he is supposed to come in if there does not happen to be a leg of mutton, tin of corned beef, or a pair of blankets for the missus, allotted for the vhc, hc and c birds respectively in the class he intends competing in. And if the judge happens to leave his birds out of it altogether, he just "plays Hamlet" with the judge (who is a rotter), and the Committee, of course, have all done their level best to deprive him, his missus and kiddies, of the Sunday joint for which they were in training! Here is the type of novice "who toil not, neither do they spin," and merely exist in the Fancy for what they can grab easily.

Yes; I have purchased from novices useful stock birds from time to time; and have long since recognised that the very bird required is often to be found in the novice's room. Therefore I have no compunction in becoming a buyer when in need, and am pleased with the present opportunity of sharing my success with some of the novices. I agree I had a good price for "Welsh Queen," and also that I have sold winners and stock at good prices. Just how I accomplish this happy state of affairs you will learn in good time. I do not deny, and never have done, that there are breeders of Plainheads in Cardiff who "win again and again," and I heartily agree with "Old Fogey" that if we could only persuade them to write articles, what a treat it would be—infinitely hetter than for myself to devote some time and thought in a real desire to help towards progress, and to receive in payment a brick or two wrapped in silk handkerchiefs. "Old Fogey," will you kindly inform readers and myself in what way your contribution has helped towards progress, or even healthy argument? Why sidetrack any of the issues, or tread dangerously near personal and private affairs when I have opened up a fair field for you, and welcome honest criticism?

"Sweating" Hens and the Cause.

Sir,—In his article on "The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe," Mr. Tomlinson says "it is held by some that 'sweating' arises from the young hirds; hut I fail to see eye to eye with these fanciers." Now, sir, I have had a few years experience and have hred a good few birds in that time, and I say, without douht, it is caused by the young birds having diarrhœa, and that the so-called "sweating" is nothing more nor less than the excreta that is deposited round the sides of the nest. When the young hirds are in good health, the excreta so deposited is in a very thin skin which the hen can pick up and swallow, and so keep the nest clean; but when they have diarrhœa the skin is broken, and it is impossible for the hen to pick it up. I will give you a remedy which I have found very good. Mix say half-a-teaspoonful of arrowroot with an ordinary pot of egg and bread; also then pour half a teaspoonful of lime water in the drinker, and fill up with pure water. Do this for two days, and it very seldom fails to cure. I also give the hen a bath of pure water.

Harry F. Marsh.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Sir,—I wrote asking for an explanation of why the above club's annual meeting was kept so far back in the season. I said it was done for a purpose (which I gave) and which I will now prove was arranged amongst the faddists of the above club. Mr. Editor, I have enclosed a postcard which a member got from the secretary when he wrote for an explanation and asked if birds had to he rung this year, as the meeting was held too late to give members a chance with their first rounds of hirds. Now, although a motion was tabled last year, the above scheme could not come into force until after the general meeting, so why was this meeting not held earlier, to give all a chance who were paying their 2s. 6d., just the same as the faddists? The only consideration we get is to stump up 2s. 6d. for the benefit of the "Big Wigs." Although I knew myself two months back that the scheme was to he carried at all hazards, plenty in the club knew nothing about it and they haven't been given a chance; if the committee are fanciers they should know when the breeding season commences.

Mr. "Buff Green No. 2" can take notice that I never had any intention of taking advantage of the information I had received, for I had no intention of ringing my birds, nor ever will have, for I can prove that there are far more eggs broken in the nest by hens with rings on, and as to heing a safeguard of honesty in huying and selling stock I always take whom I buy from to be honest like myself, and so far I don't think I have gone far astray, which my showing can prove for the last seven years. I don't object to buying a good winner when I get a chance; and where is the fancier that would refuse a winner if she got it cheap? Mr. "Buff Green No. 2" I think you are "singing" for a scheme that you know nothing of. As to who huy winners in Musselburgh, this has nothing to do with the matter. I think Musselburgh can easily hold a lead for breeding winners and showing same; yes, and selling winners to some of the faddists to show as their own breeding, which some of them have done for some years back. If they didn't come personally they bought the birds through others. "Buff Green No. 2" is very smart if he can pick his winners in the first round. I never pick mine until well through the moult, if that is any information to him. The faddists have heen booming the ring farce for a time hack and some have been husy all along, but it doesn't become compulsory in the club until after the general meeting. The point is, why was this kept back so long? I am finished with the club, for it has heen a farce all along, and only benefits the first three shows of the season.

Yellow Green.

The postcard enclosed by "Yellow Green" reads:
Glasgow, May 3, 1914.
A motion was tabled last year to take a vote on the compulsory use of closed rings. This was submitted to the members some time ago on the voting paper. At the annual general meeting when the vote was announced, a majority was in favour of closed rings being compulsory, and the club therefore are bound this year to the result of that vote. Young birds competing for club prizes must therefore be rung. No doubt some embarrassment may be caused, but as the motion was noticed in the Press last year members who are following these notices of the doings of the club and those attending the meetings should not have had much difficulty in preparing for the use of rings. Kind regards. Hope you may have some good ones rung.—Your faithfully, E. Barron.

Several letters unavoidably held over.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellow's Hall, April 25. Mr. James Muir, president, judged a table show of British birds, and his awards gave every satisfaction: 1, 4, Hunter, Bullfinch and Linnet; 2, Penman, Linnet; 3, Leishman, Bullfinch. We have been fortunate in securing the following well-known gentlemen to judge at our show, Dec. 12:—Plainheads, D. Buchan, Falkirk; Borders and Crests, G. W. Brown, Leith; Brit. and For., J. Goodfellow, Edinburgh. Mr. David Buchan has kindly consented to place the awards at our F.F. show, July 25. Next meeting, May 30; intending members come forward.—Walter Clarkson, 130, Victoria Place, Falkirk, Sec.

DONCASTER C.B.S.

Meeting, May 9, Mr. Blanchon presiding over a good attendance. Decided to hold two F.F. shows; one on June 13 at Druids' Arms, Bentley. Birds staged 2 o'clock. Mr. Barker judge. Classes: Yell. Yorks, Buff, Yell. Nor., Buff, A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hyb. (old birds), Mule or Hyb. (F.F.), Goldf. or Bulf. Linnet, Greenf., Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, A.O. Hardbill, Softbill. Decided to have a trip to the Crystal Palace show. Mr. H. Tonkinson sec. Anyone wishing to go, please communicate with him at 70, Childer Street, Doncaster. Hope all members will make a good entry at F.F. show. There is a 10s. cash special given by Mr. Raynes for most points gained at 1st and 2nd F.F. shows and annual open. Also don't forget the Mr. and Mrs. Seel's challenge cup; each member is allowed to star three birds at each of the 3 shows as above.—G. Hunt, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE-U-LYME B.R.C.C.

Members sat down to a very fine tea at the Newcastle Cafe, after which a very creditable programme of singing, reciting, and speeches was gone through. Chairman and President (Mr. W. M. Hickman) took the chair; accompanist, Mr. Bryan. Mr. Simpson recited in a most dramatic manner "The Signal Box," "The Pop Shop," "The Waxwork Show," etc. Mr. Colclough sang "The Diamond King," "Logic," and "The Veteran Soldier." Mr. W. M. Hickman rendered "The Desert Star," "The Sailor's Grave," and the old favourite, "Bonny Mary of Argyle." Mr. J. Tomlinson (Sec.) addressed the members and expressed his gratefulness to Mr. Haddrell, who was the pioneer of the society, and suggested its promotion, etc. Mr. Haddrell suitably responded. The very enjoyable meeting was brought to a close after passing the usual vote of thanks to all the artistes and officers of the club. —W. M. Hickman.

LONDON C.B.A.

General meeting "El Vino," Piccadilly Place, May 12, Mr. R. L. Crisp chair. Several important matters in connection with the annual show were completed. There is every prospect of it being the most stupendous show ever held. The N.B.B. and M.C. are holding their club show in connection with the above, and are guaranteeing 26s. prize money in 59 classes, irrespective of the number of entries; also several other money prizes, all as referred to in last week's issue by the secretary of the N.B.B. and M.C. The Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League are also holding their club show at the above, and the secretary, Mr. A. Silver, anticipates to surpass the wonderful show of last year. There are 37 classes with 30s. prize money guaranteed by the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League, irrespective of the number of entries. The Canary section was under discussion, and exhibitors should prepare themselves to receive a startling announcement in the course of a few weeks. Mr. John Robson opened a discussion on "Hybrid Breeding," and Messrs. Crisp, Dewhurst, Johnston, Casterling, and Goymer ably assisted in the discussion which followed.—F. Knight, Press. Corresp.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting, Co-operative Hall, May 2, in conjunction with a table show of Finches and Buntings. Mr. Alex. Robertson, Cowdenbeath, judged the table show, and to his personality is due the grand entry which was put down. H.M. FINCH OR BUNTING: 1, 2, Grewar; 3, Campbell. F.M.: 1, Malcolm; 2, Rice; 3, Campbell. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Rankine; 2, Campbell; 2, Rice; sp. best Finch, W. Grewar, Hawfinch; best 2nd, B. Rice, Goldfinch; best 3rd, R. T. Campbell, Bramblefinch. Mr. F. McLaren presided at the business meeting; five new members elected. Classification for the sixth annual show was gone over and approved. We have again included a wild-seeds collection, and we hope members will make an early start to secure their specimens, and make this interesting class worthy of its inclusion. The president and sec. were appointed to make full arrangements for the fourth annual ramble to Pitreavie, June 25. Reports of the Fife League meeting were submitted. Our meeting booked for May 30 has been dropped in favour of the second conference of the Fife League, due in Dunfermline in June. Mr. Grewar will lecture before that body in place of our own meeting. Votes of thanks brought the meeting to a close. Robert T. Campbell.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting, May 13, at Headquarters, Marlboro' Hotel; chair, Mr. Hughes, before a splendid gathering. Two new members elected, and one nominated. Reliable names on books now total 50. All members were sorry to find that Mr. Murray was leaving Birmingham for Liverpool; he was one of the oldest members of the society, and was always helping forward the well-being of the S.B.O.S.; the best wishes of all members go with him. After a lengthy discussion it was decided that Mr. Baker be invited to judge the first young bird show in June, and Mr. Rog the July show. The vexed question of stopping money from entrance was again keenly debated upon, and it was resolved to charge 6d. per cage, with 2d. deducted towards expenses, six and over in a class, prize-money on sliding scale. Unanimously agreed to have a judging competition at the first show, entrance fee 2d.; member placing nearest to judge to take the whole of the money. Stewards elected for first show:—Messrs. Harding, Swindon, Baylis, Rees, and Constable. The appeal for specials was not in vain, and a fine number were promised in the room. The chairman hopes that members who were absent will remember this, as the specials will be allotted at June meeting. The superb silver cups of the society are for competition at these shows, so good entries should be assured. —J. Sheppard, Sec.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Meeting at headquarters, May 7, and a good number of members and visitors present, Mr. H. C. Humphries chair. The schedule of the June Y.S. show caused a deal of discussion owing to a proposal to cut out the classes for British birds. Eventually the proposition was carried, so the show will be entirely for birds bred this season, and we hope that the Canary fanciers will send extra entries to make up for the loss of the British birds. Other business through, the chairman introduced Mr. H. Norman, who had come to give us a lecture on "Canary management throughout the year." Mr. Norman said he had not come to dictate to us what we should or should not do; he was just going to explain his methods, which have always given good results, and perhaps anyone present who was not doing so well as he might be doing would see where he was going wrong, and be helped out of his difficulty. Mr. Norman then described his bird room, which is out of doors, and said he believed in giving all the fresh air possible, as it made the birds hardy and better able to withstand the strain of the breeding season. He also believed in giving plenty of green food, and thought it a great help in getting fertile eggs. Every phase of Canary management was touched upon and explained, and Mr. Norman afterwards invited questions, which many of those present took advantage of, and a very enjoyable debate followed. Replying to a vote of thanks, Mr. Norman said he was always pleased to come to New Cross. He had always found the members a keen set of fanciers, and wished us all a successful season.—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

BURNHOPE C.B.S.

Meeting May 16, Colt Inn, Burnhope, Mr. Rushton chair. Decided to give 25 classes at N.F. show, also that members must be half paid up or will not be allowed to show, which means old members must have 2s. paid, new members 2s. 6d. We have secured the rifle range for both shows. Mr. A. Burns elected a member. J. W. Robson.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

A committee meeting will be held in Edinburgh, May 30, at 5, at usual rendezvous. Members having names to submit for membership might forward these to the sec. Societies desiring the patronage of the club should forward applications as early as possible. Members of committee will be postcarded for this meeting, and a good turn-out is requested.—E. Barron, Sec.

S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

Meeting, New Gild Hall, Wandsworth-rd., May 14. A country ramble was arranged for May 24 in the Bookham Woods. Meet at Arding and Hobbs' corner 9.30 sharp. Train leaves Clapham Junction, L. and S.W.R., 10 o'clock. Members who were not at meeting please try and come, to make this ramble a success. Already we have over a dozen who are coming and we can do with plenty more. Anybody interested will be most welcome.—H. Freeman, Hon. Sec.

YORKS. C. & C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Council meeting, May 4, Mr. J. Dowling, chair. Present: Messrs. Williams, Magee, O'Toole, McEvoy, McDonnell, Farrell, Sholedice, Mulcahy, Fleming, Whitty, and Lattimore. Correspondence read from Messrs. Lynch, Wheatley, Morgan, and Keating. Decided that no bird be allowed to compete with two rings, as that would be a distinctive mark, and that all birds competing for junior and ring cups must carry the society's closed ring as per rules. New members elected: Mrs. O'Keefe, and Messrs. Lynch, Byrne, and Stedman.—C. Lattimore, Hon. Sec.

DUMBARTON C.B.C.

In the Courts.

Fined for Cruelty to Chaffinch.

A carman, named Geo. Kurley, who went catching birds for Sunday afternoon diversion paid dearly for his pleasure at the Guildford County Police Court, on April 24. He was summoned for having carried ten Chaffinches "in a manner likely to cause them unnecessary suffering." He was carrying a travelling basket in Shere on Sunday, April 12, when P.C. Streek, having his suspicions aroused by his manner, asked him in a friendly manner whether he had just got back. "I've been camping here for a few days and have a few things in the basket," he replied. But the constable heard the birds struggling in the basket, and told defendant to open it. Inside he found two long cages, in one of which there were ten Chaffinches, two of which were dead. Lime was adhering to the birds' plumage, and it being impossible for sufficient air to penetrate the basket, the birds were quite exhausted.—Albert White, R.A.C. guide, who helped the constable to release the birds, gave evidence, and defndant was fined £1 and 9s. 6d. costs.—"Surrey Times."

Country Rambles

GRANTHAM C.B.S.

The first ramble to Ropsley Rise, by permission of Mr. Fisher, took place May 17. Members present:—Messrs. Barnes, Starkey, Jackson, Lowther, Geeson, Brewin, Healy, Tebbutt, Ratcliff and Jackson, junr. Winding our way through the hills and hollows, conversation naturally turned on breeding results. None of our members except Mr. Barnes, who has 40 birds out, are going very strong; many clear eggs and dead in shell. Arriving at Ropsley Rise it was decided to walk through the woods about ten yards apart, and each report on any bird-life that was seen. Mr. Healy was the first to find a nest; this was a Jay's with three eggs, not above ten feet from the ground. Other finds included Blackbirds and Thrushes, one Blackbird's nest being quite out of the ordinary, so very nicely arranged, while in the thick of the woods Mr. Barnes called our attention to the Nightingale singing, afterwards pointing the bird out to those that were near. All had a very enjoyable time, and it was proposed that another ramble be held in June. Mr. Brewin photographed members present, also took a very good one of a Wood Pigeon's nest with eggs. Mr. Lowther also took a photo of Thrush's nest.—W. Ratcliff.

LIVERPOOL.

The first of a series of jaunts into the country was held on May 3. At the invitation of the Wallasey C.B.S., the members from the Liverpool Societies joined in a ramble to Thurstaton. A goodly number turned up, despite the wet outlook, and by the time we had reached Bidston Hill the sun came out and made us wish we had left our "macks" at home. A quiet stroll through Bidston Woods was greatly appreciated by the fanciers, who had not visited here before; the harmony of song made us loathe to leave, but friend Barker was soon on the move. Nearing Greasby we were met by Mr. Battersby and friend from the Aintree Society. This made up a party representing every society in Liverpool district, and a right royal time we had. A stop was made at Greasby, where the "filup feeder" was requisitioned. Crops full up, away we went over the common, where friend Caine took a series of photos, but the light being bad, same did not come out to expectation. The light-weight, Geoff Benson, astride the "Tetrarch," should have made a good plate. Near the common we found plenty of nests, especially those of the Yellow Bunting, which are plentiful in these parts. The majority had young ones; and we envied their good looks; didn't we wish our hens would feed like them. We wended our weary legs along through Sanghall Massie, and across the Marshes to Moreton, where we had the pleasure of seeing and hearing the Cuckoo; those that had any money left turned it over in their pockets for luck. The Liverpool fanciers entrained at Moreton for home. Thus ended an eleven hours' round of exercise and company with our feathered wild friends.—J. W. Metcalfe.

HUDDERSFIELD O.S.

The above society had a ramble on May 16, which was enjoyed by all who went. The number was rather disappointing, only 13 turning up. We met at the top of King Street, and took tram to Almondbury, when we met Mr. Atkinson, the leader, who took us through the Mollicar Woods, where the scenery was lovely. One would have thought we were a party of botanists instead of bird fanciers at this period. The first bird we saw was a Pied Wagtail; he was a beauty, too; we did not see many birds, as we were taken up by the beautiful tints of the bluebells with the sun shining in patches through the trees. A Warbler or two, a few Chaffinches, Linnets, Blackbirds, and Thrushes, were scattered about. After leaving the Mollicars we came to the "Cock," at Farnley, where we called to slack the dust we had got while tram-riding. Here one member was quite concerned about the pigs. Leaving the "Cock," we made our way through Woodsome Lea; here we came across a Waterhen and there was quite excitement for about five minutes. Then our general secretary had the pleasure of finding an occupied nest, it was of the Linnet, and contained four eggs well on the way to hatching. We eventually reached the "Woodman," Shunderbridge, where we rested and had tea. Mr. H. Cawthim performed prodigious feats on the piano. We here had a splendid tea. Mr. Atkinson was quite all right at the head of the table, but he is a poor hand at handing round fried eggs. Afterwards we wended our way through beautiful country to Stocksmoor, on to Shelley and Throngsbridge, round by Storths Hall, back to Farnley (the "Cock"). Then we returned a different way to Almondbury, and took tram for home. We had a glorious time, beautiful weather, splendid scenery, and right royal company—the outstanding humorist, Mr. Cotton.—B. H. Clegg, Assist Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

A most enjoyable day was spent in the country on May 17. The weather was lovely, but the muster was not so large as one would have expected. As the breeding season is now in full swing, no doubt many found it impossible to leave their pets, for Sunday is the only day on which a good many have an opportunity of having a good look round their stock. Arriving at Boxhill about 10.40, Ranmore Common was our first search, and proved very successful; our colleagues soon found something to interest them. Nests were plentiful, Linnets, Chaffiuches, Thrushes, Blackbirds, being mostly found. Mr. Taylor, Chaffinch 5 eggs, Blackbird 5 eggs, 2 Thrushes', Linnet 4 eggs; Mr. Richardson, Thrush 4 eggs, Linnet 3 eggs, Blackbird 4 eggs, Linnet 4 young; Mr. Cant, Blackbird 2 eggs, Linnet 4 young; Master Cole saw Linnet 4 young, Chaffinch 4 young, and some Thrushes'; Mr. Hodson, Chaffinch 5 eggs, (this was built in a lovely bramble just over head, and was much admired); Mr. Page, Linnet 3 eggs, Thrush 4 young, Linnet 4 young; Mr. Gnilbert, Thrush 4 young. Linnet 4 young, Blackbird with young; Mr. Hazell, Linnet 5 eggs. Thrush with young, Blackbird with young; Mr. Cole, Chaffinch with young, Thrush with young, Linnet 4 eggs, Blackbird with young; Mr. Tomsett, Thrush 4 eggs, Greenfinch 4 eggs, Blackbird 4 eggs. Leaving Ranmore Common we had a most beautiful view overlooking Westcott—a great distance below. Away we walked through Dorking to Holmwood, which was reached about 3 o'clock. Here we had our snapshot taken by Mr. Richardson, junr., after which we made a tour of Holmwood Common. Nests were not so plentiful, but we found a good many. Leaving Holmwood we adjourned to the Temperance Hotel, where a very nice tea had been arranged. Mr. Cant was elected as mother, and, my word, the Norwich men were a dry lot, the teapots (2) were filled again, and a very happy party left feeling very fit, and all arrived home safe and well. Thus our ramble finished, every one brown from the sun of Surrey.—A. G. Cant, Hon. Sec.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

BARE AND SORE HEADS (A. N.).—I am inclined to think that it is no disease at all, but that the birds are being plucked by one or more of the others, probably hen Canaries, stealing nesting material, and the hen that was sitting was doubtless more exposed to these attacks. If this is so, the only way to prevent other birds being attacked now these are removed is to discover the culprit, or culprits, by close observation, and remove it or them to cages by themselves. You did right to remove the attacked birds, but it would have been best to cage each separately until the new plumage was grown, in case either of these birds should be helping to cause the trouble. Allow them to bathe freely, and anoint the sore places on the hen's head three times a week with Lanocyllin, until the skin is healed. The new plumage will probably soon reappear now the birds are caged alone, but if there should be no signs of the feathers re-appearing in, say, three weeks hence, write again, and I will advise you further. Repeat particulars when writing again.

CAPTURING ESCAPED ROLLER (Mrs. L. B.).—Your best plan now the bird has been at large some time is to place an empty cage with the floor well strewn with a mixture of canary and hemp, a full water-bottle, and the door set wide open, in an open space in the garden near where you think the bird frequents, and place beside this another cage containing a Canary, to help to attract the stray bird. Sooner or later the bird will enter the empty cage for food and water, and with a little patient watching may easily be shut in again. Or you might place a "sct" trap-cage beside the decoy bird and thus save constant watching. Should this plan fail, and you see the bird about at times, you might do best to ask someone expert at bird-catching to take it with a limed twig. If there is any source of food supply accessible to the bird there is no reason why it should not live and thrive at least all the summer and autumn, if it is fortunate enough to escape cats, etc.

BALD ROLLER (M. W. Beasley).—Keeping the bird in the window is doubtless largely responsible indirectly for the trouble, by undermining the general health of the bird. Keep it further in the room, but in a nice bright and well-ventilated place, though you must be careful to avoid exposure to cutting draughts, excessive fluctuations, and fumes from burning lights. In addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk and lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and finally sprinkled with maw seed, every third day for a month. On the day following each time add to the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice. On each third day give only the staple diet and pure water. Give a little green food daily, and in variety, and allow bird to bathe as freely as it desires. You may slightly moisten the bare skin once each week with sulphur ointment. See that the cage is kept quite free from insect pests.

AS UNFLIGHTED OR NOT (Novice).—(1) Yes, a class for unflighted birds is intended for birds of the year, which still possess the first flight and tail feathers with which they left the nest. A young bird that has had its tail and flights removed for colour feeding is no longer an "unflighted" bird, and is consequently not eligible to compete in unflighted classes. Indeed, unflighted classes were made especially to do away with the necessity for tailling and flighting at the first moult. A young bird which has been tallied and flighted may compete with adults. (2) In the present state of opinion I should say it would be most inadvisable to exhibit a bird wearing a coloured celluloid ring, and advise you to remove same before despatching birds to show, and replace on return. (3) The most suitable covering for the bottom of a show cage is that which is generally recognised as the correct thing—viz., a handful or so of plain canary seed. If you tried to break up fresh ground by using something dissimilar to the general body of exhibitors, however innocent your intentions may be, your action would probably be looked upon with suspicion.

THREE POINTS (S. A. M.).—(1) It is not very unusual for young birds from an early brood to feed younger broods, and there is also an even chance of them feeding each other, when only a few weeks old themselves. This is probably all your young ones will do this season. I do not think there is any probability of them attempting to mate up as you suggest. Let them have as much room as you can for exercise, and when other broods come to be introduced to their flight they will find too much of other interests to concern themselves about nesting on their own account. When you have a number of birds in the flights you should as far as possible keep the sexes in separate groups. (2) You do not say how long the cock had been returned to the hen before she laid her second clutch of eggs, so I cannot say whether this was likely to be the cause of the eggs being clear. There are so many possible causes of such an occurrence that it is useless to speculate about it without full particulars of all the circumstances. Certainly it was not returning the nest too soon for the second brood, as the hen appears to have been in readiness for it. (3) As the hen is now sitting on her third clutch of eggs, and has already reared part of two broods of young, I do not advise you to return the cock at all after this clutch is hatched. This hen will have done enough this season, and you will do no lasting good to your own interests by trying to get a fourth brood out of her.

A LARGE BROOD (A. Hopkins).—It is just a trifle uncommon for a hen to lay a clutch of seven eggs, but not very much so. Numbers of similar cases occur each year. Less frequently they are all hatched, but when this does occur, and the cock will not assist in the feeding, as in your case, it is a good plan to transfer two or three of the chicks to other hens having small broods the same or nearly the same age, if any such hens are available for the purpose. If you have no other hens to assist in this way you might help a little if the hen appears to become unable to cope with the task, by giving the brood one or two feeds round in the morning and at evening, for which purpose you might find a filup feeder a handy article. Glad to hear you are having great success at the start of your career as a fancier by following the advice in our columns.

MOISTURE IN BEAK (Jacky).—The bird is probably troubled with a little catarrh, but you give me no particulars whatever to help me to form any definite opinion. Is the bird kept in a window, or exposed to direct draughts? If so, these things must be altered and the bird kept in more healthful circumstances, as indicated in reply to "M. W. Beasley" in this issue. Having done this, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of whisky, six of ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil to the water, and shake well together. Feed as frequently advised in this column, and do not hang the cage high up near the ceiling, as the air is less pure in that position as a rule. If the bird is not quite well at end of fortnight, write again, and give full particulars as to how you have been treating it hitherto.

YORKSHIRE HEN AILING (Garge). — Give a good-sized spray of green food—either watercress or the flowering tips of groundsel for preference—each day, and cut all hemp out of the dietary for the time being. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixperee, every second day for a week. After this give 20 drops of Chemical Food in the water for three or four days, which should suffice to set matters right.

TWO HENS (Lucy).—(1) Personally, I do not think an egg-eating hen is worth troubling with as a breeder unless she happened to be of very exceptionally typical qualities. Reforming them is the exception rather than the rule, though some are said to be cured of the habit by keeping one or two dummy eggs about the cage or in the nest for them to work off their vicious energy in trying to break them, or by filling a blown shell with a nauseous compound of mustard and cayenne mixed to a cream with a drop or two of vinegar, then stopping the blow-hole with a speck of beeswax or plaster, and placing the preparation in the nest for the hen to investigate. A specially-constructed nest-box, in which the egg rolls out of sight as soon as it is laid, is described in "Our Canaries." The only way out of these difficulties is to get one of these boxes, or to watch hen closely each morning she is due to lay, in order to secure the egg first, and having saved them so far, give them to another hen to hatch and rear the young. (2) I do not think anything is wrong with this hen beyond being late in coming into condition, and all you want is patience with her. Let her run with the Linnet regularly. She will probably settle down to business soon. You may give a liberal supply of half ripe seed heads of dandelion daily, and about every second day give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed.

ANOTHER BALD PATE (F. H. Sales).—See that the bird is kept under healthful conditions, and that it is not troubled with grey lice, which you would discover upon examining the bird itself, nor red mites, for which you must closely examine the cage. If either of these pests are in evidence, you must take the necessary steps to exterminate them as a preliminary to any other treatment. Having done this, treat the bird the same as you will see advised to "M. W. Beesley," in this issue. If this treatment does not have the desired effect, at once, continue repeating it for a fortnight at a time with an interval of a month between each course, until the moulting season, when the bird should recover its full plumage during its usual moult.

SITTING IN NEST (Richmond).—It is due to an abnormal cycle of reproduction, and all you can do is to exercise patience, which, unfortunately, sometimes requires to be of unlimited extent. It will often happen that a hen which acts in this way, if given a clutch of fertile eggs to hatch out and rear the young will carry out this business quite satisfactorily, and then follow it up by going to nest on her own account, and completing a normal cycle of reproduction. In other cases the trouble is much more obstinate, and lasts a full season or more, in spite of all efforts to correct it, I would advise you to adopt this course and when she has reared the young if any are forthcoming, or when the eggs have sat their full time in the other event, mate her with a vigorous young cock in stout song, and let her try again. You may add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the water for three days, but beyond this treatment is of very little use.

DIFFICULTY IN PERCHING (Novice).—I should imagine the bird's toes are deformed, or the claws much overgrown, but you give no particulars on which I can found any definite opinion. Examine the feet to see if this is so, and at the same time bathe them clean in a solution of boracic acid—a teaspoonful of the acid in a saucerful of warm water. If the claws are overgrown, trim them back to a reasonable length. If the feet seem all right, add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water daily for a week, and meantime write again and give more particulars about the bird, and the length of time it has been in this way. Should you find the toes deformed, see reply to "S. A. M. James," in this issue, for treatment.

HANGING FIRE (J. Douning).—Are you sure about the sex of the birds? Possibly the supposed cock may be a hen. If they are a true pair they are very backward in coming into condition, and your feeding will not help them along much. Try giving, in addition to the staple diet, a small teaspoonful of egg food with a third of this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a young growing stool of dandelion, or a liberal supply of the half-ripe seedheads each day. You may add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the water for two days. Continue above feeding for two or three weeks if necessary, but you may reduce the extra items at once if the hen begins nesting in less than that time.

PROTRACTED MOULTING (H. J. H.).—As the bird is kept in a wire cage you must be careful to see that it is not exposed to direct draughts or extreme fluctuations, as well as avoiding hanging it in a window. Then your method of feeding is not at all suitable, and is calculated to increase this tendency to constant moulting. Keep bird in a fairly equable place, and do not hang over or near burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight or so, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, and [illegible] seeds, and also a morsel of banana. Give two leaves of dandelion daily, and let the bird bathe as freely as it desires. In the drinking water add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day until the feathers cease dropping.

LAYING BEFORE MATING (N. E. C.). It is rather unfortunate that you delayed getting the fresh cock too long. If the cock arrived before the hen had completed her clutch, and he was in good, robust condition, your proper course was to put him with the hen at once, when you might possibly have had one or two of the eggs fertilised. If you did not do this, and the hen has not been previously mated this season, let her sit a week, then remove the nest and eggs, add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a pea to the water for two days, and then mate her in the usual way with the fresh cock. If, however, she was mated with another cock in fair condition a few weeks ago, it might be worth while allowing the eggs to sit their full period and see what happens.

MAKES SUCKING NOISE (Young Starter).—(1) The hen has probably been exposed to cold draughts or extreme and rapid fluctuations. In addition to the staple diet, give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of tincture of lobelia, syrup of tolu, ipecacuanha wine, and syrup of squills. This should suffice to set matters right if the trouble is not of long standing. (2) Goldfinch query should have been written on a separate sheet, as it goes to a different expert. See Mr. Norman's replies next week.

NO PROGRESS (E. C. J.)—(1) You omit to say whether you have put the birds together, or in what way things have come to a deadlock. Have the hens built nests and begun to sit on them without laying, or how do matters stand with them? Possibly they are backward in condition. See second part of reply to "Lucy" in this issue and treat your birds the same, giving a staple diet of plain canary seed, and on the alternate days, between giving the niger, etc., give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, and millet. Also give two leaves of dandelion daily in addition to the half ripe seed heads. (2) Bathe the foot in a luke-warm solution of extract of Wych Hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water—for a few minutes, then carefully prick the blister with a clean needle, gently press out the contents, wash clean again in the solution, dry gently, and anoint with Lanocyllin. Repeat the anointing daily for a few days, but not the bathing. See that the perches are made of soft pine wood, and that they are of a proper size and shape, and securely fixed.

DIFFICULTY IN VOIDING (A. C. H. P.).—The symptoms you describe are due to constipation. Possibly you do not give quite enough green food to counteract the constipating tendency of the egg and biscuit you use. Give a rather more liberal supply for a time, and give preference to watercress, flowering tips of groundsel, or crisp young lettuce. Also see that your hemp is sound and sweet in the kernel. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, for three consecutive days, and after this give 20 drops of Chemical Food for a day or two. No other treatment should be necessary.

DIFFICULT BREATHING (B. W. Sayer).—It is most inadvisable to attempt breeding with a bird in this condition. Cage it separately, and keep it in a fairly warm and cosy place quite free from draughts, and sudden or extreme fluctuations. You need not overheat it. Just keep it on the cosy side, and do not expose it to fumes from burning lights, or impure air. In addition to the staple seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed three times a week. In the water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and after this give instead five drops each of tincture of lobelia, syrup of tolu, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre, two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards for two or three weeks, as may seem necessary. If bird is not quite well at the end of, say, a month, write again, and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further.

ATTACKS OF WHEEZING (F. H.).—The cock is thoroughly out of condition for breeding, which is accountable for the clear eggs. It is quite useless expecting any results from him this season, so if you wish to avoid a blank season your best course is to replace him at once with a strong healthy young cock in good song. Cage this one separately, and treat it for a month as advised to "B. W. Sayer" in this issue. If the bird is not quite well, and the moulting stopped by the end of the month's treatment, write again, and I will advise you further.

HIND TOE TURNS FORWARD (S. A. M. James).—It is a defect that not infrequently occurs when there is only one youngster in a nest. As the bird is so young it should not be a difficult matter to quite cure the defect. First of all get a small piece of rubber tubing, the same as used on babies' feeding bottles, cut off a piece rather less than an eighth of an inch wide, which will form a tiny rubber ring. Now get someone to hold the bird whilst you pass this ring over the three front toes

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

held all together, and then, holding the hind toe back against the leg, pass on the ring up the leg until it is nearly as far as the end of the hind toe reaches, and leave it there. When the bird is released it will have the hind toe held rather far back by the ring. Let it wear this regularly for two or three weeks, then remove it, and at the same time put in its cage perches only slightly thicker than an ordinary lead pencil, nearly round in shape, and made of a nice soft pine wood. Leave these perches in the cage for several weeks, until the toes have acquired some strength of grip, and you will doubtless find that the bird's feet are quite sound and normal before the moulting season arrives.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

HYBRID BREEDING (N.C.H.P.).—It appears to me that your pairs are doing splendidly, and all you require is a little patience. It is early days yet for Hybrid pairs to nest; there are more Hybrids bred in the month of July than any other. Your feeding appears to be good, but I would advise you to try and procure more seeding wild food. Dandelion pods are now plentiful, so is groundsel, chickweed, shepherd's purse, and many of the grasses are in seed; these should be collected and given daily, or as frequently as possible, as they assist greatly in procuring fertile eggs. (2) Give your Linnet his share of these good things, and as an extra, a little crushed hemp three times a week, and you will also find a little soaked rape, teazle, and Finch mixture bring him along wonderfully.

GOLDFINCH AND CANARY (S. A. M.).—You should give your birds a nest pan and nesting materials when you see the hen running about with something in her beak, and bright and lively. Tie a piece of string on to the front of the cage, she will soon fray this out if she is inclined to nest. If you can keep her back until the beak of the Goldfinch is nearly or quite clear, you will be more certain of obtaining fertile eggs

GOLDFINCH IN MOULT (Dahlia Openshaw).—I am afraid you are not quite so careful where you hang your Finch as you should be, a draught will frequently bring about a moult, so will putting him in a hot room. All you can do is to keep him in one temperature, feed liberally, adding a little egg-food to his diet two or three times a week, and give him a course of Chemical Food. Put a small teaspoonful in his drinker, first boiling the water or it will not mix. If you place a piece of cuttle-fish bone between the bars of his cage he will probably wear his beak down himself; if not, you must continue to pare it down when required. Birds that over-grow their beak and claws are not generally of a very robust nature.

AVIARY MATTERS (A. Rookie).—I am glad to hear you are having no more losses in your aviary. It is large enough to hold a couple of dozen birds quite comfortably. I would advise you not to turn in the cock Canary, or I fear your prospects of breeding Hybrids will be considerably curtailed. (2) The cause of the pair fighting is that the hen is not yet fit. You had better part them for a time. Feed bed well, and give the bath frequently.

CAGES OR AVIARY (Richmond).—Generally speaking, a breeder is more successful with his pairs in cages than he is with them flying loose in an aviary, although I have known some cases quite the contrary. If your birds are doing well you had better leave them where they are; if you take any out now I would advise you to remove one of the cock Linnets and one hen Canary. With a cock Canary in with the hens, it is very doubtful if you will breed any Hybrids, but perhaps you are not very particular upon this point; any way, if you remove the birds, I suggest you will have the opportunity of breeding some then; your Goldfinch may prove troublesome; if so, he will have to come out. You could also pair him with a hen Canary in a cage.

SKYLARK NOT SINGING (Tobacco).—Are you quite certain that your bird is a cock? Because the action is very much like a hen bird that wants to be nesting. Cock birds that are in good condition and healthy as you say yours is should be singing at their best just now, in fact they should be bursting with song and always on the move. I would advise you to feed less highly, and try change of scene, that is hang the cage in quite a different position, and if you have another cage of quite a different pattern move the bird into that, and then in a few days change again.

GOLDFINCH IN NEW HOME (Gold Feather).—Your recent purchase has been kept so long in the little cage that the hop from one perch to the other has become a confirmed habit, and when you have placed him in a big cage he is practically "lost in it." He will no doubt "take" the perches properly in time, but I would suggest that you alter them to accord somewhat to the conditions of the old cage. To put the bird into a large cage for the first time in his life with strange perches has put him out of his stride. You can gradually alter them when he is used to the change. (2) No, it is not too late to put up a Goldfinch and Canary, there is plenty of time for a couple of nests.

HAWFINCH WITH OTHER BIRDS (H. S.). Hawfinches are generally kept by themselves, but I have never found them to be particularly quarrelsome, although there are some much more tractable than others. I once had one that was mortally afraid of a Reed Bunting who used to bully him accordingly. What you should do is to turn him into your flight with the commonest bird first and see how he behaves, but even if he is a bit "nasty" they can easily get away from him if the flight is of good size. (2) Waxwings are greedy birds, and not particularly clean, they require constant attention, and for that reason are best kept by themselves. If you are particularly anxious to give him a companion in a flight or aviary I should feel inclined to put in one of the larger softbills, say a Song Thrush. If I knew your accommodation and the birds you have in stock I might be able to assist you, or suggest something else.

WHAT ARE THEY? (Devonian).—You were unfortunate in removing the Linnet just as the Canary was about to lay. It is possible that he had already fertilized one or more of the eggs. You do not say if the Canary cock you introduced was a clear or not, or what the young look like. If any have dark skins and he is a "clear" the chances are such young ones would be Hybrids, but on the other hand if they are all clear it is more than probable that they are Canaries. If you are still in doubt and will send particulars of both young and old birds I shall be pleased to assist you.

BULLFINCH ILL (Doris Violet). — There is evidently something just a little bit wrong in your treatment of the Bullfinch. I would advise you to discontinue the hemp seed and give a little sunflower every day, and about twice a week soak a spoonful of rape seed and teazle. This latter seed should be added to the stock mixture, let it take the place of the hemp. He should also have more wild food. Collect a bunch of seeding grass chickweed, shepheard's purse, etc., and give him daily, also soft fruit as it comes in season. With this treatment you should be able to keep him in health, providing he has cage room, and be allowed to bathe.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

PRETTY SEED-EATERS FOR CAGE (Gofidus).—(1) Cordon Bleus, Firefinches, Gold-breasted Waxbills, Lavender Finches (all 3s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. pair); Orange-cheek Waxbills (3s. 6d. pair), Avadavats (3s. pair), Green Avadavats (6s. to 10s. pair). The above would be sufficient for your cage—that is, for the birds to have ample room for exercise, etc., without encroaching on each other. Canary, white millet, millet sprays, green food, water and grit will about meet their simple requirements. You would find Nutshells "Avadavats" and "Waxbills," 2½d. each, post free from our manager, a great help. (2) I never care to use the word impossible in such matters, but the breeding of Red-crested Cardinals in a cage indoors is improbable, though they are frequently bred in roomy garden aviaries. About 15s. pair.

AVIARY QUERIES (A Novice).—I should only get one pair of Cockateels to begin with. You can have two or three pairs of Budgerigars and one pair of Black-cheek Lovebirds. This would give you a nice variety, and all should be prolific once they have settled down. Zebra Finches are often reared on seed and green food alone; they do not require artificial heat. However, I do not consider it safe to keep Finches and Parrakeets, as above, in the same aviary.

GREY PARROT AILING (Gun).—It would appear as if the bird had been somewhat scared of late (during your absence), and you must be very gentle and quiet while attending to its needs. It is more than probable that the spraying, with cold winds prevailing, caused a chill, which your treatment helped it to throw off quickly. Use a "Mist" sprayer, and only lightly damp the plumage at present, deferring a thorough spraying till really warm weather sets in—at present use tepid water. Diet.—Seed mixture: Two parts each canary, white millet, and white oats; one part each paddy rice, hemp, white maize and shelled nuts (various); half-part sunflower seed and a few chilies. Supply ripe fruit daily, and at intervals such as plain biscuit, stale crusts, sponge and plain cake, and green food. Keep grit and cuttlebone in the cage, also a piece of a branch for beak exercise. Continue the use of the byno-phosphates, and give the Dinneford's Magnesia once a week. You can repeat the stimulant if similar symptoms occur. Give daily six to ten drops of cod liver oil on either bread, plain cake, or biscuit, according to the bird's taste—traces of neglect or improper feeding linger long. In the case of the development of any further unfavourable symptoms, repeat query with full details at once.

MOCKING BIRD (T. C. H.).—I assume that in addition to the soft food mixture you are giving some live insects, and I should also offer it a little ripe banana daily; later, as they come in season, give a ripe cherry, plum, etc. Stir five drops of castor oil into the soft food mixture for one or more days, i.e., till the bowels have been fully relieved. As soon as this occurs, stop the castor oil and put in the soft food similarly eight drops of cod liver oil daily for a month or longer. If you have any garden, capture spiders, small beetles, live ants' eggs, and smooth caterpillars for it, and if it is tame enough to be let out of its cage for a fly round, such will greatly benefit it. Of course, if you can't get the insect life named above, you must give it a couple of mealworms twice or thrice daily. The addition of a little grated raw carrot to the soft food dish will also be of benefit. Three drops of either brandy or whisky to the ounce of drinking water may be given for three or four days; then every other day for a week, when it should no longer be necessary.

ZEBRA FINCH (Molesey).—The hard substance is evidently the result of some injury; there may be a thorn or something in the substance, but if you can't find anything of this kind, then continue to bathe it with hot water (not hot enough for discomfort) to soften skin and thoroughly cleanse; dry with a soft cloth, and then paint with tincture of iodine. Do this daily so long as skin remains sound. I expect the bird will lose at least one toe. If it appears to be developing into a growth containing pus at any period, then stop the tincture, but continue to bathe and anoint with a little spermaceti ointment, and as soon as possible exude the pus by gentle pressure. Well cleanse, and anoint with a little zinc ointment. Keep the bird's bowels moving quite freely by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful) in the drinking water, and in between put syrup of phosphates in the water.

CANARY HYBRID (C. S. G.).—The Grey Singing Finch-Canary cross usually produces sweet songsters, and these have a value; the latter depends largely upon their talent as songsters. It should, however, be worth 7s. 6d. to 10s., as they are mostly very handsome, though clad in grey and white, with a few stained with yellow.

BUDGERIGAR DYING (W. H. B.).—Your dietary is quite satisfactory. It is a pity you did not send the body of the bird for post-mortem examination. The only cause I can conceive is that during the period you name, we have had a very variable temperature, and your birds have been subjected to rapidly changing extremes, which, of course, is bad, even for such hardy species as Budgerigars. It would improve your aviary materially if you covered half the roof glass over with netting, also if you could extend the flight along one end so as to bring the flight into direct contact with the front window, which should be made to open. It is the extreme day heat which is making your birds soft (producing moult), and consequent chills at night. You must have every available window open on hot sunny days, so as to keep it as cool as possible, and then, if you close up most of them about 4 p.m., it will keep the day and night temperature nearer each other. However, if it be possible, the best solution of the problem is an outdoor flight, from which the birds could pass to the inner one at will. Budgerigars never need artificial heat; at the same time avoid extremes for them—your flight has, I take it, a glass roof for its entire width and length.

YELLOW-WINGED AMAZON (N. S. A.).—Continue to treat as per our previous reply, with this exception, that in lieu of the rhubarb, etc., mixture, give the following:—Get from chemist a pennyworth each of tincture of gentian and opium, mix together, then add six times the bulk of whiskey, and keep this as the stock mixture. Well shake the mixture before use. Add twenty drops of this mixture to the drinking water daily, and report progress in, say, fourteen days. The Chemical Food may be given soaked into a piece of biscuit, cake, scone, or bread. Continue the cod liver oil so long as the bird is at all thin or weak.

WHAT IS IT? (Grey and Pink Parrot).—It is the Australian Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. Give him a seed mixture of white maize, oats, paddy rice, canary, white millet, shelled pea nuts, and sunflower seeds, about equal quantity of each; well mix them together, and keep constant supply in cage. If he will eat it, give him a tablespoonful of boiled maize daily. Boil till soft, but grains should be whole, drain off all water, let twenty drops of cod liver oil soak into it, and when cool, supply to the bird. Give this till the bird is in good condition again and reasonably fleshy. I should put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day and on the other days just colour the water with Parrish's Chemical Food. He can also have dry crusts, plain biscuit, plain cake and various nuts. He should have continuous access to grit and cuttlebone. Report progress a month hence. He ought to do well with so much liberty.

IS IT DANGEROUS? (L. Smith).—I have not had actual experience with laurel with Budgerigars, but I should not anticipate any harmful results therefrom. For one thing, birds seldom touch laurel, and I doubt if Budgerigars would. It is a feature of many outdoor aviaries, and I know of one instance in which Madagascar Lovebirds cut up the leaves into strips, lined their nest log with them, and successfully reared young. While they did not actually eat the leaves, in the act of cutting up the leaves they must have absorbed the sap, therefore I opine the laurel will not harm the Budgerigars. I should not hesitate myself to put Budgies into an aviary containing growing laurel.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (T. Gould).—The seed mixture will meet the case, and the stopping of the boiled maize is quite in order providing the bird does not lose flesh. If this should occur, give a little for another six months, but not if it keeps fairly fleshy. You will also offer ripe fruit, and such as dry crusts, plain cake, biscuits, and various shelled nuts to vary the diet. Grit and cuttlebone must be continually in the cage. You are treating the water rightly. Now the warm weather is here, give it a light spraying with tepid water containing a little quassia essence, but watch it does not get a chill while the plumage is damp. About four years. About six to eight months. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses.

GREY PARROT (Parade).—If you repeat query and tell me how you have been feeding and treating the bird generally, I will give you a fuller reply in next issue. In the meantime, put half a teaspoonful of Syrup of Phosphates in the drinking water daily, and give ten drops of cod liver oil on a crust of bread, piece of biscuit, piece of cake, or anything of that character the bird will eat, once or twice daily.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

F. J. W. S.—Acute inflammation of the bowels was the cause of death, due evidently to some irritant material ingested with the food. Your diet seems too varied, and I certainly think you are giving too much green food. The German rape should be given very sparingly, linseed the same, and the egg food should be freshly prepared at each meal, particularly during the warm weather. Curative treatment when once the disease becomes manifest is almost impossible, for it is generally well advanced before symptoms are shown. A less liberal and varied diet I think should prevent a recurrence of your trouble.

"Box."—Inflammation of the bowels resulting from liver disease. The liver was very much enlarged, hæmorrhagic, and partly converted into fat. This had evidently been in existence some time. When the livor is disorganised its secretions become altered or lessened. These secretions, which are ordinarily antiseptic in the intestines, aid in the destroyal of harmful bacteria, and in the absence of these secretions inflammation of the bowels inevitably results.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

G. Lynch:—You do not give us any idea of the size of the bird, or how it came into your possession, or whether it is British or Foreign. Your description reads like that of a hen Yellowhammer, or possibly a hen Greenfinch.

New Starter:—All the species named are Hardbills, except the Redstart. Love-birds (Budgerigars) are not safe companions for smaller birds, such as Waxbills. The seed mixture is good, but the small foreign Finches eat little other than white millet and Canary seeds. You should use white millet in place of the red, or in addition to it. There are quite a number of fanciers in Darlington, and two societies, which hold shows; Darlington C.B.S., secretaries, Messrs. Todd and Walker, 15, Chelmsford Street; and Darlington C. and B.B.F.A., secretary Mr. A. Walker, 47, Montrose Street.

"The Greatest Book on Canaries in the World."

ORDER NOW.
Edition Rapidly being Exhausted.

This is how one of the delighted purchasers of "Our Canaries" sums up in eight words his opinion, after carefully examining the remarkable volume. Shoals of appreciative letters continually arrive from all parts of the country, the Colonies, and abroad, all containing similar expressions of complete satisfaction.

"Our Canaries" describes so interestingly everything concerning the blithe-spirited and dainty songsters. Lovers of Canaries delight to read how they can add to the health and comfort of their pets. Fanciers of all stages of experience find in the pages of "Our Canaries" information they have long wished to obtain.

Those who desire to increase their profits from selling and showing Canaries will find just the advice they need in "Our Canaries." It contains, as it were, the cream of the life-knowledge of a hundred of the greatest Canary Experts. It enables breeders to produce champion birds, perfect in strain, marking, or any other way required. Every stage of the hobby, from the mating of the parent birds to exhibiting the progeny on the show bench, is explained in definite and easily understood language.

"Our Canaries" is truly a magnificent volume. Produced at enormous cost, it is worth to every fancier and lover of Canaries many times its price. It contains, among other remarkable features, 32 beautifully coloured plates, 133 other illustrations, and is 5lbs. in weight.

More particulars about the contents and scope of "Our Canaries" is given in an interesting illustrated brochure specially prepared for readers of "Cage Birds." It also explains all about the easy way this magnificent work can be obtained at once by paying just a 1/- down, and the balance by a few small monthly payments.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the seller after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

Less orders send 3d.—SAM DRAKE, 31, Halcy Hill, Halifax.

The Certainty of Correctly Identifying all Birds Bred

surely well repays the small cost of these famous marking rings!

Mr. G. Thomson's ten-guinea bowl winner at Bristol was marked with my rings!

Haphazard Breeding will not produce Palace Winners;

any successful fancier will tell you so, and leading fanciers, who have used these rings for years, know from experience that the neatest, safest, and best are LECLAIR'S. Hundreds of testimonials. CAGE BIRDS says: "One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." Consecutively and distinctly numbered, with or without year, 100 2/6, 75 2/-, 50 1/6, 25 10d. Supplied with or without flanges, and in sizes for all varieties.

Learn How to Make Money and Win Prizes with Canaries

Learn how to make money with Canaries. Learn how to Breed and Rear for Prizes and Profit. You can breed and rear a Canary that will be worth its weight in gold. The simple peasants of the Hartz Mountains earn independence with their Canaries! But they only breed for song. An ever-increasing number of British Canary Breeders are making big profits with Canaries bred for the Show, and with every prize your bird wins, its value rises. It is only a matter of knowing how, and the how "Our Canaries" will teach you. Champion birds are easily bred and reared by following the expert methods you will quickly learn from "Our Canaries." Each step is so thoroughly and simply described that the merest novice can understand.

"Our Canaries" is compiled from the discoveries and practice of the greatest Canary experts of to-day. There are hundreds of beautiful illustrations that explain the right methods at a glance. Every line is full of most valuable information never before published, each page contains knowledge about Canaries that it would take a lifetime to learn by experience.

"Our Canaries" is easy to secure. For the small sum of 1s. down this magnificent volume will be forwarded carriage paid by return, the balance being payable in small monthly instalments.

A most interesting booklet has been prepared specially for readers of CAGE BIRDS, which fully explains the easy method of payment, and also tells about the 32 beautiful coloured plates and the 133 other illustrations in this big 5-lb. weight volume. It is quite Free, and will be sent to anyone who fills in and posts the coupon on this page without delay.

LOST VITALITY RESTORED

The greatest food for your hens when run down; it restores them to wonderful breeding condition; hens, which have hitherto been bad feeders, after having "Phosto" will feed and bring up their young in an almost surprising manner; young birds fed on "Phosto" have health and size, full of vigour, and will leave the nest in a wonderful condition. The proof of these statements can be tried for a small outlay. Once you try "Phosto" you will never be without it. Prices, in tins, 1/-, 2/6, and 4/6. Note the name: Judge Silk, Norwich Specialist, Whitstable.

The Red Feed

This great colour-food was used last year by many well-known exhibitors, who write in most glowing terms as to the wonderful colour and sheen it produced in their exhibition birds.

"THE RED FEED" IS DIFFERENT FROM ANY OTHER ON THE MARKET

The secret is the mixing of this great preparation; the finest Red Pepper, Hot Natal, and another great colour ingredient; the Red Feed is quite unique, and bids to become the most popular colour-food on the market. Sold in tins, 2/6 and 4/6, carriage paid; special quotations for larger quantities.

Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Country Rambles

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Annual ramble, May 17th, to Swanley. The day was an ideal one, although rather hot. There was a very good muster of 22, including visitors. The start was made from Wickham Lane, Plumstead, thence by Bexley to Swanley, where the party had a short rest at Mr. Shiers' house, and partook of slight refreshments. Afterwards the party started out under the leadership of Mr. Shiers, who took us through some of the most beautiful scenery in Kent. Although small bird-life was rather scarce, we found a number of Thrush and Blackbirds' nests in various stages of progress, from one egg to young ready to leave the nest. During our ramble we touched on Eynsford and Farningham, and back to Swanley, where Mr. Hollands, of the Red Lion, had prepared a good spread, which was done ample justice to. Taking the whole day, it was quite equal to our last visit to Tonbridge, and several members have suggested another ramble, which is a good sign that every one was satisfied. We must tender our thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Shiers for a very pleasant time.—F. Botell, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Ramble to Effingham Common May 24 was not so fruitful in out of the ordinary finds as the same occasion last season. Starting from the station, and working round the lower part of the common, it was some time before any nests were seen. Then several Linnet and Chaffinch nests were found, some with eggs almost due to hatch, others with young. The most interesting find so far was a Robin's nest in the Hedgerow, close to which, and quite as low down, was another containing two beautiful young Blackbirds. Just a little further on a Pied Wagtail was seen close to the pond, and old Thrush and Blackbird nests were very numerous. Chaffinch's kept up a constant melody with their "kiss me dear," "kiss Joey," and the call of the Cuckoo, the warbling of the Robins, and the toot-toot of the motor horns on the lanes in the distance made up a variety. Presently we came to one of the prettiest parts of our ramble—a wall covered with moss and ivy, with wild strawberry plants growing amongst it, and along this lane we discovered several Wrens' nests. At the Railway Hotel, E. Horsley, a hot lunch had been provided, and to this we all did ample justice. Our afternoon ramble might well be described as an orchid hunt, as the meadows near Horsley Station are famed for the small violet-coloured orchid, and several of our party were busy collecting these and dog daisies. We found a Moor hen's nest on a pond, and on to the common we found nests of Thrushes, Blackbirds, Linnets, Chaffinches, and Greenfinches in various stages of occupation, and so a pleasant day was spent, until it was time to return to the hotel for tea and then train home.—T. J. Hose, Hon. Sec.

SOWERBY BRIDGE C.B.S.

Annual ramble, Sunday, May 17, weather being ideal. Arriving by train at Shipley, we started on our ramble, taking the old coach road along the river bank. Numerous Larks were noticed on the wing. Arriving at the Glen, here bird life abounds; one of our party soon discovered a Blackbird's nest, empty; Hedge Sparrows, Greenfinches, Linnets, Robins and other birds were seen in great numbers. Continuing through the Glen we passed on to the moorland, which extends for some miles, and followed a small stream. Here we found a nest of the Pied Wagtail, 3 eggs; two Hedge Sparrows', 4 young and 3 eggs; Yellow Hammer's, 2 eggs; also a Thrush's, empty. Shortly afterwards one of our party discovered and cautiously stalked what he thought to be a large hare, but this proved to be a friendly "moke," which was tethered to a stake on a small grass plot. We all had a hearty laugh, and he got nicely chaffed about it. After a glorious dinner at "Old Dick's," we made our way towards Bingley, passing through fields and along hedges; here we saw Redstart, Whitethroat, Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, and we heard a Corn Crake, but could not discover it; continuing through Bingley Park and Bingley, we journeyed towards Harden. While going through Bingley Wood we remarked on the greenness of the foliage, which was at its best; wild rabbits were very plentiful. Tea was partaken of at the "Dusty Miller," Harden Beck, and afterwards we made our way along the beck side to the wood; the keeper here explained that the wood was private, but when we told him who we were he was good enough to show us numerous nests and young. Among the gorse bushes we discovered Linnets with both eggs and young. Thanking the keeper for his kindness in showing us round, we made for Oxenworth, where we took train for home, everybody well satisfied with the day's outing, and hoping we should have another ramble before long. —T. Magson, Press Corresp.

KINGS LYNN C.C.

At the kind invitation of their president, Capt. R. L. Bagge, D.S.O., of Gaywood Hall, this club had a very nice ramble round his estate on May 10. The day was ideal until about 4 p.m., when a misty rain set in, but it could not damp the spirit of the merry party. Members met at the Woolpack Inn corner, Tenison Avenue, at 9.45, twenty of them turning out, and walked to Gaywood, arriving there about 10 a.m., being met in the park approaching the hall by Capt. Bagge. Our president soon had us all cornered by showing an egg a little larger than a Blackbird's, the shell being mud colour with a tinge of blue, and asking what bird laid it. This none of us could decide, so he informed us it was taken from a Pheasant's nest, and presumed it was a freak egg of a Pheasant. We then went up to the hall, where we were invited to refreshments, our host remarking it would be some hours before we could get any more. After thirsts were quenched, the captain led the way to the fields; skirting a corn field, we were soon on the scent for bird life. Several nests were seen in various stages of construction. Crossing a grass field, we entered a drift way where primroses were still in flower. Leaving this we came to some furze, round which the party dispersed, and several nests of Linnets' and Chaffinches' eggs were found, also a few young ones looking the picture of health. We crossed the road at Mentlyn to Dunn's farm, passing through the farm and across the railway bridge over the M. and G.N. Jt. lines, a halt being made for about half a dozen of the members, who were still searching the furze. These coming up, we wended our way along the edge of a plantation; here a pair of Yellow Hammers were seen, and the calls of various birds were heard. Entering the plantation one member found a Tit's nest that was most exquisitely constructed, and much admired; a little further on a Wren's nest was found lodged against the trunk of a tree and held in position by the branches of an adjoining one; in outside construction it consisted of fern leaves. Another Tit's nest was discovered, and a young Blackbird was seen sitting on a branch of a tree close to the trunk; one fancier caught it, and after an examination, set it free. Passing along from the Middleton line, we left the wood and crossed the green at Mentlyn to a reserved plot of land, where young fir, ash, etc., had been planted. Our host pointed out the ravages done by rabbits, and leaving this, we again crossed the Jt. railway line into another wood. A squirrel and its nest were seen; one member climbed the tree to investigate the nest, but nothing was in it. Continuing our way, we saw bird-life of all descriptions some busy at making their nest, some sitting, and others rearing young. Close to the sand-pits we struck the Gayton Road, and entered the wood opposite, to see some more saplings; then, as several were thirsty, we made a quick walk for the "Sand Boy," at the suggestion and generosity of Capt. Bagge. Afterwards we entered the Gaywood Wood, and wandered round the hedges of fields, arriving at the hall at 3 p.m. Here all refreshed themselves with a wash and brush up, visited the dairy, and then sat down to a good dinner, to which justice was done. The chairman thanked our host for the good ramble he had taken us, remarking that they had seen bird-life in all its varying stages, and also for the very nice dinner given us, and wishing Capt and Mrs. Bagge very good health. President said it had been a great pleasure to Mrs. Bagge and himself to have us there; he had enjoyed the walk, and if he could do anything for the betterment of the society we were only to let him know and he would see what could be done. After dinner the Captain escorted us round the gardens, and through the glasshouses, where he gave us permission to pluck some strawberries, and fanciers secured some fine chickweed. We then went to the conservatory, which was in fine order, and after again thanking Mrs. Bagge, the merry party took leave of our president and journeyed to Lynn in the rain and heavy mist, getting a bit damp, but in the best of spirits after a most enjoyable day. — A. R. Kent.

ALTRINCHAM (Open) C.B.S.

On May 9, the Altrincham C.B.S. travelled by train to Ashley, accompanied by a number of friends and fanciers, from three Manchester C.B. Societies and the Sale C.B.S., the total number being 39. Arriving at Ashley the party immediately began an eager search for nests of our country songsters, and soon the homes of the Thrush, Blackbird, and Hedge Sparrow were being inspected. Proceeding by Ardern Pool and over the River Birkin, through the Lodge Gates to the main road, the party were rewarded in their search by finding nests of the Chaffinch, and further on, nearing Rostherne, a Wren's nest was seen to contain nestlings, which must be considered very forward. Through Rostherne Village, by Cicely Mills and Bucklow Hill, to the Northwich Road, and Mere Park, the party having been favoured with permission from Mr. Ollerenshaw, inspected the park, lake, and woods, and found many items of interest, nests of the Brown Linnet and Greenfinch being noticeable, and various water fowl were observed, and also the Kingfisher. On leaving the woods the party arranged themselves and were photographed, afterwards passing on, leaving the park by the front entrance. At the junction of the main road and Warrington Road a party of boy scouts and girl guides were seen engaged in a tug of war and one of the scouts immediately offered to match his party of 14 (8 boys and 6 girls) against any 6 of the ramblers, who accepted. After a stiff struggle, the ramblers were defeated, and retired rather crestfallen. At last the Kilton Hotel was reached, where a good tea awaited the ramblers. At the close of tea, Mr. T. Harrison, chairman, Altrincham C.B.S., thanked the Manchester visitors for their attendance, remarking that it would assist the Altrincham members to further their efforts to make the new society a success. In reply, Mr. Oldham, president Manchester N.C.O.S., thanked the Altrincham members for their invitation, and wished them success. Mr. Fulshaw, vice-chairman Manchester N.C.O.S., in supporting, said that he was sorry that Manchester had not sent more members, but those present were the "pick," as the two gentlemen just named were noted for "beauty and size." (Laughter.) Mr. Robinson, chairman North Manchester C.B.S., also supported these remarks. A hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Ollerenshaw for his kindness in allowing the party to view Mere Park, and the sec. was requested to convey this to him. Once more the party were searching the banks and hedges, nests of the Yellow Hammer, Robin, and Titlark being found, and the voice of the Corn Crake was heard. Passing through Millington and Bollington to the meadows, the party observed a section of the Territorials engaged in a sham fight, and considerable merriment was caused by the humorist of the party, "Dan," (not Dan Leno), by his joking remarks. On through Dunham parks to Altrincham, where the party broke up after spending a very enjoyable and interesting time.—Chas. Bailey, Sec.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Club Reports.

N.W. LONDON F.A.

Meeting, May 7, 30 present. Election of judges for the forthcoming shows took place; 7 new members made. A visit to Harpenden will take place on Whit Monday. Meet St. Pancras Station at 9.30. Next meeting, June 4, 8.30, at Stag's Head Hotel, Hawley Road, Chalk Farm Road, when the final election of judges will take place; non-members cordially invited.—W. Sutton, Assist. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting held at headquarters, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street, E.C. Mr. W. Gilbert presided; another splendid attendance was recorded, and a most interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. R. J. Pretty on "Cinnamons." The lecturer dealt with practically every point of this variety, which took up the whole evening, and we were sorry when the lecture came to a close. A hearty discussion ensued, and questions were answered with greatest satisfaction. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Mr. Pretty for his lecture.—G. G. Stubbs.

DARVEL C.B.C.

General meeting May 21, Mr. D. Hopkins (vice-president) in the chair. Mr. Jas. Fairful was unanimously appointed secretary in room of Mr. J. Robertson, who resigned on account of his going abroad. It was decided that F.F. show be put back from July 7 till August 4. Members present signed form in support of conference to be held in Glasgow, under the auspices of Fife Cage Bird League, for the purpose of considering the excessive charges made by railway companies for live stock.—(Report unsigned; please forward address of new sec.—Editor.)

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, Library Hall, Church St., Stoke Newington, May 20, Mr. G. Mortlock chair. An egg food mixture competition was held, Miss W. J. Salter, H. R. Mortlock, H. Neighbour, F. J. Castell and F. Housden competing before a good attendance. Eggs and hasins were provided by the Association, competitors bringing their own working utensils. A full explanation was given during the mixing, and the varied methods adopted brought plenty of questions and open discussion. Mr. W. J. Salter was declared the winner by the members, with Mr. H. R. Mortlock close up. The reports from the members of breeding results look well for a good young stock show.—P. W. Jeffries, Hon. Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Table show, May 13, British only. Mr. H. James judged and afterwards gave a lecture on British birds, pointing out the faults of those on the bench. F.-M., A.O.V.: 1, Pazel; 2, Morrish; 3, hc, Dean; vhc, H. T. Gibb. H-M.: 1, 2, H. T. Gibb; 3, vhc, Miss Mantell; best-conditioned bird, Mrs. Mantell.—W. H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Meeting, Tynecastle Hall, Gorgie Road, May 19, a good turn-out of members being present; President Mr. A. W. Watson, chair. Through the kindness of Mr. Napier, Juniper Green O.S., sec., a ramble has been arranged for June 27, through Riccarton Estate, in conjunction with the Juniper Green fanciers. It is hoped a good turn-out of members will avail themselves of this opportunity. Train arrangements will be in fancy press before then (with Editor's permission). Letter from Fife C.B.L. Mr. A. W. Watson was appointed as delegate to attend meeting to be held in Edinburgh. New members elected:—Messrs. Preston, G. Brydon, J. McCrum, P. McNiven, and C. Grant. Sec. was instructed to apply for the patronage of the S.P.C., B.F.C.C., and S.B.B. and M.C., also Hyde's special. Classification for F.F. settled:—Nor. 4, Crest and C.B., 1; Bord., 4; Scotch Fancy, 2; A.O.V., 1; Hyb. or Light Mule, 1; Variegs., 1; Goldie and Linnet Mule (dark), 1; and Greenie, Siskin, etc., dark. 1. Fee, 2d. Admission 2d. (exhibitors free); Aug. 1, at 3. Mr. J. F. Dewar has kindly consented to judge. As the time was getting on, it was decided to ask the president, Mr. A. W. Watson, to delay his lecture until the September meeting, which he kindly consented to do.—J. C. Charlton, Sec.

Kindly notify that I have removed from 3, Ellenborough Place, to 37, John Street, Maryport, writes Mr. J. Nicholson, late of Nanaimo B.C., Canada.

Mr. E. H. Fulcher writes on behalf of himself and other members of the Manchester and N.C.O.S., thanking the members of the Altrincham C.B.S. for providing so enjoyable an afternoon at their recent ramble; the arrangements, he states, were perfect.

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. A. Bailey, sec. Rotherham C.B.S., that Mr. T. Clarke, of Mexboro', has been confined to his bed for some weeks. I am sure that all members and friends join me in wishing him a speedy recovery.

In answer to my advt. of last week, writes Mr. H. Oliver, 2, Bridport Place, Hoxton, N., I had sent here four Chaffinches from Scotland, without the address, or the name of the sender. I want to send cash for them, but cannot do so till I hear from him.

The syllabus of the Halifax C.B.S. is to hand. F.F. shows are arranged for July 20 and July 4; "wintor" shows are Sept. 26, Nov. 5, and Nov. 26; annual open Oct. 3, and annual members' Jan. 16. Meetings, with lectures, etc., are held monthly at the Trafalgar Inn.

The Whitsun Holidays.

The offices of CAGE BIRDS will be closed from Saturday to Monday next inclusive.

Will Advertisers, and Correspondents generally, kindly note that all matter intended for NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE should be posted early, to reach us on Tuesday, June 2 (or Wednesday first post at latest). Queries for answer in next week's issue must reach us not later than the afternoon of Friday May 29.

I was pleased to see CAGE BIRDS make special note last week of the marked bird which belonged to Mr. Crisp, as when exhibited at the Bradford National, writes Mr. J. Holroyd (Great Horton), it was acknowledged by all the experts to be the best Yorkshire in the show.

A committee meeting of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. will be held June 6 at 6.30, at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford; the principal business will be to allot patronage. I should like all societies to let me have their application as early as possible, writes Mr. R. Garnett, sec. The committee will also fix the value of the prizes in our various competitions.

We have received the annual report and rule book of the National British Bird and Mule Club. The report records an increase of 16 in the club's membership and gives a list of the winners of cups and medals during last show season. Besides the rules, the book contains notes for secretaries desiring the club's patronage, list of desirable British cage birds, a show classification providing for any number of British classes from 9 to 30, list of possible Hybrids, and what is intended to be a classification for Hybrids, covering from 6 to 14 classes; this, however, seems to have been reprinted from old lists without a revision made necessary by other alterations, and is no longer intelligible. Names and addresses of members and a list of officers and committee are also given.

All Judges Should Use Our special expertly prepared Judging Books. They save much labour and time. We have just issued a revised and up-to-date

JUDGING BOOK.

The advantage this book has over others is that it has 3 columns for awards, and is therefore a great help, and a double check for judges.

Our ramble fixed for June 3rd has been postponed, owing to the counter attraction of the opening of our Undercliffe Drive, writes Mr. L. Hill, hon. sec., Bournemouth C.B.A.

Mr. S. Shannon, 43, Central Avenue, Bangor, co. Down, writes that he has been appointed sec. of the Bangor C.B.S., and communications on the business of the society should be addressed accordingly.

Oldham C.B.A. annual ramble will take place on May 31 to Mottram and Broadbottoms, when we shall be pleased to have the company of any friend, writes Mr. Cope, sec. Train leaves Clegg Street Station at 9.20.

To Northern Yorks. C.C. Members.

I have now received samples of colour-food, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, the President of the N.Y.C.C., and will book orders for those members who desire it at same prices as last year. I shall esteem it a favour if members will order their season's requirements in one lot and so save carriage.

Parrot Lays and Sits!

A writer hailing from Old Penshaw states in the "North Mail": I have a Parrot about eight years of age who three years ago laid three eggs, last year two eggs, and since Good Friday this year she has laid five eggs. Her cage door is nearly always open, and she knows the outside of her cage equally as well as the inside. My bird is at present sitting splendidly on the five eggs, without any prospect of hatching any.

The Duchess and Pet Birds.

Her Grace The Duchess of Somerset, presiding recently at a Mansion House meeting, said that among her pets was a twelve-year-old Bullfinch, which had become so weak latterly that it could no longer hop about, but yet it sang its little song and loved to be placed in the window and call in all the other little birds. They could not destroy a life like that, for the bird was happy and sang bravely. She wished there was more kindness shown towards dumb creatures. What distressed her in this mechanical age was to find that the toys given to children usually were model motor-cars and cycles, and these could not give them the taste that would be aroused by a pet bird, a dog or even a mouse.

Public Aviary for Hastings.

The formal opening took place on May 13 of the aviary that has been formed in Alexandra Park, Hastings, and which has been stocked by bird fanciers in the town. The Mayor, who was accompanied by the Mayoress, said for a long time it had been his great desire to have an aviary in their park, and thanks to the courtesy of the Parks and Gardens Committee, he was pleased to say it was an accomplished fact. A number of boys and girls, many of them actually the donors, or the children or relations of donors, then released the birds into the large aviary. The children and friends were entertained to tea by the Mayoress.

Robin Builds in a Boot.

A Robin has chosen a strange nesting place in the Craiglockhart Clubhouse, near Edinburgh. One of the members was greatly surprised to find the other day one of his boots lying on its side, and in its interior a cosy nest, with six beautiful Robin's eggs. The Robin continues to flit about at will to and from the boxroom where its home is situated.

Pigeons Poisoned by Strychnine.

A number of Wood Pigeons have been discovered in the Scarborough district poisoned by strychnine. Cases have been traced six miles north and five miles west of the town. An analysis of the organs of one bird disclosed enough strychnine to kill several people, but fortunately none of the birds seem to have been eaten.

Cheap and Noiseless Partitions.

For movable partitions, cheap and noiseless, get disused stout cardboard boxes, brown preferred, and cut with a sharp knife the required size. You will find that the sun does not draw or split them, as it does the ordinary boards. I have used them myself two years, and find they answer well. — T. Southam (Honeybourne S.O., Worcestershire).

A Daring Thrush.

A Song Thrush has built its nest, laid three eggs, and in the natural course of events will, if undisturbed, rear its young on a scaffold pole at the secondary school for girls, which is being erected in St. George's Avenue, Northampton. There are between fifty and sixty men working on the building, but the bird takes not the slightest notice of them. The men have taken a great interest in the bird, and will not have it disturbed.

A New Blue Tit Story.

I have just heard a new Blue Tit story—the story of, perhaps, the boldest Tit on record, says a writer in the "Daily Express." She built her nest in a children's rocking-horse, which stood out of doors, in the neat hole where the horse's tail had been before the children pulled it out. She finished her nest and sat on her eggs and reared her brood, though the rocking-horse was constantly being ridden all through her nesting time by the children, who knew nothing of the nest until the little Tits were about to fly!

The Blackbird's Crime!

The police and railway authorities at the station of Basle have been searching for the last two months for the criminal who has been giving the regulation whistle for the departure of trains from the station at irregular hours, and thereby endangering the traffic. Several trains were sent off before their time by these whistles, and had to be called back, while in some cases, says the "Express" Geneva correspondent, collisions were narrowly avoided. The culprit was found the other day in a Blackbird, which had built a nest inside the station and learned to imitate the guard's whistle. Gendarmes have received orders to shoot it.

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

Illustrated Ideas

Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 639.
A Handy Nest-pan Holder.
Sent by A. M'Laren, Pleasant, Keity.

I send you a sketch of a wire which I have used for three years for holding nest pans in a safe position, and have found very handy, doing away with all tying or fixing on hooks. The construction consists of two pieces of wire only. Figs. 1 and 2 show the only pieces required. A.A., Fig. 1, are for slipping on wires of cage and the base of Fig. 2 rests on the punched bar and keeps the nest pan steady. Points B.B., Fig. 2, should be firmly clasped round B.B., Fig. 1, with pliers, and then set to the required angle so that the nest pan will be level and soldered.

No. 640.
A Novel Perch for a Thrush Cage.
Sent by E. W. Humphrey, Westgate, Thirsk.

The sketch shows a perch for Thrush cage which I have found far better than any I have hitherto seen. A is simply a circular piece of wood about four inches across, bevelled at edge as illustration, and a perch is attached at B by means of screw passed through back. C is a loop by means of which perch is hung to a small screw inside cage. It will be seen that by perch being attached at B it cannot be knocked out of position, and nothing can be easier to remove for cleaning purposes.

COUNTRY RAMBLES

The following rambles have been arranged: Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles whether in doors or not. Great Horton Good Intent O.S., June 6, to Bingley, meet under clock outside Midland for 2.30 car; Openshaw Gorton C.B.S., to Marple, etc., May 31, meet Gorton Station for 2.30 train, or Guide Bridge 2.30; N. Liverpool C.B.S., and Walton and Everton C.B.S., May 31, to Kirkby and Simonswood, meet Walton Church, Country-rd., 10.30; Glasgow and W Counties Norwich Club, May 29, to Bridge of Weir, train from Central Station 3.5; N.W. London F.A., June 1, to Harpenden, meet St. Pancras 9.30; Edinburgh C.B.S. and Juniper Green F.A., June 27, to Riccarton Estate; Hull C.B.S., June 13, to Houghton Woods, (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.); Oldham C.B.A., May 31, to Mottram and Broadbottoms, train leaves Clegg Street Station, 9.20; Queensbury C.B.S., May 31, to Luddesden Dean, meet Granby Hotel 12.45.

FORTHCOMING FIRST FEATHER SHOWS.

The following First Feather Shows have been arranged; we shall be glad to be notified of any omissions: June 6, Windhill C.B.S., Sunderland C.B.A., Leeds C.B.S.; June 11, Upper Rhondda C.B.S.; June 13, Doncaster C.B.S., Alfreton C.B.S., Langton C.B.S.; June 19, Bridlington and Driffield C.B.S.; June 20, Abertillery C.B.S., Stockport and Hazel Grove B.F.A., Oldham C.B.A., S. OUR MOST POPULAR SONG BIRD: THE SKYLARK.

By W. A. LOTT.

One of the oldest and most successful keepers of this species gives his methods of management.

The fine Skylark, the picture of which appeared on our front page last week, won first prize at the last Palace Show for its owner, Mr. W. A. Lott, the author of the article, and from whose sketch the illustration was made. The bird was generally conceded by experts to have been one of the finest Skylarks that ever graced the show bench, and Mr. Lott is justifiably proud of being the possessor of such a grand specimen.

NEVER keep a squeaker, or those that dash about a good deal; perhaps one or two of your birds will begin to break their tails; let them go, but don't let any go till you have had them two or three days. Feed well, and the chances are that you will notice one or two of them bigger, bolder, and better marked than the others, also quite steady compared with the others; they will walk up and down the runner, and when turning will lift their tails up so that they do not touch the bottom of the cage. Mark time on these; go through the same process with each lot of birds, and let all the others go. It will be hard luck if you do not find a real tip-top bird. Get the birds when the snow or frost is rather severe, and deal with a good catcher; he will select you some to go on with, and he is generally a good judge. Gradually wean the birds off from the soft wild seed to your own staple food.

As regards the moulting of the Lark, I have never had any trouble, but I have often been very anxious to see them make a start. I have watched day after day, and, seeing no signs, have often thought they would never be ready for the early shows, but Nature asserts herself very quickly. At moulting time give plenty of dry sand, and they will be continually resorting to it.

Half-way through the moult I gently but firmly pull out the two longest wing feathers; these are very long, hard, thick feathers, and I consider I am assisting the bird a good deal by removing them. I have never had a Skylark stick in its moult yet, although Shore Larks often do with me.

I have tried colour-feeding Larks, but I find it makes them too dark, and destroys that golden-brown tint on the breast which is so much to be desired, so I have discontinued the use of it for years now; why it should spoil the colour of a Skylark and improve the colour of a Pipit I do not know, but there is the fact.

Towards the end of the moult, for about a week only, give plenty of fatty, rich food, cream cheese, chopped suet, and other titbits which will give a nice sheen to the feathers, and then with a little hardening off at your discretion, your Skylark will be your own special pride, you will have seen it through all the stages of the twelve months round.

As to show cages there is no standard show cage, as many exhibitors of Larks have varied the shapes and have adopted their own designs, but I rather lean to the bow-fronted ones, but, of course, without the side wing or board that is put on the cheap shop-made ones.

Some exhibitors adopt the long "runner" style with a slight bow all along the front, but the style is quite a matter of fancy, as also is the colour of cage, and the brass embellishments that we sometimes see on some Lark show cages.

Even the cheap Lark cages have some pretence of a brass band running round the bottom of the bow of the cage, and on the better class show cages these brass bands are used, but in a much better fit and get up. The Lark is not a gay-plumaged bird, and the brass fitting, in my opinion, helps to show up a good Skylark in tip-top form. I have had many enquiries as to where to get Lark show cages made, but, unfortunately, I have not been able to tell my enquirers; I make my own show cages and stock cages right through. I have asked London cage-makers to make same for me to my pattern, but they have absolutely refused to do so, my wiring being somewhat out of the usual way.

I sow every year in the garden a patch of fine grass seed, in properly prepared soil, sowing the seed rather crowded, so that it is nice and dense, and when the show season comes round I can always cut a nice turf to put in the show cage. With care, under a rough glass frame, you can keep a nice patch of grass to cut from all through the winter.

I have tried moss for the cages, but it soon gets dry and shifts about. Always clean and re-enamel your show cages every show season to whatever colour you think best.

OPENING OF A PUBLIC AVIARY AT HASTINGS.

An excellent aviary was recently opened by the Mayor, Councillor E. A. Hocking, in the Alexandra Park, Hastings. Our photograph shows the Mayor watching the liberating of the birds therein, many of the latter being given by residents, and their children. The Hastings and St. Leonards C.B.S. presented a collection of foreign birds, which were liberated by the hon. sec., Miss Kirk Bullock (note inset picture), and the members were publicly thanked for their contribution.

THE MIND OF A BIRD.

A Chat with Members and Friends of the L. & P.O.S.

By ALLEN SILVER.

IT is evident that the complex mental sensations of realising unhappiness and suffering, as viewed from a human standpoint, cannot be a source of great discomfort unless a creature can analyse its own feelings, and it is hardly probable that a bird can. A bird cannot very well realise its feelings without self-consciousness, and apparently a bird cannot think about itself. Practically all actions that one perceives in a bird (which are not instinctive) upon analysis prove to be based upon purely natural, as apart from reflective, conditions, and such things as, say, a dog's devotion to its master, a bird's care for its young, care of aphides by ants, etc., etc., are not based on a sense of moral rectitude, utility, or power of reason. By the way they are carried out under varying conditions they prove the absence of conscious thought.

In the following I will illustrate why I think that birds cannot experience rational ideas, and I hope I shall be able to get you to see that it is hardly possible for mental development in a creature which, to judge by its actions, is only capable of a given range to possess qualities outside that range, and which are almost impossible of discovery.

It is, of course, quite unnecessary for me to allude to the many occurrences that take place in the everyday life of birds, because you have all more or less observed them. You have seen their exhibitions of rage, of bullying, of love and dislike.

As animals you possess in a degree the same instinctive behaviour as they do, though in the case of the more highly-civilised races of man these instinctive actions are often latent or atrophied, but over and above that you possess a mental development of a much more complex order and you are able to think about your actions, to draw inferences and to deliberate upon them. As you know, such a power puts you on a very different footing to many other creatures from which you may not differ very much anatomically, yet the difference in the mental development is enormous. So wide is it that to them the power to readily profit by experience or co-operate is practically non-existent. When the co-operation of individuals does occur it is generally instinctive rather than an acquired habit or custom. You can learn, copy or imitate from others of your kind and can utilise things round about you. Wild creatures, except from accidental acquisition of what one may call unnatural habits, carry out a law of behaviour without tuition, and at the command of their condition of being, rather than from a power of deliberation.

A bird cannot say to itself, "Ah, there is a helpless orphan; let me feed it." If it is in a condition to feed young, the stimulus set up by the call of a nestling induces it to gather or regurgitate food and relieve itself of the symptom experienced. If a bird was not in a condition to feed, it would be physically impossible for it to feed its own or any other bird's offspring.

The way in which birds can be imposed upon is sufficient evidence of their inability to consider a point of view. If you were a bird would you see your rightful offspring shovelled over the side of your nest with indifference, and would you afterwards feed and rear an ungainly giant which boded fair to be able to swallow your head during the process? Would you submit to the exchange of eggs, or devote to stones or chalk eggs the same care as if they were your own? Would you repeatedly attempt to construct a nest in an impossible spot, or continue to build in a spot from which your domicile had been dislodged every few days by a broom? I think not. You would hardly be likely to show not the slightest signs of fear a few seconds after danger had passed, as is the case with many birds and animals. With us our mental state would be disturbed for hours, days, or even weeks.

Then, again, the indifference with which one bird of a pair will almost immediately find a new mate and at once start housekeeping without the slightest regard for the rotting corpse of husband or wife which had been shot or killed in its sight shows little power of reflection. All these things tend to show that birds cannot be very sensitive as judged from a human standpoint.

Then, again, take the behaviour of caged birds, which only differs in a degree from wild ones. You will find many of their "behaviours" anything but reasonable. Two birds will amorously nestle together for ten minutes and perhaps a few seconds after will for some unknown reason try their best to injure each other. They may take the greatest dislike to a man and allow themselves to be petted by a woman, or vice versa. In fact, outside their purely useful and instinctive behaviour, their actions are not those of reasonable beings, and in consequence no one can sanely suppose that they have a highly developed power of reason, and that being the case, how can they keenly appreciate their lot?

All this leads us to one point of view, and that is, although a bird possesses all those animal mental qualities necessary for its welfare as an animal, it does not possess a highly developed power of self-consciousness. That being the case, its power to discriminate between the sweets of captivity or liberty, or vice versa, cannot be very great. The fact that such creatures readily accustom themselves to such a change of life, and require some time to undo habits acquired under this changed state, in itself shows that they cannot readily grasp the situation at all. Therefore you may rest assured that when you confine a wild bird under decent and reasonable conditions you are not necessarily committing it to a state of imprisonment that has the same effect upon it mentally as it would upon a civilised being.

At the conclusion of the lecture, many interesting questions were asked, which Mr. Silver very cleverly answered, and explained away a number of puzzling points. It was, in fact, a delightful evening, and we were pleased to see a well-filled room.

HERBERT L. HUGGINS, Hon. Assist.-Sec.

Producing the Ideal Plainhead.

A lecture on the Norwich Canary, given by Mr. J. W. Cleminson, Preston, to the members of the Leigh and Dis. C.B.S.

Mr. Cleminson commenced by saying that all the reading in the world was not like practical experience, although reading a little gave the novices an idea how to go about things for a start. He would try his best to tell how to breed a good bird, and what constituted one. The lecturer here handed two illustrations of the ideal Norwich; one was the N.P.C. ideal, the one that was his favourite, as coming near to the "John Bull" type. He had seen many good birds, coming very near to the standard, but he had yet to see an ideal Norwich on the show bench. The most difficult to get was perfection in the head, but this counted 25 points; 10 above everything else, so it is essential to go in for a good head. He liked to see a good round head well risen, not like some of the winners that are seen sometimes on the show bench, with flat heads showing as much eyebrow as would have suited a Crestbred of 20 years ago. He liked to see the eyes low set, because if you get them that way the birds have a bolder look, and don't seem to be scowling at you like the flat-headed birds do. He liked the neck to look as if the head had been driven into the shoulders with a mallet; the chest should be deep and full, and not to look like a straight line from under the bird's beak to its tail; The back must be slightly rounded, without any hollow running down; the wings must be short. He did not like to see birds with long wings, but if any were inclined to that fault it should be checked by introducing an extra short winged hen. The legs must be well set back so as to make the bird look like all front. The carriage, he said, didn't exactly mean the wings only, it alluded to all the bird being carried in a proper manner; to jump from one perch to the other without leaving its tail to drag after it. Avoid a bird with a dropped tail, as it gave them a slovenly appearance. He liked to see the tail slightly carried upwards. Get your bird as short in feather as possible, especially if you colour feed, as you cannot get the long feathered birds to as good a colour as the short feathered ones. I have examined both long and short feathers, he said, and I find that the blood vein doesn't run any further down in the long feathers than in the short ones, as the long feathers are nothing but fluff. Now as regards pairing up. I would adviso the novices to place themselves in a reliable breeder's hands, one one whom they know is breeding some winners. Of course, don't buy the first bird you see, go a time or two and get well acquainted with what you want. I have had my best results with pairing yellow cocks and buff hens; you will find that you get the type from the hens, and the largest percentage of hens are buffs, hence my reason for using buff hens. Pay your best attention to your hens; never mind what your cocks look like if they are bred right. To get the colour into your stock you want a green hen. When I say a green hen I don't mean one of those bronzy greens, I mean a green that looks almost black, and if you get the right one to start with you will have enough colour to last you a long time, providing you will take care how you pair up the offspring. Cinnamon blood in Norwich, he thought, was useless; of course, you might derive a little benefit in your young birds, but it is when you come to the second and third generation that you see where your mistake is; you will find that you cannot get that red-hot colour on them that is so essential to the variety on the show bench. In-breeding, he went on, was a thing I couldn't fancy at first, but on being told that it was the only road to success I started with it, and am very glad to say that it proved successful. You will have to in-breed if you want to succeed; all that you have to mind is not to pair too near relatives; a little extra care in this direction will prevent the loss of stamina in your stock. I generally pair mother to son, father to daughter, grandfather to grand-daughter and uncle to niece. Mr. Cleminson said he could talk all night and then not have told all that can be gained by practical experience, but if he had said anything that might be beneficial to the novices present he would be amply repaid for his trouble.

CANARY BREEDING AT A PROFIT

An instructive lecture given before the members and friends of the Tong and District C.B.S., by Mr. L Hodgson, the president.

OF course, on the state of my cages depends the method I adopt. If they have been recently done outside I use paraffin only. I am "dead-nuts" on red mite, as I am fully convinced that one-half the young are lost, when newly hatched, through these little pests. Perhaps it will be policy to represent the case as being much worse than it is, and then the beginner will be agreeably surprised if he finds it not so bad as was expected. The Canary is liable under certain circumstances to become infested with parasites, much in the same way as other animals are plagued; but with reasonable care and exercise this is preventable. Don't put your cages flat on top of each other; arrange them so that fresh air can get round.

Having our cages finished and supplied with a good covering of sand, or "bird grit," and a little old lime, and our seed and water vessels filled, we are ready for the reception of the birds. Wash your water glasses out daily, in the morning if possible. The next question that suggests itself is the selection of breeding stock. I do not mean as regards variety for a beginner to start with. One kind is no more difficult to manage than another, and good ones cat no more than bad ones. It is only too easy, even when at the top of the ladder, to make a false step and slide down to the bottom, but next to impossible to begin at the bottom and reach the top if the bars are rotten. The moral is, therefore, for a beginner to buy the very best his means will permit. If you want good birds and have not confidence in yourself, ask the advice of your older fellow members, and I am certain any member will be only too pleased and honoured to assist a new fancier. Remember we all started off the same mark. We have had to seek counsel of others, and are now willing to extend a helping hand to you.

In pairing birds, we usually mate a yellow cock to a buff hen, or vice versa, and this system should only be departed from on special occasions or under extraordinary circumstances. If your birds are losing colour, or getting coarse in feather, then you may pair two yellows; or if, on the other hand, your birds are getting scanty in feather or deficient in size, a cross with two buffs will bring about an alteration. Size is to be obtained from the buffs, likewise profusion of feather. From the yellows come the colour and fineness of feather.

To get my birds ready for breeding, I adopt the following. The breeding hens I generally keep in a flight-cage for exercise. About the middle of February I select them and place in the next compartment to their companion, so that they get acquainted with each other. The probability is, if you put them together straight off they will quarrel. I generally put the birds together about the middle of March. Ninety-nine per cent. of Canaries pair as naturally as possible. The Canary belongs to a class of birds which feed from the crop, and the first indication of the birds having come to an understanding is the cock feeding the hen. I ought to have mentioned that when I have decided on the matched pairs, I commence with egg-food, green-food, and mixed seed. For the egg-food I boil an egg fifteen minutes, take the shell off, and press the egg through a perforated zinc sieve. Taking a slice of loaf bread (bread two or three days old is preferable, as this crumbles much nicer), I crumble this along with four ordinary sweet tea biscuits, and mix all together. To go along with this I scald two tablespoonfuls of Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food, and when cool mix together. This is nice and moist, and I find my birds do fairly well on it. Don't leave any stale food about, as this will bring about diarrhœa.

For green food I give preference to nice young dandelion. In the middle of the breeding season I give a good supply of dandelion flowers, and have found hens to feed on these when nothing else would tempt them. Always keep the birds supplied with cuttlefish bone, and when they begin to nest, a piece of mutton suet is very good as a preventative for egg-binding. A good thing in the breeding season is an occasional dose of Epsom salts. I scald a tablespoonful of this and add it to one quart of water. I generally give this about once a week. As a disinfectant, and to keep the room sweet, I have a few carbon balls placed about the cages. Or you can get a pennyworth of camphor and dissolve it in a pint of water; put it in a bottle and cork up. Cut a small hole in the cork so that you may sprinkle the floor gently. Don't be afraid of fresh air, but mind all draughts.

I generally run one cock with one hen where possible. At the beginning it requires you to keep a sharp look-out to see if the cock interferes with her during incubation. If he does not molest the hen, I let him remain. At all times go into the room with care and gentleness. Don't clash the door, as this is liable to make the hens jump off the nest when sitting. When the young are hatched, if the hen begins to lay or sit too closely on them, give a dose of Epsom salts, or drop a piece of Glauber salts, size of a threepenny-piece, into her drinking water. I have found this do good on several occasions. Remember, all birds are early risers; see that they have ample food. Mine are fed three times a day. When the young are 21 days old the hen will be thinking of her second clutch, so the young should be removed. If you have a cock bird a good feeder you will generally find him invaluable for putting with the young when newly taken away. Continue the egg-food and give an occasional milk sop until you find them able to crack seed. If you have any of the young looking "dumpy" after being taken away from their parents, give a fresh milk sop.

Many questions were asked and answered. The usual vote of thanks brought the meeting to a close.—W. Walker, Sec.

Six Hens in One Nest this Time!

SIR,—I beg to say that I had a singular experience many years ago. Two brothers and myself had made an aviary about three yards long, two yards high, and one yard wide. It was well made, in every respect, inside an old building which had been used at one time for a warehouse. I put in the aviary seven hens and two cocks—Yorkshires. I gave them sufficient time to pair up before commencing breeding; and I put inside the aviary fourteen nests, so that they would have a good choice, but strange to say six out of the seven hens all selected the same nest. I tried my best to induce them to have one each by placing other nests around the one selected, but to no avail. So I let them take their luck. When the hens had done laying their eggs, there were 28. The nest was full and almost brimming over! All the hens sat one on the top of the other. The sight was good enough for a circus. I have never had such an experience, neither before nor since.

Has a Bird a Conscience?

SIR,—Perhaps the following will help to bear out Mr Teschemaker's statement. I say birds have considerable reasoning power; at least my experience with Rooks has taught me so. On the Estate where I live (Balnagown), there is a large Rookery, which hundreds of Rooks have occupied for about twenty years. Three years ago, in the middle of their breeding season, the gamekeepers started to destroy their nests and young with the gun. A good number of the old birds were killed, besides all the young. Next breeding season not a Rook bred in that wood. The curious thing about it (hence my statement) is that all through the autumn and winter they roost in the Rookery, but as soon as the breeding season commences they adjourn to a neighbouring estate (Tarbat) in which they are unmolested, and rear their young. Does not this prove that they have reasoning power and a great memory. D. M. ROBERTSON.

SIR,—It is pleasing to notice that Mr. Teschemaker is grateful for a spice of humour. I have often appreciated his own articles, and those with a touch of humour have appealed to me most. Why should we take our hobby too seriously? Why should a fancier go through life with his hands clasped in front of him looking as meek as an acolyte and as earnest as a friar? For my part, I think articles written in the racy style of the Rev. Farrar help to brighten the cobwebby portions of our hobby and act as a sedative to our overwrought nerves and patience consequent upon disappointments in the breeding room. But to degenerate into seriousness. Mr. Teschemaker says that it is inconsistent of me not to believe in the Raven's Parliament while I know all about the Spring Assemblies of Rooks. I see no inconsistency in it. The Rook is a gregarious bird, while the Raven is a solitary one. The assemblies of Rooks are just as natural as the solitariness of the Raven; and because I have witnessed the assemblies of Rooks is no earnest of my acceptance of the fact that they meet for the purpose of allocating nesting sites. The Rooks assemble in winter, but it is no indication that they assemble to allocate sleeping perches. They assemble in the fields in autumn in search of food, but it doesn't signify that they are allocating feeding pitches. Rooks will fight for nesting sites much as they fight for partners and for food, and the weakest will always go to the wall, which accounts for the fact of one with a broken wing or leg being put to death.

Has Mr. Teschemaker never seen a poor outcast Sparrow being persecuted? I have. The mere fact of a maimed or ailing bird being put to death or otherwise persecuted negatives the suggestion that a bird has a conscience. If a bird had a conscience, wouldn't one naturally suppose that an ailing bird would inspire manifestations of sympathy in the healthy bird? Has a hen Canary a conscience that will deliberately and with malice aforethought let her nest of youngsters die, although they are old enough to cry for food? I know that many a time when I have had a valuable nest die for want of feeding, I have wished that hen had a conscience.

My own observations have led me to believe that some species are more intelligent than others. For instance, I have seen Thrushes and Blackbirds stroll through an open door into a large conservatory, and although this door was left open for them they have never had the intelligence to find their way out, but have flown pell-mell against the glass, sometimes knocking themselves unconscious. On the other hand the Robins and the Wrens always know the exact spot they came in at and will find their way out without difficulty. The same with Fly-catchers.

Among insects, perhaps one of the most intelligent is the bee, but let one get in a greenhouse and it will beat its wings against the glass for hours, while the way out lies within a few inches all the time. Yet, were we to liberate one a few miles from the hive it would be home again almost directly. It is a very complex problem. I am prepared to admit that there are different degrees of intelligence in different individuals—the case of Mr. Teschemaker's own Redpolls for instance, which bring their intelligence into play to get their own food—but when the assertion is made that a bird has a conscience my credulity calls a halt; at least, until something in the way of real evidence is forthcoming. Ardwick's Good Fancier.

SIR,—As one of the oldest members of the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., I was extremely sorry to read the ill-timed letter of "Enthusiast"; and I was even more sorry to read that of "Ardwickite." Whoever "Ardwickite" may be, he strikes at our esteemed chairman, Mr. Robinson, through another man's folly—the right way to hatch dissension and strife in a society that in a few short years has grown enormously, and become a flourishing organisation through the untiring efforts of our chairman and a few other of our members. I can remember the Ardwick show two or three years ago where our chairman pretty well swept the deck clean with his first feather birds, and the judge (a noted man) wanted to buy some of them. If our chairman had worked less for the society and more in his bird-room he probably would have been far higher on the bench to-day. I hold no brief for Mr. R., but I do say that he is, with others amongst our members, a fancier first and an exhibitor second..

W. DOWNING.

SIR,—In reply to "Ardwickite," I must say that I am very much disappointed to find that there are contemptible people in the Fancy who take objection to such a whole-hearted letter as the one I first wrote, which was intended to do good, and not to excite petty jealousies. It seems to be a case of "dog in the manger." I trust the other members of the society will look at the facts in their true light, and not as this overgrown child has done. ENTHUSIAST.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

SIR,—I was very glad to see "Yellow Green's" answer to "Buff Green No. 2." I think he has given him all he wants. The S.P. Club clique has been requiring a "blowing up" for some time. The above club is in the hands of "Big Wigs" who have plenty of tongue and want all for themselves. Now, the Fife Fanciers are doing their best to form a committee to meet the railway companies to try and get better terms and cheaper rates for fanciers sending birds to and from shows. If the Committee of the S.P.C. are working for the benefit of fanciers they should have taken up a scheme like that. I hear on good authority that the Fife members are down on the ring scheme and I hope they will not belong to this club until they drop the ring scheme. I am not a member myself, but had spoken to a member to propose me. "Yellow Green's" letter has made me think, and now I won't join. TRUE TO TYPE.

The Song of the Nightingale.

SIR,—"Philomel," and no doubt others among your readers, will be interested to hear that in this neighbourhood (Maldon) where Nightingales abound, they cease to sing about the middle of June. Among my notes concerning this species are the two following: One bird singing at Hazeleigh on June 18, 1909, and two in a lane at Danbury at 8 p.m. June 21, 1910. These I have recorded in my diary under the heading of "Late date for song." (REV.) G. H. RAYNOR.

SIR,—Surely your correspondent "Philomel" has not been a reader of CAGE BIRDS long or he or she would have seen more definite information regarding the singing of the 'Gale, especially in the grand article that experienced and talented aviculturist, Mr. Teschemaker, treated us to last summer. I think anyone who reads this gentleman's articles and experiences must soon know a little at all events. Now, I live in a locality where 'Gales are, to say the least, abundant, and during the last three or four seasons I have carefully noted the very points "Philomel" is in doubt of. I have heard within a four miles radius of my house 15 on song this year and know of three others, and last year nine could be heard in one wood seven miles from here, a record as far as my experience goes, the previous greatest number being four, all singing within 300 yards. The earliest singing I have recorded was this year on April 26th, when I heard two on full song, but being confined in the workshop all the week I daresay one or two may have heard them earlier, as Saturday and Sunday are my observation days. After frequenting their haunts and carefully noting the singing for a period of three years I can safely say that it is extremely unlikely that anyone has heard a 'Gale singing after June 12th. I am referring to this district (Kettering), of course, as no doubt they may vary (according to situation) a little. Only on one occasion have I heard one after this date; that was on June 23rd, 1912, and I concluded it had been molested in breeding. I have heard approximately 45 during observation and have come to the conclusion that five weeks is a good average of the duration of their singing, an expansion of a few days (or vice versa) depending on the weather to a certain extent. With regard to the state of their nesting operations and singing I believe they sing frequently during the first half of incubation, but the latter half only occasionally, and after hatching never. I expect to be well criticised regarding the foregoing, but have stated the truth from personal observation on as many occasions as time would permit, paying no regard whatever to what I have read on the subject. By the latter portion of "Philomel's" letter I conclude he either intends or would like to keep a 'Gale, no doubt hoping to be charmed with its song, and as I have kept them and waited in vain (I am still hoping) for one to sing, a few words will not be out of place here on the subject. Firstly, I believe the number of 'Gales (caught or hand-reared) that sing in a cage or aviary would not reach five per hundred. Secondly, beware of the 7s. 6d. and 10s. Nightingales advertised at this time of the year on full song. They may be at the time of advertising, but possibly have to be caught before the buyer gets them. One fancier near here has kept them a number of years and he informs me that he has had them warble from late November until June, but has never had one on full song. I think anyone who has a 'Gale singing well and frequently in captivity would have little trouble in making three times the amount asked in some advertisements we see.

ARTHUR G. LEWIS.

Is this a Record?

Sir,—I have three hens and one cock Canary. I changed the cock three times each day, as the hens were all laying at the same time. They laid 15 eggs between them, and hatched 14 young and reared 12. The latter are all in one cage. One hen reared six and has started laying again. Is this a record for one cock? C. Pearce.

Young Bred from a Linnet Mule.

Sir,—I am writing to let readers know that I am the lucky one who has bred with a brown Linnet Mule and a Yorkshire yellow hen, and has got two young ones. The same brown Linnet Mule has also another Yorkshire yellow-green hen down on four eggs. This is my first attempt at hybrid breeding, and being successful in getting two out of the first four eggs, and having another hen on four eggs, it looks good. I have done better than I did with Canaries when I first started. My two young "Hybrids" are eight days old. I only bought the Linnet Mule last August, when out catching, for £1.

Northern Crest Club Members' Testimonial to Mr. Hutchinson

Sir,—I have closed this fund, which the members of the Northern Crest Club have subscribed to, to make to our late Secretary, Mr. Hutchinson, a presentation at a meeting to be held early. I thank all members who have subscribed. The fund has reached £5 2s. 6d., after deducting all expenses. We all know that Mr. Hutchinson is well worthy of same having done a lot of good for the Crested variety when he was secretary, and by the way he brought the Northern Crest Club shows success, his name will stand long in the history of the Club. The date of the meeting is to be announced in the Fancy press, and I hope there will be a large turn out of members.

Can Finches Rear the Cuckoo?

Sir,—I can assure correspondents that the above is quite possible, as I have come across many instances of same with Finches and Buntings, and on one occasion found an egg in a Magpie's nest. Only to-day, being out on the moors for a ramble with a few friends, we came across a Twite's nest with the young Cuckoo about five days old, as near as we could tell, along with another egg of the Cuckoo, partly incubated. The young Twites were all dead, lying at the foot of the nest. Your correspondent will know that the Twite is a seed-eating bird, so I think he will agree with me that it is quite possible for seed-eating birds to rear Cuckoos. Other nests I have found both eggs and young in are the Yellowhammer, Meadow Pipit, Pied Wagtail, and Skylark. I know a man here who has reared one of these birds very easily on the same food that he rears his Larks on. I might also mention that I have seen the male bird with three females, and watched them very closely, the male calling his note in the trees, while the females were feeding on the ground. The female's call is "coo-coo-coo," calling more sharply than the male, in a descending scale; and I am of the firm opinion that the Cuckoo is polygamous, the male bird running two or three females.

Percy Jowett.

P.S.—Being out with a friend with the gun after a Sparrowhawk, down at the bottom of a wooded hillside, we saw a bird come over the top of the trees, and my friend shot at the bird, thinking it was the Hawk. I ran and picked the bird up and found it was a Cuckoo in nestling plumage. I may as well state here that I know the bird when I see it, having stuffed both the Cuckoo, Kestrel, Merlin, and Sparrowhawk, etc. This bird was shot in September.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Macklin, I have had few opportunities of studying the feeding habits of the adult Cuckoo, but some 20 years ago, while I was slinging ink and bitter invectives against certain game owners for abetting the setting of pole-traps (now happily illegal), I, during the space of 12 days, removed nine Cuckoos from those instruments of torture and before sending the corpses to those responsible for their slaughter made an examination of the crop contents and found same to consist of various caterpillars and coleoptera, flies, spiders, etc., mixed with a proportion of earthy matter, the latter probably partaken of adhering to the food proper; no earthworms, snails, grain, or vegetable matter being discernible. No doubt this menu would be influenced by the nature of the locality (wild moorland), as also would the choice of foster parents, such species as Sedge Warblers, Hedge Sparrows, etc., being are rare as Pipits were plentiful. Coming to a more recent date and cultivated district, of two I examined one was crammed with the larvæ of the Magpie Moth and the other contained a small quantity of matter too far advanced in the digestive process for analysis. I have watched Cuckoos devour the hairy caterpillar from wild gooseberry bushes. With regard to the suggestion that certain Cuckoos favoured certain species as fosters, I have seen this theory advanced in a discussion on the colouration of Cuckoo eggs and while granting that there may be something in it from the latter point of view, I don't think the transferring of Cuckoo eggs from, say, a Pipit to a Hedge Sparrow or Sedge Warbler to a Redstart would have any ill-effect, a plentiful supply of insects being, I think, all that a young Cuckoo requires. But that a certain form of insect life is necessary is apparent from the fact that the Cuckoo invariably shuns certain species as fosters. That the line is drawn in a manner which is somewhat mystifying to us is demonstrated by the fact that though the Meadow Pipit may be considered as allied equally to the Lark and Wagtail yet though the first and last-named are common victims, the Lark never, notwithstanding the proximity and similarity of the nests, especially in moorlands and commons. I trust Mr. Macklin will pardon my scepticism, but over thirty years of close observation have not sufficed to reveal to me a single instance of a Cuckoo being reared by a Finch, and I, while open to conviction, want further proof before admitting that a Linnet in particular can perform the feat.

The Recent Portmadoc Show.

Sir,—The reporter of Portmadoc Show has made a few mistakes, as it was a clear buff that beat Mr. W. H. Williams's Palace winner, owned by my little boy, seven years of age. He is a keen young fancier, and has won several prizes. He has now got a nest of five youngsters from the above bird, and a yellow cinnamon hen. Also the class in which he won was open. In the local class I think there were some really good birds staged. The winner was a clinking var. yellow Yorkshire which would have made good in the open, as he won in a better and stronger class. The second was a cl. yell. Norwich, splendid type, and well-known.

Young Feeding Young.

Sir,—We had a nest of young Canaries hatch out three weeks ago; there were six. To-day I distinctly saw one of the bigger ones feeding one of the same nest, apparently disgorging the food just like its parents. I had just removed the hen, as she had begun plucking the young ones, and I suppose he was trying to help his father! I do not know if this is often the case, but I have never heard of another like it.

(Miss) F. Tate.

[It is not very unusual; similar cases were recorded in our last two issues, and are also well-known in wild-bird life.—Editor.]

Sir,—In reply to Mr. F. S. Stirk I have had several young birds about five weeks old that would feed what I call screaming youngsters (or those not able to pick for themselves) and in each case I found out that each feeder turned out to be a hen. It is all right allowing them to feed the others, as in all probability they would save a young one better than themselves, but in my opinion allowing them to feed stops their growth, as mine have all been small hens. I should advise anyone having such to separate them and procure a Filup feeder, they are advertised, and are cheap at the price. I have just had a pleasant experience. I had a hen which was bringing up two young birds, one being a cripple. The hen when they were seven days old died, and having no other bird ready to take them I had to hand feed, which is a task for anyone with birds at seven days old, as they have to be kept warm also. I sent off for a Filup feeder which came post haste. I had to keep them warm by bringing them into the house and placing them in the oven, with the door left open, or on the fire shelf if the oven felt too warm, covering over with a handkerchief. I mixed up some egg flake or egg and bread with warm water to a smooth paste, not too thin, adding a little grit passed through a very fine sieve. I put the cripple out of its misery, and have brought up the other, which is now three weeks old and is on the point of picking for itself. I can safely say that it is not a waster for size. Apologising for going away from first subject, but thinking it would help another fancier bent on saving a young bird as I have been.

Longsight's Good Fancier.

Sir,—I should like to pay a tribute, through your valuable paper, to one of the most whole-hearted fanciers we have in the Manchester district. I refer to Mr. W. Fairhurst (Longsight), for a more modest and generous fancier we could not have; one who is always ready with advice, and who will go a long way out of his road to help a novice. The only remuneration he expects is that you will treat your birds with kindness. I am sure I am voicing the opinion of all the members in the Manchester district, for his good work is well known amongst us. I think it only fair to compliment him now, and not wait until it appears in the Obituary column, which I hope will not be until many a long day hence.

A Grateful Bird Lover.

A Fancier's Little Daughter Comes to the Rescue.

Sir,—A faithful little bird fancier of mine (Miss L. C. Lynch) reared three young Canaries, from death to life I might say, after being only four hours hatched by the mother. The hen refused to feed them, leaving me three in a dying condition. I had no hen to put them under, as some were on eggs and the others had their young too large. I saw no chance to rear them, but to my surprise my little bird fancier took them in their nest, covered the little mites over with wadding and placed them in the hot oven in the kitchen range, with the door opened. Soon they began to get strong and she started feeding them with a little egg-food on the end of a match, which she pared flat. They began to get stronger and stronger. She kept them nicely covered with the wool in the oven for four days and four nights. I am very glad they are doing so well so far, as they were bred from my best birds. I am enclosing a photograph of my little girl who has so faithfully cared for them.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

Sir,—"Fair Play" makes the same mistake as other critics, inasmuch as he accepts my remarks concerning the novice as applying to all. Not for one moment does he appear to have paused and dissected the raw material of the Fancy. Because I have declared that sandwiched with the real article we have to contend with the "weed," the "parasite," and he of the "milk and water" temperament, etc., and because I have suggested these particular types to be allowed to work out their own salvation, I am forsooth a "Goliath," a "Dictator," a "Napoleon," one given to "Limehousing," and my articles are pure "swank." When any critic reasonably proves such exist only in my imagination, then I will amend, withdraw, or tender an abject apology, as he may desire.

Do not confuse what I have written as applying to the fancier (who need not be a novice) who is content and happy in the management of a few cage-birds, and who has no aspirations towards the show bench, nor pretends to have, even though a useful member of the local society. He obviously has the same prerogative as I, to please himself, and has therefore never entered into my deliberation. Just add this type to the one who really strives to get on, and what I have written concerns all that is left of them.

I expect in sheer weight of numbers the novice is, after all, the real backbone of the Fancy. His financial support in contributions, etc., keeps the pot boiling. As societies we encourage all. With alacrity we accept the annual mite from him, alas, who endeavours to seek some pleasure in maintaining a few cage-birds in circumstances which hopelessly beat him ere he commences, though the best he can afford. In him we raise and encourage false hopes that lead him to believe he may one day shine with the champions. Heaven forbid that I should take a hand in doling out such hypocrisy. By all means encourage such in our midst, if so doing allows only a ray of sunshine into their lives; but why paint the picture, and why accept the hard-earned mite? What a backbone! What types of sickness! Who can suggest a better remedy than I have put forth? Who is there can prove I have made much ado about nothing? No, "Fair Play," I want a novice backbone with more marrow within it than the one you have in mind, before I admit it is "the backbone of the Fancy."

E. W. Allsopp.

Sir,—By this time, I should say that if Mr. Allsopp is still of the opinion that the novice is a candidate for that position where, according to himself, they toil not neither do they spin, he will have come to the reluctant conclusion that some of them know how to look after themselves. I have read his article, and I can assure him that it was quite good enough as an article on Norwich Plainheads, without introducing that portion where he moralised upon the novice's vicissitudes with a philosophy worthy of Demosthenes. I was astonished at his unrestrained candour, and I don't see that he ought to complain about the bricks that are wrapped in silk handkerchiefs, when the bricks he used were not even wrapped in sackcloth, but were thrown in a naked and unashamed condition. The novice is a philosophic chap, as a rule, and when he gets a knock, he generally—or apparently—turns the other cheek, else I should have imagined that that portion of Mr. Allsopp's article would have presaged a storm strong enough to have blown little Lucy's hair off, ringworm and all. It is difficult to get the novice to enthuse enough. Older fanciers keep on either dying off or retiring from the Fancy, and if we must replace them with interest, the tendency towards the novice must be to humour him, cajole him, if you like, but never scold him. No matter what Mr. Allsopp or any other champion exhibitor says, he is the backbone of the Fancy. Without him the Fancy couldn't live long.

The Future of the Cinnamon Canary Club.

Sir,—Having taken over the duty of secretary (pro tem.) I should esteem it a favour if secretaries would apply for patronage, also for our club show. I might say the members have promised to support strongly all shows where our patronage is given. The society has a few pounds in hand, and is willing to distribute same in specials in an altogether different manner this season. I may also say I would be very pleased if any of the Cinnamon breeders throughout the country would just give it their serious consideration and become members. I have noticed a good many exhibiting this variety. The subscription is only 2s. 6d., which is very low. I should like to see the Cinnamon Canary make a little headway. We had our annual general meeting on May 21, but had to adjourn until June 4. I shall be pleased to forward a report of same at a later date, for the benefit of distant members. Should any member who cannot attend meeting have suggestions to make, will he please forward them not later than June 3, addressed to me at 88, Abraham Street, Blackburn. I hope I may have a good response to all I ask.

An Excellent Method of Mending Broken Legs.

Sir,—On returning from a journey last autumn, my wife told me that an old cock Yorkshire was very lame, and had been so for several days. I went at once to examine our old favourite, and saw that he had a badly fractured leg. I visited a friend's hen pen, secured several flight feathers, and chose a suitable one, cutting a piece from the quill a little shorter than the Canary's leg joint. I split it down one side and removed the pith. Then I straightened the bird's leg, and slipped the now empty quill over it. The quill closed up and formed a very fine sheath (or splint) over the fracture. The bird was very soon on the perch after I returned him to the cage, though, of course, he had no use in his claws. We bathed his foot daily for about three weeks, then removed the quill sheath and found that the bird had made a good recovery in spite of him being in the grandfather stage. Have you, Mr. Editor, known of anyone using this method before? Previously to me coming home he had, the wife says, been on the cage bottom for days.

W. Downing.

[Yes; we have known of this method for many years, and have used it successfully—not, however, for fractures of long standing.—Editor.]

DO YOU EXPORT?

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

Meeting May 23, Mr. G. Bates chair, and a good turnout. Schedule formed for the N.F. show, with 26 classes. It was carried that entries close June 17, but if any likely specimens turn out, entries can be taken until June 25. Stewards picked were Mr. W. Laxson, J. Robson, J. Mason, R. Callaway, A. Dawson, and J. W. Robson. Mr. R. Callaway was made a member.—C. Davison, Sec.

PELTON, BIRTLEY, AND CHESTER-LE-STREET (Amalg.).

Meeting at Pelton Fell Colliery Inn, May 23; Mr J. Stanger, chair, with a table show for British birds, all F.M., Mr. T. Elliott judged. LINNET OR TWITE: 1, 3, vhc, Wilford; 2, c, Davison; hc, Robinson. REDPOLL OR SISKIN: 1, 2, 3, c, Wilford; vhc, hc, Lindsay. BULLF. OR GOLDF.: 1, Wilford. Next meeting Chester-le-Street, June 6, at Dun Cow Inn, at 7, when a table show will be held for Canaries, 4 classes: Nor. buff, Yorks. yell., Crest, and A.O.V. All birds to wear closed rings.—John Robinson, Sec.

SHETTLESTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Johnston's Hall, May 13, Mr. S. F. Wood presiding over a large turnout. Letter read from Fife C.B.L. Mr. Wood was appointed delegate to attend meeting; two new members were enrolled: Messrs. R. Jackson, W. A. Howieson; and four proposed for next meeting, June 10. Business arrangements for the F.F. show, July 11. A lecture was given by Mr. Craig, in which he gave some very helpful hints on the feeding and keeping of Hardbill British birds. After the lecture a hearty discussion ensued, questions came pouring from all round, which were ably answered by the lecturer to everybody's satisfaction. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Craig, and a very pleasant evening was spent.—A. Berry, Sec.

WALTON AND EVERTON C.B.S.

Meeting, 3, Priory Grove, May 13, Mr. M. E. Wilson chair. Four new members elected. Schedule for night nest feather shows was drawn up. Same classification for novices as for champions. This gives novices better chance for challenge cups. Mr. Tom Evans has kindly promised the staging. Season specials count at nest feather and old show only. Champions.—Cup, 1st; gold medal, given by Mr. Roberts, 2nd; biscuit barrel, 3rd; set of carvers, 4th. Novices.—Cup, 1st; gold medal, given by Mr. Tom Evans, 2nd; biscuit barrel, 3rd; set of carvers, 4th. Points count upwards. Ramble to Simonswood with North Liverpool C.B.S., on Sunday, May 31st. Meet 10.30 a.m. Walton Church.—Robinson and Burns, Hon. Secs.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Meeting, May 14, with good muster of members to hear Mr. J. Robson, who gave advice in feeding young birds. His system was to give plenty of soaked rape after the young had left their parents, instead of crushed hemp, and his mortality worked out about at 1 per cent. He described his method of moulting birds and advised mixing up crushed linseed with the egg food. Various questions were asked and answered. On May 17 the members had their annual ramble to Epping. A good number of members and friends turned up and an extremely enjoyable day was spent. The weather was very favourable and nests were found in galore. Heaps of nests found contained young of all ages. Then we had a jolly good dinner at the Blacksmith's Arms, and after a wash and brush up we continued our ramble homewards.—F. Onslow, Hon. Sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, May 14, headquarters, Mr. T. Rldal. For nest feather show the following was decided: Prize money, 3s., 2s., 1s., 6d. entry. Full prize money seven and over. Mr. J. C. Barnes judge. Open 4, close 8; bird staged 2 o'clock sharp. Mr. Matthews and Mr. Wilson agreed to act as stewards. Doorkeepers were also arranged. Specials were promised and allotted in all sections. After business a question by ballot took place which proved extremely interesting. Mr. Marshall had a theory of sweating hens. It had been proved by science that birds did not sweat, his theory being that it was nesting diarrhœa. Mr. Matthews had on view a Canary egg no bigger than a dried pea. The cause of dead in shell came in for a lot of discussion, the Sec.'s theory being that it was caused mostly by young cocks, the embryo chick not being sufficiently strong to break the shell. Don't forget nest feather show also June meeting table show, 10 classes.—C. Tomlinson.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

Meeting and lecture in St. Thomas's Schools, Ardwick; Mr Boothman, chair. Mr. Long, in opening his lecture, read to us a very old book on birds, which was very interesting and amusing, yet it must have been very instructive in the days of long ago, when the wild Canary was in full swing, and served to show the rapid strides that have been made in the fancy and the almost perfect pitch to which we have got our hobby. Next he turned to hints on bird breeding. He related how we had risen from the wild Canary to the present varieties, and how we had got the present plumage. Next he dwelt on Borders. A few years since this variety was little known in the south, but at present it had spread there, and also to the North of Scotland, and bids fair to become as popular as the Norwich and York-shire. Much of its popularity is doubtless due to the fact that it is not colour-fed, and judged for type, carriage, and quality of feather only. For lightness and silkiness of feather it may be perhaps muffled, but certainly not beaten; it is the pigmy of the Canary family, only measuring 5 or 5¼ inches. In shape it is a sort of a go between a Norwich and Yorkshire, being slimmer than the former and not so straight as the latter. Cinnamons, he said, differed from all others in colour of plumage, which is rich and of a deep tone; there was little doubt that the Cinnamon is a sport from a Green; further, it should be noted that the Cinnamon frequently occurs in every variety that possesses green representatives, and seldom in those that do not, such as Lancashires, Lizards, and London Fancies. The beautiful eye and wing markings of the evenly-marked birds, and light plumage of the variegated Mules, had all been attributed to its influence, so that, in short, we reckon it one of the most powerful factors in the development of the fancy varieties. The Cinnamon is very peculiar in its behaviour when crossed with other varieties, and many interesting deductions may be gathered from it; thus, if you wish to produce Cinnamon coloured birds of any variety beside self coloured, say, crested or marked birds, it will be found necessary to use Cinnamon bred cock, and unless Cinnamon blood is present in the hens as well, all the Cinnamon feathered youngsters will be hens. Regarding Norwich, the lecturer told us what a typical Norwich should be, and also touched on breeding for colour, as he thought colour-feeding was detrimental to the birds. Yorkshires, he stated, did not possess the same colour as Norwich, but probably excelled that breed for even markings. After giving us a very interesting paper, Mr. Long stated he would be pleased to answer questions, to which several responded, and Mr. Long answered in an able manner. A vote of thanks was carried, and so ended a very instructive and interesting lecture.—R. Booth, Press Correspondent.

NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

At our last meeting we arranged to hold a night show of British, June 3, at headquarters. Birds staged 7.30. Mr. J. Lloyd kindly consented to judge. Members may make entries on night of show; points scored go towards season's specials. We arranged to hold N.F. show June 27. Final arrangements will be made at next meeting June 3, when we hope to have a good muster. Messrs. Pye, Simons, Hilton, Lowe and Butler were elected members. Don't forget the ramble May 31.—E. S. Broadbent, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Official election for 1914:—Committee, G. F. Adamson 30 votes, John McLay 30, John Noble 28, A. Chalmers 27, C. Campbell 26, Wm. Paul 24, D. McLaren 21, Cram 20, R. Whitton 20, J. F. Dewar 17, J. McNaughton 17, G. Smart 17, R. Lambie 16, G. Shillingham 16, A. J. Howie 13, E. Barron 13; judges, John McLay 28, J. Young 25, A. Chalmers 22, G. F. Adamson 20, John Noble 19, C. Campbell 17; auditors, G. Smart 11, F. Taylor 8; sec. and treas., John Young, 76, Burn Road, Rutherglen, 30. On the question of the adoption of closed rings, for 14, against 18, optional 1; 33 papers returned, 1 spoiled.—G. Smart and F. Taylor, Scrutineers.

COALTOWN OF WEMYSS C.B.S.

Meeting, Victoria Hall, May 21, Mr. James Coventry presiding. A report of the Fife League meeting, held in Kirkcaldy, was submitted, and a good deal of business was got through. We have been fortunate in securing the following well-known gentlemen to judge at our open show, Dec. 5: Nor., G. Arnott, Sinclairtown; Borders and Yorks, R. T. Campbell, Dunfermline; Brit. and For., G. McArdle, Arbroath. Will members try and turn out full at next meeting, June 11, as we intend having a ramble and want to fix a date for same? Mr. A. Storrar has kindly consented to give a lecture at League meeting held in Coaltown, July 4.—Hugh Clelland, Sec.

LEICESTER C.B.S.

Meeting at headquarters, May 20. After the ordinary business members settled down to listen to a most interesting lecture by Mr. Stevens on "The Norwich Plainhead," and its rearing and management, which opened a big discussion, everybody joining in, and only the call of time closed it. A most hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Stevens. On May 22 the first annual supper and smoking concert was held at headquarters for the presentation of prizes won during the last season, 32 members and friends being present. In the unfortunate absence through illness of Mr. Hawthorne, our president, the chair was taken by Mr. Leavesley. An excellent supper was enjoyed by all, and afterwards a grand musical programme was entered upon and greatly appreciated. Amongst so many artistes it is difficult to pick and choose, but perhaps the following were the outstanding features of the evening: Songs by Messrs. Warren, Miller, Rice and Suffolk; the Roe Bros., as comedians; W. Leavesley, a recitation. Mr. Everett, at the piano, rendered yeoman service. During the interval the chairman presented the prizes with a few suitable words. Canary section, W. Day, cup; W. Davies, medal. British, W. Brooks, cup; W. Hawthorne, medal. Mule or Hybrid, Mr. Heighton, cup. The evening concluded with "Auld Lang Syne."—J. Hardbattle.

ALTRINCHAM (Open) C.B.S.

Meeting, May 20, Station Cafe. Mr. T. Harrison presided over a good attendance. After business, Mr. Atkinson, Old Trafford, lectured on the Yorkshire Canary. He referred to the pleasure it gave him to know that Altrincham had again a C.B. Society, and with such an experienced fancier as the chairman, Mr. Harrison, and a sound committee and officers, it only remained for the rest of the members to make the new society as successful as it should be. In the production of the Yorkshire Canary it is essential that we should have fixed in our minds what we are aiming at. The fancier must take some lines of his own, but without experience he cannot arrive at what is required as "ideal." The Yorkshire must be first a bird of position, erect, fearless carriage, head, neck, back and tail in a straight line, and he attached great importance to this point; see that you have position in your stock birds, and don't fail to introduce new blood when losing in position. Head should be small and round, with narrow skull, neck thin, moderately long and straight, shoulders round, narrow and well filled, and the butts must be buried, back long and straight, breast round and smooth, body must be long, gradually tapering to the waist, legs long without being stilty, tail long and closely folded, short, close, tight quality feather, close, tight wing carriage with length, size 6¾ in., with symmetrical proportions. In double hulling for size there is a tendency to widen the skull; if it was that colour must be improved, he would prefer introducing green blood, although at present the Yorkshire was not so much a bird of colour as some other varieties of Canary. The lecturer then invited questions, and many points were raised, and all questions satisfactorily answered. Mr Broadbent, in moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Atkinson, referred to the able manner in which he answered all questions and to his very instructive lecture. Mr. Hickson seconded. The chairman thanked Mr. Atkinson for his kind wishes in his opening remarks. Mr. Atkinson thanked the members for the way in which they had received him. Next meeting June 3, Station Cafe, F.F. show, discussion and ailments of young birds.—C. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting, May 16, Mr. W. Cresswell chair. Decided that schedule stands same as last year for Y.B. show. New members enrolled: T. Wilkinson and J. G. Wearis. Don't forget next meeting will be the last before the Y.B. show. Mr. W. H. Butler, South Shields, will judge.—W. Thompson, Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, May 20, with a very moderate attendance. A discussion took place on the novice members' show, June 3, at 8, and the following arrangements made. One class each for Norwich, Mr. Hayling judge. Borders, Mr. Short; A.O.V., Mr. Hands; Mules, Mr. Pounsett. No entrance fee. Special for most points at the three shows given by Mr. Madagan; 2s. for 2nd most points by Messrs. Stubbs Bros., and special for most points gained by rung birds, given by Mr. Treasure. Mr. Toplin (Lewisham) who we were very pleased to see, kindly gave 2s. 6d. for the winning bird in the class with most entries. Mr. Pounsett opened an interesting discussion on "Staging," and threw out some very useful hints. This was well followed up by all present, and a lot of useful information was gained.—A. S. Treasure.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

Adjourned general meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, May 23, Mr. R. Halliday chair. Patronage was allotted to the following shows: Halifax and Dis., judge, W. Stables; Bradford East, W. A. Cowgill; Skelmanthorpe, F. Allen; Newcastle-on-Tyne, J. Stewart; Crystal Palace (Ramsden's), W. Mundell; Sheffield O.S., W. Mundell; Blaydon-on-Tyne, W. A. Cowgill; Manningham and Bradford (West), joint show, P. Mason and H. Sutcliffe; Bradford (National), T. Heath and J. C. Barnes; and Windhill, H. J. Chittenden. Decided to offer for competition in the novice section at all Yorkshire Union shows, £2 5s. in value, as follows: 1st most points, £1; 2nd, value 15s.; 3rd, value 10s. Intending members are desired to forward name and address for inclusion in the Club's handbook to—John Greaves, Sec., 279, Hollings Road, Bradford.

ROCHDALE. &c., (Affiliated) C.B.S.

Meeting, May 16, at the rooms of the R.O.C. Seven societies were represented for the purpose of arranging lectures, etc., and choosing officials. Mr. R. Blincoe was elected chairman, Mr. W. Adams sec. and treas., and after a long discussion as to the best means of creating greater interest in the Bird Fancy, which around here wants stirring up a little, we decided to try a little variation in the lectures, etc. On a ballot being taken as to the societies having a lecture each, Littleborough and Small Bridge C.B.S. take 1st place, Rochdale O.C. and Rochdale Good Intent 2nd, Bury 3rd, Heywood 4th, North Manchester 5th. Decided if possible to get Mr. Harrison, of Sale, to give the lecture at Littleborough on Seeds and Their Uses, which should be a good one for this district, as they are so close to the moors and open country, where there is a good supply of different seeds and plants, etc. At Rochdale, Mr. Blincoe has promised to give a lecture on Judging by Points. At Bury, Mr. Perry, Heywood, late of Congleton, will lecture on British, which he has made a study of, and this is another lecture which should be a good one. For the Heywood Society, it was decided to get Mr. R. Schofield to give a demonstration on Washing and Preparing for Exhibition. For North Manchester Society, it was arranged to give a kind of mixed lecture on Lancs., Lizards, Crests, etc., as there have been so many lectures on Yorks. and Norwich in this district. We have a 15-mile radius, and we hold amalgamated shows, lectures, discussions, washing exhibitions, etc.; in fact, anything that will be beneficial to all. Times and dates of these lectures I will notify as soon as I have made arrangements with the lecturers. I sincerely hope that our efforts will be rewarded by good attendances. Decided to have a meeting after the Littleborough lecture to settle the other dates, etc. I shall be pleased to give any society in this radius any information, as our object is to try to do good all round.—Wm. Adams, Sec., 19, Bedford St., Rochdale.

SPRINGBURN, POSSILPARK C.B.C.

Meeting and table show, Reid Hall, May 13, Mr. Sloan presiding. Letter read from Fife C.B.L. asking to appoint a delegate to attend conference for reduction in railway rates, and Penman was appointed. Application from Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A. was read, asking to support guarantee fund for open show, which was supported. The judges for the F.F. and annual shows were nominated, also classification for same: 16 classes for F.F., and 76 for annual. Mr. R. Watson judged the table show, and Mr. Waugh acted as steward. LIGHT MULE: 1, J. Dunlop. DARK: 1, Webster; 2, Brown; 3, Stewart; 4, J. Dunlop; 5, Fraser. BRAMBLE OR CHAFF.: 1, Anderson; 2, Webster; 3, Swan; 4, W. Dunlop. BUNTING: 1, W. Dunlop; 2, J. Dunlop; 3, McCorreskon; 4, Crawford; 5, Fraser. FOR: 1, Webster. Mr. Sloan's special for best bird was won by D. F. Webster's dark Mule; Mr. Crawford's special second best, W. Dunlop's Bunting. A special vote of thanks to Mr. Watson for judging terminated the meeting.—T. Penman, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting Maskell's Hotel, May 21. Mr. E. A. Allsopp presided; the attendance was a little below previous meetings. Mr. Jepson reported he had been able, through the courtesy of the commanding officers of the 2nd Welsh Field Ambulance R.A.M.C., to arrange for the use of their drill hall, Newport-road for our open show in November. The best thanks of the society are due to Mr. Jepson for the interest he is taking in the society. Resolved that Mr. E. J. Banks judge Yorkshires, and Mr. E. J. Davies all others at the Y.B. show June 17. Decided to increase the Border Fancy and novice classes. Mr. E. J. Banks is giving 10s. 6d. for best bird in the show; Mr. E. A. Allsopp, 2s. 6d. in each of the Norwich, Yorkshire and Border sections, for best bird shown by a novice in open classes; Mr. Ball, special value 2s. 6d. for most entries; Mr. J. P. Gunn was enrolled a member. I appeal to all members to attend meetings in the slack months; also let me have their breeding results at next meeting so as to send same on to the Press.—E. Thomas, Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Meeting May 6 Oddfellow's Hall, Question and Answer night; the attendance was fairly good. There were some interesting discussions which ought to benefit all present. Decided to elect Mr. W. Cowgill, Bradford, to judge members' annual show, Dec. 12. The annual ramble was arranged for June 13 to Houghton Woods, when all fanciers will be welcome. Fanciers do not report a very favourable breeding season up to now, but hope for the best in the near future.—J. L. Heseltine, Hon. Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting, 81, Kilbowie Road, May 21st, Mr. Morton presiding. Agreed to hold F.F. show, July 4; classification: Nor. 4, Borders 3, Yorks. 2, Crests 1, C.B. 1, A.O.V. 1, Light Mules or Var. 1, Dark 1, Hyb. 1. A communication was read from the sec. of Fife C.B.L. regarding a conference of societies in reference to approaching the railway companies in respect of the charges for sending birds by rail. Agreed to send a delegate, and Mr. McGown was appointed. Mr. Sheridan gave notice of motion for next meeting: "That we instruct our sec. to communicate with the secretaries of other societies in Dumbartoushire regarding the advisability of promoting an open show in Dumbartonshire." One new member was admitted.—Wm. Kane, Sec.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, he pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

WILL NOT LAY (Cardiff).—Really, the best thing you can do with a hen that did not lay an egg last season, has not laid one this season, and cannot even be got to mate, is to discard her altogether as a breeder, notwithstanding the fact that she bred well in 1912. All hens do not retain their reproductive powers for the same length of time, and the probability is that this hen has come to the end of her career of usefulness as a stock bird, and to go on relying upon her to come into condition at this season is only to court further disappointment. You may, if you wish to try her another season, turn her into a good-sized flight, where she can get plenty of exercise; feed her on a fairly plain diet, and give an unlimited supply of half-ripe dandelion seed heads gathered fresh daily. Then, if she shows any desire to mate in the next month or so, give her another trial, which, were the case mine, would be the last she would have if she failed again. For the present, fill her place in the breeding cage with a last year's hen, in good vigorous health, that is ready to go to nest; whether with a first or second brood does not matter at all.

REMEDY FOR BLINDNESS (Richardson).—If, as I suspect, the cause of tho blindness is cataract, which you can easily tell by looking closely into the bird's eyes in a good light, when you will see that the centre of each eye affected is clouded with a milky-white spot, there is no remedy at all for it, so it is only misplaced kindness to worry the bird with treatment which is foredoomed to failure. If kept caged alone, the bird will live happily enough for the full natural term, and as you already find, will sing quite well, which is not altogether suggestive of misery or unhappiness, as birds, like humans, do not, as a rule, express sorrowful feelings by singing.

SLIPPED HIND TOE (Salopian).—Keep the bird in a moderate-sized cage alone for a few weeks, and for tho first week put in full-sized perches, which will afford it a comfortable grip, and see that they are made of a nice soft wood, and of the usual flattened oval shape. During this time put on and let the bird wear one of the rubber bands as described in reply to "S. A. M. James," in last issue. After wearing this baud for a week, remove it and substitute thin and almost round perches, only a little thicker than an ordinary lead pencil for the full-sized ones, and leave these and nature to complete the cure, which will occur in duo course. When you notice that the bird has acquired a good grip with the claw, not beforc, gradually increase the size of the perches by giving ono nearly full size perch, and later on a full-sized one in place of the thin ones

SEEMS AS IF LOST (F. G. S., Deptford).—I am afraid the hen is a very highly strung nervous woakling, and the curious attacks you describe are merely attacks of excessive nervousness. You would be best advised to make no further attempts to breed from her, as she is uot likely to do you much credit as a stock bird, and would doubtless produce, if anything at all, no end of tromble and disappointment for you in the future. Keep her caged alone, and see that the cage is free from insect pests, that the perches are of a proper size and shape, a slightly flattened oval, to afford her a comfortable grip, and that they are made of a snitable soft wood and not planed too smooth. You might also see if the claws are overgrown, and if they are, trim them back to a proper length, as badly overgrown claws will often cause a good deal of clumsiness and difficulty in perching. In addition to the seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give a young growing stool of dandelion, or a liberal supply of half ripe dandelion seed heads, and add to the drinkwater 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for three weeks. Allow the bird to bathe as freely as it desires to do. Am glad to know the treatment previously advised was so successful.

A BACKWARD COCK (An Anxious Beginner).—The cock is not in a very forward condition, and probably the slight huskiness is responsible for this. See that you are not keeping them in a cold draughty position, nor where they are exposed to extreme and sudden changes of temperature. Beyond paying careful attention to these points, you can do little but exercise patience, when things will doubtless come round all right in a short time. Leave the birds together, and add to the staple seed diet a teaspoonful of egg food with about a third of the quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it, every second day, and on the alteruate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, black rape, millet, and teazle. Also give two or three dandelion leaves daily. Add 20 drops of whisky, and five each of oxyuol of squills and Ipecacuanha wine daily for three or four days to remove the huskiness.

SITS CONSTANTLY IN NEST (H. Hedley).—It is due to a broken cycle of reproduction, and in an obstinate case, as yours appears to be, there is practically no remedy for it. You can only exercise unlimited patience and trust that things will run into a more natural groove in their own time, which may occur in some weeks hence, or again may not occur at all, in which event, of course, the hen's career as a stock bird is at an end. Try the effect of giving her a clutch of fertile common eggs to hatch out and rear the young if she will do so. This method sometimes results in bringing about a normal cycle after the young are reared, and may have this salutary effect in your case. If this fails, either discard the hen altogether or turn her into a good-sized flight, give a fairly plain dietary, with a liberal supply of green food and wild seed heads in variety, and keep her thus until next spring, when you may try her again in the breeding cage.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS (N. E. C.).—Thanks for your letter. It is gratifying to learn that you have found the advice in our columns of such benefit that your previous failures seem like being turned into success. As a beginner you should equip your self with a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our manager before the young brood is hatched, as this will help you out of practically every difficulty you may meet with in the rearing of the young.

PANTING AND WHEEZING (Jim).—A hen that pants heavily when breathing is certainly not a suitable bird for mating to produce good, sound and robust progeny. That is, of course, if the panting is not the result of over-fatness, in which case it is merely a question of reducing the surplus tissue. Try the following treatment for two or three weeks, and if birds are not well and approaching breeding condition in that time, write again, referring to this reply, and I will advise you further. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, not the black rape, and in addition give a small teaspoonful of soft food with a third of the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure, mixed in it every second day. On the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle, and every day give a liberal supply of half ripe dandelion seed heads or a freshly-gathered stool of young dandelion. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days. Then omit this, and substitute four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid daily for a week. See that the birds are kept free from direct cold draughts or rapid and extreme fluctuations.

LOOKS LIKE FAILURE (Giving Up, G. D.).—You say you do not think the feeding is wrong, but you do not say what that feeding is, so I cannot confirm your opinion on the matter, or otherwise. You should also have said whether the cock was left with the hen whilst she was sitting or not. I can only suspect from the informatiou in your letter that she ceased feeding because she was coming forward for laying again. As she has already had three clutches of eggs I would advise you to mate her now with the Linnet and give one of the other hens a better chance with the cock Canary. Leave the Linnet with her altogether until she has gone to nest, and disturb them as little as possible by avoiding all possible interference. If the cock Canary has been with her each time whilst she was sitting on the former occasions, remove the Linnet and take him out of her sight as soon as she begins to sit the next time, leaving her to hatch out and rear the young by herself. Feed on a plain diet whilst she is sitting, and do not begin to give hemp when the young are hatched until they are eight or ten days old. On the other hand, if the cock Canary was removed when she was sitting on the other occasions, and the Linnet is a steady, reliable bird, try leaving him with her on the next occasion. As regards the other two hens, give them a small teaspoonful of egg-food every second day and mix in it a third of the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure each time. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, and millet. Give a liberal supply of half ripe dandelion seed heads, or a fresh young growing stool of dandelion daily. Mate the cock with the one that seems most ready to nest at once, and when she has gone to nest, if this does happen, remove him and mate him with the other hen, and thus increase your chances of getting at least one of the hens to nest this season.

A VICIOUS COCK (J. G.).—Assuming the cock is energetic and in good song, his behaviour is doubtless due to his being in exceptionally high condition, and there are at least two ways in which you might utilise such a cock for breeding with the average amount of success. First, by mating him with a very strong and robust hen of a rather dominant persuasion which will be able and willing to return his Roland with an Oliver, and leaving them to settle down to business in their own way. In this case it would be advisable to remove him when the clutch of eggs are laid, and leave her to hatch and rear the young by herself. Second, by keeping one in each side of a double breeding cage with the wire slide between. Give the hen nesting material, and let things proceed in this way until the hen has begun nesting in earnest, and then allow the cock to run with her for a couple of hours each morning until the third egg is laid. Then take him away altogether out of the sight of the hen, and leave her to do the hatching and rearing by herself as in the first method.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

GOLDFINCH NOT READY (Young Starter).—Your Goldfinch cannot be long now before he is ready for mating. Perhaps he had a late moult, and you did not feed him particularly well during the winter months. You do not say anything about the feeding in your letter, so presume you are giving the seeds as frequently advised to other readers. Soak a spoonful of mixed seeds, and give him three times a week, also offer him a liberal allowance of dandelion seed pods; these can be collected easily just now upon any waste ground or along the country roadside. This treatment with a bath on fine days should soon bring him into breeding condition. Place his cage near the hen, so that he is able to see and sing to her.

WHAT ARE THEY (Devonian).—Thanks for your letter respecting the young hatched under your Canary. I quite agree with you that tho "clears" would be Canaries, and that the other dark skinned one is probably a Hyhrid, the colour of the quill feathers that are just showing are what one would expect from the Linnet cross. When they are old enough to be certain of the parentage, I shall be glad to have a postcard from you.

A BUSY GOLDFINCH (Learning).—There is nothing the matter with your Finch; knocking the beak on the perch or wires of tho cage is simply a habit which the birds contract for the want of something to do. Put him in a big flight cage occasionally, and let him stretch his wings, and give him a big bundle of wild food to amuse himself with.

WILL EGGS BE FERTILE? (Inquisitive).—If the birds have paired, which they may have done without your knowing it, there is no reason why the eggs should not be fertile. You say the birds have been together a week and a day, which is ample; in fact, fertile eggs have been obtained in half the time. You had better remove the eggs as soon as laid, and when you allow the hen to set, remove the cock to another cage, or compartment, or he will possibly destroy the eggs some day when the hen comes off to feed. If there are any young ones, she will rear them herself, after which you can run the cock with her for another nest.

BULLFINCH OUT OF CONDITION (Sutherland).—I am sorry your pet is not doing well, as you appear to be taking great care of him. You say you have examined him for insects, but the loss of feathers as you describe is indicative of grey lice. Catch the bird and hold him in the hand for a few minutes, and turn up the feathers on the body, if he has any of these you will see them running among the feathers and on the hand. He should then be dusted with insect powder, and rolled in a piece of cloth and allowed to remain in it for about ten minutes. Afterwards mix a little quassia solution with his bathing water, only a few drops at first, or he will possibly refuse to use it. Your diet of seeds, etc., appears to be fairly good, but to these should be added sunflower seeds, in fact, at present he should have about a dozen seeds every day. Make a mixture of hemp, niger and maw seed, and give him a spoonful three times a week. If he will eat soft food, let him have a little egg and biscuit or a cube of bread soaked in hot milk, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it. Give him this three days a week, and in other days a small spoonful of Chemical Food in his drinker, first boiling the water or it will not mix.

REARING CHAFFINCH (H. W. Daw).—I am glad to hear you have been successful in rearing a young Chaffinch under your Canaries. As he appears to be doing so well you had better continue the same treatment. As soon as he begins to feed himself give him a little live food, such as greenfly, small caterpillars, and pieces of mealworms, gradually get him on to seed in the same way as you do your Canaries. If you can manage to drop a few live ants eggs or greenfly into his beak while still in the nest it will assist him immensely. When he is doing for himself do not discontinue the soft food entirely but give him occasionally a little insectile food as used for Warblers, or even a little egg and biscuit.

NOT DOING WELL (A. H. S.).—The great difficulty one has to contend with when keeping a mixed collection of birds in a large aviary is to give a suitable food that will be acceptable to all, and keep them healthy. What you had better do is to cage separately all the birds affected and feed each one for a time at least on the foods that have been found most suitable for them while in captivity. Bathe the eye of each bird that is affected with warm water, first mixing with a cupful half-a-teaspoonful of boracic acid This should be done daily, and all perches washed and changed frequently. You should also change all the perches in your aviary. Treat the Bullfinch that is weak on the same lines as advised to "Sutherland" in this issue, and I would advise you to procure a copy of our Nutshell booklet dealing with the Bullfinch and Goldfinch, these will enable you to secure for them the proper treatment. Add a fairly liberal allowance of sunflower seed to your seed diet for the birds in the aviary, also soak some mixed seeds and give them two or three times each week. You should also try to procure a good brand of wild seed mixture and give them a little twice a week. I notice you are not using any teazle seed; this is a mistake; for a mixed collection of birds it could be used in the proportiou of one part to three parts of Canary. Collect groundsel, chickweed, shepherd's purse, and dandelion and give daily. Make into good size bundles and hang up in the aviary, all the different varieties of seeding grasses you can find, change these for fresh ones two or three times a week. If you carry out these instructions you should soon see an improvement in your stock.

ENOUGH TO REAR A NEST OF CHICKS.

And prove for yourself how much better is this method of rearing than the old-fashioned one of hard-boiled eggs and bread crumbs or biscuits.

Thousands of chicks have died through sour Egg Food. Why incur unnecessary trouble and expense by preparing with the attendant risks of the food soon becoming sour, when you have at your disposal Victoria Egg and Biscuit Food, which is reliable in every way—quickly prepared, does not become sour, and is infinitely more economical.

Canaries and other Cage Birds welcome it, and rear strong, well-developed chicks. Made crumbly-moist with hot or cold water or scalded milk, it is ever ready for use.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

IS IT HARMFUL (E. S.).—Most outdoor aviaries contain laurel, and I have never known harm to result therefrom; in fact, it is used largely, as it is one of few plants which Hardbills do not mutilate or severely prune, but even with Parrakeets I have never heard of any harmful results, though I know of one instance in which Madagascar Lovebirds cut the leaves up into strips and used them to line their nest receptacle with. They took no harm therefrom, and successfully reared a brood of young.

DOING GRAND (C. Hainsworth).—Thanks for appreciative letter; we are indeed pleased to hear of so happy a result in an almost hopeless case. Continue the treatment till the bird is in perfect feather again, and then keep dietary carefully regulated on the lines given.

GREY PARROT (F. S.).—Give a little boiled maize daily if the bird will eat it; boil till soft, drain off all water, and then stir in or dust over it half a teaspoonful of flour of sulphur. Give daily ten drops of cod liver oil on a piece of plain cake, biscuit, scone or anything similar the bird will eat. So long as the voidings are not watery loose, give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water—of course, having the water continually in the cage. Give a little ripe fruit daily, any kind it will eat, also nuts (walnut or barcelona are best). There is less waste with shelled nuts. Cuttlebone and grit must be continually in the cage. The other items

HAND-REARING CHIFF-CHAFFS (A. W.).—I gather from your letter that you have had no experience in the keeping and handrearing of British birds before this season, and I fear you have chosen anything but easy Softbills to commence with; in fact, I would advise you not to attempt the rearing of these, but try your hand first with some of the more easily reared birds, such as Song Thrush and Blackbird, or more robust Warblers. To successfully hand-rear Chiff-Chaffs, you would require a supply of live ants' eggs for the first few days, then with these could be mixed a little hard-boiled egg and dried ants' eggs made moist by being soaked in warm milk. To this mixture should be added gradually a pinch of best quality insectile food, and as they grow, the live eggs could be left off, and pieces of mealworms, green fly, or small caterpillars given. The young birds would require to be fed frequently from early morning until sunset, just giving them a little at a time, so that they are ready for the next feed when you attend to them. All the food at first should be made rather moist with fresh new milk. So they require to be led along on easy stages until they can feed themselves on the best insectile food, and other delicacies usually given to small Warblers. I have given you the above to show you that the rearing of such birds is not an easy matter, and would advise you not to attempt it, unless you are fully prepared to do your very best to bring them up. If you succeed with your young Chaffinches, it will be good experience for you, and be of use to you when you attempt something more delicate.

of dietary you mention can still be given. If the bird will permit you to handle it, rigidly anoint the bare parts with sulphur ointment. Spray or bath it twice weekly, using tepid water and a little quassia essence. Progress will necessarily be slow, but you must persevere with the treatment. Report progress in five or six weeks' time. Keep it in the coolest and lightest part of your kitchen when indoors, but, of course, out of draught.

AN OPEN WOUND (Bristo).—It is difficult to control a Cockatoo's use of its beak. I should say the wound was self-made, some skin irritation causing it to peck itself. There are only two courses open to you—viz., to put a bandage round, covering up the wound, but this I expect the bird would promptly tear to pieces; the other is to get a zinc collar made that would fit round the lower neck like a huge washer, projecting out far enough to prevent it reaching the wound, and not removing it till the wound is quite healed. The part (edge) of the collar which comes against the neck must be projected either by the metal being turned over, or protected with some material which will not fray the skin. Of course, it will have a seam, which must be fastened together with binding wire after passing the collar round the bird's neck. I should put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the other days put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in the water. Do not give table scraps, any kind of sops, or animal food.

RED-CRESTED CARDINAL, ETC. (C. H. M.).—(1) A seed mixture of canary, white millet, with a little paddy rice, crushed oats, and sunflower seed; but the canary and millet should form three-parts of the bulk of the mixture; such ripe fruit as they care for, green food, and a few live insects daily. The size and type of suggested cage would answer well either for a single bird or a pair, but I very much doubt successful breeding in a cage with this species. (2) Yes, Cardinals can be kept with Budgerigars and Lovebirds in an outdoor aviary. (3) I have never found Pekin Robins troublesome in a garden aviary, other than they are apt to take the eggs of other birds which will let them, but the Zebra Finch usually keeps them successfully at bay. Any of the insectivora, either British or foreign, might be kept with, excluding the Robin tribe. Also all the Cardinals would do with them, and any of the Bulbuls obtainable, the latter take considerable seed. Also Buntings and the Saffron Finch, Sparrows, and the Weaver and Whydah groups generally. Cowbirds, Marsh-birds, Malabar Mynah, Glossy Starlings, Quail, and some species of small Dove. Many of those named above are to be very cheaply obtained by watching the market, per our advertisement columns.

PLANTS FOR AVIARY (J. C.).—I give below a list of plants, all of which have been and are largely used in outdoor aviaries for all types of birds other than the Parrot tribe:—

Evergreens.—Common broad-leaved Laurel, Portugal Laurel, Euonymous, Spruce, Box, Berberis, Privet, Golden Privet, Rhododendron.

Deciduous.—Privet, Elder, Willow, Raspberry, Currant, Gooseberry, Roses, and any kind of fruit trees.

Creepers.—Rambler Roses, Honeysuckle, Wild Clematis, Ivy, Virginian Creeper, Nasturtium, Convolvulus, Hops, Wistaria.

Plants.—Cornflower, Marigold, Mignonette, Nasturtium, Michaelmas Daisies, Sunflower, Coreopsis, Dwarf and Major Ribbon Grass—also for the wild portion, Docks, Mallow, Cow Parsley, and all meadow grasses.

ARE THEY THE SAME (D. A.).—Yes, the Madagascar Lovebird has been offered and sold as Grey-headed, Whit-headed, and Lavender-headed at one time and another. The cocks have a grey head; the hen is an all green bird. To give any chance of a successful breeding result, the cage would have to be roomy, larger than the convenience of a living room permits as a rule, but in a cage not less than that of an ordinary Canary double-breeder, with partitions removed, a pair should do well. Give them occasionally the small branch of a fruit tree, with the leaves on, for them to cut up. A small barrel or large coconut husk might also be supplied. It would, at any rate, form a snug sleeping place for them, even if no attempt be made to reproduce their kind.

GLOSSY STARLING (Saywell).—A mixture of one part each dried flies, ants' eggs, sponge cake, and biscuit meal; well mix together and make crumbly moist with boiling water. While the bird remains thin, add about one-third of a teaspoonful of cod liver oil to the daily supply of soft food before it is moistened: the additional of the boiling water will thoroughly mix it with the food. A four-pronged dinner fork makes an excellent stirring instrument. Also give several mealworms per diem, and any spider, beetle, etc., you can capture. It will appreciate cherries and other English stone fruits as they become ripe. It can have any kind it will eat, also banana, etc. The cage must be large enough, so that when the bird is resting on any of the perches, the bird's tail will be clear, not only of the bottom of the cage, but also of the sides and back.

MEALY ROSELLA (W. Meager).—Probably the bird's condition is owing to improper treatment, and how can I suggest a remedy without being told how you have been treating it? Give me more information, and I will try to help you. In the meantime give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. A seed mixture of canary and white millet, with a few oats and sunflower seeds, should suffice with green food and fruit; with the latter consult its taste, and supply what it favours. Cuttlebone and grit must be regularly supplied.

WHAT IS IT? (Birdie Boy).—The names you mention are quite new to me, and there is no dictionary of vernacular names, and a direct search would mean probably hours of research. But I will keep your query before me, and if I come across the vernacular names will insert same in this column. It is evidently either one of the Falconidæ or an Strigidæ.

AMERICAN BLUE BIRD AND CANARY (B. F. B., Ohio).—If by American Blue Bird is meant the Blue Robin (Sialia sialis) then I should say the attempt at the cross would be a mere waste of time. On the other hand if the bird referred to is the Indigo Bunting (Cyanospiza cyanea), then there is a prospect of success, for the cross is said to have been reared somewhere on the Continent of Europe—Germany, I think. It would be better for the Canary to be the female.

SICK PARROT (A. W.).—As the case was urgent, I have sent you a postcard, and you must give the remedies named thereon till relief is given. The milksop is not to form a regular part of the dietary, but given as a medicine, and as soon as the bowels become normal it must be gradually discontinued. In addition, the bird must get the usual seed, fruit, etc., but be careful only to supply fruit, which, while being fully ripe, is yet sound. A little weak brandy and water is a good stimulant to give when such is necessary. Do not give any more castor oil at present. It looks as if it had got something with its food which has seriously disagreed with it. Shall be pleased to hear how it progresses.

WATER FOR PARROTS (Constant Reader).—It is cruelty not to supply Parrots with water, and I cannot understand a reader of CAGE BIRDS labouring under such a delusion. As the Parrot has been deprived of it for a time, you must only let it have a few sips at a time, two or three times a day, till it has become accustomed to it. If allowed, it would overdrink, to its own hurt. The quantity and frequency with which the water is offered can be gradually increased, and after two or three weeks it should be quite safe to leave it in the cage continuously.

COCKATOO (K. K.).—It is a Lesser Sulphur-crested Cockatoo. The spraying is quite in order, and should be continued, but not during dull cold weather. Keep the bowels moving freely, but the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery-loose; a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water occasionally will keep them regulated, and on other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water, giving clear water once or twice a week. Keep cuttlebone, grit, and wood within its reach continually.

WILL IT BREED AND WHAT IS IT? (E. S. H.).—It is the Bauer's or Port Lincoln Parrakeet, and should breed in a properly furnished aviary. However, I expect in the end the Canaries and Finches would suffer very severely from the beaks of the Parrakeets, even if nothing happened immediately.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Cresswell's "Hygiene of Bird-Keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Aiming Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Goulдian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Warbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

As regards diet, supply a mixture of four parts (by measure) each of canary and white millet and one part each of oats and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep up a continuous supply. Also supply fruit, green food, grit, cuttleboue, and water regularly.

A YOUNG GREY PARROT (Field).—The "squawking" you refer to is largely natural—it sees food about, and, like most young birds, calls out for it. But do not by this be deluded into giving it table scraps. Keep a little of its regular food at hand, especially that which it favours most, and at meal times, whenever it begins to call for food, give it a little. If this does not check the evil, then cover it up at meal times till it has learned better ways. You have apparently established your bird successfully; it should do well and prove a tractable scholar, and become quite accomplished, as it has commenced so early.

INCUBATION PERIOD (H. A. Poland).—Thirteen to fifteen days, the former being the most usual. The Waxbills vary considerably in this respect. If your birds are in a garden aviary, unless they are being disturbed by other inmates, they will do better a little later. With all species of birds there are some pairs which make indifferent parents.

GREEN AMAZON (Mrs. A. B.).—If it was a talker when you bought it, it should have become accustomed to you and said, at any rate, a word or two by this. The young birds you procured at the docks are Senegal Parrots, very beautiful, but not talented talkers as a rule, though they usually learn to speak a few words. Many individuals become very tame and make charming pets.

INDIAN GREEN PARROT (Mrs. Hainsworth).—For the time being you have upset its digestion by giving a bit of everything. Stop giving at once egg and meats of all kinds, and if it will eat it, as plain a seed mixture as possible would be the best for it, try the following: One pint each oats, canary and white millet seed; half-a-pint each hemp, sunflower, and shelled peanuts. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. While you must not give tea or milk sops, a crust of bread or piece of biscuit is quite permissible when moistened with chilled water and dusted with flowers of sulphur. I should also give the bird twice daily five or six drops of cod-liver oil on any absorptive food (plain cake, for instance) the bird fancies. Keeping its bowels moving quite freely (not watery loose) by occasional doses (one teaspoonful) of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, every fourth day, usually meets the case, and when not giving the magnesia, half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water will be beneficial. Improvement will be slow and you must persevere with the treatment. You must not let the bird want for food by cutting off its indulgences too suddenly, but seed mixture, nuts, ripe fruit, green food, pieces of crust, biscuit and plain cake allow of an amply varied diet, and with grit, cuttlebone, and wood to cut up, fully meet the need of this species of Parrakeet. Report progress later.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. J. Gibson.—Death occurred from congestion of the lungs, not an uncommon occurrence whilst sitting, and is often associated with weak action of the heart.

Handy.—Inflammation of the bowels resulting from fatty degeneration of the liver. Give less rape seed, plenty of fresh green food, and an occasional dose of magnesia or sulphate of soda in the drinking water.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Miss N. T. Cameron.—We have sent your letter to the "Racing Pigeon," as in that journal your notification of the capture of the bird is more likely to meet the eye of its owner.

G. Lynch.—It is not possible to identify the bird without seeing it, but the further particulars you send lead us to think it may be a hen Goldfinch-Canary Mule. Why not show it to a local fancier? The secretary of the Huddersfield Ornithological Society, Mr. A. Lawford, 14, Poplar Street, Birkby, Huddersfield, would no doubt be glad to assist you in naming it.

Merton Abbey.—The egg spotted with black is that of the Song Thrush, which bird lines its nest with mud. The egg mottled all over with brown is that of the Blackbird. No stamp was enclosed with your letter, as stated.

W. T. P.—The tiny pea-like eggs sent are yolkless, indicating that the hen Linnet is barren, or subject to some disease of the ovary, or that the ovary is inactive (i.e., not producing ova and their accompanying yolks) through the hen not being in proper breeding condition. If the latter is the case then later in the season normal eggs may come.

W. Harrison.—Watch the show advertisements which appear in CAGE BIRDS in due season and send for a schedule to the secretaries of whatever fixtures you desire to patronise. The schedule gives full details of the classes, prize-money, etc. The principal shows all appear in the "Show Dates Fixed" Column published in CAGE BIRDS (see page 459) and practically all cater for exhibitors of foreign birds.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE CONTENTS—

A Great Article by that well-known author, Mr. Claude St. John.

MISTAKES BIRDKEEPERS MUST AVOID

A most seasonable article. This alone is worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES.—By W. Hobden.
A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS
By W. H. Gibb.
The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRD-CATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.
A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

MY METHOD OF BREEDING CANARIES.
By E. T. Sheppard.

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP AND BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.
This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

ALWAYS USE OUR
DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-ides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he sho'd communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his uame and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.
It is advisable that all newly-purchassd birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

No. 6, Co-operative Houses,
Brierley, nr. Barnsley.

Dear Sir,

It is with great pleasure that I thank you for sending me that most wonderful volume entitled "Our Canaries." I am sure it is worth every penny you ask for it, and will certainly recommend it to my friends.

It is a marvellous volume on the anatomy of Canaries alone. You can make any use you like of this letter, because "Our Canaries" is a book that needs circulating among Canary lovers.

Thanking you again

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

THOS. S. WALLIS.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE CONTENTS—

A Great Article by that well-known author, Mr. Claude St. John.

MISTAKES BIRDKEEPERS MUST AVOID

A most seasonable article. This alone is worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES.—By W. Hobden.

A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS.
By W. H. Gibb.

The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRD-CATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.

A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

MY METHOD OF BREEDING CANARIES.
By E. T. Sheppard.

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP AND BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.

This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES.
By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

A REVIEW OF THE 1913-14 SEASON.

Read the following Testimonial:—
Hundleton, Pembroke,
May 21, 1914.

Dear Sir,—I am very pleased to let you know that I have successfully hand-reared a nest of Blackbirds on your Lark Food, and they thrive better on this, and are much healthier than those I have reared on other foods, and in a fortnight I had them doing for themselves. This speaks well for your food.

Yours ,etc., W. G. TUCKER.

BUDGERIGARS and Cockatiels are among the most popular foreign birds, and C. P. Arthur has had a lifetime's experience with them. His book, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," will show you how to keep them, feed them for health, how to breed them, and how to teach them to talk. The price of this valuable handbook is only 6½d., post free, from: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

Club Reports.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE (East End)

Meeting, May 27, Leightou's School, Heaton Rd.: Mr. Robson, chair. Members were elected: Mrs. Little, Newcastle; Messrs. Archbold and Lascelles, Seghill; Appleby, Dinnington Colliery; Gibb, Newcastle. Resolved to reconsider the classification of Norwich and Borders at next meeting in July (members please note June meeting is cancelled). A table show will be held, notice of which will be given in club notices column. Vote of thanks to chair closed the meeting.—J. W. Coutts.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, May 30, Old Boar's Head, Manchester, Mr. Wareing presided over a sparsely-attended meeting. One new member was elected. Annual show provisionally fixed for Nov. 27 and 28, if the date does not interfere with any other contest. Secretaries of clubs would greatly oblige if they would let me know their show dates. New rule books will be printed and circulated shortly. The members present, with two exceptions, reported good breeding results for the first round.—A. Percival, Hon. Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, May 30, Mail Coach Inn, Mr. W. Brotherton, chair. Members turned up very well, it being the best meeting held for a long time. Decided to allow new members the privilege of joining the society by paying half-year's subs. from date, also that members must send on their entries for N.F. show to sec. not later than June 11, so as to stop members from bringing birds down in classes not filled. Mr. Brotherton is kindly giving a silver eruct for best young Yorks. bred by a member (donor will not compete). Decided to make a presentation to Miss J. Wall of a brooch for services rendered during our last open show.—Taylor and Bailey, Secs.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held Spencer Hall, May 25, Mr. R. T. Dann in the chair. Mr. Geo. Gardner, although present at special committee, did not feel well enough to stay and deliver his address re "A Study in Antecedents," but promised to do so on some future occasion, and retired at end of committee meeting, with the sympathy of all present and a wish that he would speedily recover health. Mr. Dann said that under the circumstances he would ask some of the members to give their experiences in the breeding room this season, and a very interesting discussion followed. Among other things, the society have arranged a ramble to Epping Forest, June 13, meet at Junction Road Midland Station at 1.50, train leaves at 2, picking up any members or friends wishing to join the party en route. It is hoped that members will rally round and make the outing a success. A vote of thanks to chair closed a very enjoyable evening.—J. Hyde, Hon. Sec.

FIFE CAGE BIRD LEAGUE.

Meeting of West of Scotland Delegates.

In connection with proposed National Deputation to Railway Companies, a meeting of delegates from the clubs in Glasgow and West of Scotland was held in Neilson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, May 30. Present: Messrs. McGowan (Clydebank), Penman, Springburn, Bryden, and Molloy (Greenock), Erskine (Ayr), Wilson (Hamilton, Cadzow Oak), Davidson and Miller (New Stevenson and Holytown), Loudon (Port Glasgow), Holliday (Queen's Park), Fraser, Priest, and Hoggins (Partick), McLean (Vale of Leven), Wood (Shettleston), and Gibb (Glasgow N.W.). Mr. McLean was called to the chair. After the League's circular had been read, a discussion took place regarding the best points on which to approach the railway people. Special stress was laid on the necessity of impressing the companies with the numerical strength of the Fancy in Scotland, and of the likelihood of a decreased rate resulting in a largely increased traffic. Tramway competition and the possibilities of the motor van were also touched upon, and after an exhaustive discussion, it was decided to send Messrs. A. H. McLean, Bonhill, and R. B. Gibb, Govan, to represent the West of Scotland clubs at the final conference in Edinburgh, June 20, expenses to be defrayed by a levy of a few coppers on each of the clubs in the district. It was left to Mr. Gibb to draw up a summary of the various points for use at the Edinburgh conference.—R. B. Gibb.

Meeting of Perth and District Delegates.

Meeting of the delegates in and around Perth, May 30, in Laidlaw's Temperance Hotel, Leonard Street, Perth, Mr. A. Law (Dundee) chair. The chairman said he was sorry to see so few of the delegates (only four) present—Mr. J. Crabb (Brechin), Mr. A. Law and companion (Dundee). The Perth Sec. read a letter from sec. of Fife C.B.L., but with so few present we could not decide what to do. Mr. Smith was asked to go to Edinburgh, if his society would allow him. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to chair.—J. S. Smith, Sec. (120, High Street, Perth).

Meeting of Delegates at Edinburgh.

A well-attended and representative body of delegates from the Cage Bird Societies and Specialist Clubs in Edinburgh, Fife, Clackmannanshire, and the Midlands met in the room, 142, High-street, [illegible] to consider the question of railway fares for live birds, and to take up the scheme formulated by the Fife Cage Birds League. Mr. A. Watson (Edinburgh C.B.S.) chair. The chairman, along with the League secretary (Mr. Cordery) and Mr. Campbell (Dunfermline) outlined the scheme, while Mr. Storrar (Coaltown-of-Wemyss) placed before the meeting a copy of the scheme (similar to the Scottish scheme) which was drawn up a few years ago by the English Cage Bird Union. The meeting was pleased to have read to them the following telegram addressed to the Scottish National secretary (Mr. Meikle): "London Federation of Cage Birds Societies will co-operate re railway concessions," sent through their secretary, Mr. Birch, was read. The meeting, which lasted close on two hours, took to considering the various concessions likely to be asked from the railway companies, and the best means of approaching them. As nothing definite will be done until June 20, when all the delegates from the various conferences meet in Edinburgh for the final meeting, it is earnestly requested that any suggestion bearing on this scheme from any society should be forwarded in good time. It is also to be hoped that each individual fancier will support the various societies and clubs in his district, so that we will go forward with a strong hand to request (nay, demand) redress from the railway companies; we have nothing to lose, but a great deal to gain through these concessions. The following took part in the discussion, and each reported that he carried the unanimous support of his society: Messrs. Winter and Lumsden (Edinburgh), Mr. T. Arnott (Kirkcaldy), Mr. P. Arnott (Alloa), Mr. A. Robertson (Cowdenbeath), Messrs. Cordery and Robertson (Kelty), Mr. Wildridge (Lochgelly), Mr. Storrar (Coaltown-of-Wemyss), Mr. Moffat (Musselburgh), Messrs. A. Watt and Campbell (Dunfermline), Mr. J. Steel (Dalkeith), Mr. Watson (Leith), Mr. Smart (Loanhead), and who as secretary represented the Border Fancy Club. Also representatives from East Lothian, Haddington, and Dunbar. As Mr. Cordery, the League secretary, has been indisposed for some time, he is now advised, and hopes within a few days, to be recuperating in the West Kilbride Home, the delegates in Edinburgh prevailed upon me to undertake his duties in his absence, so will secretaries and others please note that all communications intended for the Fife League should be addressed to me at 19, Rolland-street, Dunfermline.—Robert T. Campbell, Sec. (pro. tem.).

GLASGOW (East End) O.A.

Meeting May 26, at 82, Old Dalmarnock-road, Bridgeton, president (Mr. A. McMillan) in the chair, and a large turn-out of members. We had a very good entry for our F.F. show, which takes place at our next meeting, and we got a few new members which brings our membership up to a fairly good number.—D. Burnett, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Successful meeting held May 27, President Harrison in the chair. Sec. reported profit of 25s. on last two evening shows. Judges selected for young stock and annual shows: Messrs. Widders, Wiggins, and Hoiles elected members. Mr. J. S. Clarke gave a most interesting lecture on "British Bird Life," for which he was heartily thanked.—A. Wasey, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE C.B.S.

Meeting May 25, Mr. J. Roberts chair. Mr. J. Jefferies, Southall, was elected to judge annual show Nov. 5 and 6. N.F. show to be held July 8; no judge selected for this at present. Then came a pleasant part of the evening. Mr. Broadbridge, our late secretary, was presented by the members with a very handsome clock as a small token of gratitude for the very able way he has carried out the duties during his time of office. All were very sorry to lose him, but owing to business pressure it was unavoidable.—T. Monday, Sec.

SCOTTISH NORWICH P.C.

Committee meeting held in Edinburgh on May 30, Mr. Aitchison in the chair. Mr. Andrew Sloan (Glasgow) was elected president, and Messrs. Grewar (Lochgelly), Maxwell (Glasgow), and Winter (Edinburgh) vice-presidents. Admitted as members: J. A. Murray (Ayr), Wm. Blacklock (Airdrie), Wm. Ritchie (Bannockburn), John Irvine (Stranraer), R. McEwan (Larkhall), A. Crawford, J. Fulton, Oliver Begg, John Black and W. Wyllie (Glasgow), G. Smart (Carnyle), and J. Nelson (Edinburgh). The chairman intimate that the reason of the annual general meeting being so late this year was that the late secretary (Mr. John Brown) had been ill and off work at the time when his arrangements for the meeting were being completed, and thereafter his mother became seriously ill and died, thus further delaying what he had hoped to accomplish. No one under the circumstances need therefore attach blame or seek to misconstrue intention. Had events been normal, the meeting would have been held at the usual time of year. This statement is made for the benefit of the members not acquainted with the true facts, and to correct any wrong impressions that may have been gathered from the writings of irresponsible persons. Next committee meeting in Glasgow early in August. Open show patronage will then be allocated. Secretaries of open shows desirous of our patronage might kindly communicate as early as possible. Local clubs, having eight members who are members of this club, desirous of a club silver medal, might also apply as early as possible. Fanciers anxious to join should write for particulars.—E. Barron, Sec. (119, Montrose Street, Glasgow).

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting, headquarters, May 25; Mr. Newley in the chair, and a fair number present. Decided that sec. should proceed as quickly as possible with the club's manual, and ask all members to have a small advertisement in same to help to defray cost of printing, and I should be obliged if members would let me have particulars as early as possible. The rates are 5s. per page, 3s. half page, breeders' cards 1s. 6d. A proposal was adopted that the holder of club cup should receive a miniature of same on returning cup to the club, and Mr. Newley kindly offered to give one to the holder of his cup. Specials for competition at the patronage shows during the coming season were then discussed, and it was decided that the following specials should be put up:—The S.B.F.C. cup for most points throughout the season, not more than three birds to be nominated at each patronage show; the Newley cup for most points at patronage shows by birds exhibited in cages purchased from Mr. R. A. Newley, confined to members of the S.B.F.C.; silver spoon at each show for best bird shown by a member; 2s. 6d. for best vhe bird; 2s. 6d. for best novice at each show; 10s. 6d. sp most points by a novice at patronage shows throughout the season; four 10s. specials presented by Mr. R. A. Newley for sealed handicap; a breakfast cruet in each section for the member making most entries and gaining least points at the whole of patronage shows, presented by Mr. G. H. Pratt, Exmouth. I hope by the time the books go to print that there will be additions to this list. Will members who have already signified their intention of giving a special and have not yet let me have particulars either send on particulars and allow the committee to allot as they think best or allot it themselves to some class or classes that are not yet provided for. I should like to get as many as possible printed in the year book, as I hope by showing a good list of specials we may induce some of those Southern fanciers still outside the club to join us.—F. W. Burton, Hon. Sec.

POPLAR C.B.S.

Meeting, May 28, All Hallows Schoolroom, East India Dock Road. Mr. T. G. Hunt gave his lecture on "Colour-feeding." A letter from Mr. Yeo, M.P., added a nice touch of colour to the meeting, and was a pleasant surprise to the members. In his letter Mr. Yeo mentioned his interest in cage birds, and said that he kept some twenty or more; it was a pleasure for him to do something tangible for the society, and this took the form of a challenge cup, which it has been decided to call the Yeo perpetual challenge cup, to carry with it a gold-centred medal, given by the society each year. This brings the total number of cups to ten. Mr. Hunt said during his lecture that although colour plays an important part on the show bench, yet to obtain colour one must breed as well as feed for it. He commenced by pairing a ticked and variegated yellow together, and when the young were eight weeks old he commenced to colour-feed them. He found that Spratt's cod liver oil food was very beneficial; to each cup of unsoaked oil food he added five spoonfuls of colour-food. After soaking the cod liver oil food increased its bulk to two cupfuls, to which he added one spoonful of ground rice, and twice a week he gave a piece of tincture of iron as large as a split pea in the drinking water. Meetings are held the last Thursday in the month as above; all fanciers and friends are welcome.—F. H. Marhoff, Hon. Assist. Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

The Council met at Market Tavern, Bradford, May 30; Mr. Wm. Cruise, president, in chair, Laisterdyke and Queensbury Societies signified their intention not to hold an open annual show as previously balloted for, and were allowed to withdraw by paying their equal share of judges' fees. Manningham and Bradford West Societies asked permission of the Council to hold a joint open show, Nov. 21, and same was granted, as was an additional motion that Bradford West move up two show dates next year in the usual order, from their present show date. A defaulting member was reported by the Shipley Society, and same was allowed to stand over to the next Council meeting. Idle and District C.B.S. made application to become members of the Union, and this was unanimously granted. Tenders for the printing of Union handbooks and show rules were considered, and the tender from Messrs. Moorhouse and Hodgson accepted. President kindly promised 10s., 7s., and 4s., to the three next competitors in the Union novice classes (Yorkshire Section) to the medal winners; same was accepted with thanks. President thanked the delegates for their attention and attendance. Space for adverts. in the Union handbook still at liberty, 7/6 full page, 3/9 half page, 2/6 one-third page, 2/- quarter page, and 1/- breeders' cards, same will be accepted to June 27th.—H. Hill, Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Half-yearly meeting, Nelson Temperance Hotel, May 19; Mr. J. F. Park, president, in chair, with a good attendance. Correspondence having been dealt with, a report re guarantee fund was submitted, and the following clubs supporting same, viz., Partick, Glasgow and West, North West, West of Scotland, Queen's Park, and Springburn. Shettleston and Glasgow West End left it to their members' option to subscribe. Decided to add two unflighted variegated classes to Norwich section, delete two old bird classes in Crest section, and insert two young bird classes. Judges were nominated and appointed. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

THE STOCK BOOK
Compiled by G. E. WESTON.
Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.
Order "THE STOCK BOOK" at once: Now is the Season it will Help you.
Price 6d., from your Newsagent, or 7d. (postal order), post free, from "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting, May 26, Mr. T. Barclay, chair. Agreed to apply for club's patronage; collectors for the year were appointed; agreed to give shopkeepers advertisements on schedule as formerly, but if any require a page, to give same for 5s. Secretary was instructed to hook Masonic Hall for club show, January 16. A petition was read from Fife C.B.L. re carriage of birds. John Robertson was appointed to attend meeting about same at Edinburgh. Report of last league meeting was read by secretary, and delegates instructed accordingly. Members are of the opinion that the method of stewarding at open show was quite satisfactory—that is, each section be stewarded by the men of that variety.—A. Dickson, Sec.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting, May 13. Chairman Mr. A. Holden presided. Decided to hold a table show at next meeting, June 10, with two classes each for all varieties of Canaries, 1 Mule (all N.F.), Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, Goldfinch, Bullfinch or Greenfinch, A.O.V., For., fee 3d. per cage. Mr. Tindle will give 2s. 6d. for best bird. Decided to ask Mr. Crawhall to judge, also to add eight classes for Crests to schedule of open show. The same have been guaranteed by Mr. Martin, Gateshead, and we look forward to exhibitors sending as many entries as possible, so as this gentleman will not be out of pocket through his sporting spirit. Mr. Geo. Dobson (Dobson and Son) was selected as our fourth judge. Decided to ask for patronage of all the local specialist clubs where our classification meets with their requirements, along with the Crested C.C., Green Borders, National British Bird and M.C., and Foreign B.C. The rest of the evening was given to questions on breeding and rearing, and these proved to be very interesting, as hardly two members used the same methods. Members elected: Messrs. Howe and Tallantyre, Haltwhistle; Mr. McNay, Birtley; and Mr. Adams, Low Fell. Subs. are due.—W. Curry, Sec.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Meeting, Kelvedon Hall, Walham Green, May 21, Mr. G. Harrison chair. The arrangement for N.F. show, June 20, was discussed; decided to provide three classes for Canary section, viz., Yorks, Nor., and Bord.; seven for British, Mule and Hybrid, and one class for foreign. Questions and answers relative to cage birds in the breeding season were greatly appreciated, Mr. Easterling, Mr. Nicholls, Mr. Jeffreys, Mrs. Mulles, and Mrs. Bond were much interested. Three new members were nominated. A good entry for the coming show is fully expected, and members are especially requested to enter as many birds as possible; all points count for cups and medals. Schedules will be posted in a few days; subs. now due; members please note.—H. F. Bowring, Hon. Sec.

BANGOR C.B.S.

Annual meeting May 20, under the presidency of Mr. S. Shannon. Officers appointed for 1914-15: Pres., Mr. John M'Meekan, J.P.; vice-pres., Miss E. S. Corry, Messrs. Mitchell, Thomson, M.P.; Thos. Wilson, U.D.C.; Wm. Marshall, Geo. Matthews; chair, Mr. Hugh Brennan; sec., Mr. S. Shannon; treas., Mr. Geo. Absolom; committee, Messrs. W. J. M'Conaghie, D. Carleton, D. Beattie, Fred. Clawson and D. E. Alexander. Date of annual show fixed for Jan. 7 and 8. Sec. pointed out that the club was in a most flourishing condition, and hoped members would do their best to attract new members. The fee was only 1s. a quarter. Quite a number of bird fanciers and breeds in Bangor so far had stood apart from the society. It was a pity that this should be, as their club was founded for the purpose of encouraging the Fancy and creating healthy emulation amongst the members in order to improve their stock. He was glad that some of the members had had a very successful opening to the breeding season, and those who had started badly were promising better in their second rouud.

Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League.

Details of Club Show, Open to All, with Separate Classes for Popular Birds.

The Foreign Bird E.L. has decided to hold its club show under the auspices of the L.C.B.A., at the Horticultural Hall on November 26th, 27th, and 28th, and has this year provided an open classification for the public of no less than 35 classes at a prize money of 30s., guaranteed absolutely irrespective of the number of entries. In order to encourage exhibitors to support classes for birds which must of necessity be shown in large cages, the League has ordered 1s. extra prize-money to be paid to each of the seven prize-winners in 15 of the classes and in the interests of certain birds and groups of birds the provision of separate classes will give owners of such birds an opportunity they have never enjoyed before. The popular Grey Parrot, the attractive Diamond Finch, the gorgeous Gouldian, the inexpensive Java Sparrow, the prolific Zebra Finch, the charming Cockatiel, and the Green Budgerigar will have no other competitors, but birds of their own species, and in the case of Amazon Parrots, Conures, Broadtails, Cardinals, and Common Mannikins, they will in most cases only compete with birds of their own kind, whilst the elimination of Sunbirds and other rarities from the ranks of Sugarbirds and Zosterops will give the latter an opportunity to get at or near the top.

This year the League will provide a special committee of experts to take charge of the feeding, etc., so as to ensure the well-being of every bird sent in for competition, and every possible means will be taken to ensure the careful handling of all birds entrusted to the care of the show officials.

A classification of this magnitude entails considerable financial risk, and as it has been provided for all and not solely for members of the League, it is to be hoped that everyone will come forward with a few entries, whether they are habitual exhibitors of foreign birds or not, in order to justify the existence of foreign bird exhibiting. There is not the slightest reason why this section of aviculture should not push ahead, and rank equal in popularity with exhibitions of choice flowers, and certainly if only keepers of foreign birds, just for the sport of the thing, will do what they can to bring before the public the results of their handiwork (i.e., the expert keeping of a bird), the time should come when we shall hear as much about the very charming, gorgeously coloured and elegantly shaped creatures we keep as is the case with infinitely less charming canine and feline pets that get far more than their share of the public's attention.

It is in the hands of foreign bird keepers to help the League. Further progress made will be notified in the Fancy Press, and shortly the League hopes to be able to state what patronage can be extended in certain provincial districts, which, of course, must depend upon the funds it is able to collect. As far as can at present be stated, there will be four judges, and the Parrot section will be allotted to the Marquis of Tavistock, who has kindly consented to officiate.

Country Rambles

SITTINGBOURNE C.B.S.

Annual ramble Whit-Sunday, starting at 6 a.m.. We went through two woods before breakfast. Several finds, first to Mr. Churchill, Linnets with four young; these were rung with the society's rings. Lots of other nests followed, including Blackbirds, Thrushes, and Chaffinches. I think the Chaffinch nest ought to be booked to Mr. Monday; some say he brought it with him. Only nine sat down to breakfast, and only four of these were members of the society. I think this very bad support, but everyone enjoyed themselves, voted it the best ramble we ever had, and booked again for next year. —T. Monday, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Annual ramble through Epping Forest, May 16. The weather was grand, and members turned up in good numbers, some bringing friends. Many nests were found, including Thrushes, Blackbirds, Chaffinches, Greenfinches, and Linnets. One interesting find was a Blackcap on the nest with young; two Wren's nests, with the old bird on one, were also found. The nests of the smaller birds were not so numerous this year. We did not find one Whitethroat's nest, and not nearly so many of the Chaffinch, Greenfinch, etc., as usual, the general opinion being that this was due to the recent cold weather. We all thoroughly enjoyed the ramble, however, and did justice to the excellent meat tea provided at the Owl. The evening was passed in the usual jolly style, excellent songs being given by Messrs. Thurlow, Netting, R. East, C. W. Tuck, T. Collinge, G. East, A. S. Wilkins, W. Marsh, F. Lucas, H. Withers, W. East, J. A. Talbot, and B. F. Forse. Mr. J. A. Talbot accompanied in excellent style. President Mr. S. C. Rhodes ably occupied the chair.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON C.B.S.

Held May 24. A threatening morning kept several members away, but the following braved the weather. Messrs. Goymer, Lang, Arkill, Cumins, Fry, Hawkins, Rapley, Broughton and Pinnell. Mr. Fry and Mr. Arkill carried cameras. The genial Mr. Goymer was father of the party. On arrival at Effingham we made towards Cobham, and on the way called on old Dan Tyrrell, who seemed to be as gay as ever. After a photo had been taken of his cottage, we made off for the woods. Amongst the nests seen were Blackbirds', Thrushes', Chaffinches', Linnets', Wrens', Tits', Goldfinches', and Chiff-Chaffs'. These included several with young ready to leave. Mr. Fry was the lucky one of the party in finding nests, on one occasion finding a nest of Chiff-Chaffs in a cart rut with five eggs. The following birds were seen and heard:—Goldfinch, Linnet, Chaffinch, Nightingale, Yellowhammer, Robin, Pied Wagtail, Lark, Thrush, Blackbird, Wren, Martin, Whitethroat, Cuckoo, Flycatcher, and Greenfinch. While waiting at Leatherhead Station for train home, Mr. Goymer found a Wren's nest with seven young, and we had the pleasure of hearing the Nightingale. Altogether we had a splendid time, the rain keeping off. It was soon in the air that another similar outing would take place in about a fortnight. There should be plenty to speak about at the next meeting. Mr. Fry won the sweepstakes for first nest of young.—K. H. Arkill, Assist. Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Annual ramble, May 24, when an enjoyable day was spent by a party of sixteen—Messrs. G. Absolon, H. Bignell, J. Brown, F. Dandridge, A. Farncombe, R. C. Gibb, W. H. Gibb, F. Goulden, Master Goulden, P. E. Newton, E. Olle, J. Pazel, O. Plummer, M. Soffner, W. Wall, and W. D. Wall. We were joined at Lewes by members of the Lewes F.A., and embarked at Barcombe. Under the guidance of Mr. Plummer we reached Marstakes Common, passing through Littleworth. After a short search of part of the Common, we explored Cockpit Lane, and passing Cinder Hill, arrived at the Five Bells, Chailey, where a cold luncheon was provided Having done justice to the inner man, Mr. W. H. Gibb (chair) welcomed the Lewes fanciers, and expressed the hope that it would lead to further good feeling between the clubs. He congratulated the club on the success of the ramble, thanking Mr. Plummer for his guidance and help in arranging the details. Mr. F. Goulden, on behalf of the Lewes members, said it was a great pleasure for them to join in with the Brighton fanciers, and thanked the club for their kind invitation. Mr. E. Olle responded in similar words. After facing the camera, operated by Mr. Farncombe, we continued our ramble, and, reaching the Common, wandered at will in search of bird life. Among the finds were the following nests with young:—Thrushes', Blackbirds', Chaffinches', and Linnets'; with eggs, Goldfinches', Tits', Hedge Sparrows' House Sparrows', Bullfinches', Wood Pigeons', Fly Catchers', Moor Hens', and Greenfinches'. The best find of the day was credited to Mr. Goulden, who found a Bottle Tit's nest with eggs—a fine example of nature's handiwork. Walking back to Lewes, we left our Lewes friends, everyone voting this the finest ramble.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) is judging North Manchester show, November 14.

The Cockermouth F.S. has appointed Mr. Wm. Mundell, Bradford, to judge on Nov. 28, writes Mr. J. Jackson, Hon. Sec.

The closing date for societies desiring the patronage of the Northern British Mule and Foreign Bird Club is June 17, writes Mr. W. Curry, Sec.; all applications must be in by the date mentioned.

The following judges have been appointed to officiate at our open show, Oct. 31, writes Mr. R. Aitken, Secretary Ayr C.B.C.: Norwich, Mr. A. Maxwell, Glasgow; Borders, Mr. W. S. Clark, Lesmahagow; Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. J. Steel, Dalkeith. Fixing of Yorkshire judge was left over till next meeting.

I was very gratified on opening my CAGE BIRDS to find illustrated the green-marked yellow Yorkshire I bred last season. I appreciate the honour very much. He is certainly the best green-marked bird I have ever bred, and I feel sure will do a great deal of winning for his new owner if he keeps fit.—R. L. CRISP (Chelsea).

OBITUARY.

Mr. R. Ratcliffe, Longton

It is with the deepest sympathy, writes Mr. Philip Barker, Hon. Sec. Longton C.B.S., that I have to announce the death of our member, Mr. R. Ratcliffe, who passed away, May 25, at the North Stafford Infirmary. Mr. Ratcliffe was not very old in the Fancy, having started some three years ago; he was appointed the chairman of the Longton C.B.S. this year; he was also a member of the Burslem C.B.S. and of the M.C.Y.C.C. I am sure that all fanciers in North and South Staffs. will express their deepest sympathy for his wife and children. Will members please attend meeting, June 9, to pay subs. and elect a new chairman in the place of our late brother, Mr. R. Ratcliffe.

Referring to the death of Mr. Ratcliffe, Mr. J. Pitchford, Hon. Sec. Stoke-on-Trent C.B.S., writes:—The unexpected event has cast quite a gloom over local fanciers; the interment took place May 28, at the Shelton Cemetery. Mr. Alcock and myself represented the Stoke C.B.A., Mr. Davis, Mr. Barker and Mr. Perrins the Longton C.B.S., and Mr. L. James, Burslem C.B.S., each society sending a floral tribute. The deceased leaves a wife and four children. The family, I understand, is quite unprovided for, and I hope some effort will be made to show in a practical manner the sympathy we all feel.

An Important Matter.

The hon. secs. of several specialist clubs write again this week requesting us to ask societies desirous of patronage to apply as quickly as possible, as in many cases the patronage will be allotted at next meeting; see Twittering in another place.

Golf Ball Lands in Lark's Nest.

Mr. A. M. Guild, a member of the Royal and Ancient Club, St. Andrews, had a rather curious experience when playing in a three-ball match. Driving off the twelfth tee, Mr. Guild's ball found a bunker, and on searching for it he discovered it had landed in a Lark's nest, and broken one of the eggs, in which was a young bird. The drive was about 250 yards. Mr. Guild picked out his ball, and dropped it into the bunker. Had he been playing in a competition he would have had to smash the nest to bits if he did not wish to be disqualified.

We hear that Mr. W. P. Barnes, Grantham, is engaged to judge the F.F. show at Stamford, June 26

The year book of the Poplar C.B.S. is to hand. Besides the list of officers and names and addresses of members, it gives particulars of the club's nomination scheme, the fixture list for the season, and the rules of the Society and the show rules, including particulars of the competition for the challenge cups and medals.

We have received the rule book of the Halifax O.S. This contains a list of officers of the society, the rules, syllabus for the season, with classification of the various shows, show rules, list of special prizes, and members' names and addresses. A commendable feature in the shows is that the novices have as many Canary classes to themselves as are given in the champion section.

Experts are unanimous in asserting that Ramsden's Pure Peppers are the finest on the market for purity, quality, and colour. Intending purchasers having any doubt should obtain samples and submit them to any analytical chemist for examination. On account of the high percentage of colour in Ramsden's Peppers they prove to be the cheapest in the end. Fully guaranteed under the Merchandise and Food and Drugs Acts, a guarantee not advertised by any other vendor of colour foods. Ask for Ramsden's Peppers, and accept no other.—(Advt.)

Scottish N.P.C. Annual Meeting.

We are asked to draw attention to the fact that an explanation of the late date at which the annual meeting of the Scottish N.P.C. was held this year will be found in the report of the committee meeting of May 30, published in this issue.

Diseased Wood Pigeons.

I should like your readers to be warned specially to examine the throats of all Wood Pigeons. While living near Dorking a short time back my son on several occasions picked up dead pigeons under a tree which they frequented in my garden, and also in the woods adjoining, and I have seen a bird struggling in a tree for a short time, and then fall dead. On each occasion, although the bird's body was well nourished, there was a white growth in the throat, and therefore, they were destroyed at once. At the same time there must have been many others in the district, and probably those found by children would be eaten, and many would fall to the lot of domestic animals, so possibly conveying future trouble to human beings.—J. Pittman (Twickenham) in "The Standard."

The Spell of the Cuckoo.

Mr. Oliver G. Pike said in a recent lecture that is was quite a mistake to suppose that the Cuckoo neglected her egg after she had deposited it in the nest of another bird. The Cuckoo kept a watchful eye upon her treasure, and should any accident befall it she deposited another egg in another nest. He believed, although it was impossible to prove it, that the Cuckoo laid its egg in the nest of a bird of the same species as that by which it had itself been reared. Thus a Cuckoo reared by a Sedge Warbler placed its egg in turn in a Sedge Warbler's nest. So wonderful was the spell which the young Cuckoo exercised over other birds that he had seen birds other than its foster parent pause in their flight to feed it, giving it the food which was intended for their own young, and once he saw a young Cuckoo fed by birds of five different species in succession.

COUNTRY RAMBLES.

The following rambles have been arranged:—Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not. Great Horton Good Intent O.S., June 6, to Bingley, meet under clock outside Midland for 2.30 car; Edinburgh C.B.S. and Juniper Green F.A., June 27, to Riccarton Estate; Hull C.B.S., June 13, to Houghton Woods (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.); Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S., June 13, to Epping Forest, meet Junction Road, M.R. Station, 1.50; Leicester C.B.S., June 13, to Billesdon, train 2.15, G.N.R., to Ingarsby, bicycles 2.15, Uppingham Hotel; June 7, York C.B.S., to Strensall Common, meet York Station, 9.40.

THE PATRONAGE OF SPECIALIST CLUBS.

Societies desiring the patronage of the following clubs should apply to the respective secs., stating date of show, number of classes, and judges: Northern Border and S.F.C.C., M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Road, Newcastle; Midland Counties Y.C.C., W. Wells, Helmside, Erdington, Birmingham; Norwich P.H.C., F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Barnley; Northern C.C., Geo. Dobson, 103, James Street, Blaydon-on-Tyne; Northern Norwich P.H.C., F. W. Laidlow, 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Yorkshire and Lancashire British Bird and M.C., T. H. Handley, 23, Coventry Road, Wavertree, Liverpool; Cinnamon-marked Y.C.C., R. Garnett, 32, Carr Lane, Windhill, Shipley; closing date, June 6; National Green-marked Y.C.C., J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds. Fife and Kinross Plainhead Club, A. Dickson, 37, Adams Terrace, Kelty; closing date, August 1. Yorks C.C. of Scotland, W. Priest, 6, Orchard Street, Partick. Northern British, Mule, and F.B.C., W. Curry, 6, Roxburgh Place, Newcastle-on-Tyne; closing date, June 17. Scottish P.H.C., E. Barron, 119, Montrose Street, Glasgow.

Robin's Queer Nesting Place.

Robins are bold in selecting nesting sites, but one of the strangest places in which a Robin's nest has ever been built is on a sheet of brown paper open to the sky in the engineering yard of Messrs. Chivers and Sons' jam factory at Histon, near Cambridge. The nest has no shelter whatever, and despite heavy showers of rain the bird has gone on with its work and laid five eggs.

Happenings of the Year.

It appears as if the Nightingales must have commenced nesting this year immediately on their arrival in the country. It is impossible otherwise to explain nests, with eggs, being found at the very beginning of May, as has happened this season—quite an unusually early date. Another notable fact is the immense numbers of the Swifts, which are far more numerous in many parts of the South of England than either House Martins or Swallows. It is not many years ago that we read lamentations about the decrease of Swifts, which, as it seemed, had come no farther northward in their spring migration than Italy. A failure of their food supply as they travelled northward was suggested and commonly accepted as the most probable cause of this arrest of their pilgrimage. The story of the House Martin seems to be a continuously mournful one of decreasing numbers, in some degree due, no doubt, to their eviction from their first nests by the House Sparrows.

"Kindly thank those who answered my advert re 6 Hens. I have had so many applicants I could not answer all. I could have sold 60 if I had them. I had to return 3 P.O.'s."—J. EGGINTON (Sheffield).

"Pleased to inform you that I disposed of all birds advertised in CAGE BIRD. Kindly state that I find it impossible to answer all of the many letters I received, but I thank all who wrote. Wish CAGE BIRDS every success."—WHITAKER CROSSLEY (Batley).

"Please thank all who answered my advert in CAGE BIRDS re 2 Yorks. Cocks and Buff Hen, as there are too many to answer. One gentleman's address I could not make out; letter was rom Mr. Lawton."—R. BARROW Seaham Harbour).

"Will you please thank all the persons that answered my small advert. in CAGE BIRDS? I had fourteen replies on Saturday morning, three on Saturday night, and four on Sunday morning. I think this shows the value of a small advert. in CAGE BIRDS. Wishing it every success in the future."—J. A. SHRIVES (Birkenhead).

"I shall be glad if you will thank all those who answered my advertisement re Norwich Hens. I had no end of replies from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and the Isle of Man, and it was impossible to answer them all. I had to return a number of postal orders. This speaks volumes for your paper and shows how widely CAGE BIRDS circulates. I have no objection to your making what use you think fit of this entirely unsolicited testimonial."—C. P. SMITH (Burton-on-Trent).

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

A FULL HOUSE

This photograph of a nest of Skylarks was sent by Mr. S. Crook. The nest was so full of bonny youngsters that they seemed to bulge out over its sides.

THE FASCINATING PURSUIT OF MULE AND HYBRID BREEDING.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

YOU will find that some of your British hens are very erratic in their laying. Some will lay every alternate day until the clutch has been obtained, while others will lay on two or three successive days and then stop for twelve or fourteen days, when you will, no doubt, get about the same number of eggs again. Some hens, again, will lay one egg and then stop for a few days, when you will get the remainder of the clutch.

The hen Redpoll from which I bred my Goldfinch-Redpoll Hybrids gave me considerable trouble in this matter, laying an egg every second or third day. Thus it took a fortnight or more to get her full clutch. Of course, this meant that the eggs had to be placed under the Canary hens at different times, in twos and threes. The Bullfinch hen from which I bred my Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids presented me with two eggs at the end of every twelve days with great regularity throughout the season!

It is very important at this time that you should keep a record of the dates when your hens commence to sit, for you will often find it necessary to place your eggs under a hen which has been sitting nine or ten days while you are waiting for another hen to go to nest or to finish laying her clutch. When your first hen has completed her usual time of sitting and is showing signs of coming off the nest the eggs must be at once transferred to the second hen.

How Brother Fanciers Can Help.

If the eggs are fertile they will be hatched on the ninth or tenth day after they are placed under her, and you should watch the hen carefully for a time to see that she starts feeding the youngsters, as many hens will not feed when the young are hatched before they (the hens) have sat their proper time. If your hen will not feed try another which may have a nest of youngsters a few days old; or if you have no hens just at the right stage to take them then as a last resource consult any breeders in your neighbourhood when, no doubt, you will find a way out of your difficulty.

I have been compelled to resort to this last method on three different occasions, and in each case with success. The Goldfinch-Redpoll and Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids still in my possession were both reared by a Mule-breeding friend of mine who happened to have a nest of Mules hatching about the same time, and without whose aid I should most certainly have lost both birds. You will thus see the wisdom of keeping on good terms with neighbouring Canary and Mule breeders.

Another plan when favourably situated and you are driven to extremities, is to place the eggs or young Hybrids in the nest of a Goldfinch, Greenfinch, or Linnet, allowing them to remain until they are eight or nine days old and then hand-rearing them or endeavouring to persuade a hen Canary to take charge of them. Be careful, however, not to leave the young longer than nine days or possibly they will take fright when you approach the nest and you will thus lose them.

Age Sometimes No Bar.

On two occasions I have taken a nest of Yellowhammers at ten days old and placed them in the nest of a hen which had been sitting on clear eggs, and in both cases the young brood was successfully reared. In one case the youngsters refused to stay in the nest and remained on the cage bottom, but this made little difference, and within an hour the hen was feeding them. I mention these instances to show that some Canaries may be persuaded to take charge of a young brood at almost any age, and where the hen will take over such duties it is much better and safer than hand-rearing.

The Hybrid breeder must give nothing away in his endeavour to hatch and rear the young Hybrids, and if necessary must adopt any or all of these plans. One cannot afford to be lax in this matter.

Every egg must be tested, too, for it is just possible that the eggs you do not test are the ones which would have proved to be fertile. This testing is not easily done, either, even with five or six pairs of Canaries.

When your hen Canaries are to be trusted with the rearing of the young Mules or Hybrids—and this is by far the most satisfactory method—you should feed the hen in much the same manner as you would when rearing young Canaries, always remembering the suggestions I made when dealing with the management of the Canaries. Two days before the eggs are due to hatch commence to give the hen a supply of egg-food, and when the youngsters are hatched give the hen crushed hemp and scalded rape in addition to the Canary seed, etc. Also give your feeders a liberal supply of the various wild seeds in season, such as groundsel, dandelion, plantain, shepherd's purse, and chickweed.

When preparing your scalded rape put a quantity of the seed into a tea-cup and pour boiling water on it till well covered. After it has been standing a few minutes, strain it under the cold water tap, and allow it to remain in cold water till it is required for use. Give each bird about a teaspoonful at a time, after drying it in a cloth. A fresh quantity of rape should be scalded every morning.

The "Little and Often" Method.

The egg-food, crushed hemp and rape should be given frequently during the day, and, of course, in small quantities. You will find the "little and often" method far more likely to keep your birds at their work of feeding, than the putting in of large quantities of these foods at longer intervals, while the food will be less likely to turn sour. On the third day place two or three dandelion leaves between the wires of the cage and continue to give these until the youngsters leave the nest.

Young Mules and Hybrids leave the nest earlier than young Canaries, and you will probably find them on the perches at 18 or 19 days old. Continue feeding as before until the youngsters are six weeks old, when you may gradually lessen the quantity of egg-food and scalded rape. I do not advise stopping the egg-food altogether if you intend to colour-feed your birds, as it is difficult to get them on to the soft food again when the moulting time arrives, especially the British bird Hybrids. Also gradually wean them from the crushed hemp by mixing a quantity of the whole seed with it until you observe that they are cracking it for themselves, when the crushed portion may be stopped.

I have found the above method very satisfactory during my seven years of breeding, during which time I have been successful with the following crosses:—Dark and variegated Goldfinch-Canary, Greenfinch-Canary, Linnet-Canary, Redpoll-Canary, Goldfinch-Redpoll, and Linnet-Bullfinch. I have also succeeded in breeding Bullfinches in captivity, and obtained fertile eggs from a Greenfinch-Bullfinch pair. In addition to these I have reared several nests of Goldfinches, Linnets, Greenfinches, and Bullfinches from eggs brought in from the country-side.

A RARE AND BEAUTIFUL EXHIBIT IN FOREIGN BIRD CLASSES.

Why Some Norwich Plainhead Canary Breeders Fail.

A FEW "STRAIGHT TIPS" BY E. W. ALLSOPP (Cardiff).

WE may now have a word with those who seem to fail to get properly the focus as regards exhibiting. Usually they are not numbered with the winners, and in consequence, have something cheap and nasty to say about those who do win, also the judges, the seconds, and so on, ad nauseam.

Exhibitions and exhibiting I regard as being absolutely necessary to the welfare of the Fancy. To me the show represents a critical and severe examination whereby the results of my labour and time are to be adjudicated upon by an upright, impartial, honest gentleman. In the course of some years' close connection with the show bench, I have crowded in a good deal of experience, actually secured by personal contact with shows and all that appertains to them. Even the judges I have hobnobbed with; chatted, smoked, supped, dined, and travelled with. What have I found? Only that they are human, and, withal, good company, if you do not intrude yourself or birds upon them; and why some should speak ill of our judges I cannot understand.

They Are Only Human.

But do not swing to the other extreme and imagine that I am going to give our judges a bit of "soft soap," or you will make a mistake; for, although I have ofttimes done better than I perhaps deserved, I have also occasionally not done as well as I might have done. Anyway, though I agree that as a whole they are by no means "white hen's chicken," and do make mistakes, and do things in a way that I should like to have them locked up for, I can only add, seeing that they are human—what do they expect? When you know what a judge is going to do, and how he is going to do it, etc., then the quicker you quit the Fancy the better, for the uncertainty, always a charming feature, will lose its savour, and breeding without uncertainty, exhibiting without long odds and chances to be taken, would be like water without whisky—flat and insipid.

A judge is, of course, a person who has some knowledge of the breeds he adjudicates upon; some confidence also that he will know a good specimen when he sees one, and in this he is largely assisted by "first impressions." Don't waste the valuable time of any judge asking him if I am correct, for if you will give what I say a turn-over in your mind, your own common sense will convince you I am correct. Depend upon it that when the judge has paced to and fro a time or two before the class he is about to judge, he has already provisionally selected the six leading birds or so. I don't care how much time and thought he subsequently spends in an endeavour to select the worthy candidates, his "first loves" will be entered upon the slip without material alteration.

This is just where the mean advantage of the fat, chesty, apathetic Plainhead comes in, for it always shows its best side to the world! Not so the perfectly healthy, typical specimen. During the time the judge has been forming his first impressions, this may be with head and neck stretched through the water hole, telling an old pal over the way what an artful old cock the judge looks—just anything but showing off its good features. Unless the judge is fully alive to the possibilities, the chances, therefore, are that he will give the apple of your eye a miss, only to express his vexation later in the day that he should have overlooked so good a bird.

Chance versus Merit.

Of course, it cannot be denied that with many judges the element of chance is more or less in evidence, according to the understanding and method of their procedure when judging. We have the judge who is painstaking to a degree! No hurry, no bustle, no worry; each cage handled as you would handle it yourself; patient coaxing, then, finally, a steady glance right through the class, just to make sure that nothing has been missed, when, fully satisfied, away goes the slip. This is the gentleman you can always shake by the hand, feeling that you have had a run for your money—even feeling downright pleased, although you may be cardless!

Then we have the judge who seems to imbue everything, alive or dead, with a sense of his importance. With set look and stately tread he paces one length of the class, and grabbing about 12 cages out of about 25, he points to the remainder and says to the steward, loud enough for you to hear, if you happen to be looking on: "Take 'em away, they are no good to me!"

Aren't these judges just lovely! Fancy the chances of your lively, typical specimen, with his head and neck stretched through the water hole, and not enough fat on him to grease a gimlet, ignominiously carried off like that! When you reckon up the part "first impressions" have played, and then realise that the material for comparative examination in a class of about 25 has been reduced in two wags of a duck's tail to 12 birds only, I am sure you will agree with me that first impressions need to be good to carry a judge of this order through his day's work. It requires no assurance of mine to tell you that oft-times amongst those birds the steward was asked to take away out of the sight of such a judge the real winner of the class could be found. Here again the fat chesty bird steals a march over the real article.

How Not to Do It.

The above sort of judge is, I think, only surpassed by the poultry and pigeon judge, who sometimes obliges by judging the cage birds at a mixed show, a procedure fortunately almost out of date now. Having donned a long white smock, and adjusted his headgear (of a sort of sou'-wester breed), he polishes off the poultry and pigeons. Then, reaching the first class of cage birds, he brings his telescopic judging stick (the one he tickles up the poultry with) down "whallop" upon the staging and shouts, "Now, you little rascals, up on the perches, all of you—none of your poking your heads through like that, or I'll saw them off." Seeing that he still has the same old hat and long white bed-gown on, my word! our fat, chesty Plainheads just have a red-letter day! The real articles have long since been terrified out of all semblance of a typical specimen. "That's the sort I like," he says, "something to look at—a real, good handful!" And, ah me! another fat one has annexed 1st and special! When you have a mixed show and a poultry judge handy, save your fat, chesty specimens—and may their shadows never grow less!

The Gentle Art of Judge-Baiting.

Don't try to hurt my feelings by saying I have a lively imagination, for 'tis a pen picture of what I have seen (more than once) absolutely without embellishment. In spite of all, I have no axe to grind, for as I have already said, our judges are human; and if "to err is human," then I cannot understand the bitter feeling expressed by grumbles against some of our judges, who, I am sure, all do their duty according to their own views. To those who, by invective or innuendo, have been guilty of judge-baiting, I may say that their miserable selves, with everything else that they hold most dear, would be a miserable exchange for the characters of the gentlemen they have been endeavouring to malign.

In this way I could continue, but I think I have pointed out that if the "old hands" have something up their sleeves, it is nothing more than the ability to get the best of a test of skill and brains in which also the element of chance enters. The "old hands" counteract the latter to a very great extent by the careful training of their birds. This is really all there is in it, in spite of all the winking and the shaking of knowing heads. The lack of training, then, is a frequent cause of non-success upon the show bench.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe ♣

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

THERE is still another trouble likely to occur when the birds are in the nest. I refer to the red mites, blooksuckers in the truest sense of the word, for they subsist entirely on the blood of the Canary, drawn from the bird's body during the hours of darkness. I give my breeding cages a rest during the autumn and the winter months, although I keep the mite under by using the trap perches, and thus any that may be harbouring unnoticed about the cages, are starved to death before the breeding season comes round again.

Usually it is not the bird owned by the Canary fancier that suffers the most from these pests, but the Canary that is regarded by its owner as the household pet. Its owner, out of sheer ignorance, places the bird in that abominable habitation, the fancy wire hanging cage. These cages not only catch every draught, but the metal bars—through which the wires pass—being hollow, are a safe retreat for thousands of red mites; during the night they leave their hiding places to worry and disturb the sleep of their victim. The bird thus deprived of its rest during the night must take its sleep during the daytime, to the astonishment and consternation of its owner, who will conjecture every imaginable illness or trouble but the right one.

Let the owner of the pet Canary—who on reading these lines suspects his bird to be suffering from the attacks of red mites—cover the cage over at night with a white cloth, and if the cage is infested he will find the mites adhering to the cloth the following morning. This alone will not be sufficient to exterminate the whole colony, the cage must either have a rest, at the same time placing it away from its former situation, or be plunged for at least ten minutes in boiling water.

A Trouble Hardly to be Avoided.

There is a saying amongst Canary fanciers that you cannot breed Canaries without breeding red mite, and were I to find it otherwise, I should seriously consider the advisability of consulting a sight specialist. They vary in colour from a bright red in the younger ones to a bluish black in the older ones, and two or three of the latter would barely cover a pin's head. Their number increases enormously during the breeding and moulting seasons, and when the young birds are in the nest they may often, even in the daytime (especially the light coloured birds) serve as a happy hunting ground for a colony of mites; when this occurs it is not unusual for them to be infested for several days after leaving the nest.

This daylight visiting is peculiar, for the red mite is otherwise of nocturnal habits; further, those that are now seen are generally of a uniform size, and of a reddish brown colour. Probably it is this that has given rise to the idea that the red mite live continually on the bird; such is not the case, for, with this exception, they harbour during the daytime in some dark crevice, choosing for preference the one nearest to the bird's roosting place. Here they will pack themselves until their retreat will admit no more, others then find another lurking spot.

Around the edges of these harbouring places will be noticed a number of small white specks, the excreta of the mites. The cracks and crevices in the cage should be made wider by carefully working a table knife inside them, then fill them up with putty, allow this to set and coat over with good paint, or enamel; the last-named gives the most satisfaction as it sets harder than paint.

The Use of Trap Perches.

Having excluded them from one retreat, we must now find them another; this may read like an Irishism, but my point is that it is desirable that the mites should harbour in a convenient (to the fancier) place. Here we can get to destroy them in less time, and far more easily, than to be continually working a camel hair brush dipped in a solution of paraffin and camphor, or methylated spirits and camphor.

The easiest and the simplest way I have found in dealing with red mites is to use trap perches; these can be procured from any of the providers of fanciers' appliances. If the fancier refers to make his own, choose a perch that can be easily bored with a gimlet without splitting the wood; for preference I like elderberry, or the wild rose, choosing the current year's or the previous year's growth, and allowing them to season before using. In making these trap perches, cut the perch long enough to project through the wire front about one inch. With a gimlet bore a hole into both ends of the perch to the depth of one, or one and a half inches. A slot should be cut in the perch to allow the punch bar to fit into it, this will then keep the perch firm and steady. The object of allowing the perch to project outside the cage is to form a finger hold, so that it can be easily removed for cleaning.

To clear the mites from the traps, tap the perch over a fire, or a bucket of scalding water; the perch can be replaced without having to put the hand inside the cage, which is a consideration where a nervous bird is concerned. It should be understood that these projecting trap perches are only suitable for the flights and breeding cages, but trap perches can be made for the wire song cages. Neither will the projecting perch be suitable when an outside nesting receptacle is used; in this case the end of the perch that is placed level with the nest has to be notched to fit the punched bar.

Should youngsters under the age of about twelve days old be troubled with red mites, they may be transferred to a clean nest, but after this age it is not advisable to move them, as they have a very annoying habit on being disturbed of popping out of the nest pan, and it is a rare occurrence for them to return to the nest. At this time a good spraying or dusting with insect powder will often effect a cure, using every precaution not to frighten the young birds. Should this fail, rather than move them to a fresh nest, it will be advisable to wait for a few days until they leave the nest, then the mites can be destroyed along with the contents of the nest pan, or from the trap perches.

Dealing With the Grey Lice.

The Canary Louse is a parasite quite distinct from the red mite, being larger in the body, and lighter in colour than the latter. Trap perches are no use for these, as they live and increase on the bird's body, and do not leave it as the red mites do. It is not necessary to write at much length on this subject, as the fancier who uses ordinary care and attention is not likely to be troubled with them. The danger is that they may be imported in a new purchase, and an infested bird should be dusted with a good brand of insect powder, working it thoroughly into the feathers with the fingers—being careful that the powder does not enter the bird's eyes—then wrap the bird up in a piece of flannel or cloth for fifteen minutes; allowing only the head to protrude.

It is difficult to say at what age the weak or poorly nourished youngsters will leave the nest, but the strong, well-fed birds will get on to the perches about the 17th day, returning to nest at intervals for a few days, also using it to sleep in at nights. When the nest is forsaken it may be removed and the contents immediately burned. Previous to cleaning the pan, allow it to soak in hot water; dry well afterwards, and affix a new lining; if it is not required for immediate use wrap up well in paper and keep dust from working into the lining. These precautions ensure a new nest being ready in the case of emergency.

At three weeks old the youngsters will be eating the egg-food, but so long as they cry to be fed they ought not to be removed from the hen, unless she commences to pluck their feathers to build a new nest. If it is not too late in the season for another nest to be taken, a supply of white feathers, or charpie, may draw the hen's attention from feather plucking.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS' EXPERIENCE OF CAGE BIRD KEEPING.

A Lecture by Mr. F. Wraight before the Members of the Hastings and St. Leonards C.B.S.

A good many years ago, more than one likes to think about, somewhere in the late 'seventies, I was badly taken with the Canary or bird fever, though I had suffered from incipient attacks even earlier, having kept, at various times of my childhood, Redpolls, Thrushes, Blackbirds, etc., most of which either came to a premature end or were released under parental pressure or, sometimes, bribery.

About the time mentioned I was very much struck with a Crested Canary I saw at a friend's house, and, having persuaded him (my friend) to make me a breeding cage, I forthwith determined to invest some of my small capital in a pair of birds. A pair, did I say? Well, if every two make a pair, but, unfortunately, the person from whom I made the purchase, thought that anything would do, and duly supplied me with two hens, which, for a time, delayed my expectations.

I remember well, when I complained of their tardiness, the excuses, or the reasons, he gave for my want of success, the principal one being I was in too much of a hurry, and that if I waited all would come right, as the birds were young, etc. Well, I waited and waited, but no nest or eggs came to hand, and finally, getting tired of the "Wait-and-see" business, I called on a friend, who quickly explained the reason of my non-success, and, on his advice, I took one of the hens back to the dealer, and insisted on an exchange for a bona fide cock bird, which, after a good deal of discussion, I succeeded in procuring (a Crested cock), but only by a further outlay of some few shillings.

An Encouraging Commencement.

Having now a genuine pair, I was very delighted to find, after a week or two, that they meant business, as the hen built, and laid five eggs, duly hatching five youngsters, of which I managed to rear four, and, later on, an additional five, making nine as the outcome of my first year's attempt.

That was a result to encourage a beginner, and if all the novices here start as well this year, Canary breeding will advance in Hastings by leaps and bounds.

In those days there were no exclusive bird papers, with their many experts, to help a beginner, and the only book that I could some across was a small 1s. one, which I regret I have unfortunately lost, as it contained some very weird advice.

Next year I put up about four pairs, profiting by experience, and as just about that time Cassell's people published that excellent work by W. A. Blackston, I was put in the way of still further success in breeding.

In 1879 or 1880 I paid my first visit to the Palace Show, and what an eye-opener it was to me! Not being blessed with much money, I could not afford to purchase any of the specimens I saw there, but I came home filled with a desire to emulate them. It was just about this time that the old Tunbridge Wells F.A. was started, and, as a Canary section was formed, I duly joined, and, writing to the late Mr. Gallop, of Norwich, I procured my first decent pair of Norwich Canaries (giving 30s. for them). The cock bird I showed at our next Tunbridge Wells Show, and won the cup for the best bird in the show, also taking second with one I had.

The Young Fancier's Common Error.

I was fairly successful with this pair, and if I had stuck to this strain I believe I should have done very well, though in those days there were very few shows indeed that one could exhibit at, but here I fell into a mistake, which, I think, is somewhat common to many young fanciers. I thought I would like a fresh variety. This time it was Lizards, a breed which I have always admired, and which, I regret to see, seems very little fancied at the present time. I never was very successful with Lizards on the show bench, and, after a year or two, I gradually gave them up, and sold them, and also all my best Norwich, here again making the common mistake of yielding to a tempting cash offer, and parting with my best birds.

Having by now started in business, and finding my time much occupied, I, for a year or two, gave up Canary breeding (though I was never without a dozen or so songsters), and went in for British birds, keeping Thrushes, Blackbirds, Skylarks (of which I had some show winners and splendid songsters), Woodlarks, Goldfinches, etc., also dabbling a little in foreigners, all seed eaters, with the exception of a Pekin Nightingale or two.

It was not till early in the 'nineties that I again took up bird breeding, but, not having a very suitable room, I met with very indifferent success, until, moving to a fresh house, I started Mule breeding, in a large room at the top, varying this Fancy with a few pairs of Rollers.

I had capital success, as far as quantity went, rearing dozens of Goldfinch-Canary Mules, but, in spite of spending a good deal of cash in purchasing so-called Sib-bred hens, I never had anything in the way of a Light Mule worth looking at from a show point of view. I was somewhat more successful in Dark Mules, especially Greenfinch-Canary and Siskin-Canary, of which I have had some very decent specimens, and won several firsts and seconds on the show bench.

Mule breeding is no doubt a very interesting and fascinating hobby, and there is an element of luck about it that appeals to one's sporting instinct, as you never know quite what is coming along; it may be a great winner, or it may be a duffer. Unfortunately, my experience has laid chiefly among the latter.

It was while trying my hand at Mule breeding that I purchased, or exchanged with Mr. Duck, of Robertsbridge, two Yorkshire hens, one of which bred me some excellent Siskin Mules, and I think it was the appearance of these graceful little birds that gave me the idea of going in for Yorkshires, an idea I did not put into practice until about four or five years ago. The loss, by the way, was my own, for how anyone who once sees a Yorkshire Canary, and studies the beauty of its outlines, can fancy any other variety of Canary passes my understanding; it is, in my humble opinion, the gentleman of the Fancy. I say this with all respect to my friends present who hold opposite views, and prefer the Norwich, or something else.

Before giving you my ideas of the best way to produce winning Yorkshires you might like to hear somewhat of the way I feed and manage my stock. I feel great diffidence in speaking to so many experienced fanciers, especially so as my friend Mr. Ellis has so recently given you such an excellent lecture on management.

Rather Too much Sunshine.

My bird room is built outside in the garden, measuring about 10ft. long by about 6ft. deep, and 7ft. 6in. high, fitted with sliding windows and a ventilator at the top of the door. Outside it is weatherboarded, inside matchboarded, with about three or four inches space between filled with sawdust, which acts as a non-conductor of heat and cold. It faces east, getting the morning sun, and a fair amount of the same until about 11 or 11.30. In fact, I think, in the summer it gets rather too much, and I agree with Mr. Ellis that a more northern aspect is better, as I find that though my birds come freely into condition by the second week of March, or even earlier, that by the time the third round, in early July, is ready to hatch my old birds are dropping into moult, and both last year and in 1912 I had great difficulty in rearing many of the third round. As I cannot move the house, I intend, this year, to be satisfied with two rounds, unless we have an exceptionally suitable summer.

I invariably run one cock with one hen, and never separate them, if they behave themselves, till the end of the season. I have never had much trouble with them, and find the hen settles down quietly on her second nest, while the cock brings up the first lot through the wire partition, and I leave him till a day or two before the next lot are due to be hatched.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

LEIGH.

Contest, Globe Inn, May 31, for time and quality; 22 birds entered for three minutes singing: 1, 3, Disley, 58 and 32; 2, Poole, 53. Quality: 1, Page; 2, Hill; 3, Folkes. Timers, R. Statham and R. Hughes. Minutes, J. McAlaster. Judges for quality, Gibbons and T. Statham. Members are expected to attend club contest, June 6; all intending to sing a bird must be paid.—R. Disley, Sec.

TYLDESLEY.

Linnet contest, Butchers' Arms, Castle Street, May 30, for time; there was a poor entry, also poor singing, some of the best birds doing nothing: 1, J. Harrison, 134 sec.; 2, Robinson, 87; 3, Darbyshire, 38; 4, Knowles, 37. Timekeepers, G. Bate and A. Newton; tappers, R. Disley and J. Benson; minutes, J. Harrison.—E. Rickman.

LEEDS.

Linnet contest for quality, Prince of Wales Hotel, Wordsworth Street, Kirkstall Road; 20 contested for three prizes:—1, Yates; 2, 3, Bantfield. Judges: Messrs. Wigfield and Butterfield. Also May 31, 18 contested for three prizes: 1, Lipman; 2, Bickerdyke; 3, shared, Lipman and Yates; judges as before. Also same judge, Whit-Monday, when a members' contest was held; a good number contested for eight prizes, the host adding a 10s. prize, and there were other specials: 1, Lipman; 2, Yates; 3, Dobson; 4, Smith; 5, Bickerdyke; 6, Towes. Those desirous of joining the above club can do so now, as we begin the next year on Saturday next.—Walter Lipman, Sec.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, Albion Hotel, Saville Green, May 30. 27 birds sang for four prizes: 1, W. Sissons; 2, Hayes; 3, Wood; 4, shared by Hayes and Chippindale. Judges, Jennings, Naylor, Richardson. May 31, 37 sang for four prizes: 1, Buttery; 2, Hayes; 3, Farrar; 4, Chippindale. Judges, Sissons, Naylor, Hardcastle. 25th, all England open contest for quality. June 1st, 42 of the best birds in England sang for 16 prizes before a crowded house: 1, T. Johnson; 2, B. Smith; 3, Richardson; 4, Buttery; 5, Tennant; 6, Hollingworth; 7, Buttery; 8, Sissons; 9, Chippindale; 10, Stead; 11, Appleyard; 12, T. Johnson; 13, C. Ward; 14, Hayes; 15, Stead; 16, Nicholson. Judges, A. Jennings, W. Naylor, S. Hardcastle.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Six Hens in One Nest.

Sir,—I was interested in that singular experience of many years ago, viz., six hens to one nest. Was it in the time of Adam and Eve? And did the hens all take turns in turning the 28 eggs? As "W. R." says, the sight was good enough for a circus. I should have been delighted to have seen it at a picture palace.

Nine-year-old Blackbird Still "Going Strong."

SIR,—In your issue dated May 23rd appears a paragraph re an ancient Goldfinch, which died at the age of 18 years. I should like to state for the information of your readers that my Blackbird "Jimmy Driscoll," which has previously been referred to in CAGE BIRDS, is nine years old to-day, Whit Monday, and for a soft-billed bird I think this is a great age. He is my Crystal Palace 1st prize winner of 1909, and also a winner of numerous prizes at other shows. He is still in full song, and judging by his present condition he is good for, I should say, a few more years. I state the foregoing with a view to showing what care and attention can do with regard to keeping a bird healthy and in fit condition, and also in prolonging its life.

H. J. FORD.

A Manx Linnet's Adventure with a Sparrow Hawk.

SIR,—The Sparrow Hawk is an intrepid bird of prey, and is the greatest enemy which many British birds have to contend with. During the end of April I had a rather animated experience with a Sparrow Hawk. Having been a lover of the Linnet since my days of childhood I purchased one recently. After being caged some months it turned out to be the finest singer in the district. One sunny April day I decided to hang my pet outside the house on our farm, and after listening to him for a brief time, left him to proceed to work. Turning around, however, I observed a Sparrow Hawk flying over our field, and following him closely saw him make a dart towards the cage of my bird. Hurrying to the spot I found the monster clinging to the wires of the cage, screeching and flapping its wings incessantly. The cage was a strong home-made one, but was almost rent asunder. To my great surprise and delight I saw my Linnet had escaped. It was free again. The Hawk tried to give chase, but was held securely in the wires, and could not extricate itself. What wild struggling for life! I seized a weapon which was close at hand and stunned the Hawk, when it soon succumbed. Tho bird is to be stuffed and I think will be a very suitable ornament for the home. After such a thrilling adventure I have wondered how my next pet will fare outdoors. I am expecting another Linnet to reach me, and trust that the next bird will bring me good luck. Perhaps some English catchers could give readers of CAGE BIRDS their experiences with Hawks. It would be of interest.

Advice for the Novice.

SIR,—I would give a little advice to the novices now that the First Feather show season is about to commence. During the next three months there will be one or more of these shows held every Saturday, some in the afternoon others in the evening, so that it is quite possible to attend more than one on the same day. I strongly advise the novice to visit as many of these shows as possible so as to get a thorough knowledge of what type of bird has been bred and also what is required for the shows. Novices must understand that in Yorkshire we shall have the pleasure of seeing at these shows the pick of the stocks of most of our noted breeders, most of whom put them down so as to get an idea of what they are likely to have to meet when the old bird shows come round. There are a few fanciers who do not bring their youngsters out at these shows but I do not think they benefit any by holding them back, because it is well worth the small charge which is made for entrance fee (if they do not win a prize) in helping to train the birds for the bench. I know personally several exhibitors who, when they think they have got a good one, bring it out at a members' show first just to see how it shows itself off when handled by the judge, also the visitors who make a practice of attending.

A great many novices when exhibiting their birds make the mistake of entering them in the wrong class (such as a yellow in the buff class and vice versa). This is one reason why I advise the novice to attend these shows, so as to put him on his guard. Another reason is that they get an idea of what the various judges go in for; some of them like a large bird and others go in for type and quality. They can also note the type of bird which is to be seen on the bench and when they go home they will be able to see if they have any amongst their own likely to win. It will give them more confidence in showing.

The novices should be very careful to have show cages, perches, and water tins in the very cleanest possible condition so as to give the judge no cause to keep the bird out of the prizes (which he has a right to do) if not benched properly. I strongly advise novice fanciers who are wishful of making headway in the Fancy to take pleasure during the next three months in visiting the young stock shows. I am sure they will benefit very much both by what they see and the information which can be picked up at these shows—they will meet all kind of fanciers who are always willing to give advice to the novice on any subject. It is sometimes possible to pick up a good bird, also, at a reasonable price.

Seven Cygnets from Seven Eggs.

SIR,—On Sir Philip Sassoon's estate at Trent Park, Enfield, a Swan has hatched 7 Cygnets from 7 eggs. Will you or any reader tell me if this is not an unusual number?

C. PARISH.

[According to Frank Finn's "Nests and Eggs of British Birds," a young female Swan only produces three eggs or so, "while the number increases with age till, in full vigour, the bird may lay as many as a dozen."—Editor "C.B."]

An Astonishing Hatching Result.

Sir,—It may interest you to hear that I had a Canary hen sitting on eggs which I did not want her to hatch out. As she seemed to want to sit, however, I let her remain on the nest all day, but for the past week or ten days I have taken her off the eggs at night and made her sleep on a perch in another cage, so the eggs have been uncovered from nine o'clock in the evening until daylight, when she left the cage and returned to the eggs. This morning I see she has hatched out a young bird—isn't it rather strange that the eggs should not have got chilled? The room is not a warm one. The eggs were laid in a little box cage, with only an open front.

Ramsden's Autumn Show at the Crystal Palace.

SIR,—I have been requested by intending exhibitors at the above show to invite subscriptions to a Prize Fund. I have agreed to do so, but I desire to make it perfectly clear that not a penny of this Fund will be used in payment of the prize money already mentioned, viz., minimum prize money—10s., 6s., 4s., 2s.; entry fee, 1s. 6d.; I pay that in full myself, irrespective of the number of entries. The Prize Fund will be used to provide 5th and 6th cash prizes in each class, and if there should be a surplus when that has been done, to provide sectional cash specials. The whole of the Fund, therefore, will be divided amongst the exhibitors. I shall esteem it a favour if friends will kindly let me know if I may have the pleasure of including their names in the list of subscribers.

An Old-time Fancier Returns to the Fold.

Sir,—No doubt you and many old friends will be pleased to hear I have again joined the band of bird breeders. I take great interest in all your articles on this hobby, and have been struck with the different methods adopted by writers. While the articles by Mr. Steel, Mr. Collins, and others discuss the bird, Mr. Allsopp discusses the person. His only item that interested me was the double buffing of Norwich. In the old days I bred many winners by double buffing; but I should like to ask what advantage anyone ever found in breeding from these double-buff bred birds? A friendly discussion on this will, I am sure, be interesting; but let us discuss birds, not persons. I do not think Mr. Allsopp's remarks on the novice fair.

I was astonished when I bought CAGE BIRDS, after so many years being out of touch with the Fancy, to read the advertisements. One would think you had only to post your cash, and champions would be returned for certain. I can only say I have had hard work to purchase a few good birds, and have started with four cocks and eight hens. Only two of the cocks have filled eggs. I visited several shows to see what the modern birds were like, and found a great advance in size and head properties. I got into conversation with several fanciers, who are well to the front, at Cheltenham show. I remarked that from what I could see of it, they had got to be manufactured now, but one prominent exhibitor said, "No, they cannot be manufactured." I asked him how he had got the size. He said by simply picking the largest from his stock each year. But I was not convinced, and am breeding from a pair I call "bull and window shutters," and am vain enough to think I shall succeed (wait and see). Will send you results later on. I have several pairs of British up for hybrid breeding, and can endorse all Mr. Collins says re having your perches low, but it is not every one who can do this. I have my birds in several flights (moulting flights), and to prevent the hens laying their eggs from the perches I have to put them in small cages over night and release them in the morning.

A NEW ZEALAND READER'S VIEWS ON THE MIGRATION OF BIRDS.

Sir,—I have read with interest in CAGE BIRDS the letters from E. Kay Robinson, J. Craig and others on the problem of the migration of birds. The different views set forth on this very interesting subject are for the most part more amusing than instructive. As is well known large numbers of animals, fish, insects, and birds are remarkable for their periodical movements, but the phenomenon is more general amongst birds, which are all more or less migratory. To go into this subject fully would take up too much of my time and, I fear, too much of your space, but with your kind permission I would like to state some of my views as briefly as possible on this most interesting subject.

I cannot but think that birds migrate because they possess an inherited instinct, which probably had its origin in the search for food over routes long submerged, and it it interesting to noto the routes now taken are those of ancient land connections. Mr. E. Kay Robinson tells us they do not know where to fly, but that they fly with the cold wind. What egregious nonsense. By well marked instincts the butterflies and moths know what plants to deposit their ova on, birds build their nests, the spider spins its web, and birds migrate, the tendencies being transmitted within the germ from which insect, fish, bird and animal have severally sprung. Instinct is not acquired by the individual, but is congenital by inheritance. If birds do not know where to fly as Mr. Robinson would have us believe, how does he account for the same pair of birds returning to the same place to build and rear their offspring as in the previous year? Surely not by flying with a cold wind, nor by coincidence; but by following instinctively the routes which their ancestors have taken for countless seasons.

It matters not whether the wind be cold or hot the same impulse to migrate comes over the birds at the usual time quite apart from weather or food supply. Birds caught on arrival if properly cared for soon settle down quite well and seem contented until the time arrives for them to take their departure, when they (although kept warm and having a plentiful supply of food) will show signs of restlessness, dash about their cages at night, uttering the while their call note and generally become very agitated and unsettled in their desire to get away. Under these conditions neither the weather nor food supply can be the cause.

But there are instances where climatic conditions do compel many birds to move to more congenial quarters; especially is this the case with the autumnal migration, where the Fieldfare, Redwing, Brambling, Snow Bunting, Waxwing, and many other species are driven from their breeding grounds through stress of weather and return when conditions are more favourable. In mild seasons few are to be seen, but when cold north-east winds prevail they are numerous on the east coast of England, with the exception of the Waxwing, although I have seen as many as a hundred or more in a two-acre field during very severe weather. No, I do not believe that birds fly by chance or wind. The spring and summer visitors to Great Britain are too regular in their appearance to allow of anything in the nature of chance. If they were guided by the wind they would not be so punctual in their appearance. I used to keep data of their arrival and have found that each species arrived within a few days of the same time every year.

The Cuckoo leaves Great Britain when food is plentiful and the weather as warm perhaps as at any time of the year, certainly much warmer than when it arrives, leaving its young to follow some six weeks later. How does Mr. Robinson's cold wind theory fit in here? I think not at all. They simply go when and where their natural instincts lead them and return the same, over routes which their ancestors have taken for ages.

Mr. Craig's opinion is hardly worth consideration, and it is not easy to understand how any person could compare the migrations of birds over thousands of miles of land and sea to a few Canaries in a kitchen being attracted by the warmth of the fire and sitting on a rack until they get their tails singed. Mr. Craig says his contention is that birds feel the heat of the sun and when it is in the south and at its hottest they fly in that direction. Does Mr. Craig think it is warmer in Great Britain in March and April when most of the spring migrants arrive than it is in Africa at that time? If not, why do the birds leave Africa? The answer is simple enough. Instinct compels them to return to the place of their birth and reproduce their kind, but not by following the sun, or its warmth.

Results Around Ashington and Hirst.

Sir,—The result of the first round of youngsters bred by fanciers in the Ashington and Hirst district shows a fair average on the whole, rather better than last year. The old complaints of empty eggs and non-feeding hens have troubled many. The former is no doubt accounted for by the bitter cold nights we have had lately. Prospects for the second rounds are much brighter, nearly everyone reporting full eggs. Results up to date of a few fanciers belonging to this district: J. Whillis has 40 Norwich and Borders; F. Baker, 12 Nor. and Yorks.; J. Armstrong, 35 Nor. and Bor.; Messrs. Lawson and Eastman have 14 Nor. and Bor.; C. Tapson, 3 Nor.; J. Embleton has a score of Bor. and Yorks. (some eye-openers among this lot); R. Hancock, 12 Nor. and Yorks.; Charlton and Anderson, about a score of Yorks. and Bor.; Hull Bros., 30 Nor., Cin., Yorks. and Bor.; W. Dear, 20 Nor. and Bor.; J. Graham (Newbiggin), 70 Bord.; and your humble servant, 46, all Bor.

A Useful Hint for Hybrid Breeders.

Sir,—I am sending a rough sketch of my idea of a nest fixture for hybrid breeders. The idea may have been in Cage Birds before; if so, I have missed it. I have been breeding hybrids in a small way for some years, and I find British hens take to this kind of fixture better than any. I use the ordinary wire nests and slide a small perch through the bottom. The nest will easily slide backwards or forwards. The advantage is that it can be put at any part of the cage, and box twigs, etc., can be easily threaded through wires as per illustration, with a felt lining afterwards.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Sir,—"Yellow Green" does not improve his position by his letter in your issue of 23rd inst. He admits that a motion was tabled last year to take a vote on the ring question so that no member who takes an intelligent interest in the affairs of the club can plead that the matter has been rushed or that it has been kept secret. Certainly, no one could state what the result of the vote would be, but the prudent fancier would ring his birds in anticipation. But "Yellow Green" surpasses himself when he states with unblushing effrontery that Musselburgh sells winners to some of the faddists to show as their own breeding. A stronger argument in favour of the closed ring was never put forward and this, mark you, from a man who is against the rings. It is quite time that Musselhurgh was prevented from aiding and abetting dishonesty. Musselhurgh will sell no more winners to the faddists or any other Plainhead members to be shown as their own breeding, at all events in Plainhead Club competition. I would be glad if "Yellow Green" would kindly answer a question, in which lies the crux of the whole matter. In view of the fact that it is within the knowledge of "Yellow Green" that certain members of the Club have for some years back bought winners and fraudulently exhibited these as being their own breeding, does "Yellow Green" now think that the use of the closed ring, which will make the above offence impossible, is for the benefit of the Club, or does he prefer that the above fraudulent practice should be allowed to go on? Fanciers will observe that "Yellow Green" accuses these same faddists who buy the birds of carrying the ring question. Rather inconsistent, isn't it? Buff Green No. 2.

Sir,—I was very pleased to see the letter of Mr. B. Humphries, re the disaster with closed rings. He is quite right in what he says, and many of the members of the S.P.C. who adopt the closed rings will find it out to their cost, as I have no doubt that many who voted in favour had not any experience of the closed rings; personally, I shall never put a closed ring on a young bird of mine. Since writing you last I have been informed that the above scheme was put to the General Meeting of the S.P.C. last year, 1913. If so, did it take a whole year to come to maturity, and be coddled all the year by the few in the know? "Yellow Green" had got the hint; but what about outsiders like myself? We had to take it when we got it. "Yellow Green" was quite right not to act and ring his birds through a rumour. I should be very pleased to assist in any way to put down dishonesty, but I fail to see how this closed ring is to do it. "Buff Green No. 2" seems to know; would he kindly tell us all? I also ask the committee of the S.P.C. to make it known through your widely-read paper how they propose to judge their show, and find out the breeder of every bird benched? Is every bird to be handled and the numbers taken, or is it only if an out sider scores that his birds are to be examined, and the "Big Wigs" get a walk through? I cannot see how the S.P.C. can tell what is honest or dishonest unless every bird has its number taken, or is it only if an outsider scores that will make this clear to the members. If every bird is to be handled it will be a serious business—not so with an expert like Mr. Dewar, who I could trust to handle the most delicate specimen and never harm a feather, but what about the fanciers who joined the ranks a few years ago, who can now lecture and teach us old hands and actually go out as judges. These are the kind that are now ruling the Fancy, or I should say running it. I hope the committee will let us know and if birds are to be handled engage an expert to do so.

Buff Green.

Sir,—I have read with much amusement the letters regarding the use of closed rings in connection with the Scottish Plainhead Club. Why cannot the parties have their own names published and not hide under a nom-de-plume? The letters might be more appreciated if it were known who wrote them. Surely there is nothing to be afraid of; this is a free country, and everyone is entitled to his or her opinion in a matter of this kind.

W. Allison.

Popularising the Norwich Plainhead?

Will this Scheme Materialise?

Sir,—I quite accidentally met a fancier from Scotland, a well-known Norwich Plainhead breeder, this Whitsuntide, on holiday bent, and we had quite a nice birdy chat which embraced all the subjects that are engaging the attention of fanciers at the present time, from the question of six hens on one nest at the same time, to the rearing of Cuckoos by Finches, and "Has a bird a conscience"; and from the Scottish Plainhead Club's new ring scheme to the question of the coddling (or codding) of the novice. But the subject of our conversation which appealed to me most, and which was the most interesting to the Norwich section of your readers, was a scheme which my friend suggested for the furtherance and the popularising of the Norwich Plainhead. His scheme is, that the Scottish Plainhead Club and the N.P.C. should run a giant show devoted to Norwich Canaries only, with an enormous classification and liberal prize money on the scale of the Scottish National Show, this show to be held in Glasgow or Edinburgh one year and Manchester or Preston the other year, and the two clubs to share the liability or profit—if any. I think it a great scheme if only it would materialise. It would be easy to provide twenty classes for champions and a good many for novices, with half-a-dozen limit classes. It would be a show worth going miles to see; and from a Norwich point of view would make the previous best want to bury its head in a mud-bank. When you come to think of it, we are a conservative lot of fanciers. We are content to plod on the same by-roads and lanes as our forefathers trod. We never think of jumping across the brook or peeping over the hedge to see if there is another road better equipped for the present-day generation of fanciers to tread. We never stop to think that last season's fashions are out of date and not suited to present-day needs. Let us try on some new ones. They may not fit; but then—they may, and we shall never know unless we try them. Is the scheme practicable? What do others say?

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

Sir,—Adverting to Mr. R. G. Lewis's notes about the song of the Nightingale in your valuable paper of May 30, I may mention that I have possessed one of the 7s. 6d. Nightingales since April 14, and the bird has been in full song for about a month. I never fail in getting a freshly caught 'Gale into song in about a week's time, and cannot understand why others should not be equally successful if they will only observe a few rules which are essential to bring about the desired result.

In the first instance, a freshly caught Nightingale should never be put into an open cage. A cage of the box pattern, open in the front only, is best. Tack a piece of unbleached calico over the whole wire front, so that the bird is hidden from view. The food vessels should slide in from the front, so that they can be pulled out without disturbing the bird.

In the second instance, the secret lies in supplying the freshly caught bird with the right kind of food. Same must be entirely insectivorous, and alive, too, such as gentles, fresh ants' eggs, mealworms, and small earth worms. Put a good supply of these into the cage, and stand same in a well lighted and quiet place. Leave well alone, and I feel sure, if the bird is healthy and a true male, he will not keep you waiting long for his song.

Otto Puck.

Sir,—There seems to be a good deal of controversy regarding the Nightingale of late, owing no doubt to that splendid article by Mr. Teschemaker, for which I thank him. When I read the poetry about the 'Gale and the golden goblet I was almost brought to tears. Mr. Harrison asked in May 16th issue if 'Gales ever sang on a window-sill in a cage. At the present time I have two, one at the back of my house and one at the front, singing their pure wild song from 3 to 8 every morning. I also had one last year that sang between the same hours; this bird also sang all through the night. My shop is situated between two gas lamps, so, of course, the bird could see the lamp-light till about 2 a.m. in the morning; a case I have never heard of before. I also have several singing inside, but not on full song.

I have never yet accomplished the feat that Mr. Teschemaker speaks about, namely a 'Gale singing on my finger, but I have one that will sing when I am holding its cage in my hand, and I am going to try my luck with this. I have kept 'Gales for the last 15 years, and I can safely say that during that period I have hardly been without one singing. Several of the knowing ones doubt my statement, as they say a Nightingale's song is purely a love song. That may be the case in their wild state, but it is altogether a different thing in captivity, as they have no love to sing to. I have knocked their statement on the head because I have had them singing on my table on Christmas Day. Mr. Lewis is altogether wrong in stating birds that sing in captivity do not number 5 per 100. If that is the case then I must have the 5! Of course, Mr. Lewis is only speaking for himself, I suppose. Perhaps Mr. Lewis will want an extra pinch of salt if I tell him I have had as many as 8 singing at once. Moreover, if Mr. Lewis, or anyone else, doubts my statement they are welcome to come and hear for themselves; and hearing is believing. If our Editor will permit me I will give an article on the 'Gale at some future date.

F. Bent.

[We shall be delighted to receive the article.—Editor.]

Sir,—I have kept delicate Softbills a number of years, and 'Gales for the last ten years, and I consider them most difficult birds to get on full song. I had one that sang splendidly, but he would not sing if fed on anything but black beetles; these I kept in a pint glass and used to give him about 10 or a dozen in a smaller glass as often as he wanted them. I have two at present, one has been on song since Christmas, and has sang splendidly, but bring the other one in the room and he won't utter a note other than a harsh cry.

From experience I consider hand-reared 'Gales useless as far as song goes, and the largest 'Gales I find don't sing as freely as smaller ones. A wild caught bird must be kept in a warm room by himself and given daily attention and bath and then the song is regulated by the quantity of live food provided (mealworms, beetles, etc.). I never had one of these birds sing at night in a cage, and mine always sing at the same time, from 6 a.m. until noon, and often start to the minute day after day. One I had always sang at 9.10 a.m. for about 20 minutes, and never at any other time, excepting a few times only at 1 p.m.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

BIRDS GETTING BARE (D. Whitclaw).—If the bareness only occurs among the descendants of the two birds you mention as having introduced into your stock, and these birds themselves, it almost looks as if you had introduced a congenital defect with them, and in that case your only remedy is to rigorously weed them out again as soon as possible in future seasons by discarding from the breeding cage any bird containing this blood which shows any tendency to become bare. Am glad to know that the treatment advised has already done some good. Continue with it, and from now until the moulting season, when no very young broods are being fed, give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur two or three times a week, and every second day when not giving that, give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, black rape, teazle, linsced, broken groats, and chopped sunflower seeds. By the way, I take it that you have satisfied yourself that you have no sly feather-pluckers among your stock which are responsible for the mischief.

MOULTING CONTINUALLY (Mrs. de Broë).—As you seem satisfied that the bird is not exposed to draughts, I am afraid it must he subject to unusual fluctuations. Is it kept in or very near a window? If so, this and the fact that it is kept in a wire cage would suffice to account for the trouble. Keep it well within the room, in a bright and equable position, free from direct draughts, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. In addition to your present dietary, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it every second day for a fortnight or so, and on the alternate days a morsel of banana. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, and a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the drinking water two days in every three until the feathers cease dropping. Offer the bath daily, and twice a week for a month or so dissolve in it a little sulphuretted potash, in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of bathing water. There is no need to worry if the bird does not elect to bathe every day. If it is given the opportunity to do so it may be left to please itself in the matter.

THE BEST ORGAN (E. B.).—The only one I know of likely to be of any material service is the one known as the Querck organ. Nearly all large dealers in Canaries and requisites either stock this organ, or procure it to a customer's order. I do not think they are more apt to get out of order than any other mechanical device if properly cared for. But this naturally depends entirely upon the usage they get. I cannot advise you to go in for a second-hand article of this sort unless you had some knowledge of the matter, as if you got a machine that was out of order, it is not such an easy matter to get them set right in this country. The only way I can suggest for getting a second-hand machine is either to insert a small advertisement in our prepaid columns, or wait until you see one offered for sale. I do not know of any special organ of the name you mention, and think the one to which you refer was really a Querck organ.

DROPPING TAIL AND FLIGHTS (Penelope).—You have done quite right in mating the hen with another cock, as it is useless expecting one that is continually dropping its tail and flights to fertilise eggs. I suspect this bird has been kept in a position exposed to cold draughts, damp, or extreme and rapid fluctuations of temperature. It is neither necessary nor advisable to pluck the ragged feathers to make way for new ones. As we are now getting within measurable distance of the natural moulting season, you should leave matters to follow the natural course. Cage the bird alone, in a fairly equable position, well ventilated, but free from cutting direct draughts. See that both bird and cage are kept free from insect pests. If there is any doubt on this point add a little sulphuretted potash as advised to "Mrs. de Broë" in this issue, to its bath twice a week. Let it bathe daily if it desires to do so. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with maw seed every third day for a month. Then omit it for a fortnight, and then resume it for another month. On the day after you give this prepared sponge cake, each time add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece. Give a little green food in variety each day. This should enable the bird to get a good normal moult, and recover perfect plumage without any plucking or forcing.

A SWOLLEN CHEEK (G. H.). Sorry I cannot venture upon any opinion as to cause of your young bird having a swollen cheek and eye, as you do not give me the slightest data to work upon beyond this bare statement of fact. Possibly it may be due to a vicious peck from one of its dear brethren or sisters, or even its fond father or doting mother. If the swelling has not disappeared, wait a week or two, and meantime watch the birds closely to discover whether this one is a hutt for the pleasantries of its cage-mates, and then write again, if necessary, and describe as nearly as you can the exact position, appearance, and size of the swelling, and whether, and to what extent, it appears to affect the bird's general health.

CAN IT BE COLOUR-FED? (W.K.).—Certainly, you can improve the colour of a Canary that is a year old by colour-feeding it during its forthcoming moult. You are evidently under the impression that colour-feeding is only effectual when the birds are being reared as youngsters, and that, done then, the result is permanent. This is quite wrong. Colour-feeding is certainly only effectual whilst new plumage in being grown, as at moulting-times, but it is effective at any moulting season, practically irrespective of the age of the bird, and the result lasts only until the coloured plumage is cast off at the next moult, when, if the colour-feeding process was not again resorted to, the bird would moult out in a natural coloured specimen again. The feeding process must be carried out at every moult, so long as the bird is desired to appear as a coloured specimen. As you appear quite a tyro in this matter, and it is impossible to go into all details here, I would advise you to get the handbook on "Colour Feeding," 3½d., post free, from our Manager at once, and study its pages in readiness for the coming moulting season. You should begin to give colour food a little before the bird begins to drop its feathers, hence the necessity for acquiring knowledge of the subject without delay.

SEED DIET FOR MOULTING (Seed-for Young).—The staple diet at this season, as all others, should, for preference, consist simply of good canary seed, or at most, if you wish to avoid giving a little summer rape separately, a simple mixture of three parts canary (or two parts if your birds are Rollers) to one part summer rape. In addition to this, make up a mixture of two parts each, by bulk, of hemp, niger, and millet, one part each black rape and broken groats, a half-part each of teazle, linseed, and chopped sunflower seeds, and a quarter part each of maw, gold of pleasure, and yellow mustard. Allow a teaspoonful of this mixture to every three birds every second day, and on the intervening days ring the changes on egg-food, bread and milk, green food, wild seed heads, and sweet fruits. Allow birds to bathe freely, but keep cage or flight floor dry. You do not mention the variety you keep, nor say whether you wish to colour-feed them. In the latter event you may refer to reply to "W.K." in this issue.

A RECORD OF FAILURE (A.C.H.).—I am sorry you have so far signally failed in your efforts to rear Canaries after perseveriug for the best part of four seasons. I will gladly help you to achieve success, if I can, but your present letter omits several important details. Do the parents cease to feed the young before the latter die off, or do they die with full crops? Do you leave the cocks with the hens permanently, and do the hens begin nesting again as soon as the young are out of the way, and have you tried the hens both with and without the cocks left to assist in the rearing process? Definite knowledge on these points would have been of great assistance in advising you. Then, I am not quite clear whether you mean that the young are only just beginning to show feather at two to three weeks old. If this is so, I should take it for granted that they are neglected by the parents before they reach this age. Being kept in a scullery, see that they are not exposed to damp, draughts, or extremes of heat and cold, and do not interfere with the young more than is unavoidable. Then, when next brood are hatched, try what this system will do. For first day make egg-food of equal parts egg yolk and crushed sponge cake, then mix together equal parts sponge cake and bread crumbs, and use this mixture to dilute the egg in equal bulk. After this use equal parts of all three. Give in moderate quantity, and fresh at least twice a day. A sprinkling of maw may he added after the third day to keep hen keen on it. From the fourth day give green food fresh twice each day, either the flowering tips of groundsel or chickweed. Let this suffice until the young are ten days old, then add a teaspoonful of soaked rape daily, and four to six days later add also a teaspoonful of cracked hemp each day. If you have not previously tried removing the cock, do this when the next hen commences to sit, and leave her to hatch and rear the young alone. You should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our Manager, and see if you cannot discover from this some flaw in your treatment.

MOULTED FEATHERS (Mrs. de Broe).—Your second letter with moulted feathers duly to hand. After carefully examining the feathers there is nothing I will add at this time to my previous reply. Give the treatment therein advised a full course, and then report result, and I will advise further, if necessary.

CAUSE OF ADDLED EGGS (Rob.).—(1) It is just possible that a sudden and unusual noise, such as the dropping down of the lid of the chest you mention, or the slamming of a door, may he responsible for addled eggs, if they occur at a critical time whilst the hen is sitting; but it is more likely to be because the shock causes the hen to clutch the eggs and slightly "pin-hole," or otherwise damage them than to any effect of the noises upon the eggs or germs themselves. In your case I should say the most likely cause is that the hen was off the eggs too long, and allowed them to get dangerously chilled during one of the cold spells we had about the time you suspect the germs died. You may allow the hen to go on nesting again as soon as she is ready, and it will be no harm to take steps to prevent the haning down of the chest lid. Get a couple of vibration pads from any gramophone dealer and fix one to each front corner of the lid. (2) Certainly, I would advise mating a broken-cap gold Lizard with a clear-cap silver. That is the usual method, and the best for the novice to follow. Of course, the birds should be suitable for each other in other points. It is of no great importance which way the sexes are. The mating of two golds or two silvers is not to be commended as a rule. It is only in quite exceptional circumstances that such matings should be resorted to, and even then only by one who knows the pedigree of the birds and how they are most likely to "throw." You want the part of "Our Canaries" dealing with the Lizard to get the details and possible effect of these extraordinary matings.

PESTERED WITH LICE (Sands).—(1) Your birds are undoubtedly out of condition, as this pest rarely gets a footing upon really sound and healthy stock, unless kept under really bad conditions. The best thing you could do to stamp them out quickly in order to get a fair chance of breeding successfully, is to hand-wash each bird and mix a little Creolin in the two first waters used in the proportion of a teaspoonful of Creolin to pint of water. Whilst birds are drying, thoroughly wash out the cages with solution of Creolin of twice the above strength. After an interval of a week repeat the whole process. If you are not expert at washing, and cannot get a friend who is to do the job for you, give a bath daily and mix in each pint of the water used a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash, in which the birds will bathe themselves. In addition to the ordinary diet, give a piece of bread the size of a walnut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar daily for a fortnight, to each pair of birds, and during the same time add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water each day. Give a little crisp young dandelion daily. (2) As regards egg-preserving, get a copy of the current issue of the "Poultry World," April 17th, which is a special egg-preserving number, and deals fully with the subject. It is scarcely within our scope.

Owing to the intervention of the Whitsun Holidays a number of Queries were not received until Tuesday last, and we cannot, of course, get these answered in this issue. They will be dealt with, however, next week.—Editor.

HOW TO TREAT (Amateur).—As it is impossible to go into all details in this column, I would strongly advise you to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free from our manager, which will prevent you making many mistakes in the course of the season. You might also see several other replies in this issue about hens laying eggs without shells. Possibly you may have been feeding the birds a little too well, so that the hen is in a rather overfed condition. Whilst hen is sitting, give a diet of plain canary only as staple. Twice a week give a very small quantity of egg food, and once or twice, according to the weather, a scrap of green food. Hang on a bath for an hour or so daily during the last three or four days of incubation if the weather is warm. When the young are hatched, give egg food daily in small quantities, fresh two or three times each day, gradually increasing the quantity given at once as the demands of the young increase. From the fourth day onwards give also a little green food, in quite small quantities at first, fresh twice a day. About the eighth day a little soaked rape may be added, and a few days later begin to give a little lightly cracked hemp each day. Only experience can show whether the cock should be left with the hen whilst sitting and rearing the young. Some cocks bully the hens far too much to be allowed to remain with them, and some hens, which will not rear the young when he is left with them, will rear them all right by themselves. In this matter you have to be guided by circumstances.

TROUBLE WITH EGG-BINDING (Snookered).—I am afraid you are a good deal too meddlesome with the hens, and much of the trouble arises from the bad effect of your manipulations, and I am sure you have not got such a seed mixture as you describe either from this column or "Canary Breeding for Beginners." I doubt if this hen will now be of any use for breeding this season, so to prevent disappointment I would advise you to replace her with a strong, healthy and active hen, not younger than early last season bred. Mate her with the cock if still in good condition, and treat precisely as you will find in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and for a seed mixture use equal parts hemp, black rape, millet (white only), and niger. For green food use only chickweed, flower-buds of groundsel, watercress, or lettuce. Give no dandelion at all. Then let matters follow the natural course. If the hen looks a little thick before she is expected to lay, do not jump to the conclusion that she is egg-bound. If this really occurs there will be no mistaking it, and if she appears to be getting in extremis then you can steam her, and keep in a quite warm place for a time. But avoid all manipulative treatment. Indeed, I am convinced you will do best to avoid all treatment whatever if you possibly can do so, and leave the hen severely alone from the time you mate her. Keep the other hen in a good-sized cage where she can get plenty of exercise for a few weeks, and for the next fortnight add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water every second day.

TWO QUESTIONS (W. Clay).—(1) It is practically certain to be on account of the ovary being in a dormant condition and undeveloped state that she refuses to mate with any cock either this season or last. I have known many such hens, which to all intents and purposes were otherwise in perfect health. The fact that she is a first-cross Belgian-Yorks has nothing whatever to do with her behaviour. That is a mere coincidence. (2) Of course, it is possible to place a youngster a week old in a nest with others a fortnight old, but it most certainly is not advisable, which, I expect, is what you want to know. Some [illegible] tolerate such an addition, but others would not. And even if the youngster was accepted, it would probably be starved to death by its [illegible] and stronger nest-mates monopolising all the food supply. If you cannot transfer it to young about its own age, you had better not attempt doing so at all. In the evening, after the young have been well fed for the night, is the best time to make such a transference.

A TRIPLET (Micky).—(1) It is quite possible for all the clutch of five eggs of the hen whose mate died suddenly on the afternoon of the day she laid her first egg to be fertilised. On the other hand, it is also not unlikely for all to be unfertile. It depends entirely upon the vigour and condition of the cock prior to his death, and also to no small extent to the ovarian condition of the hen. In ordinary conditions with healthy birds I should not expect more than two eggs to be fertile. (2) It is not unusual for a hen to lay an egg some days after commencing to sit, but it is very much so for a clutch to be laid when the first are only half incubated, as I take it is the case with your hen. As you cannot tell which are the last clutch, your best course is to let the hen sit them all until the young are hatched from the first clutch, and then if you have a hen that has just finished sitting a clutch of unfertiles remove the eggs from this hen and give them to the other to finish the period of sitting with them. Or you might distribute them among two or three other hens with eggs that have been sitting about the same length of time as these eggs will have been sat upon. (3) Looks as if this bird had pneumonia, in which case he may have been "gathered to his fathers" before this reply appears. If not, keep him quite on the warm side, give a little bread and milk, and a pinch of maw daily, add the medicine advised in reply to "A.W.H." in this issue to the water, and leave the rest to Nature. You cannot do more. At present warmth is the great point to enable him to pull through.

A WOULD-BE TRIGAMIST (A Novice).—I believe this is the fifth novice so far this week. They will each have to pick out their own replies. A more distinctive nom-de-plume is advisable. (1) I would not advise you to try running a cock with three hens separately. Two is quite sufficient if you are to give the cock a brief rest between putting the hens to nest, and besides this, if you try running him with three and one or other of them is rather slow in going to nest, you may not have him at liberty when you want him. Yes, when number one has gone to nest and commenced to sit, remove him and mate with number two. When she has commenced to sit remove him again and cage him alone until the first hen is ready to begin nesting again. Then repeat the same tactics as before. Begin giving a little green food on the third or fourth day; soaked rape, if a large brood, about the sixth or eighth day; hemp about the tenth day. To a certain extent the time must be regulated by the good or bad feeding qualities of the hen, as the case may be. (2) Add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinking water every second day whilst the hen is going to nest. If this does not stop the excessive looseness, add also on the alternate days for a week or so six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of tincture of opium. Stop the latter when the desired effect is obtained, but the lime water may be continued until she has gone to nest.

RUNNING COCK WITH TWO HENS (H. S.).—Evidently you have not "Our Canaries," wherein the process certainly is described fully, and also, I believe, in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," though I have not a copy handy at the moment to verify this. Anyway, here is the process in a nutshell. Keep the hens separately in single breeding cages, and mate the cock with the one that seems nearest ready to go to nest, and leave them together until the hen has laid her third egg, and on the evening of the day the third egg is laid, when you are putting them to sit, take away the cock and mate him with the second hen, leaving the first hen to hatch out and rear the young by herself. When the second hen goes to nest and you are putting her to sit, take away the cock and cage him separately until the first hen is ready for him again to begin nesting for the second brood. Then return the cock to her and repeat the same procedure as for the first round. Note that both hens are left to hatch and rear the young by themselves on each occasion in both rounds. If it should happen that both hens are equally forward for nesting, as may be the case at this season, the best plan is to run the cock with both hens concurrently, by allowing him to be with each for one-half of each day. To save the trouble of changing him about so frequently, you will attain this object by transferring him from one hen to the other at midday each day.

NORWICH GOING BLIND (R.T.).—I am afraid the trouble is of a more or less contagious nature, and advise you to keep all affected birds separate from the rest, and thoroughly disinfect any cage which has been occupied by an infected bird before using it for any healthy bird. As regards treatment, as soon as you see the eyes becoming affected, bathe them for a few minutes morning and evening with a decoction made by infusing six or eight chamomile heads in a breakfast cup of boiling water for an hour, allow it to stand till cold, strain off the clear liquid, and add to it 40 drops of tincture of opium. Use a drop of fresh liquid and a fresh dossil of wool or linen for each bird treated. After bathing carefully dry off surplus moisture, and place on each eye a tiny speck of an ointment composed of five grains of yellow oxide of mercury in a quarter ounce of spermaceti. Any chemist will mix this for you. Hold the bird for a minute or so while the ointment melts and help it to run about the eye and under the eyelid.

IS IT PARTIALITY? (Thrush). — Most likely. Many hens show more or less partiality for the strongest youngsters in a brood, and systematically neglect the weakling of the brood, if there happens to be such a one. It often happens so when one or two youngsters are two days or so younger than the first-hatched, and after the first few days the superior size and strength of the oldest birds enables them to monopolise the hen's attentions. In your case the easiest way out would be to place the neglected chick with a brood about the same size belonging to another hen, or if no such hen is available, give the youngster a few good feeds by hand each morning and evening for a time until it gets stronger to make its wants more insistent. As she fed only the small bird with the soft food containing maw, you should have made a point of giving it with this addition for an hour or two each morning and evening for a time, and thus assured its being fed at these times, until the disparity in size was reduced, when things would have gone on all right. Try this plan now if the youngster still survives.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

WHAT BIRD? (Darkie).—According to your description, I should say your young bird was a Chaffinch, but am unable to tell you the sex, as they are so much alike in their nest plumage. You will not be able to decide until he has moulted. Add a little soaked rape to the egg food, also a few ants' eggs, live ones if you can get them, if not, soak a few dried ones in new milk. Collect greenfly, small caterpillars, or take pieces of mealworm and drop into his beak once or twice a day. When he can feed himself, give cracked canary, hemp, a little maw seed, and pieces of sunflower seed, in addition to the egg food mixture, the latter can be discontinued when he can crack seeds for himself, but do not leave off too suddenly. At that time you could offer a little greenfood, such as seeding grasses, shepherd's purse, chickweed, and a spray of watercress, and twice a week give a spoonful of sprouting rape, and radish seed; if you keep it damp and in a warm place for a day or two, it will quickly germinate, in which state they are particularly fond of it. Our booklet on the Chaffinch would assist you in your future management.

AGE FOR BREEDING (Linnet and Canary).—Your Canary hen may go to nest even yet, as some of them are exceedingly late in breeding, particularly when they have a partner of another species. I do not think you will do much good by parting them now. Give the ben a nest box, and plenty of nesting material, and if you have a cock Canary in song, hang him where she can hear him. You should also give her a little egg food every other day, some hemp and maw seed, and a spoonful of soaked rape. For green food offer a small dandelion leaf daily. (2) No, the Canary is not too young to breed; it is not an unusual occurrence for hens to go through the whole season without showing signs of wanting to nest, and however anxious, one cannot do anything to force them, beyond feeding them well, giving nesting materials, and putting them near one of the opposite sex. (3) This and the next month are the two best for Hybrid breeding.

COCK CANARY AND HEN LINNET (Learner).—Hybrids between the Linnet and Canary are generally produced from the Linnet cock and Canary hen, but if you have a Linnet hen that is likely to nest, you could try the other way, but you would still require a nesting Canary hen to rear the young ones, as the British hen cannot be relied upon to incubate and feed the little ones.

TROUBLE WITH SKYLARK (Harold Wilding).—I think you would do well to procure our Nutshell Booklet on the Skylark. In a wild state these birds feed a good deal upon insects, and you say you have had yours three years without giving him any, so it is not surprising that he is not doing well now. The loss of feathers may be caused by improper feeding, or it may be caused by insects. You had better catch him and examine him carefully for grey lice, and if you find any you must dust him well with insect powder, and do it again, about every three or four days, until you get rid of them. Do you give him a dust bath? If not, you should do so, as this is the natural way for these birds to keep themselves clear of insects. It is also a good plan to spray them a little during the summer weather. You say nothing about your feeding, so I presume you are giving him the food so frequently advised to other readers. If there is any little point not mentioned in our booklet that you require advice upon, perhaps you will kindly write again.

A THIRSTY LINNET (Bluestone).—You say nothing whatever about the treatment of your bird, and give me no hints as to your feeding, consequently it is difficult to find the cause of your Linnet being so thirsty. You say he drinks a glass full daily; of course, a glass may be any size, and birds naturally drink considerably more water during the summer months than they do in the winter, and if one should be kept in a hot room, he would no doubt feel the effects of the heat. If there is any looseness of the bowels, you had better boil the water, and add a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food to it, fresh every day. Perhaps you do not supply him with greenfood. At this time of the year Finches should have a fairly liberal supply, as it is easily procured, and will assist in keeping them in good health.

FEEDING TIT (L. W. F.).—Mix him a little good insectile food fresh every day. Offer sunflower, hemp and maw. The two former he will plant between his feet and hammer at with his beak until he makes an entrance through the shell. He should have a piece of apple or other fruit; nuts of various kinds, first cracking them so that he can get at the contents. A tiny piece of suet occasionally and one or two mealworms or other live food, such as green fly, small beetles, caterpillars, etc. (2) There are various foods on the market suitable for a Tarush, or you can make your own staple food, and give him the purchased articles for a change. Procure some puppy biscuits or medium chicken meal (best quality), soak in hot water, and mix a spoonful of meat meal or fine crissel with it. Occasionally a spoonful of ants' eggs or grocers' currants put in with it make a change. Offer fruit in season, mealworms, beetles, etc., and very occasionally a little shredded meat. (3) Chaffinches, as a rule, are not free singers until the spring. Proper treatment as regards feeding and bathing, mealworms and other insects, should bring him along. On fine days hang him in the open air for an hour or so. (4) I have never tried a cage of the description you mention, so am unable to say much about it; but you will notice the sender of the sketch says it has certain advantages, which look to be very feasible. Why not try one? They look as though they could be easily made.

CONCERNING STARLINGS (Starling Fancier).—You should have no difficulty in distinguishing the sexes when you get several birds together. The hen bird never has quite the metallic sheen of the cock, and her spangling is bolder and more distinct in marking and whiter in appearance. The hen's beak is never so bright as the cock bird's, it is generally a dusky brown. (2) I should think you would have no difficulty in getting Starlings to breed in a suitable aviary—that is if you think they are worth the trouble. Give them a box and plenty of sticks, straw, and other nesting materials, and I think you would find they would soon go to nest, but I am doubtful if they would rear the young unless you could provide them with plenty of live food in addition to their usual soft food. (3) The Starling is not a difficult subject to cater for. Soaked chicken-meal or puppy biscuits, with a spoonful of meat-meal or fine crissel make a very good general food, with an occasional feed of the usual insectile food of the best quality. You can sometimes mix his food with boiled potatoes, scraped carrot, or scraps from the table. A little live food occasionally and a morsel of shredded meat, and he won't say no to a few mealworms. (4) Hand-rearing is not at all a difficult matter, but they are dirty nestlings, and require a lot of attention. I have hand-reared them on egg-food, as given to Canaries, made rather sloppy, and as they grow, mixing insectile food with it. Occasionally put a pinch of sand or grit in with it—it aids digestion. Feed every hour at first, gradually extending the time as they grow. Do not over-feed, especially during the day-time. The heaviest feed should be the last at night.

HEN NOT BREEDING (S. Morris).—The fact of your hen not laying is not at all an uncommon occurrence, we frequently get such cases even when paired to their own species. The only remedy I can suggest is to give her a course of chemical food, and let her bathe and exercise freely, and when the breeding time comes round feed her with stimulating food; give her plenty of nesting material to encourage her to go to nest, and let a cock Canary be within hearing. As she is such a shy breeder, I fear you have no chance of breeding hybrids with her, especially with her present partner. The Chaffinch-Canary has not yet been produced, and I do not think it is likely to be, excepting under the very best conditions. The fact of her having unfertile eggs with a Goldfinch does not appear very encouraging for the future. One of the best foods we have here for bringing birds into breeding condition is the leaves and seed-pods of the common dandelion. I do not know much about your Australian plants, but if you have this one you will find it a very suitable addition to your greenfood list.

BRINGING CHAFFINCH INTO CONDITION (C. L. Edwards).—I am afraid you do not read your CAGE BIRDS as you should do, or you would see that this question was answered last week. If a Chaffinch is properly fed and attended to he would be now coming into song and condition. Many birds are by now in high fettle. Presume you are feeding him on the usual seeds, which should include a little sunflower daily, give in addition some sprouting radish and turnip seed. Place some in a shallow pan or dish and keep moist until it commences to germinate, when cut out a square and offer the Finch. The very best food to bring him along is live food, and Chaffinches will generally eat most kinds; give mealworms, gruhs, caterpillars, spiders, green fly, etc., whenever procurable, also offer wild food, such as dandelion leaves, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc., these will all assist. Chaffinches are naturally rather precocious birds and do not generally need much forcing. Have you the Nutshell booklet on the Chaffinch? If not, procure one, you will find it full of useful information.

NIGHTINGALE MATTERS (W.H.C.).—You are not obliged to have a wicker front to your Nightingale's cage; the ordinary wire will do. The cage is generally covered over when a freshly-caught bird is introduced, and gradually raised as he settles down. The colour you have painted your cage will do very nicely for general use, although most people prefer green, it will be quite safe to put a bird in by the time you are able to get one. The bath is certainly best hung outside; even then the bird cannot help making the floor of the cage wet. You can procure a bath with cage to hang on suitable for the purpose at most bird shops. You can cover the bottom of the cage with whatever material you fancy. I have used sifted peat moss, and find it answer admirably, and prefer it to sawdust for birds that are at all unsteady. As regards the perches, there is no proper size, birds in a wild state use tree branches of all thicknesses, and you cannot do better than copy nature, the difference in size need not be enough to look unsightly, but ever so little difference makes a change in the grip, which must be exercise for the feet and comforting to the bird. Soft yellow pine is as good as anything. (2) You will never get a 'Galc to sing as freely as a Skylark, they do not in a wild state, even at their best. In fact, you are particularly lucky if you get one to sing moderately well, in confinement many refuse to sing at all. The Sprosser is the Continental bird, and is considered to be a good songster, but, like our native bird, is sometimes a bit shy of exhibiting his powers. All the migratory birds are somewhat affected by the so-called migratory fever, in the autumn, but it varies considerably in individuals. Any birds very much affected should be placed in a quiet corner of the bird-room, and, if necessary, partly covered over. It is generally during the first autumn of captivity that they feel it most. There is no danger in allowing birds to bathe the year round, providing you choose fine bright days in the winter, and give them the bath early in the morning, taking it away in an hour or so, if they have used it or not.

SEEMS ITCHY (G.S.H.).—You should thoroughly examine the cage for red mites, probing any crack or joints of door, etc., with a pin, notwithstanding that it is cleaned out weekly, and if any trace of insects is found overhaul cage and exterminate them. If you find any parts of the surface of the cage covered with a whitish powdery appearance you may take that as positive proof that mites exist somewhere close at hand. If no trace of insects exists, give in addition to the staple seed diet a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for three weeks or so, and on the alternate days give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, black rape and teazle. Stop giving apple, and substitute a little dandelion, or other green salading instead daily. In the water add six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for another fortnight. Allow bird to bathe freely. You may slightly smear the sore spots once or twice with Lanocyllin, but do not daub the plumage.

CHOICE OF BIRDS (Togo).—You could easily accommodate half a dozen birds in your two flight. I would advise you to start with a Linnet, Redpoll, Siskin, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, and Bramblefinch, and when you have successfully mastered the art of keeping these in captivity you will be able to have some of the more showy, but hardly so easily kept specimens. Before you purchase them I would advise you to get the British Bird Manual, Part I., Hardbills, published at this office, price 1s. 1d. It will give you full directions for selecting show specimens, and details of proper manner of feeding them. (3) All birds moult in the autumn and British birds as a rule are not colour fed, but sometimes the Siskin and Greenfinch are given a little to increase the yellow colour in the plumage. You should go to one of the big shows and have a look at the birds there, it, will help you considerably.

WHICH MATE (Studious).—I would advise you to use the cock Linnet with your Canary as Linnet Hybrids are more valuable than the Greenfinch, whether you want them for song or exhibition, and the fact of the Greenies being so wild should help you to decide the question. (2) Bullfinches are particularly destructive to shrubs, and are sure to peck whatever you put in. I know nothing better than box, unless it is heather, which can be fastened to the woodwork of the aviary, and gives quite an artistic effect, besides forming a good foundation for the birds to nest in.

AVIARY FOR SONG BIRDS (Songster).—I rather like your plan of the suggested aviary. I think I would have the doors quite at the end, that is if you intend to have two of them, but I think you would do better to have only one, and that at the end of the front, the furthest away from the open part. You could then drive all the birds out in the open whenever you wanted to enter the building for cleaning purposes, and I do not think you need have glass in the roof as you will find it rather difficult to keep out the wet. You could have a window about one foot high running from the doorway to the centre post of the building where the division is, this will look artistic and give plenty of light for the interior. Whenever you wished to enter the building you could easily drive the birds outside by tapping on the glass, or you could have a sliding door in the partition, working from the outside. You could keep ten or a dozen Finches and Buntings in a building your size. I would advise you to keep the Thrush in a cage, you would get far more song out of him, and he might possibly bully the other birds, otherwise I think your collection a very good one: There are two books that would be specially useful to you: "Aviaries, Bird Rooms, Etc.," 2s. 3d., and "The British Bird Mannal," 2s. 3d., or Part I. "Hardbills," 1s. 1d., all post free from "Cage Birds" office.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GREY PARROT (C.W.).—If your bird is the age stated it should begin to talk as soon as it is accustomed to you and its new quarters; at the same time being out of condition may delay matters. You must keep this bird warm, and keep it out of reach of cold winds; at the same time apart from this it should get all the light and air possible. Lightly dust the boiled maize daily with flowers of sulphur, but previous to this add to it ten drops of cod liver oil, and after this has soaked in, dust with sulphur. Unless the bird is much younger than stated it should soon begin to take some of the seed mixture. Continue to give the Chemical Food, but once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the water in lieu of the Chemical Food. Keep cuttlebone in the cage and give a pinch of grit daily. Offer one or two shelled nuts daily, such as walnuts or Barcelona. If it should become worse, write again at once, otherwise report progess a month hence.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (H.J.B.).—In the first place I should write the vendor and give him the details you name, as for the amount you gave you ought to get an established bird. It is impossible to state course on data to hand, but the bird must be kept quiet, and all hasty movements in its vicinity avoided. If you have not got it send to our Manager for the Grey Parrot Nutshell, 2½d. post free, and gradually bring your diet on to the lines given therein. While the periods of excitement last, a little cold water on the top of the head will help. So long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day. Follow the first dose of the magnesia by the following sedative: Dissolve three gains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup, and stir into the drinking water. Give this dose on three successive days, and any time you note symptoms of a recurrence of the fits, give two or three doses of the bromide as above. Report progess about a month hence, if no adverse symptoms develop; if such do occur, write again at once. Re the Amazon, you give me no data as to how you feed, etc. Give Dinneford's Magnesia as above, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. Spray twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution, but and anoint all bare places with Spratt's "Pennacura," but do not use sufficient to make the surrounding plumage greasy. Feather eating is almost impossible of cure once a bird becomes confirmed in it. You must persevere.

BUDGERIGARS (Budgie).—The diet for these birds is a mixture of three parts each canary and white millet seeds, and one part white oats, to be well mixed. Also millet sprays, green food (as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat), and continuous access to cuttlebone and grit. No nesting material is required, but in the cemented box you could throw in a thin layer of sawdust. It is a matter of patience; you must wait for them to settle down, and nesting should follow in due course. The nesting season in this country is practically all the year round, except during the period of the moult.

FEATHER PICKER (Myosotis).—I can at present only say give the bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day. Spray the bird every other day with a tepid quassia solution. It is a waste of time to attempt a guess at cause or suggest remedy on the data you give—simply that "she picks out her feathers and also breaks them." Tell a little of the history of the bird, and how it has been fed and generally treated, say, for the past twelve months.

CUTTHROATS (Ribbon).—(1) You know if you have supplied any nesting material, and whether the lining of the husk is composed of such material. Again, if you placed a new husk in the cage, the nest cannot be sufficiently old to be deleterious. Possibly you bought cage, husk, and birds as one lot, if so, and the husk smells sweet and there are no parasites, you can leave it as it is. In case you should have made such an error, never in future buy anything but new nest receptacles. (2) Hay, grass, and a little moss. (3) The calls of both birds are quite natural, and they should soon nest. (4) Quite normal. (5) Yes, should do so, supply seed, dry ants' cocoons, ample green food, and if you are in a district where you can gather (collect) live ants' eggs, such will be excellent to supply to the birds ad lib. (6) Quite normal. (7) The carrying of nesting material, the male dancing to his mate, and pairing.

AVIARY QUERIES (Belfast).—(1) In a yard surrounded by high walls, the sunniest aspect is almost a sine qua non. The high walls will make any position sheltered, but it is imperative that the front of the aviary gets the sun for a good portion of the day, and this must be the deciding factor as to where you place it. (2) Seven pairs, and the following would suit you for a beginning: Zebra, Bib and Ribbon Finches, Avadavats, Silverbills, Bronze Mannikins, and Alario Finches. (3) One pair of Cockatiels and three pairs the size of Budgerigars would tax your accommodation to the utmost. (4) The vagaries of the market settle this point, and you must buy when obtainable, but unless you have indoor accommodation, you must make your purchases in the spring and early summer. Species once cheap and common disappear for a time unexpectedly, and on a reappearance have a higher value. (5) It is not many that give the accommodation; very strong aviaries are required, and many, nay, most, take a long time to settle down. Rose-breasted, Leadbeaters, and the Yellow-crested would be as likely as any; but each pair would have to have a fairly roomy enclosure, and fully adult birds must be procured, or you may get a very long wait before even an attempt is made. Leadbeaters have bred at the London Zoo.

IS IT A PEKIN NIGHTINGALE? (W. Elliott).—Yes, I think your bird is a Pekin Robin or Nightingale, and probably a female, not only because it has not sung a note, but on account of its pale colouration according to your description. Newly imported males are usually advertised at 7s. 6d., but a proved songster would fetch much more—the merit of the song of respective males varies considerably. If you procure Nutshell No. 19, 2½d post free from our Manager, it will tell you all about this interesting species. The best way to procure a singing male is to bide your time, paying periodical visits to your local source of supply, and buying the first you see pouring forth his tuneful melody. Diet: This should consist of insectile mixture (soft food), ripe fruit ad lib, and some live insects, mealworms, and any garden pests you can procure.

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Cresswell's "Hygiene of Bird-Keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

CELLAR AVIARY (Novice).—The whole question hinges upon what amount of light finds its way into the cellar. No birds do well without light and sun, and if they breed a good portion of their young are often deformed or affected with ricketts. Of course, if the sun finds its way inside for a portion of the day, then the birds will do well; but if you can manage the space, while you are constructing I should suggest having a similar sized flight outside the cellar, letting the birds go in and out through the window, then the aviary should be a really successful one. Two sides of your suggested aviary are brick walls; line these thickly with twiggy branches as perching accommodation. I should say you would do best with Budgerigars and Lovebirds. Get two pairs of Budgies and one pair Black-cheek Lovebirds. Put up four husks for the Budgies and two small barrels for the Lovebirds. Budgies require no nesting material, but the Lovebirds will require leaves and strips of thin bark, which they will carry into the barrel, partly filling it and forming their nest right at the back. Canaries are outside my province. Repeat this query to our Mr. St. John. Once Budgies start breeding, they breed nearly all the year, only stopping for the moult.

ANOTHER FEATHER PULLER (Ronco).—I am afraid with your bird this annoying habit is a vice, and once a bird becomes confirmed in it, it is practically incurable. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days give half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. Spray the bird twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution, but do not subject the bird to the slightest draught or chill wind, while the plumage is damp. In addition to what you are giving, also supply ripe fruit (any kind it will eat) daily: nuts, biscuits, stale crusts, and sponge cake can all be given to vary the diet. Keep cuttlebone, grit and a piece of a fairly thick branch continually in the cage. Report progress in a month or six weeks.

LEMON-CREST COCKATOO (J. H. Haynes).—Your diet certainly is about normal, and evidently is not responsible for the trouble unless there is anything in the mixture. I am inclined to suspect skin parasites, and if the bird is tame enough to hand wash it in a tepid solution of fir-tree oil. This is a horticultural preparation, quantities are given on the bottle as a wash for birds, etc., but about a teaspoonful to a quart of water is about the strength. Keep it out of the birds eyes, and a sponging twice a week should materially help it. Put into the birds drinking water twice a week one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia, and on the other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates. Keeping the bird well amused and letting it out of the cage to wander about a bit will all help. Keep cuttlebone and grit and a piece of a branch in the cage for it to cut up. You must persevere, you may lessen the evil even if you can't cure.

AVIARY (M. B.).—I do not know your county, and this makes it rather difficult to advise as to the amount of shelter required; moreover, I did not write "Aviaries and Cages," and do not know what aviary design of mine is included therein. Now, taking your aviary as at present, when you have the flight attached thereto, half the front should be kept permanently closed up, and during the cold months of the year the whole of it, except for a space about 1½ft. wide and 4ft. high, for the birds to get in and out. You are on clay; this holds the wet and calls for some cover. The 5ft. of roof and north end should be boarded and felted, also the 5ft. of front adjoining north end would be better wood and glass; all the remainder of flight could be wire netting (not larger mesh than half-inch), with the exception of 1½ft. high of matching all round base. As regards the flight ground space, the portion under the roof would be the better for six inches of gritty sandy gravel upon it, which could be easily kept in place by a six-inch board stretching across the aviary. The other portion of the ground should be thickly planted with such evergreen trees and bushes as flourish in your locality, putting in a few of good size to form immediate cover. Along the front of the covered north side of flight (in the aviary) stakes (larch poles are good) should be fixed from ground to roof (this will give stability) three feet apart, with some rampant climber planted at the base of each—a space of at least six feet broad in the centre should be turfed and cut regularly (a large bath would look well in the centre of this), for the birds to display on; the other parts around the turf to be planted between the trees and bushes with coarse grasses and herbage—dock, cow parsley, wild mallow, thistle, etc. Suitable evergreens could be chosen from the following:—Aucuba, Common Laurels, Berberis, Euonymus, Firs, Cupressus, Evergreen Privet, etc.; deciduous trees and bushes; Golden Privet, Elder, Hawthorn, Willow, Hazel, Beech, Birch, and all English fruits. Creepers: Ivy, Hops, Roses, Virginian Creeper, Everlasting Pea, Honeysuckle, Bellbine, Wild Clematis, Canary Creeper, Nasturtium, etc. Such varieties should be chosen as are rampant growers in your locality—consult some local nurserymen. As regards birds, well, you must ask again for this, as I have exhausted space. Mention your county when doing so. It is difficult to cover the full scope of your query in the space limit allowed for replies. If you increase flight, you must increase shelter accommodation also.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. Copestick.—If you made a clear arrangement that the deal was to be subject to approval, then clearly you should have returned the broken records (you were not likely to "approve" of them in that state) and claimed your bird back, or further records in satisfactory condition. You would not become the owner of the records until approved, therefore the transit risks were not yours. If you had an approval arrangement you can sue for the return of your bird, or its value.

W. Wolf.—Garden Warbler (Sylvia hortensis), Whitethroat (Sylvia cinerea). The above are the "old-fashioned" Latin names; the latest book on classification, etc. ("A Hand-list of British Birds") adopts Sylvia borin and Sylvia communis communis respectively.

A. W. Howarth.—The leaves and flowers are those of the tormentil.

Advertiser.—It so happened that we had anticipated your desire.

Old Scottie.—We could not possibly invite a correspondence of this nature. The article in question has been on sale now a number of years and we have never heard anything but complimentary references made to it.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mr. A. Mutton.—Bird died as the result of a fit, contributed to by a too plethoric condition.

Mr. H. Garside.—Enteritis symptomative of ptomaine poisoning, arising no doubt from the food. Use care in preparation of egg-food for parent birds. Give perfectly fresh, and diminish the quantity also.

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird-keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatoels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 1/-, 1/6 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a new transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

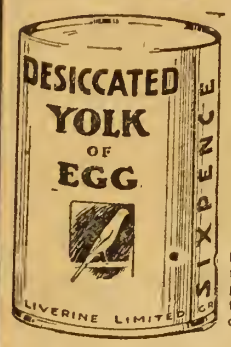
You like HYDE'S Bird Seeds!

Have you tried their DOG & PUPPY CAKES?

Wholesale of R. Hyde & Co., Ltd., Camberwell

LIVERINE LIMITED,



Claim they are responsible for the splendid results obtained this year with the youngsters throughout the British Isles. It is difficult to find a district where Desiccated Yolk of Egg is not extensively used, and of the few fanciers not using it most of them are grumbling. Why waste so much time with the boiling of eggs when you have the genuine thing ready to mix with the biscuit, and cheap too. A 6d. tin will rear a nest of young. The proprietors have an output for the white of the egg, so can offer the yolk at a low figure.

SELLING EVERYWHERE IN 2d. PACKETS AND 6d. TINS.

LIVERINE LIMITED,
Proprietors of SING-SONG, GRIMSBY.

The Red Feed

Tested and proved to be the finest on the market. Hot Natal and another great colour ingredient added, quite ready for mixing. Birds will eat readily of it without starving. Gives wonderful colour and sheen. Sent out in air-tight sealed tins. Sold in tins, 2/6, 4/9; 5lbs. 8/6, 7lbs. and over, 1/6 per lb., carr. paid.

WILL SECURE A COPY OF CHARLES HOULTON'S FAMOUS WORK.

'Cage Bird Hybrids'

Edited by G. E. WESTON and C. A. HOUSE.

Proceed on the lines laid down in this wonderful work and SUCCESS MUST FOLLOW. First of all are considered at great length the Question of cages and aviaries for Hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for Hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition Mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg-binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young Hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task. CONTAINS 16 COLOURED PLATES. 16 Art Plates and 66 Sketches by that well-known artist, Mr. H. Norman. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid, and shows the correct colour, shape, the present-day type, and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid. Carriage paid for One Payment of 7/6, or 1/- down and three Monthly Payments of 3/-, from "CAGE BIRDS," 154 FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-., post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatcels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 6/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Mr. Yelland made a member, and very pleased we are to welcome him back amongst us after an absence of abont 6 years.—E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

FIFE CAGE BIRD LEAGUE.

The Railway Concession Scheme.

The supreme conference in connection with the above scheme will be held in the rooms, 142, High Street, Edinburgh, on June 20, at 6 p.m. At a meeting of the league held in Dunfermline on Sat., June 6, great satisfaction was felt among the members at the very hearty response which has been given to their requests, and they feel convinced that at the supreme conference in Edinburgh the delegates will be in a position to frame a code of concessions suitable to the mind of the great body of cage bird fanciers, who have already evinced their interest in the scheme, and who, we hear, will eagerly await the results. I omitted in my report of the Edinburgh conference to mention that the delegates appointed from that meeting to the supreme conference were Messrs. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh), S. Arnott (Alloa), T. Arnott (Kirkcaldy), and myself.—Robert T. Campbell, sec. pro. tem.

Meeting at Dunfermline.

Meeting held in Co-operative Hall, Dunfermline, June 6, Mr. Thos. Arnott (vice-president) in the chair, and good turn-out of members. Next meeting Gothenburg Hall, Coaltown of Wemyss, July 4, 5.30 p.m. Mr. Storrar has promised a lecture. Decided that we hold August meeting in Kelty; also agreed that league pay the hall rent according to the reading of Rule 5. Lochgelly and Dunfermline paid subs. Chairman called upon Mr. Wm. Grewer (Lochgelly) to start his lecture. Mr. Grewer chose as his subject the keeping and production of the Norwich Plainhead, which, with a few sketches, he ably dealth with, and everyone enjoyed to the full. Hearty votes of thanks to Mr. Grewer and the chairman terminated a very instructive and enjoyable meeting.—Jas. Cordery, Sec.

PORTH & RHONDDA VALLEYS.

Meeting, May 30. Report of deputation to Mr. Jones, Tramway Depot, accepted, and we move headquarters to Tramway Depot as more convenient for members and show. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Davis for the loan of rooms for meetings. We hold a young bird show on July 9, with 9 Canary, 7 Brit., 2 Mule, and 1 For. classes. Secretary to write to several local judges for charges re members' show; the most prominent and experienced, subject to charges, to be accepted.—J. Shephard, Sec.

YORKS. AND LANCS. B.B. & M.C.

Meeting held June 6, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Mr. W. A. Cowgill in chair. We were pleased to meet Mr. David Hunter, of Scarborough, the famous Yorkshire cricketer, and made him a member on the proposition of Mr. Lane, seconded by Mr. H. H. Towers. Proposed by Mr. Lane, seconded Mr. Ross, prize money be same as last year. Following societies granted patronage:—Leeds, Oct. 10; Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., Oct. 30-31; Sheffield O.S., Nov. 6-7; Bradford West and Manningham Amalgamated show, Nov. 21; Bradford National, Dec. 4-5; Doncaster, Jan. 9; Bradford West and Halifax being same date, it was put to the meeting, and it went in favour of Bradford West. It is very awkward when societies clash. Will all societies desiring patronage of the above club apply at once, as we want four more yet; also will all members of the above club wanting advertisements in the club's handbook let me know as early as possible? This club needs all the help the members can give it. I hope every one will do his best.—T. H. Inman, Hon. Sec.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting June 6. Sec. read postcards from secretaries of N.Y.C.C., B.F.C., and N.B. and S.F.C. clubs stating that we had been granted their patronage Question of annual schedule was put off till next meeting. Mr. H. Cresswell (Lintz Colliery) elected a member.—G. Hayver, Hon. Sec.

HANLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 27, Mr. C. Robinson chair, and fair attendance. Arrangements made to hold a F.F. show on June 27 at Birchenhead Hotel, and Mr. J. Pitchard, of Stoke, will judge. Special classes arranged for new members made this year that have never won a prize. Four new members made.—Messrs. Roberts and Bros. (Hanley), Wm. Brown, sen., Wm. Brown, jun., & T. Bent (Hanley). Next meeting, June 17, 28, Mayer Street. Mr. W. A. Cowgill, of Bradford, will judge our open show—C. Beckett, Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting held June 4, Mr. J. W. Lawson (chair). Sec. being unable to attend, Mr. Holden took his place. One of the founders of the club, Mr. R. W. Smith, tendered his resignation, as he is declining the Fancy, which was accepted with regret. Decided to hold meeting June 27 to allot patronage, so as to give outside members a chance to attend. Must close our cup fund on that date, as price of same will be settled at this meeting. All members who are subscribing towards this fund kindly attend or forward on to secretary. Next table show in conjunction with N.C.B.S. will be held July 2 (four classes). Judge, Mr. K. H. Butler, so members try and bring out a few birds if possible.—F. W. Laidlow, Sec.

BRIDLINGTON, DRIFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting June 2, at 20, Prospect Street. I was sorry to see so small number present, and thinking some may forget the day fixed for these meetings, we decided that the committee shall in future be notified by postcard, also in the Fancy Press. Mr. Mammson has kindly made the necessary arrangements for the F.F. show, in Assembly Rooms, Driffield, June 19. Mr. Hunter, judge, commencing at 2.30. Will members please send birds by 12.17 from Bridlington to give stewards time? A class for British is being given in place of the Mule class which is now cancelled, as no member has had the fortune to breed any up to date. Classes are provided for buff Yorks., yell. Yorks., buff Nor., and yell. Nor. Points will count for trophy. 2s. 6d. cash most points rung birds for year. F.F. show will be held in Bridlington, July 3, classes as above. Place of show, judge, etc., will be announced later. I should esteem it a great favour if members could arrange to have the monthly meeting during the show, as I shall be on Monday on date of usual meeting. Only business will be, result of show June 19. Entry fee for these shows, 6d. per cage. Prizes, 3s., 2s., 1s. Entries up to 2.30 day of show.—J. Chadwick.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Monthly meeting, Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, June 2, W. B. Gilmes in chair. Mr. A. W. Donaldson reported committee appointed had waited on W. C. Gilmour, Esq., of Woodbank, and that gentleman being highly pleased with conditions recommended, would present cup promised to club in due course. Also that R. Watkinson, Esq., Balloch Hotel, was presenting the club with a cup, as was T. Nicol, Esq., Roseneath Cottage, Balloch, with another cup, W. Thomson, Esq., Mossview, Balloch, giving a gold medal to be presented along with latter cup, and another gold medal by W. McKay, Esq., Alexandria; this being three new cups and two gold medals for competition at annual show, in addition to existing trophies. Sec. reported he had attended Fife C.B. League Conference in Glasgow, whose proceedings were heartily endorsed and copper collection collected to defray expenses. Intimation that Messrs. W. Priest and T. Frazer, of Partick, had kindly consented to judge Canaries and British birds respectively at F.F. show on July 4 was very cordially received. Mr. J. Hannah then gave a paper on British birds, which brought about a very friendly discussion, and a pleasant evening closed with a hearty and generous vote of thanks to Mr. Hanuah for his valuable paper.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

SOUTH SHIELDS & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held June 6, Cyprus Hotel, Mr. W. Thompson presiding over good attendance. Four new members enrolled, which brings us to a total of just over 20 new members this year. Mr. W. Smith gave a lecture on his experience as a fancier in a very able manner. He said he was of opinion that when a man starts in the Fancy it is far better for him to go to some of the older fanciers and get some good stock birds, and at the same time get sound advice on pairing up and breeding. Nesting diarrhoea and sweating hens, he thought, were caused by having too much nesting material, which set up too much heat. Hens, he said, should have a little egg food almost every day, as when they leave the nest to feed they will not give themselves time to get a feed of seed and go straight for a drink. Consequently, with the heat of the nest, it causes a weakness, which brings on diarrhoea, or else reduces the bird so much that when the young hatch out the hen is unable to perform the duties imposed upon her. Questions were asked, which Mr. Smith ably answered to the satisfaction of all present. Hearty vote of thanks given to Mr. Smith. Annual ramble decided to make to Morpeth June 28, when all members and friends are kindly invited.—W. Thompson, Chairman.

OPEN NORWICH PLAINHEAD C.C.

Committee meeting, Market Tavern, Godwin-st., Bradford, June 6. Chairman, Mr. W. A. Cowgill, Resignation of Mr. R. D. Parlett (Sheffield) accepted with regret. Following new members elected: Messrs. Norwood (Leeds), A. Robinson (York). There is a long list of defaulters who have neglected payment of subs. Will they forward arrears and continue their membership? Decided to give patronage to 8 shows, as follows: Leeds C.B.S., Oct. 10; Burnley and Dis. C.B.S., Oct. 16, 17; Newcastle C.B.S., Oct. 23, 24; Sheffield O.S., Nov. 6, 7; Blaydon-on-Tyne and Dis. C.B.S. Nov. 13, 14; Halifax O.S., Nov. 20, 21; Bradford National C.B.S., Dec. 4, 5; Doncaster and Dis. C.B.S., Jan. 9. Competitions and spls. for 1914-15: Open Competition (Champ. Section): First prize value £1 10s., second £1 5s., third 12s. 6d., all given by the Club; fourth, pipe and case, 7s. 6d., will be given by Mr. D. McMillan. Open Competition (Amateur Section): First prize value £1 5s., second £1, third 15s., fourth 7s. 6d., all given by the club. Money spls. for vhc birds, 10s., most points gained with vhc birds throughout season; also the Illingworth Cup and the Joe Thomas Rose Bowl will be competed for. Intending members please send names; subs., 2s. 6d. per annum. Particulars with pleasure. Any member wishing to have advert. in Handbook let me have matter early.—F. Rhodes, Hon. Sec.

THE BEST INVESTMENT

any Birdkeeper can make is to purchase a Sixpenny copy of that

BIG BIRD-BREEDER'S BUDGET,

'CAGE-BIRDS' 1914 ANNUAL

There are articles for every season and now the Bird-keeper is in the SECOND ROUND, he would do well to study the advice given by that well-known bird authority, Claude St. John, in his article,

Mistakes Birdbreeders Must Avoid.

A most seasonable article. Alone worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby. Besides this highly instructive article, it also contains the following:

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP & BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.
This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES.
By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

DIRECTORY OF THE JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden.
A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS.
By W. H. Gibb.
The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRDCATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.
A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

MY METHOD OF BREEDING CANARIES.
By E. T. Sheppard.

A REVIEW OF THE 1913-14 SEASON.
With names of Principal Winners, Norwich Plainheads, Yorksbires, Greens, Cinnamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fanciers, Crests, Lancashires, and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) is judging at Bangor (Ireland) on Jan. 7 next and at Tredegar on Jan. 14.

In the schedule of Gwyrfai Fur and Feather Show, Class 24 should read, "Canary, any variety, hatched 1914," writes Mr. R. Jones, Sec.

In our June 6 issue the date of the North Liverpool and Dist. C.B.S. F.F. Show is given as July 1. This is a mistake, and should read June 27.

The Volunteer Wire Works, of 20, King Street, Longton, Staffs, have issued a wholesale price-list of cages, wire fronts, hoppers, earthenware goods, etc., that is well worth being consulted by traders, as all goods are guaranteed well-made etc., with prices very favourable.

The following have been appointed to judge the Leith O.S. show on Nov. 14:—Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. Carson (Easthouses), and Mr. J. McLennan (Edinburgh); Norwich, Mr. J. Holmes (Edinburgh); Border Fancy, Mr. T. Arnott (Kirkcaldy), and Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside); British and Mules, Mr. Peter McQuiston (Ayr).

"British Birds," for June, price 1s., issued by Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, contains a most instructive article on "The Study of Bird Notes," by Dr. Hans Stadler and Cornel Schmitt. There is also a wealth of interesting details to be found among the "Notes," invaluable to lovers of the feathered tribe of the British Isles.

That noted maker of Canary marking rings, Mr. S. Drake (Halifax) asks us to apologise to customers for any delay last week. He received an urgent order from Fifeshire for 2,000 Pheasant rings (a new departure for him). Mr. Drake states that orders for his excellent rings have been very good this season.

Referring to his lecture on British birds, given before the members of the Great Horton Good Intent O.S., and reported in another column, Mr. Jowett says that on May 3, the day after his lecture, he found his first Twite's nest of the year. The nest contained one egg.

The May Number of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, should prove of particular interest to admirors of the beautiful Gouldian Finch, two articles appearing therein by Mr. R. S. de Q. Quincey and Dr. L. Lovell-Keays. "An Easter Tour Among Members' Aviaries," by Mr. Wesley T. Page, is another interesting feature; likewise Mr. Sidney Williams' notes on Weavers and Whydahs.

Breeders wanting high-class marking-rings should certainly see those sold by Mr. G. B. Leclair, whose advertisement will be found in this issue. We have before had occasion to speak in terms of high praise concerning these rings, and it would be very difficult to imagine anything better than those on sale for the current year. They are beautifully made of aluminium, and light as a snowflake, yet very strong, neat and easy to fix. Mr. Leclair offers a pedigree book free to buyers of 75 rings.

Rare Parrakeets at Liberty.

Twelve Brown's Parrakeets escaped on June 1 from a cage which had just been carried from the London Docks to the premises of Mr. J. D. Hamlyn, the well known naturalist, of St. George street, E. There was a thirteenth which had found sweet liberty, but it was brought back by a sailor, who carried it screeching and fighting to Mr. Hamlyn. He was amazed when he received a reward of a sovereign. "But it was worth it, guv'nor," he said, showing a hand which had been torn, and which smarted painfully. These birds are a rare species of Parrakeet from Western Australia, and the total value of the consignment was £40. Mr. Hamlyn thinks they will seek residential gardens, for they are strong of flight, and their unusual plumage and weird chatter are sure to attract attention. "I suppose other birds will attack them, but my Parrakeets will put up a hot fight. They are the Jack Johnsons of the bird world."

The Avicultural Magazine for June contains a very interesting article from the pen of Mr. Hubert D. Astley, on the Amethyst Sun-bird, with a beautiful coloured frontispiece of the same by that talented artist, Mr. H. Goodchild. Mr. A. Ezra also writes on the Amethyst Sun-bird. "Birds of N.S. Wales I Have Caught and Kept," by Mr. G. A. Heumann, and "Some Grassfinches in My Aviary," by Dr. L. Lovell-Keays, both provide additional interest, and the photographic illustrations are extremely good.

The Bird and the Band.

The judge of the recent Northamptonshire band contest at Rushden mentioned that during the performance of two pieces a bird was singing, and followed the music, always harmonising.

Disappointment at Stoke.

As the breeding season here has been very disappointing up to the present, it has been decided to postpone the Stoke-on-Trent C.B.A. young bird show from June 20 to July 18, writes Mr. J. Pitchford, the hon. sec.

A Thrush's Dangerous Nesting Site

A Mavis has built its nest, and is now rearing its young, in the butts at the Penicuik Rifle Range, although the bird sat only six inches from one of the targets and a few hundred round of ammunition must have passed it as near; it never seemed to be disturbed, even when the targets were being changed. On June 6 it had many narrow escapes when going in and out to feed the youngsters, as it crossed the targets often when a shot must just have missed it. The local riflemen regard it as a sort of mascot, they having scored a victory over a team which they had grave doubts about defeating.

A Noted Greenfinch's Career.

The number of first prizes and specials won by our famous Greenfinch, total 42 firsts and 23 specials. It was first at the Crystal Palace in 1912, second in 1913, and first in 1914, first Scottish National 1912, and first in 1914. This bird has been on the show bench for three years, and has only been defeated five times, and has been out once a week, sometimes twice, during the showing season. Last season he was first every time out. He has never been further down than second, except at Bathgate show, when he got commended, after being first at the Palace. Your reporter had in "C.B." in his report: "Hard lines, must have been overlooked, easy best in class." I am sorry to say he has just died. He was whistling at night when I left the birdhouse, and was lying stiff in the morning. I think he had got a piece of safflower seed under his tongue. We refused some very good offers for this bird when he was first at Palace in 1912. We had no fewer than fifteen enquirers wanting to buy him. We are pleased to say that we have one to take his place for next season. This is not quite so good, but with attention should do very well.—Stuart and Dalling (Bathgate).

A Good "Old 'Un."

Mr. John Liversidge, a member of Kippax and Castleford Linnet Clubs, owns a Linnet that has, writes Mr. A. Tomlin, an average of over 100secs. a sing for five out of the last six times it has been hung. Although termed the "Old 'Un," I think it will want a good young one to beat this record; truly he is a bird to be proud of.

The Starling's Changed Habits.

At one time the Starling was looked upon as a friend of the farmer, and nothing but a friend. There are many agriculturists just now who are not quite so sure about the friendship of the bird. The Starling has developed bad habits in recent years, and instead of confining his attentions entirely to the destruction of insect life he worries the corn grower in the autumn by pulling up the sprouting grain and leaving the young blanched shoots on the surface. Starlings, indeed, are such a nuisance in some districts in the autumn that cornfields have to be protected. Some farmers say that the Starling has changed his habits of feeding, but others contend that the birds which do the mischief are not natives but aliens from the Continent. —"Agricultural Economist."

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Is Any of This Money Yours?

At South Shields Police Court recently a rogue, giving the name of Robert H. Owen, and describing himself as an engineer (correct name, John A. Mailley, of Dumfries) was given the maximum sentence of six months' hard labour for advertisement frauds. His method was to advertise in various widely-read journals, a variety of articles at alluring prices, and then to make off with any ready cash that might be sent direct to him by would-be purchasers. Luckily the police cut short his career at South Shields.

It was stated in evidence that hundreds of letters were delivered to "Owen" daily, the majority containing money, no less a sum than £161 4s. 9d. being proved to have been received by him. The need for buyers to adopt a deposit system when dealing with strangers could not be more strikingly attested.

The Chief Constable of South Shields, Mr. W. Scott, writes to say that all the money found by the police has been returned to the senders, except the following items, letters referring to which seem to have been lost or destroyed: Postal orders, 2s. issued at George Street, Edinburgh; 2s. (two) Upper Tooting; 2s. 6d. Dumfries; 4s. 6d. Smithfield Market, London; 4s. 6d. Darwen, Lancs.; 5s. Braunton; 5s. High Street, Stockton-on-Tees; 9s. 6d. Laxton, Newark; 20s., 111, Tower Bridge Road, London.

If any reader of CAGE BIRDS has a claim to one or other of the above amounts, he (or she) should write to Mr. Scott, Chief Constable's Office, South Shields, and send the counterfoil of the postal order, or give him its number.

Damage by Linnets in Norfolk

The Norfolk County Council has decided to leave the Brown Linnet out of the list of protected birds, owing to the great damage it is doing in the county to the mustard and turnip seeds.

The Nightinga'e in Gardens.

In some districts where it once was abundant the Nightingale is now less frequent (says a writer in "Gardening Illustrated"). It is a loss, and one I cannot account for. A Hungarian friend of mine tells me the bird is very fond of frequenting Lilac bushes. In his country the bush is probably wild. In the hope of pleasing the Nightingale, I intend to plant a number of suckers of the common Lilac on a neglected bank near a stream and within hearing of the house.

In the Courts.

The Close Season.

John Pullen, labourer, Weedon, was summoned at Daventry for a breach of the Wild Birds Protection Act, having three Thrushes, and one Blackbird, recently taken, in his possession, at Weedon, on April 29.

P.S. Baker said that on April 29 he saw in the back room at defendant's house four Thrushes and one young Blackbird, recently taken. He asked Pullen how they came in his possession, and he said that some boys brought them, and he put them into a cage and fed them.

The Chairman said the public should understand the close season was from March 15 to July 31. Defendant would be reprimanded and ordered to pay 4s. 6d. costs.

Parrot's Kiss Decides Ownership.

A kiss decided the ownership of a Parrot at Tottenham police-court recently. The bird was brought to the court by an Edmonton fancier named Bitton, who was summoned by a Mrs. Alice Evans for detaining it. The lady asserted that the Parrot was her "Bobby," who had a trick of opening the door of his cage and following her about the house as she did her daily work.

One day last September, "Bobby," overhearing that his wing was going to be clipped, instantly flew from his master's shoulder out of the window, and for many days was seen no more. Then came a morning when Mrs. Evans' little boy saw a bird which he believed to be "Bobby" in a shop, and Mr. Evans, who went along with him to investigate, became of the same opinion. They called his name, and "Bobby" screeched, and when Mr. Evans put his mouth to the cage the bird kissed him.

Mr. Bitton explained that he had bought the bird from a lad in August, and it was then in a very emaciated condition.

At the request of the magistrate, the bird was produced in court, and the kissing experiment was repeated. "Bobby" kissed, and the magistrate decided that the bird was the one which Mrs. Evans had lost. He ordered "Bobby" to be given up if the lady paid 15s. to Mr. Bitton for the skilled attention he had given the bird. The money was handed over.

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

COUNTRY RAMBLES.

The following rambles have been arranged:—Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not. Leith O.S., June 13, to Carberry Estate, meet at Liberal Club, Hope Street, 3 o'clock; Edinburgh C.B.S. and Juniper Green F.A., June 27, to Riccarton Estate; South Shields C.B.S., June 28, to Morpeth (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.); Hull C.B.S., June 13, to Houghton Woods (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.); Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S., June 13, to Epping Forest, meet Junction Road, M.R. Station, 1.50; Leicester C.B.S., June 13, to Billesdon, train 2.15, G.N.R., to Ingarsby, bicycles 2.15, Uppingham Hotel; Border City (Carlisle) O.S., June 14, to Head's Nook, meet Court Square 1.30; Southampton C.B.S., July 15, to Rufus Stone, New Forest (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.); Preston O.S., June 14, to Cockerham and Galgate, meet at Preston Station 7.55; Sheffield O.S., June 14, Nut Park Hotel, Hillsboro', 2.30.

THE PATRONAGE OF SPECIALIST CLUBS.

Societies desiring the patronage of the following clubs should apply to the respective secs., stating date of show, number of classes, and judges: Northern Border and S.F.C.C., M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Road, Newcastle; Midland Counties Y.C.C., W. Wells, Helmside, Erdington, Birmingham; Norwich P.B.C., F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Burnley; Northern C.C., Geo. Dobson, 103, James Street, Blaydon-on-Tyne; Northern Norwich P.B.C. (closing date June 27), F. W. Laidlow, 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Yorkshire and Lancashire British Bird and M.C., T. H. Iuman, Thornbury, Bradford; Northern Y.C.C., R. Tindale, 6, Gill Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Green Canary Association, F. Handley, 23, Coventry Road, Wavertree, Liverpool; National Green-marked Y.C.C., J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds. Fife and Kinross Plainhead Club, A. Dickson, 37, Adams Terrace, Kelty; closing date, August 1. Yorks C.C. of Scotland, W. Priest, 6, Orchard Street, Partick. Northern British, Mule, and F.B.C., W. Curry, 6, Roxburgh Place, Newcastle-on-Tyne; closing date, Street, Glasgow. Crested C.C., J. Tyson, 169, Sloane Street, S.W.

Six British Finches

A lecture given by Mr. T. Jowett before the members of the Great Horton Good Intent O.S.

ON May 2, at Grange Schools, Dirkhill, a lecture was given by Mr. T. Jowett, on British Birds. The lecturer said: Mr. Chairman and friends, I will try to give you a short address on the various Finches, etc.; how to know them, how to find the nests, and how to feed them in captivity. I have painted half a dozen Finches, and the pictures will tell you what to my mind is a perfect specimen of each variety. The first bird on the picture is the Linnet, and he is a favourite of mine, as he is with many. The Linnet nests on the moorland in gorse bushes, etc., also in thorn hedges. I have found nests at various places around here, and have got eggs and put them under Canaries. But I must say the birds so reared do not make such good specimens nor are they as reliable to fertilize eggs for muling as a Linnet that is caught adult and caged. The Linnet for show must be a large bird, of Norwich type for preference; must be well laced from throat to vent, and of a nut brown colour, showing plenty of white in wings and tail. I feed my Linnets on a mixture of Canary, German rape, linseed, gold of pleasure, teazle, giving them hemp slightly cracked to bring them into condition. Sometimes I give them a change by buying a packet of Linnet seed at the shop. Their foods in the wild state are the various thistles, chickweed, turnips, dandelion, mouse-ear, knapweed, etc., and if you supply these as near to nature as possible, you will have no difficulty in keeping them in good health and song for many years in captivity. The next favourite is the Goldfinch, and a good bird is represented in the picture, as I think you will admit. I am sure there are some of you who would like to possess his equal. The Goldfinch frequents orchards and plantations; it prefers a fruit tree or fig tree in which to build its nest.

The Goldie to Get for Shows.

The Goldfinch for show purposes must be a fairly large bird, not too big, or you will perhaps get him thrown out as a foreigner. He must have a nice broad skull, showing a grand depth of colour in the blaze, must be well tanned, good yellow bars in the wings and nicely buttoned on wings and tail. In selecting one I always try to get one of as good size and colour as possible. As you will perhaps know, the Goldie is a late breeder, and this is the reason why so many that are caught at the start of the catching season die. They are too young to crack and digest the dry seed. We do not get the chance to catch them round here, as there are not sufficient food-plants, etc., for them to feed on. This, of course, is my opinion; I do not know what others think about it. The next bird is the Siskin. It generally prefers the alders and fir trees, a few nesting in pine woods. I have never been able to find the bird's eggs. They feed somewhat as the Goldfinch, but they like especially the seeds of the alder trees. They frequent the fringes of the rivers and streams along the banks of which they fly in small flocks, feeding as they go along. They build a beautiful nest, somewhat like the Goldfinch. Food in captivity similar to the other Finches, except hemp, which should be given sparingly. In selecting for exhibition get the largest and best coloured bird you can, yellow for preference, with good cap, well laced at the thighs and back, carrying good bars and a good bib. He does not take so much steadying as some, but has a habit of clinging to the wires, and this must be stopped if at all possible.

A Defence of Greenie's Song.

We now come to the Lesser Redpoll. This is a near relation of the Linnet and must be fed on similar lines. I have often watched a flock of these birds feeding on the alder, thistle, knapweed, etc., always keeping up a merry little chatter the while. They are merry little chaps, and favourites wherever kept. They build a grand nest of roots, moss, hair, etc., and generally prefer a hazel tree; in fact, I have never found the nest in any other tree. For show get the largest and best marked birds, with good bibs, colour, etc. Give the same food as to the Linnet, and you will not go far wrong. The next is the Greenfinch; he is a grand bold fellow, and is a great favourite of mine; I am seldom without one or more. He is a very common bird. You will meet with him everywhere, and in regard to food nothing comes amiss to him. The nest is rather a rough structure, built in the trees or shrubs in woods, gardens or hedgerows. Some people say the bird has not much song, but I can assure you he can sing, and no mistake; I prefer his song to a Canary's any time. For show, get a large, well coloured yellow, with broad skull, good level colour throughout, good wing-bars, and good wedge-shape. Food in captivity Canary, hemp, linseed, groats, rape and sunflower. He is very hardy and long-lived.

The Twite is another favourite of mine. He is a moorland bird, and it has been stated by the late Dr. Bradburn that it does not nest in the British Isles; but I can take you any year and show you dozens of them. The nest is built on or very near the ground, amongst the bracken; five or six white eggs with brownish spots are laid. It seems to feed in the fields, like the Linnet, and I like very much to hear its sweet song. Colour, yellowish-brown, laced down the back, sides and vent. In breeding plumage the cock has a crimson patch on the rump. His bill is yellow, and very small in comparison to the Linnet. Food, same as Linnet and Redpoll. I have here the skin of a Twite which did a bit of winning in his day for Mr. T. H. Inman, and thereby hangs a tale. Mr. Inman and myself were at a friend's looking at the birds, along with a fellow fancier who happened to mention he had a Twite, and who asked me to go and look as it as he was tired of it. Mr. Inman and myself went to see the bird, and the owner asked what I would give him for it. I offered a shilling. My friend said eighteen-pence, and he snapped him. I can assure you my friend got a good eighteen-pennyworth, as he won first or second every time shown.

The meeting closed by a vote of thanks to Mr. Jowett for his able and most entertaining and instructive discourse.

A GREENFINCH WITH A MARVELLOUS RECORD.

The property of Messrs. Stuart and Dalling (Bathgate). Has won 42 first and 23 special prizes, including 1st at the Crystal Palace 1912, 2nd 1913, and 1st 1914, also 1sts at the Scottish National 1912 and 1914. See "Twitterings" this week.

Seeds and Foods: Their Uses and Abuses.

Some Novel Views are put forward by Mr. T. Harrison in this lecture, delivered to the members and friends of the Manchester and N.C.O.S.

AT the Deansgate Hotel a goodly company of members and friends gathered to hear a very interesting lecture by Mr. Harrison on "Seeds and Foods, their Uses and Abuses." The lecturer said that the subject is of extreme importance as our success, or lack of it, depends largely on the way our stock is fed. Canary seed, being the staple diet of the Canary, is the most important item. Turkish seed, not being so liable to fatten the stock, is preferable to Spanish. Of course, nothing but the best quality is good enough. Price is not always a reliable guide in buying seeds. Look out for a good sound full-looking seed, of good colour and bright appearance.

Summer rape, the next in importance as regards quantity used, requires careful selecting as a lot of other seeds occasionally find their way into "rape." A good rape should be of a nice reddish colour and be sweet and nutty to taste. It is a fine stimulating seed, and may be used to great advantage either dry, soaked, or boiled. It may be given either alone or mixed with soft food. Winter rape, being coarse and acrid to the taste, is best left out of the menu of the Canary; at the same time it may advantageously be given to Britishers.

The Abuse of Hemp Seed.

Hemp is a seed which is much abused through careless or injudicious use. It is a most useful seed used in moderation, but used excessively to old birds it is apt to be too fattening. In feeding hemp to young birds it is safest to clean well before crushing, as a lot of the so-called bad seed is simply dirty seed. A good plan also is to pick out as much of the husk as possible before giving to young birds. A strong warning here, "Never mix with soft food."

Sunflower is a seed not used nearly enough amongst Canary men. It is one of the best flesh-forming foods known. It is even worth going to the trouble of opening each seed with a small knife and then grinding the kernel, for the good effect it has on young birds. For the Norwich it is excellent, as it has a tendency to fill out the chest and give that cobby appearance which we all so much admire. It will also minimise the tendency to pointed breast in the Yorkshire. This in its turn will obviate the frill which is such an eye-sore. It will add lustre to the feather if fed to birds during and after moult. It is even better than linseed in this respect, besides being safer to use. A too liberal use of linseed is suspected of being one of the contributory causes of bird fever.

To Keep "Out" the Cold.

Crushed oats is a good feed for cold, wintry weather. A handful thrown into the flight will not only be good feeding, but will cause the birds to exercise by hunting round after it.

Groats may cause scurf if fed too freely. The cure for scurf, by the way, is Dinneford's fluid magnesia.

Gold of pleasure is an excellent conditioner, and safer to use for young birds than maw, which may be used too freely for unflighted birds.

Milk sop, especially if sweetened with honey, is good for both young and old. This is always a safe pick-me-up.

Getting Rid of their Fat.

If your birds are too fat try millet seed for them. This seed will reduce the fat without reducing the vitality. Dandelion seed has its uses. It is very good for bringing birds forward at the beginning of the breeding season; but must be used with discretion. Teazle is also good at this time as it will bring the birds gradually forward without unduly forcing matters. Inga, or niger, is good in moderation during winter and spring, especially for hens, although as a preventative of egg-binding nothing equals a little gin in the water.

(Concluded on page 494.)

The Roller Canary.

Mr. Andrew Percival, of Rochdale, gives some good advice to the fanciers of Ashton-under-Lyne.

WHEN buying the birds my advice is to buy the best cock that your purse will allow. Birds with good deep hollow tours preferred, as free from faults as possible; also hens of the same strain, but as distantly related as you can get them from the same breeder. Presuming the produce from the above turn out satisfactory the following year I should pair the deepest young cock with the mother, and the young hens to the father, and so on, but never think of pairing brother and sister together. I should not think of introducing fresh blood unless it happened that the song was deteriorating, getting thin, or wanting in depth, and then I should look out for a cock with good deep tours, and bringing a song very similar to the birds I had. It is preferable to buy a cock rather than hens, for when buying a cock you can hear his song, but when buying hens you are at the mercy of the seller. As you are all breeders it is not necessary for me to say anything about breeding and feeding, only that the treatment of other varieties will also apply to Rollers. My birds have as their staple foods German rape, and twice a week I give to each bird a pinch, just as much as the bird will eat at one meal, of mixed seed; canary, lettuce, linseed, grass, maw, and inga. Some fanciers use canary and rape mixed in equal proportions. A test of summer rape is to taste it; if sweet, and of a nutty flavour it is good, but if sharp, biting or bitter, it is unfit for use.

The Treatment of the Young.

When the young are capable of doing for themselves it is advisable to put them into the largest cages you have and if possible in a room separate from the breeding room; they should be kept in these flights until they have finished moulting. About this time it will be noticed that the young cocks will be coming into song, and these should now be caged separately. Some fanciers use the box cage, with folding doors, others use the all-wire training cage, putting the cages on a shelf with a piece of card-board between each, and darken the cages by hanging a piece of cloth in front of them. Another plan, and which I think best, is to darken the room by lowering the window blinds. The birds get more fresh air by this system than with the others. The cage door may be opened, or blind be lifted, three or four times a day for about fifteen minutes each time. This darkening of the room has a tendency to make the birds sing lower and bring their song in a more subdued manner.

The Singers Likely to Do Best.

Birds bringing their song from the throat and with a practically closed beak are likely to turn out the best. Those singing with open beak should be moved at once out of hearing of the better ones, otherwise the whole lot are liable to be spoiled. A few days previous to the show the birds ought to be put into the show cages to get them used to the same, and they should be trained to sing in various positions, say on the table, on the floor, or in a different room. By these means the birds can be trained to sing immediately the cage door is opened. It is poor satisfaction sending birds to a show and for them to come back with "no song."

My experience is that the young cocks invariably sing like the father, of course, some better, and some the other way; and as a rule when the young birds are wanting a teacher the parent cocks are moulting and are not in song. A good way when you have two or three cocks is to take only one or two nests from the best cock, then presuming this bird is fairly free from faults place him in a quiet corner in the room with the young birds, and the chances are that he will go through the moult and be in song again by the time the young birds require a teacher. I have at different times bought birds that have been pure in song to act as schoolmasters, but I never really found much benefit unless the masters were the same strain as my own birds.

Supposing you have only one cock, and he is faulty in song; as a rule most birds sing better at one time of the day than at another. The breeder must find this time, and take the birds into the training room for a short time when singing his best. If the breeder has only one room and a faulty parent his duty would be to prevent this bird from singing unless he were present and could place himself in such a position that by a slight movement he would prevent the bird from bringing his faults.

A vote of thanks to Mr. A. Percival brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—J. WHITEHEAD, Sec.

THE SUCCESSFUL BREEDING OF NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

A South-country champion exhibitor gives his views.

A lecture by Mr. J. Hodder (London, E.C.) before the members and friends of the London and Provincial O.S.

WE are here this evening to discuss a subject of keen interest to many lovers of birds, namely, the Norwich Canary. It is not my intention to take up more of the time of this meeting than is absolutely necessary to convey a clear meaning of what I have to say on the subject, as I would like a discussion among members and friends which, I am sure, will prove more interesting than listening to me the whole time.

I think it is pretty generally agreed that the Norwich is about the most popular variety of Canary bred to-day. Now what has brought him to this proud position in the Fancy? He is a bird that captivates the beginner because of his sprightliness and his wonderful colour, while to the experienced breeder there is no sight so pleasing as a downright good typical Norwich.

It is often said that a really good bird possesses three leading characteristics, viz., type, quality and colour. The greatest of these is—Well! I had better not say; as so many of us differ on these points I had better be careful—some say type, others (and these are becoming fewer every year) say quality, and others colour. Indeed, in the bygone days I have seen birds win with nothing to recommend them to the judges but colour.

A point Fanciers are Crazy Over.

Now the fact is we run somewhat mad on some particular point and lose sight of the idea. It has been quite a study during the last season to note carefully the different wants of fanciers—some are all for big heads, and no mention made of anything else. I admit a Norwich Canary without a good head is not much use on the show bench. The scale of points says distinctly 15 for head, but at some shows it is more like 50 or 100 for head, so that there is nothing left but head. I am afraid, in our craze for big heads, if we are not careful we shall greatly overdo it, and lose lamentably in other ways. It is characteristic of humanity to go to extremes.

If you will look carefully over the birds that are exhibited at some shows you will notice that scarcely two birds have heads alike. You will see in a very strong class heads that are V-shaped. I mean pinched over beak and widening towards the back of skull, and this kind of bird is on the increase. Then you will notice the bird with good gills—I mean fairly wide from ear to ear—but which immediately over ears begins to fall in, so that the bird has a narrow top. Then you have the bird with two much length of head from beak to back of skull. Then you have the flat-topped heavy specimen.

I will venture to say we have got to this unsatisfactory state of things because of paying too much attention to this one point. This sounds paradoxical, I know. In our excess of zeal we have missed the mark. We have severally got our own ideas of what the breed should be like, and this is the result.

What Wins at the Shows?

Now for type. What have we to-day at our best shows? Birds of type? Yes, a few. But, alas! what a number of boat-shaped, long-sided, narrow-backed, hollow-backed specimens there are, and somehow I notice these birds not infrequently manage to get into the money. Well, I suppose it is a case sometimes with the judge of putting these up or none, as there may be nothing better to see. And what about quality of feather? (but I shall deal more fully with this presently). Will you believe me when I say that many fanciers never think of mentioning quality when purchasing birds? I often hear it said, "I want big birds, never mind quality of feather. I don't care if the feather is rough, give me size, size!"

Now, friends, what are we coming to, or, rather, what is the variety coming to unless we cry halt, and weigh well in our minds these most urgent matters connected with the hobby? These birds, mark you, are now a common sight on the show bench at many shows, and they get prize cards, and someone walks into the show who has been studying some picture of the perfect bird, and, my word, what criticisms are passed and what letters sometimes do appear in the Press, and not without cause. But what else can a judge do if he has nothing else to adjudicate on but put the prize cards on them.

Ladies and gentlemen, I am not a pessimist, and therefore I would say that there are some really good birds about, but, believe me, they are still (whatever we may think to the contrary) in the hands of a comparatively few compared with the great bulk of fanciers of the variety.

Why should we not, every one of us, make up our minds to so study the subject that this state of things may become changed? I admit that last show season was on the whole (I am now speaking of the big shows) fairly satisfactory, and noticed that advances had been made in some directions, but, again, by the few. What a pity it is we do not have the amateurs coming into open competition and winning against the best. Believe me, this is the very thing that keeps up the life of the Fancy.

No Sport in This.

What sport can there be in the same persons winning all the best prizes year by year? There is no true sport in that, it gradually kills all interest. But when fresh blood comes on the scene you have a bit of a sensation, and you hear it said that so-and-so is here in force, done all the winning, cleared the decks, mopped up all the cracks, etc. You see there is new life at once. We don't want to call the old champions names. We want new champions to beat them in a fair, sportsmanlike way. Indeed, were it not for the old hands, some big shows would be a frost and a failure, and we ought to have a good word for the men who, year after year, make the entries and strive to keep things going, and make up our minds to so manage our stocks that we shall produce something better than theirs.

A Winning Head Described.

Let us come back to the question of type. I was speaking a moment ago about heads, etc. A Norwich Canary must have a good, full round head, i.e., to win, but this does not mean the kind of large head just alluded to. Strive to breed for the nicely rounded head with good rise immediately over beak, and good width, mark you, and some depth over the eye. In many birds the eye is too near top of head. Pair up your stock that you have so balanced your points that gradually you see the fruits of your labours. Be careful with boat-shaped birds. I don't mean discard them altogether, but don't regard them as show birds. The nearer a bird's chest is to its throat the better. A good bird should scarcely have any neck at all, and the chest should be full and bold, with no tapering down from neck until the chest is altogether in the wrong place, and just as it is necessary to have this full, bold chest, so it is necessary to have a full round back.

A champion Norwich of the future will have a fish-like back, i.e., the neck will be so full that it will come out almost on a level with the centre of the bird's back. One or two of this kind have already appeared, and they have taken all before them.

Then when you are selecting your stock look well to the wing coverts; see that one bird of the two has well-covered flights. It gives the wing a neat appearance. With the craze for size we have introduced among other defects the long wing, and we must ever strive to counteract this fault. Long wings are nearly always badly crossed, or one is carried awkwardly. Many otherwise good birds have been spoiled by this defect alone.

I like the wedge-shaped bird. I mean the bird that does not finish off too quickly at root of tail. I like the rump to gradually taper off like the other part of body, or it gives the bird a stumpy appearance to finish off too quickly. Hinged tails are not so common as they were, but there are still a few about. They must be avoided at all costs.

For soft food nothing beats hard-boiled egg; and biscuit is preferable to bread, as it keeps fresh longer. Egg food should not be mixed too dry or it will be scattered about the cage bottom and thus lead to mischief, besides being wasteful. For green food anything wholesome may be tried, from dandelion leaves to cabbage leaves. If you have found a green food which suits your birds and of which there is a plentiful and convenient supply don't change, except you desire to do a little experimenting. Anything in the way of fruit may be offered to your birds. A raw onion is especially good, and a preventive and cure for asthma and hoarseness.

The questions asked after the lecture were answered satisfactorily, and several new points were brought out during the discussion which followed. Our time had now more than expired, so after a vote of thanks had been passed our chairman closed the meeting. I should just like to say that this does not by any means represent the full lecture. Mr. Harrison gave us the full chemical constituents and food value of each seed as he dealt with it. He also had samples of the seeds and foods with him. He did not bring any of his famous bird pudding, as he thought it would not be safe to pass it round. Some of the members, having tasted it previously, were disappointed in this. One of the members complained that it would not keep, but when he went on to say that he had three children of school age the lecturer could quite understand it. This pudding is made of bread and milk cooked in the oven like an ordinary rice pudding; and sweetened with honey in place of sugar. So one can quite understand it being good, either for birds or school-children.—E. H. FULCHER, For the Soc.

The Age of Owls in Captivity.

SIR,—A friend told me the other day that his mother has kept two Tawny Owls, one for 20 and the other for 14 years. They are fed mostly on mice and fowls' heads, and are both in the best of health. They are very tame and usually allowed out of their cage for a fly round at night—indoors, of course. I fancy this should come pretty near being a record. J. M. WHITEHEAD.

What is the Secret of Keeping Goldfinches?

SIR,—I am a fancier of the Goldfinch, but am afraid I shall have to give them up, as I cannot keep them any length of time. Have lost four good birds within the last six months. I feed according to instructions given in CAGE BIRDS, also I give various seeds soaked in water until sprouted, every alternate day, besides plenty of grit. But all to no purpose. It appears to me there is something in the treatment of the Goldfinch we novices are unacquainted with. I hope some brother fancier will give a little information, for which I shall be extremely grateful.

GEORGE LOFTHOUSE.

A Dispute at Highgate and Hampstead.

SIR,—As a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS I ask your kind permission to bring to the notice of the members and fanciers in the neighbourhood, also friends in other societies, of which I am pleased to say I have no small number, that I have tendered my resignation as a member of the Highgate, Hampstead and District C.B.S., on account of the remarks of the vice-chairman towards me, and of the actions of the chairman of committee, and others on the committee, in refusing to allow me to explain my case to the members. As the founder of the society, late secretary, and a committeeman for the year 1913, I cannot stand these tactics of the officials of the present time. I asked them by petition, signed by 26 members, to bring my case before the members' notice for their approval or condemnation, but the committee said you shall not. I say again that I am still prepared, at any meeting night (with an independent chairman, Councillor A. Soloman, a patron of the society), to take the floor and submit to the members the remarks of the vice-chairman and actions of the chairman and committee, and to take the members' opinions as to whether any actions of mine justify the remarks made towards me. As the committee have refused to allow this, I have no option, Mr. Editor, but to write to you.

GEORGE HENRY NEAL.

The Secretary of Reading C.B.S. Returns Thanks.

SIR,—Kindly allow me the use of your columns to express my thanks to the members of the Reading C.B.S. for their pleasant surprise of last Wednesday. It is a splendid ornament to my mantelpiece, and will serve to remind me of the many pleasant hours I have spent amongst them. Last week's concert will be long remembered by all of us that were present. Although our "Daddy" Giles is over 70 he let himself go like a 10-year-old, and his song brought down the house. Another find was that our chairman was a really good songster. Good luck to them all, say I, and may they always remain as good fancier pals as they are at present. We are in good hands with Mr. O. C. Smith as secretary, and I trust members will give him the same hearty support as they did me. I shall never miss the chance of pushing the old society along when I come across it.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

A Good Cage Stain.

A Recipe Wanted for Enamel.

SIR,—Could any reader do me a favour by letting me know how I could make a good pale blue enamel for the inside of my cages? I know of a very good cage stain, also cheap, that would be very useful to breeders. Get from a chemist a pennyworth of permanganate of potash, and dissolve this in a gill of cold water. Apply to cages (or otherwise) with a soft paint brush, and you will be greatly surprised at the result. I use this myself, as I find it makes a very nice brown stain, and is harmless to our pets. One pennyworth of this mixture when made up will stain from one dozen to one dozen and half of cages.

A READER.

Has a Bird a Conscience?

Can It Reason?

SIR,—As one who has made some investigation into the psychology of birds, I should say Mr. A. R. Coe takes up the rational view of negation. Has a bird a conscience? He who affirms, must be prepared by proof and reasons in support of his contention. For a bird to have a conscience, it must be possessed of intellectual faculties capable of divining between right and wrong; must have a moral basis as a fundamental guide to its actions; be familiar with and conscious of the laws that environ and govern its little life. Then it must have the knowledge imparted to it from the nest onward. How can it receive the necessary information; or by what means do the parents convey that knowledge? If any of your readers can prove that any domesticated bird manifests these in its everyday life, then he can assure your readers of a conscience existing even in birds.

The second question, "Can it Reason?" means that it takes into consideration cause and effect, two important factors in the quality of mind; has the power to analyse, to investigate, to compare, to judge, to calculate, to decide, etc. It must be self-conscious, be responsible for its actions in its own world, aware of its own existence. Does any bird lover assert his pet is in possession of such mental powers. That a bird (at least, some birds) have intelligence and that of a wonderful order, few persons will deny. Memory, locality, voice, fear, trust, imitation, speech, which birds exhibit, are evidences of intelligence, but to assume that they have a conscience, or, more correctly speaking, consciousness, and the faculty of reason, is irrational.

Mr. Coe is at fault in saying "Nature has no need for a moral code"; "might and fitness, then, is the only moral code that a creature of nature needs." Might or fitness is the result of moral actions in bird or man. Violation or neglect of natural law, which is extremely moral, makes for unfitness. He is no less incorrect when remarking that the "intelligence of a bird is no higher than the reptile from which it sprang." What is his proof that a bird's intelligence is not higher than that of a reptile; or his evidence that a reptile is the antecedent of a bird? That the bird has been evolved from a reptile is a baseless assertion, which has never been proved by any scientific body of men. If Mr. Coe believes that theory, he must needs believe in Atavism. A convincing argument, which would greatly favour his theory, would be if a hen Canary which had laid four eggs had hatched reptiles from them instead of birds.

Six Hens in One Nest.

"A Solid Fact," says the Writer.

SIR,—Whether you take the above story with a grain of salt or a pinch of magic snuff, it's a solid fact. There used to be a great many who bred with Canaries in aviaries, and I have had good results from four hens and one cock. We chiefly bred for songsters. At the period we are now living in the fancier's eye is on the show bench, hence we have resorted to cages, as we need steadiness. Mr. Sadler asks: Did this singular experience of many years ago take place in the days of Adam and Eve? No, it was after the Flood.

A Goldfinch's Return After Six Weeks.

SIR,—It may interest readers of CAGE BIRDS (especially the extremists) to know that I have had a Goldfinch return to "cruel captivity," after having taken "French leave" for the long period of just over six weeks. This bird had only been in my possession nine days when it escaped, when I was cleaning its cage in my backyard, which, I might say, is about 12ft. by 6ft., and enclosed on three sides by high walls. It was seen on Whit-Monday picking up the food dropped from my Larks' cages. It refused to leave the precincts of the yard, although myself and others went out several times. I then thought of putting out a cage, and after two or three minutes' waiting, to our great surprise, the Goldie flew down on to the cage, and seeing the food inside, could not resist the temptation of entering and becoming once more a captive. I might say this Goldie and other birds are always hanging out, day and night, which I suppose accounts for it knowing its surroundings again. I think the instance of a homing wild bird is worthy of note, especially seeing the thickly-populated district this (Vauxhall) is—I mean there being no fields here for miles around.

H. SIMMONDS.

The Scottish Norwich Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

SIR,—It is a pity that this interesting discussion should be troubled with a letter such as that written by Mr. Allison. He professes to be amused at the correspondence, and with the curiosity of a gossiping old woman, is apparently more anxious to learn who are the writers of the letters than to give any thought to what is contained in them. I had given Mr. Allison credit for some common sense, but a perusal of his letter suggests that he would be well advised to use a nom de plume in future unless he can write a letter which is likely to serve some useful purpose. It is certainly a free country, as Mr. Allison informs us, but when he has lived a little longer he will doubtless come to learn that quite a large section of the community are possessed of minds which cannot be called broad. I have no wish to incur the wrath of anyone, and this fact, combined with my natural modesty, explains the reason of my using a nom de plume.

With reference to "Buff Green's" enquiry as to how the closed ring is to put down dishonesty, I would state that the method to be employed will lie with the S.P.C. committee to whom it can well be left. They can procure a note of the numbers of all rings issued to the various members, and if John Smith exhibits a bird with a ring issued to Tom Jones, it does not require much perception to arrive at the conclusion that there has been some fraudulent practice. The handling of the birds should not raise any great difficulty, as this is done in the Crest Section at every show. In any event, we must be prepared for some little inconvenience in return for the closed ring preventing fraud.

BUFF GREEN No. 2.

SIR,—"Buff Green No. 2" says that no member who takes an interest in the affairs of the club can say that the scheme has been rushed; well, that is just what has been done. What they should have done, seeing that the meeting was so late in the season, was to have left the ring scheme an open question until next year, for there are plenty of members who had never given it a thought until this correspondence started, and now they are out of the running. The voting proves that; fancy 40 votes out of a membership of 160. I think it should be put before the members for another ballot, when I am sure the fanciers will take more interest in it, and the result, and give the true feeling on the scheme. I am sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's illness, but I hope he is well on the way to recovery. Why didn't the president of the club notify the members about Mr. Brown's illness, and that the meeting would be put back until a later date? Other clubs do it through the press. Now Mr. "Buff Green No. 2" I am just as anxious as anyone to put down dishonesty, but I fail to see how the rings are to do it. Take all hobbies and sports where there is competition, and you will soon find some who lay themselves out to win, no matter how it is done, and this will be the case to the end of the chapter. Here is one way how the rings will be of no use. Plenty of fanciers of experience every year buy birds in the nest. I have seen them do it, and know of them going to England and doing the same. What is to hinder them sending to the secretary for rings and then sending them to the party they buy the birds from, and having the latter rung with their own rings? Would these birds be their own breeding? Don't worry, Mr. "Buff Green No. 2"; the faddist will just be as keen to buy in Musselburgh in the future as in the past, for these parties are always looking for a good one. It doesn't matter who breeds it as long as they get it (with or without a ring). Faddists don't always practice what they preach. Faddists who are now carrying the ring scheme have often bought birds, and some have even sold them again as their own breeding.

YELLOW GREEN.

SIR,—I was very pleased to see "Yellow Green" bringing up this argument. The S.P.C. has been in the hands of a few far too long, and they just do as they like, and don't work for the benefits of the members as they should. The President has been nursing this pet ring scheme for the last three years, and now that he has got it carried by a fluke he slips from the chair quite contented. But I can safely say that the rings will never be a safeguard of honesty amongst fanciers, if they are not inclined to be honest. I rung three nests this year, just as a trial. Out of twelve birds I have been left with one. The hens picked the legs of the young, and what did not die I had to drown. This has finished me with the rings once and for all. I honestly believe "Yellow Green" when he says that plenty of members buy birds and show them as their own breeding. I know one member who used to get the loan of birds for club shows and boast of how he had "done" certain parties. Cheer up, Musselburgh; keep on breeding champions. If you don't sell them to the faddists there are always plenty ready to buy the kind that can win at the Palace.

SUNNY LEITH.

Cages Bought at the Palace Show of 1882!

SIR,—I was pleased to see the drawing of my Thrush perch in the "Illustrated Ideas" column last week of CAGE BIRDS, which is far the best published on our pets. I have never seen the same perches in use in any other person's cages, but I think nothing can be easier to remove when required to clean.

It may interest you to know that I have lately secured two cages for small birds, which were made by the late J. Hawthorn, and won gold medal and diploma in arts and crafts of cage-making at Crystal Palace in 1882. They are in splendid condition and are beautifully inlaid; in fact they are two real works of art. The gentleman from whom I obtained them bought them by auction for £10. I wish our valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success.

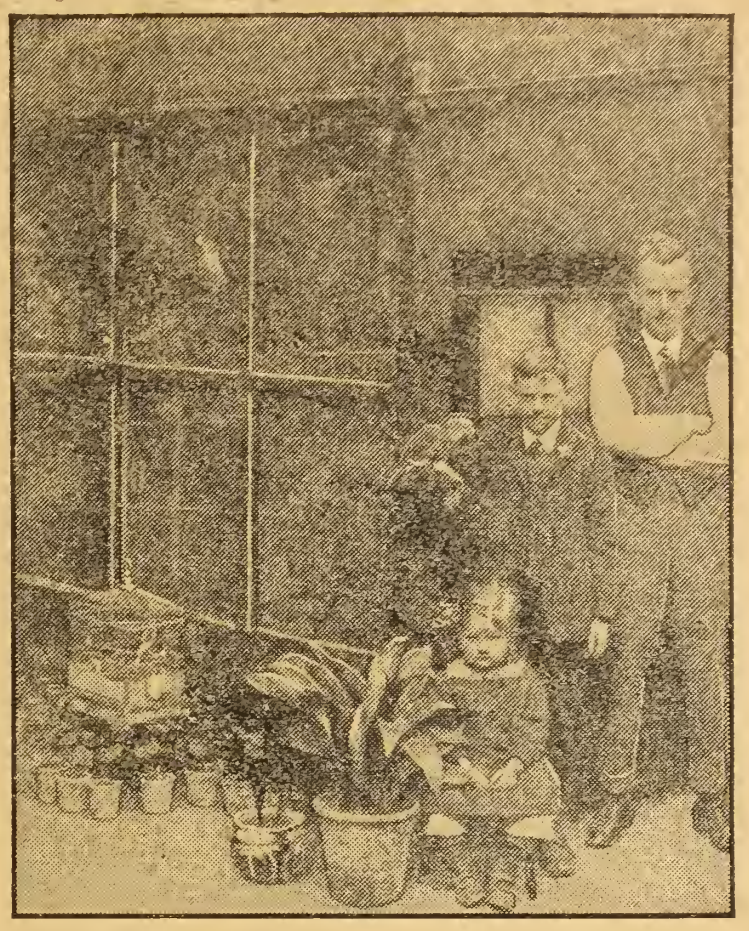
E. W. HUMPHREY.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

SIR,—I noted the candid opinion of Mr. J. Bastock, which has my appreciation. Will he, with his more mature experience in the Fancy, kindly inform readers and myself whether it is not a fact that many beginners who have entered the Fancy with the idea of becoming successful breeders and exhibitors under the happiest circumstances—the best stock that money could purchase, ideal surroundings, splendid opportunities—and have yet failed in their desires? Also have we not in our midst many good fanciers who, in spite of a keen love for the birds, and in spite of every endeavour to also become successful breeders and exhibitors, are as far off to-day from achieving their ambition as practically the day they commenced? If it be so, is it not a fact that failure is due to these respective fanciers lacking necessary attributes? If again correct, is it not time we devoted some little time and thought upon the individual, who, in my humble opinion, is easily the first and foremost "bird" in the bird-room?

E. W. ALLSOPP.

SIR,—Replying to Mr. T. Johnson, to suggest that the silence of the novices is perhaps only due to their tolerance of what I have written, and may be only a case of "offering the other cheek," is too delightfully funny for words. What sweet simplicity!



Mr. H. Harding, of Leicester, and his Outdoor Aviary.

A Good Fancier of the Midlands.

SIR,—I have been a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS for a considerable time, and have always looked forward for each edition. I have enclosed a photo. of my aviary, which stands at our back door in a sheltered position, and so placed that it gets the sun almost all day. It contains a very happy family, consisting of Budgerigars, Lovebirds, Ringnecks, Cockatiels, White Java Sparrows, Cardinals, Zebra Doves, and two pairs of Cordon Bleus, altogether about 50 birds. I have experienced good luck with them, as in two years the deaths have been—one Cardinal, killed in a fight, and one hen Budgerigar, through eggbinding. Last year I bred 40 Budgerigars, and four Cockatiels, and this year I hope to breed more. The Green Amazon Parrot you can see on my little brother's finger is unusually tame; she is a good speaker, and hardly ever in her cage. I also breed Canries, but those are indoors. I give the birds as much flowering grass as I can obtain, and they have everything that it is possible to get to keep them in good health. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

H. HARDING.

Leicester.

Again, although I am conscious of administering a few hard knocks (and, by the way, quite expect a few in exchange) I do not believe for one moment there is a novice in the land who, if conscious that my scathing criticism fitted him very nicely, experienced anything worse than his troublesome conscience, and maybe a desire to try and do better. After all, our novices have sufficient perspicacity to realise the truth, the candour with which it was tendered, and the reply which should be expected of them. If Mr. Johnson has really expected an elaborate attempt to break down my facts, then I may be pardoned for declaring he has not his hand upon the pulse of the Novice. And to now tell them what is needed is nothing more than "humouring" and "cajoling," and no scolding. "Oh my! 'Tis too delightful for words."

Nothing I have ever written concerning the novice compares with this dose of medicine! What a lovely backbone! just kept straight and free from wobbles with humour and cajolery, and no scolding. Would Mr. Johnson care to come to Cardiff and tell our novices whom I have the pleasure of being associated with that what they most need is not my medicine, but his, if I guarantee his expenses down? I am afraid I cannot "spring" his fare back; just a bit too expensive, but I assure him of a hearty invitation nevertheless, and trust any seeming difficulty in negotiating his return from Cardiff will not prove to be in any way formidable, or considered too difficult of accomplishment.

E. W. ALLSOPP.

The Clear and Light Mules at Leyton Show.

SIR,—Regarding the Light and Clear Mules shown by Mrs. Ballard at the Leyton First Feather Show last Saturday, our member informs me that she intends showing these birds at the East Ham C.B.S. show at East Ham Town Hall next Saturday, June 13th, and she invites all Mule and Hybrid breeders to come and view same and pass their opinions.

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

SIR,—Mr. Bent has not quoted me quite correctly. I did not ask if 'Gales ever sang on a window-sill in a cage. I asked if any of your readers had had 'Gales that sang at night in a cage, and added that I had been told of a case where the bird sang at night with his cage on the window-sill. I don't think Mr. Bent proves that the 'Gale's song in captivity is not a love song, because they have no love to sing to. The cock 'Gales which arrive in April sing for, I believe, about 10 days before the hens arrive. Caged 'Gales generally begin singing with me about Christmas time, but I daresay the wild ones begin about the same time in their winter quarters. It is improbable that they would remain dumb from the time they left in the autumn till their return in spring. If so, the young cocks would not have much chance of learning their song. I hope Mr. Bent will give us his article on the 'Gale, as I have no doubt he can give us some valuable tips as to feeding and management. I agree with Mr. Williamson that, at any rate, some 'Gales are ticklish birds to keep in song. I have had one sing well one year, and not utter a note the next. I suppose from jealousy or displeasure at the presence of another 'Gale in the same room. I once sold a 'Gale that died because he refused to eat with his new owner, although offered live ants' eggs. I presume by blackbeetles Mr. Williamson means cockroaches, which my 'Gales are fond of, but they refuse to eat blackbeetles. I would like to know if any 'Gale fanciers have ever tried to train Canaries to sing the 'Gale's song. Bechstein, in his book, says he had Canaries so trained. I have tried, but have not succeeded to any appreciable extent.

ABERSYCHAN AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, June 6, Mr. W. T. Couch chair, when a record number of members attended, also one member added to our number. Decided to hold our N.F. show last Saturday in June, when six classes will be run, 2 Yorks., 2 Norwich, 2 Brit.; received 8 sps. to be given for N.F. Very pleasant and instructive lecture given by Mr. B. Cleaves, of Abertillery. Number of questions asked and ably answered. Vote of thanks to lecturer terminated very pleasant evening.—F. CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

Applications for the support of this club should be made forthwith. As all sps. are to be allotted with the object of increasing entries at supported shows, societies will be well advised to give the matter immediate consideration. The insurance scheme which has been tried for the past three years is to be abolished, and an extended time limit given to novices, which it is hoped will be conducive to entries. Eight new novices are down for election.—John Tyson, 169, Sloane Street, S.W.

Subscriptions are now overdue, and must be paid before the N.F. show before being able to compete at same. Do not forget next meeting, July 2nd, will be held in Prince's Cafe, Clayton St., opposite Bird Market.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Held June 3, the Tokio Cafe, chairman Thos. Dent; large attendance of members. June 25, date decided upon for F.F. show, to be held in the Foresters' Hall, Mr. Peter Warcing judge. We have a splendid classification. Mr. J. W. Cleminson gave a lecture on "The Birds I have seen in a Day's Ramble." Mr. Cleminson said that we in Preston were happily situated in regard to bird life, as the varied country round about Preston was well adapted to the different species of British birds. In a day's ramble, starting from Haslam Park, he had seen pair Grey Wagtails, on the Brookside Red Wings, Fieldfares, Black-headed Gulls, at Wood Plumpton pair Redstarts, Whinchats, Wheatears, on through Louth, pied Blackbirds, at Catforth School, at Carr's Green, a Water Hen, Coot, Lapwing, Snipe, Redshank, etc. Mr. Cleminson described a few of their nests and nesting places, and answered questions in a masterly manner, and after vote of thanks had been accorded the lecturer a very enjoyable meeting was brought to a close.—W. H. Cottam, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN.

Meeting held June 8th at the Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Mr. W. A. Shepherd (chair) and 25 members present. Mr. Glanville elected a member. Mr. W. Sanders reported that the ramble with the L.C.B.A. and N.B.B.M.C. was very enjoyable, and one of the best he had ever joined in. The Hon. Sec. announced receipt of further sps. for young bird show. Our esteemed late member and chairman, Mr. A. C. Burn, then gave to members his views on "The lack of organisation in the Fancy." He prefaced his remarks with recollections of many members of the Association who were associated with him during the time he was in the Fancy, commencing with the name of that grand old Yorkshire fancier, Mr. H. Davis. He urged that all clubs should organise to educate the public and aristocracy in the art of bird keeping, and by so doing there would be a greater demand for good specimens of all varieties—whatever is done must be on sound business principles, and he advocated the assistance of one of the influential daily newspapers. Popularising the breeding of Canaries should be the object of every club in the country. The condition of many bird-shops, too, did not invite custom. With the history of the formation of the London Federation and the C.B Union and the failure of its objects, Mr. Burn concluded his remarks. A very hearty and unanimous vote of thanks accorded to Mr. Burn for his kind attendance. Vote of thanks to chairman closed meeting.—Fred Thynne, Asst. Hon. Sec.

BURNLEY O.S.

Meeting held June 3, Star Inn, Church St., Burnley. In absence of chairman Mr. A. Hargreaves occupied chair, with a good attendance of members. N.F. show, June 27. All exhibits must be staged by 1.30 p.m. on day of show. Entries must be in on Friday night, June 26th, on or before 9 p.m. Any entries wrongly classified, same to be left to the judges' decision. Admission to show 2d. (private entrance), up Hill Top or through the Inn. Show open about 3 p.m. till 7.30 p.m. Breeders' Chall. Cup to be competed for by three birds, the best three birds belonging to a member to be awarded same. Cup be judged for first (before classes). Entrance fee and prize money same as at previous show, also any tradesman exhibiting one of our show bills will be granted a free ticket to the show. No one in show room during the judging for cup; Mr. J. Moorhouse elected steward. Hearty vote of thanks given to chairman for capable way in which he occupied the chair. Mr. Edwards gave lecture on colour feeding, and several members also gave their views and way of same, that concluding quite an enjoyable evening. Next meeting June 17th, 7.30 p.m. prompt; all members kindly oblige by attending.—G. Whittaker (hon. sec.).

READING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Lodge Room, Palmer Hall, June 3. Those absent missed a rare treat, as Sec. had arranged a splendid musical evening, which was much enjoyed by all present, Farmer Giles's "Belle of Camberwell" bringing down the house. Presentation made to Mr. Pike by Mr. Brooker, the chairman, handsome marble clock suitably inscribed. Mr. Brooker, in making the presentation, spoke of the good work Mr. Pyke had done for the society, and hoped Mr. Pyke would live many years to hear clock strike. Mr. Pyke, in responding, thanked all for giving him such a beautiful present, and hoped to help the society in the future as well as in the past.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

IRVINE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Masonic Hall, Bank Street, Irvine, June 4, Mr. Harry B. Young presiding in the unavoidable absence of Mr. John Nairn, the pres. Definitely arranged that the society hold its F.F. show (confined to members) on July 18. Classification will be similar to that of annual show of Nov. 25 last with the exception that there will be no necessity for classifying the young birds according to sex. Brit. and foreign classes may contain adult birds. Society has been fortunate in securing esteemed services of Messrs. R. Jeffrey and J. R. Steel, both of Glasgow, as judge and steward respectively. For entrance fee and membership fee, see advertisement in next issue of CAGE BIRDS.—Hugh M. Ferguson, Sec. (Please write on one side only of each sheet of paper.—Editor.)

MANSFIELD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly table show held May 30, when a good number of birds were staged. Mr. Sims, of Sutton, placed the cards, and no grumbling was neard. Mr. Sims' task was not an easy one, but he came out of the ordeal with flying colours. The birds in the novice classes were a good lot, and Mr Cantrell deserves special mention for the type of Yorks he put down. This society is now making headway, and making new members every meeting night.

W.C.O.S., PLYMOUTH.

Above society held their first N.F. show June 3, at Oddfellows Hall, Moreby Street, Plymouth. Ninety birds were staged, Norwich and Yorkshire being the best represented. Novice exhibitors showed up well and took most of the prizes. In Yorkshires Mr. Craven's winning yellow and Mr. Snelt's leading buff give promise of doing good service later on for their fortunate owners. Mr. Pettigrew's team in Norwich were greatly admired, being a credit to their breeder, who is, quite a novice in Canary culture. Mr. Moore's marked yellow Norwich although only getting 6th in his class was generally considered to be the best bird in the section. Crests were poor in numbers, but quality was strongly in evidence. Competition was poor in Cinnamons and Mules but next show may produce keener fighting. Mr. A. E. Cheney celebrated his return to the society by taking premier honours in British. Judges: Yorkshire, Mr. Large; Norwich, Cinnamons, A.O.V., Mr. French; Crests, Mr. Rowe; British, Mr. Pridham.

WOOLTON.

For the first time, cage birds were included at the Woolton Agricultural Show, June 1, and six British Finch classes were included. A fine entry of nearly 50 exhibits turned up, and competition was very keen. The committee and officials were very pleased with the entry, and it would seem these, and probably a few additional classes, will be included in future shows. That well-known fancier, Mr. Lloyd, was steward in this section, and he handled the work in a finished and masterful style. The show is patronised by all the elite of this aristocratic district, with Col. Hall Walker, M.P., as president. Needless to say a magnificent show all round resulted. The weather was charming, and thousands from many miles around were early in attendance, and a huge success was assured. Mr. Chas. Boulton judged, and the officials complimented him on the good entry and the apparent satisfaction meted out to exhibitors.

GOLDF. (7): 1, Hampson and Higham, fine bold good chested bird, rare expanse of blaze, well cut, deep col., plenty rich tan on body, nice moons and bars; 2, Lonsdale, smaller, very compact, rich clean cut blaze, nice moons and bars; 3, Simon, paler, nice blaze, moons and bars, shade smaller; vhc, Yates; hc, Rothwell; c, Robertshaw. BULLF. (4): 1, Rothwell, clear win, fine bold bird, very bright and clear in colours, good cond.; 2, Yates, rare size and shape, rather dull and smoky in colour to-day, nice feather; 3, Hampson and Higham, fine bird, but rough at thighs when judged; vhc, Fairclough. GREENF. (6): 1, Robertshaw, big bold bird, rare head, shoulders and chest, good colour, etc.; 2, Rothwell, very nice cond., bit smaller, good shape; 3, vhc, Lowe, fine slim bird, A1 cond.; hc, Lonsdale; c, Hilton. CHAFF. etc. (6): 1, Yates, good all-round Chaffinch, in fine colour, bloom and finish; 2, hc, Aitken, good hen Yellow Buntings, former largest and best shape; 3, Rothwell, fine Chaffinch, paler breasted than winner, A1 cond.; vhc, Robertshaw, Bramble; c, Hilton. SISKIN, ETC. (10): very good class. 1, Hampson and Higham, very large, good thick-set Siskin, plenty of sound natural col., good cap, and A1 markings, fine cond., 2, hc, Rothwell, bonny Twite, good col., shape, markings and cond.; 3, Handley, equally good Lesser Poll in all points, grand cond.; vhc, Lowe; c, Hilton. LINNET (9): 1, Lowe, right stamp, A1 col., size, shape, markings and cond.; 2, Hampson and Higham, grand body, only beaten a little in head; 3, Simon, good col., but rather dull and smoky, vhc, Lonsdale; hc, Rothwell; c, Hilton. Most points, Rothwell.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Young stock show, held headquarters, June 4th. Considering what a bad breeding season it has been for the majority of the members, the society is to be congratulated upon the fine entry, and some very good birds were staged in each section. Sp. best in show went to Mr. W. H. Gardner's clear yellow Norwich, which also took the sp. best novice bird. Mr. R. Brownlie judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

F.F. show, June 2, Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, Peckham, S.E. The show was in every way a success. Entries came up well and above the expected number. Forty-three birds were entered, and some beautiful specimens were staged. They were judged by four selected members, the novice judging the champions, the champions judging the novices. After the judging the judges gave their views of the specimens, and the members appeared well pleased. This show was a new feature in the year's programme, and it is hoped that it will lead to success. Young bird show, July 14; Mr. J. Robson, judge.

LEEDS.

Quality Linnet singing matches will be held every Saturday, two o'clock, and Sunday, one o'clock, Plasterer's Arms, Leeds. (1650)

The Leeds Linnet and Canary Club having moved their headquarters to the Plasterer's Arms, Skinner Lane, had a most successful opening quality Linnet singing match June 7; 24 birds (most of them winning and counting in the various big Whitsuntide matches) faced the well-known judges, Messrs. T. Johnson, H. Wigfield, and N. Solomon. All birds, being in the height of condition, sang vigorously. 1, J. Bamfield; 2, H. Playforth; 3, G. Buttery; 4, J. Chippendale.—R. Ridgeyard, Sec.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing held Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road, on June 2; 20 birds sang for four prizes. 1, T. Johnson; 2, Sissons; 3, Bamfield; 4, shared by Hayes and S. Johnson. Judges, Wood, Naylor, Hardcastle. June 6, 17 birds sang for three prizes: 1, Bamfield; 2, S. Johnson; 3, Stead. Judges, Wood and Naylor. June 7, 18 birds sang for three prizes: 1, W. Sissons; 2, S. Johnson; 3, Farrar. Judges, Hardcastle and Naylor.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Quality singing held Skinners Arms, Bushingthorpe, Whit Monday, we held our annual contest; 29 birds had to face judges. Some very good singing heard: 1, Ward; 2, Roshdale; 3, King; 4, Sellars. Judges: Messrs. C. Clayton, J. Grainger. Also June 7, 19 birds competed: 1, Ward; 2, Binns; 3, Hullen. Judges: Messrs. C. Clayton, J. Grainger. Members' meeting will be held June 14, at 8.0 prompt; business urgent.—C. Clayton, hon. sec.

Open contests for quality Linnet singing, Fox Inn, Woodhouse Fair, June 2, when 29 birds entered for four good prizes given by the host, Mr. Bowyer. Result: 1, Clark; 2, Lunn; 3, Ward; 4, Jarman. Judges: Messrs. Whitaker, Wigfield, and Johnson. Also on June 6th, when 16 birds entered for three good prizes. Result: 1, 2, shared by Binns and Ward; 3, Pyrah. Judges: Messrs. Sellars and Hart. —Wm. Lunn, hon. sec.

BLACKBURN.

Empire Hotel quality Linnet singing contest held May 30; 32 birds entered for seven good prizes. June 13 being our cup day (members only), when we expect all to attend.—T. Hayhurst, Sec.

WEST CORNFORTH.

Good company assembled at Good Intent Inn on Whit Monday to hear Linnet singing. Result: 1, J. Brown; 2, 3, J. Kell. Judge, Wm. Fairless; timekeeper, R. Robson.—H. Spencer, Sec.

SEAHAM HARBOUR

Club sing, Engineers' Arms; 57 birds sang for 19 prizes, given by the club, and some good singing was done. Judge and timekeeper gave every satisfaction. Judge, W. Wilkison; timekeeper, R. Burns. Winners in order named:—Galbraith, McGee, Briggs, Vincent, Armstrong, Nugent, Shaw, Graham, Rochester, Reay, Hills, Walker, Marley, Burns, Finn, Boyle, Armstrong, Hartley, Nugent. The sing was followed by a pleasant evening. Members would like to see Mr. Galbraith meet the Auckland man, with five birds, for a side stake, at the Club House, Engineers' Arms.—J. Nugent, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

Special Linnet contest held Woodman Inn, May 30; 54 birds entered for 21 good prizes; four minutes time singing: 1, 19, Nelson; 2, 12, 18, Beard; 3, 20, Wilson; 4, 9, Procter; 5, Merrick; 6, 8, Parkin; 7, 10, Jones; 11, Pugh; 13, 15, 16, Blakeshire, 14, 17, Scott; 21, Piper. Open sing, May 31; 34 birds entered for three prizes, three minutes time singing: 1, 2, Williams; 3, Nelson. Open sing, June 1; 25 birds entered, four minutes time singing: 1, Nelson, 156; 2, C. Scott, 105; 3, Beard, 49. Club singing, June 6; 35 birds entered; four minutes time singing: 1, Nelson, 100; 2, Beard, 55; 3, Beard, 51. Open sing, June 7; 22 birds entered: 1, 3, Jones; 2, Whingum.—S. Pugh, Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

The Castleford and District Linnet Club held their annual Whitsuntide special sing on May 30, when there were 45 birds entered for 15 special prizes. Winners: 1, 5, J. Liversedge; 2, J. Brindley; 3, 4, shared by J. Wainwright and J. Brindley; 6, N. Clark; 7, W. Nelson; 8, J. Williams; 9, S. Morley; 10, A. Sweeting; 11, E. Smith; 12, W. Caddy; 13, T. Parnell; 14, J. Kirk; 15, W. Ratcliffe. On May 31, 18 birds entered. Winners were:—1, J. Wainwright; 2, E. Smith; 3, A. Longfield. June 2, 43 birds entered. Winners: 1, J. Williams, 132; 2, J. Liversedge, 119; 3, B. Nelson, 81; 4, A. Longfield, 70. Weekly Linnet contest, June 6, 32 birds entered, and some very god singing was heard. Winners: 1, 3, J. Williams, 132, 77; 2, J. Liversedge, 102. After the sing a match was sung, when Mr. J. Williams' bird sang 129secs. His bird sang in three sings, 132 Tuesday, 132 Saturday, and 129 Saturday. On June 7, 19 entered. Winners: 1, J. Williams, 84; 2, S. Morley, 64; 3, H. Archdale, 52.—J. Brindley, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

The Linnet Singing Society, at the Columbia Tavern, Fornham Street, held their annual contest on Whit Tuesday, when 17 members took part, and some good singing was heard by a good attendance. Every member received a prize 1, Parlett, 59secs.; 2, Wilson, 45secs.; 3, Woodcock, 41secs. Open contest, June 7, for three minutes' singing, Linnets; 13 birds sung. 1, Woodcock, 29secs.; 2, J. W. Schofield, 15secs.; 3, Orton, 15secs.—W. Bingham, Sec.

An open to all England Linnet singing contest was held May 31 at British Oak, Carbrook Street. We had a very good attendance. Result: 1, Robson, 109 (two minutes); 2, Watson, 99; 3, Newton, 87. June 1: 1, 2, 3, Thompson. June 2, we had our club contest, and the best singing we have had in Sheffield this year. 1, Robinson, 157; 2, Thompson, 140; 3, Watson, 137; 4, Gregg, 127; 5, Thompson, 101; 6, Coley, 85; 7, Newton, 83. Very good sing June 7 when Mr. Robinson won again, doing another big run. 1, Robinson, 117; 2, Watson, 87; 3, Thompson, 80.—E. Robinson, Sec.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (A Keen Novice).—You omit to give the measurements of the depth of your aviary—i.e., from front to back, and also the height at the back. The former omission makes it impossible to calculate what amount of floor space you have. In any case, the aviary is little more than a good-sized flight cage. Had the slope been in the reverse direction, from front, rising to the back, it would have been a very great improvement. I would advise you to limit the inmates to one cock and two, or at most three, hens, in addition to the pair of Bullfinches, and to make the passage from the sleeping quarters to the wired part free to all, so that the birds can have the range of the whole space at disposal. Place two nesting sites in the sleeping part, and at least four in different secluded parts of the flight. As a nesting site for the Bullfinches, get a wicker German travelling cage, remove the water-pot and the seed box, the short bars from one end, and fix this securely on the back wall, about two-thirds of the way up, then fix up a few twiggy bushes in such a way that they partly surround and cover the cage. Be careful to supply the right kind of material for this pair, which will of itself increase your chances of success. The Canaries seem to be quite out of condition for breeding, and I doubt whether they will do anything in this line this season. Try what the following treatment will do for them. In addition to the usual staple diet allow three teaspoonfuls of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, broken groats, sunflower seeds (chopped), and gold of pleasure daily, and every second day two heaped teaspoonfuls of egg food. Give a whole plant of dandelion, cut off just below the ground, daily, and a liberal supply of the seed heads of dandelion.

NO SUCCESS (Troubled Novice, Connah's Quay).—You ought to have said how old the birds are. It is just possible that the cocks are either too young or too old to run with more than one hen each to meet with an average amount of success. Or again, I think perhaps you may interfere a little to much with the eggs and thereby cause too much uneasiness on the part of the hens, which may result in getting the eggs chilled during the process of incubation. It is the exception rather than the rule for eggs to need putting in water at this season. It is later on when the weather is very warm and dry that this is more likely to be useful. You might let the hens try for one more brood each if they are ready to begin soon, or you might mate each cock with one hen only, and that the most promising one to make a success of the attempt, and leave them severely alone after mating. Let them manage the affair entirely by themselves this time, and do not even interfere to put the eggs in warm water before hatching, and I am inclined to think that you will do much better. You might offer the hens a bath for a few minutes each day on the last three days of the incubatory period. Get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and follow its advice implicitly for the rest of the season.

DISAPPOINTING (Hard Luck, W.W.B.).—(1) Your dietary is not sufficiently generous if what you mention is all you give. It will make a very good staple. But you should give in addition a little egg or biscuit food twice a week, and on two other days a teaspoonful of mixed seeds. Also a little green food, or some sweet fruit, should be given daily at this season, and two or three times a week in winter. For the next fortnight give this bird a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts of hemp, niger, teazle, broken groats, chopped sunflower seeds, and gold of pleasure seed. Instead of green food give a liberal supply of the seed heads of dandelion. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and follow this with four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight if necessary. (2) It certainly does not inspire hopes of success for the time being when a hen lays only one egg and then pitches it out of the nest. You do not say how old the hen is. If only late-hatched last season she may do better in the next attempt, but if she is several years old, my advice is to discard her for breeding. For a fortnight add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water every second day, and on the alternate days give instead six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel. When she is nesting again, keep the floor of the cage thickly strewn with sawdust, giving grit in a tin inside cage, and then if she repeats the performance of throwing out the eggs you may save them being damaged beyond redemption, and put them under another hen to hatch out and rear the young.

STIFF HIND TOE (Straight 'un).—If the toe is dislocated, which you could tell easily enough by the apparent displacement of the joint connecting it with the foot, as it would be popularly termed, your best plan would be to ask a veterinary surgeon to reduce it by manipulation, which it would not be wise for you to attempt yourself. But if there is no apparent displacement, catch the bird and hold the foot in a saucer of tolerably hot water, but be careful to see that it is well below any scalding heat. Having held the foot immersed for a minute or so, transfer it at once to a saucer of cold water for a similar period, then go back to the hot, and again to the cold, repeating these changes from hot to cold ten or a dozen times, but finish in the cold water. Then dry foot, and gently massage it well with vaseline or olive oil. Give the bird a thin and nearly round perch, little thicker than a lead pencil, and another of the usual girth, but trimmed to a three-cornered shape, with the flat side underneath, and one of the pointed ridges, made a little blunt, for the bird to perch on.

LOST HIS FEATHERS (A. Spicksley).—You should have no trouble in keeping your birds after rearing them to the first moult, if you treat them strictly according to the instructions in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you say you have. As regards the loss of feathers, you should first of all examine your cages closely to see if insects are the cause of the trouble, and if they are you must take the necessary steps to exterminate them before you can hope to cure the effect, which would, indeed, very soon disappear when the exciting cause was removed. If no insects are found give a morsel of bread soaked in milk, drained, and dusted with flowers of sulphur, and lastly with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, teazle, millet, broken groats, and maw seed, and add to the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. Then miss a fortnight, and repeat the treatment for another fortnight, and continue this alternating treatment until the feathers are grown or the bird goes into its normal moult. Keep it fairly warm during treatment.

YOUNG DYING (B.E.B.).—Your feeding is decidedly wrong, as I note you had not reduced the supply of egg food when the young birds died, although they were then over two months old. I am inclined to think from your description that the cause of death was, indirectly, constipation. I do not know the book you say you are following closely, but I should think you would do well to disregard it, and get our Manager to send you "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which he will do for 7d., post free. Next time you have any young ready to leave the parents give them a constant supply of good sound canary seed as a staple diet, and place a pinch of summer rape on top of it each day. Continue giving egg food daily composed of a third-part of egg to two-thirds bread crumbs or crushed biscuit. Allow a teaspoonful per bird daily, and each afternoon give a rather smaller quantity of cracked hemp. As soon as you see by the husks in the seed box that the birds are eating canary seed freely, begin to reduce the supply of egg food until by the time they are seven or eight weeks old you have brought them to a small teaspoonful every second day, and on the alternate days give half this quantity of a mixture of hemp, niger, teazle, millet, maw, and broken groats. At this time you should also be giving a small spray of chickweed, watercress, or dandelion leaves about three times a week, or what you can get in your country that is nearest to this class of green food. Occasionally you may omit the egg food and substitute an equivalent quantity of bread and milk. Keep cage floors as clean as possible, see that all food is sound and sweet, and do not allow any scraps to accumulate in the cage to become stale, and keep floors strewn with gritty sand. Under this regime you should find no difficulty in saving the young after they are ready to leave the parents.

LIFE-SAVING EXPERIMENTS (E.M.T.).—Nature provides the necessary nourishment for the support of the chick for some hours after hatching in the egg yolk, which is absorbed into the system only a very short time before the chick is hatched. Exactly how long the chick will retain its full vigour upon this nourishment alone I am not prepared to say, but if they are kept warm by the hen, they are certainly quite vigorous twelve hours later, even if they have been fed at all, and you should have no difficulty in your experiments by beginning to feed at about twelve hours old. A good feeding hen will begin to feed just as soon as the youngsters will gape, but as a rule I fancy little feeding takes place in less than four to six hours after hatching. I cannot say I agree with you that egg is not sufficiently nourishing for them, neither do I think much of your idea of using pepsin, etc., in the attempts to rear chicks only a few hours old. My opinion is that a bird which cannot get sufficient nourishment out of good, fresh egg is not worth the trouble of rearing. By no means would I advise going still further than this and employing stimulants in the form of brandy. Altogether I would advise you to limit your food supply to the yolk of egg, hard boiled, made into a cream with a drop or two of milk for chicks so young, and as they get older add an increasing proportion of crushed biscuit, going up to two-thirds of the bulk, and after the first two or three days begin to add a little finely minced green salad to the mixture for a few hours each day. Have you tried making the soft food palatable to induce the Lizard hen to eat it more freely? If not, do so, making it with equal parts egg, crushed biscuit, and sponge cake, and sprinkle with maw seed, and then try leaving her one or two chicks to rear herself, and note result.

UNFERTILE EGGS (Yellow Tick).—Sorry, but it was impossible to get reply in last issue. It is most likely that the cock is late in coming into full breeding vigour this season, which would quite account for his failure to fill the eggs. It is quite likely that he will do better with the next round, which you may allow the hen to have. To make matters more certain, give the pair a teaspoonful of egg food with about half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesamo mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days give a whole plant of dandelion, cut off just below the ground. You may also add a free supply of the seed heads of dandelion. In the water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three consecutive days, and follow this with six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight or so.

POOR RESULTS (M.A.).—Your feeding does not seem sufficiently generous for birds that are breeding. The staple mixture of canary and rape will do very well, but the seed mixture and the egg food are too sparing. Make a mixture of two parts, by measure, of hemp, and niger, one part each of millet and black rape, a half-part each of teazle and broken groats, and just a sprinkling of linseed and mustard seed, and give each pair a teaspoonful of this every second day when they are going to nest again, and on the alternate days give a teaspoonful of egg food in which you have mixed about half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. Give three or four leaves of dandelion daily, or an equivalent quantity of other green food daily. If you begin this regime at once, I think you will stand a fair chance of getting a late brood, which will be more successful than the earlier ones. You should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free, for 7d., from our Manager. This would have prevented your making the mistake you have during the best part of the season.

YOUNG MOPY, ETC. (B. K.).—(1) The young one that sits mopy as you describe is probably not yet properly on the seed diet, and requires a little soft food daily for a little while longer. Give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar each day for another fortnight, and in the afternoon of each day give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts cracked hemp, rape, and broken groats. Give a few dandelion seed heads, or a leaf of crisp young dandelion each day. In the water you may add six drops of syrup of buckthorn for one day only. This should suffice to set matters right. (2) I am afraid this pair of birds have deteriorated in feeding qualities since the first nest was reared, and that the trouble with the later broods is simply due to the poor attention they get from the parents. Keep your eye on them when the next nest is hatched, and if you find they are not feeding as they should, transfer the young, if convenient, to a more reliable pair of feeders. If this course is not convenient, try tempting the hen with extra dainty food, give a little crisp young lettuce daily, and offer a bath in which you have dissolved sufficient common salt to make the water taste faintly saline. A crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea dissolved in the drinking water for one half of each day for three consecutive days will also help to keep the hen keen on feeding.

COCK WITH TWO HENS (E. W. K.).—Yes, as the birds are flying at liberty in the room, it is quite correct to let the cock remain at liberty with both hens whilst they are going to nest. There is no necessity to remove one hen until the other has gone to nest, and both hens may be expected to lay fertile eggs even if they go to nest simultaneously.

HIND TOES TURNED FORWARD (J. M. G.).—Give the bird rather wide perches of the usual flattened oval shape, and put on rubber rings as you may have seen described here numbers of times. To make these rings, cut rather less than an eighth of an inch off the end of rubber tubing as used for babies' feeding bottles. To put them on, catch the bird, and, holding the three front toes all together, pass the ring, which will go easier if you hold them in your mouth to moisten them, over them, and push it up over the hind toe and the leg, holding the hind toe back against the leg until the ring is nearly, but not quite, as far as the end of the toe. Then leave it there, and when you release the bird the toe will be held far back towards the leg by the ring. Leave these on for two or three weeks, then remove them, and at the same time put in the cage thin and nearly round perches, only a little thicker than an ordinary lead pencil. See that these perches are placed conveniently, and securely fixed, so as not to wobble about when the bird goes on them. Leave them in the cage two or three months, and leave them to complete the cure with Nature's assistance.

LAYING UNSHELLED EGGS (E. K. P.).—I doubt whether the hen will be of any use for breeding this season. But you may try what two or three weeks of the following treatment will do for her. In addition to the usual seed diet give the pair of birds, which you may leave together, a teaspoonful of egg-food, in which you have mixed about half this quantity of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame seed every second day, and on the alternate days give a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, and chopped sunflower seeds, with a sprinkling of mustard seed. Give a liberal supply of the seed heads of dandelion, but none of the foliage, and chickweed each day. Dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the drinking water every second day for a week, and after this give 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days substitute 20 drops of gin. When the hen is about nesting again, get a little old mortar and smash it up to a coarse powder and strew it liberally about the floor of the cage, and add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinker three or four times a week until she has laid her clutch of eggs.

LOSS OF YOUNG (G. B. Gadd).—You are doubtless correct in your surmise that the young are dying from neglect on the part of the hens. As your feeding is not quite correct, try what the following method will do for you with the forthcoming broods. Give your usual egg-food when the broods are about hatching, equal parts egg and bread crumbs, at first. After the first two or three days begin to add a little sponge cake (crushed) to it, and increase this to equal parts egg, bread, and sponge cake by the time the birds are a week old, making the increase by easy stages. Give fresh food at least twice a day. On the fourth day give a morsel of crisp young lettuce, or chickweed, or the tender flowering tips of groundsel, and from this time give a little freshly-gathered green-food twice each day. When the young are eight or ten days old give a teaspoonful of cracked hemp daily, and a few days later, if there is a large brood, you may also add a heaped teaspoonful of soaked summer rape each day. I think the birds will make a bigger success of the business under this treatment.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

SEXING WARBLERS (Softbill).—You should have no difficulty in sexing Blue Throats as the cock and hen are quite differently marked. The hen does not possess the beautiful blue throat of the cock, there are other differences, but this alone will enable you to sex your birds. With the Garden Warbler it is not so simple, the cock and hen are practically alike, but in all birds where the plumage is similar there is the difference of carriage and bearing. Had you several you could probably select the cocks by their boldness, and slightly darker colouring, particularly in the back. I recently watched a pair feeding their young, and was able to distinguish the cock bird by his more upright carriage, alert manner, and slightly darker upper parts. These hints may assist you.

HAND-REARING (E.M.T.).—My experience has been that the longer you can leave the young ones in the nest the better they do later on. I have generally taken them as they begin to open their eyes, as one has no trouble then in getting them to gape for food, but it is possible to rear young taken at six days. Undoubtedly wild birds feed the young upon insects at all times, but more especially the first few days of existence. I can quite understand your birds doing so well upon the aphides and the little green caterpillars, but unfortunately all fanciers are not able to get a good supply. Spiders are not injurious; on the other hand, they are considered to be particularly good, and I have had cases of birds making wonderful recovery from illness when fed with them, although they have been in a very bad condition for some time. Your remarks respecting scraped raw meat are particularly interesting, and I quite agree with you that if given perfectly fresh and judiciously, there is no food upon which birds grow so quickly, but as it is a food that can be so easily misused, one is almost afraid to recommend it. (2) The situation and materials of which the nests are built should assist you in your identification of the birds you mention. The blunt beak and wide skull of the Bullfinch should prevent your mistaking them for any other birds. The beak of the young Chaffinch is considerably harder and more Finchlike than the Hedge Sparrow. The closely-woven compact nest of the former should also assist you, and if you linger near the site of the nest, the call of the old birds would make you quite certain.

COLOUR-FEEDING A JAY (T. McDiarmid).—I think you would do wrong to attempt to colour-feed your Jay. I cannot see where artificial colouring would improve him; the colour of the back might be slightly darkened, but the whites would take a creamy tint, and it would not in any way improve the wings, the colour of which is of great importance. I would advise you to feed him as you are doing now, so as to keep him as healthy as possible, and when the moulting time arrives, increase his insect food if you can possibly manage it, and give him about twice a week a freshly killed mouse or small bird. This will improve his plumage immensely, putting a fine gloss upon it. You should also be liberal with the bath, using rain water. Be sure to get him accustomed to his show cage in good time.

SONG THRUSH, ETC. (Nutmeg).—Your Thrush is evidently a hen bird, and you had better give it its liberty, as unless it is large and good enough for exhibition it is hardly worth keeping. (2) To distinguish the sexes is a rather difficult matter; the point that will be most useful to you is the eye stripe, which in the cock bird is generally better defined, and runs past the eye; the markings on the wing coverts are larger, and the white underparts whiter than they are in the hens, but these points I fear would not be of much use to you unless you had several to choose from. If you are anxious to procure a singer, why not hand-rear a brood? Keep those that warble and give the others their liberty. (3) You could probably get a Blackcap in the autumn, when they are on migration. The price would be about 7s. 6d., or 10s. (4) Softbill and Hardbill birds will not breed together.

LINNET OFF SONG (W.W.B.).—I am afraid I cannot assist you much, as your bird is in good condition, and your feeding appears to be right, but I notice you do not give him any hemp seed. You might try a spoonful of good quality twice a week, lightly cracked, and also the same quantity of mixed seeds that have commenced to germinate. Keep some damp in a warm place; they will soon begin to sprout, when it is ready for use. Do not move him from place to place, unless it is to put him outside for an hour or so on fine days. He may have had a severe fright; this will frequently put a bird off song for some time.

HEN NOT NESTING (Mule Seeker).—It is not an unusual thing for a hen to refuse to go to nest, even with one of their own kind as a partner. You cannot do better than give them a little hard boiled egg and biscuit every other day, and put in the nest pan any materials to build with. It is just possible she is a very backward hen, and may go to nest presently, when you would still have time for a good brood. (2) The fact of the Goldie not being house-moulted would not affect his breeding; field-moulted birds are quite as fertile as the others.

REARING YOUNG IN AVIARY (H. M. Pratt).—I gather from your letter that when you had your last brood of young ones you only gave them seeds to feed on. This was a mistake; you should have supplied the old birds with soft food. Boil a fresh egg for ten minutes, beat it up with a fork, and add two Osborne biscuits and the same quantity of best insectile food as given to Nightingales and Warblers; make the whole slightly damp, and well mix. This they should have fresh twice a day, and in addition a pot of soaked seeds, such as rape and teazle, also a little crushed hemp. Collect seeding grass, shepherd's purse, and chickweed, and keep them well supplied with it. This you should change as frequently as possible. It is upon this food that British birds in aviaries mostly feed their young ones. If you are anxious to succeed you must not mind a little extra trouble to induce the old bird to attend to the little ones. Do not disturb them any more than is absolutely necessary.

BIRDS IN COLD ROOM (Hardbills).—A cold room is just the right place for the birds you mention, and they are more likely to do well there than in a heated one. You must make provision for proper ventilation, but be careful of draughts, for although the birds are quite hardy, they are just as likely to catch cold when exposed to currents of air as more tender subjects.

BULLFINCH ILL (F.E.R.).—I would advise you to let your bird have an entire change of food. Soak a little rape, canary and teazle for twenty-four hours in cold water, and give him a spoonful daily. Dried seeds at present should be equal parts of canary, teazle, and summer rape. Make a mixture of equal quantities of maw, niger, dandelion, and hemp, and give a spoonful twice a week, and half-a-dozen sunflower seeds daily. Offer him seeding grass, chickweed, and dandelion seed pods and young leaves, ripe currants, and strawberries, as soon as you can get them. Before putting him on this diet give as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence, in his drinking water. See that it is properly dissolved, and give when nearly cold. Two doses on alternate days will be sufficient, then follow it with a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food fresh daily, mixed with water that has been previously boiled. (2) Probably your canary seed is not of good quality. I would advise you to purchase a little from another merchant, and try him with that.

TROUBLE WITH YOUNG THRUSHES (A. Davies).—I suspect there is something wrong with your treatment, and had you told me in your letter upon what you were feeding them I might have shewn where you were in error. You had better procure some good insectile food and feed the birds upon that for a time, mixing with it a little scraped raw carrot, chopped lettuce or occasionally some boiled potato. Give some insect life such as small caterpillars, beetles or mealworms. Offer also any soft fruit that is in season. Give a fairly strong dose of glauber salts for one day, about as much as will cover a shilling, in his drinker, repeating the dose two days afterwards. Catch the birds and hold the feet and legs in warm water, dry and rub gently with the finger dipped in Elliman's embrocation. Keep the cage clean and dry. Place your perches or at least one of them rather low, so as to encourage the birds to perch, this will exercise the legs and feet.

WHAT BIRD? (Frank Stephens).—By your description I should say the bird is a variegated Canary. The fact of there being cock Canaries in the aviary with the hens makes it almost certain that one of them is the parent of the young bird. The size of the bird is not of much importance as regards identification, as one large one in a nest is generally caused through its getting the majority of the food. Although you give me a description of the bird, you do not mention the beak. This you should compare with the other young one, which you say is a Canary. His looking black before he was feathered is not unusual with heavily variegated Canaries. These are so full of dark blood that it not only affects the skin, but the beak and toe nails, some of which are quite dark. Have you shown your supposed Chaffinch-Canary to anyone? If genuine he should be a valuable bird.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GREY PARROT WEAK (E.C.).—Probably age has most to do with it; but in addition to seed mixture it should have ripe fruit, any kind it will take, various nuts, crusts of stale bread, piece of plain cake or sponge cake, and also continuous access to grit and cuttlebone. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and in between put half-a-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Give the bird about 10 to 15 drops of cod-liver oil daily, either from the end of a feather direct to the mouth or by soaking it into a piece of cake, or crust, or piece of biscuit if it will take either of these. I certainly consider there is hope for recovery, but amendment may be slow, unless it gets worse. Report progress a month hence.

NEWLY BOUGHT (J.E.M.).—Your error has been in spraying it with cold water. You should use tepid water and care is needed that the bird is out of reach of chill winds while the plumage is wet. It is quite usual for a Parrot to spend considerable time on its toilet, but to be on the safe side, put a little quassia essence in the water with which you spray it. Add white millet to the seed mixture and give a little green food, such as lettuce, seeding grass, green oats, and other cereals. While the running continues, spray the nostrils with a dilute (one in ten) solution of glyco-thymoline; it will do no harm if a little is swallowed. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Treat as above for a month and then report progress. If other adverse symptoms develop you had better write again at once. The glyco-thymoline need not be continued after the running at nostril ceases.

AILING POLLY (Polly).—There is not much the matter with your bird. Owing to climatic conditions it has caught a slight cold, which should soon pass. However, it is best to make sure, so get from your chemist a mixture of glycerine, ipecacuanha wine, and oxymel of squills in equal parts. Add half a teaspoonful of the above to the drinking water daily till the trouble yields. Every fourth day put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia over the boiled maize—of course, after all water has been drained off—but if the voidings should become very loose, then once a week should be frequent enough. On the days you are not giving the magnesia, put 10 drops of cod liver oil on the maize and supply the bird when it has soaked in. Do not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. As soon as we get some really warm weather, spray it twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution. If running at the nostrils should supervene, spraying it with a dilute (1 in 10) solution of glyco-thymoline should soon give relief. Keep cuttlebone, grit and wood continually in the cage; the latter will help to keep the bird occupied and amused.

GREY PARROT, YOUNG (C. W.).—As I suspected, this bird is quite a young one and on a par with the one you've lost, and it looks very much as if you'll lose this. Give it a little milk sop daily, and for three days well stir into it two drops of tincture of opium, and on the fourth day in lieu of the tincture, put in ten drops of cod liver oil and continue this for the present. In other respects treat as per our previous reply. Keep it really warm—70 to 80 degrees F. will not be too much for it, providing the air is not vitiated. If it appears to need a stimulant, give it a few sips of chilled, very weak, brandy and water once or twice during the day. I should remove and burn the voidings at once. It is quite possible that this bird has become infected by your using the same cage that the previous bird occupied without first properly sterilising it. You had better report progress in a week's time, but if this bird dies, do not get another till you have asked for directions to properly treat the cage. It is usually cheaper in the end to pay several pounds for an established bird procured only from a reliable source. But you must hope for the best with your present bird.

FOR CRYSTAL PALACE CAGE (A.M.C.).—I have called this by its proper name. It is a cage, and not an aviary. Some may breed, but most will not. Put in pairs of Zebra and Bib Finches, Gold-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, and dispose of half-a-dozen rush nests about the cage. Get our Nutshell "Waxbills," 2½d., post free from our Manager. This will tell you how to treat. Procure as soon as possible so as to get them well established during the summer months.

SONGSTERS (J. W.). — All the Serins, such as Alario, Grey and Green Singing Finches, and Cape Canaries, are good songsters of the Canary type, but neither so loud nor as shrill as the domestic Canary. The Avadavat has a sweet little song, but not very varied. Still, I have never considered it monotonous. The Serins named above would best meet your case. The genus Serinus is a large one, and there are others, and all have pleasing songs. But the above are those most usually on the market. You would, I feel sure, appreciate an Alario Finch. I do not think the Waxbills and others of the "Small Ornamental Finches" would meet your requirements.

BUDGERIGARS (P. B., Suffolk).—Your flight would accommodate three pairs, providing the young were removed as soon as able to fend for themselves. You had better either take out the odd hen or put in another cock. I am afraid you'll have to exercise patience till the birds settle down. Some pairs do this quicker than others. There is ample time, for once Budgerigars make a start they breed all the year round, save for a short pause at the moulting period. You will soon know when they are really in breeding condition, as the ceres round the nostrils become bright blue in the male, and vary from dark cream-colour to ruddy brown in the female. Do not omit to supply regularly cuttlebone and grit.

PETZY'S CONURE (M. D. R.).—This is a pleasing and quiet species, not very plentiful, and I have met with but a few specimens. It was more often met with in the past than at the present time, but a few have recently appeared in the market. While it cannot be called a talking species, yet I have heard one at least that did lisp a word or two in a very small voice. A Parrot, whatever its species or size, will use its voice in natural manner at times (even Brotogerys do this), and Conures' voices are shrill; but so far as my experience goes, it is not more noisy than Brotogery's. As regards making a good pet, this is a case of individualism, and I can only say for the Petzy's I have seen, that they were tame and did not object to have their poll scratched. At the same time, a Brotogerys becomes finger-tame quicker than any other genus I am acquainted with. In addition to the seeds you name, supply ripe fruit according to the bird's taste and the season, also green food, cuttlebone, grit, and keep a piece of partly-rotten wood in the cage for it to amuse itself with.

BREEDING CARDINALS (Foreigner).—They are not what one might term free breeders in captivity, but for young to be reared is certainly not uncommon. Usually they are quite capable of constructing their own nest. When feeding young they require a regular supply of live food. Do not depend entirely upon mealworms; use live ants' eggs and gentles, all procurable at present. Supply about what they will carry to their young every two hours, and scatter a few of them about so that they will have to forage for them. Any smooth caterpillars, spiders, beetles, chrysalis, etc., the garden supplies you can scatter amid the herbage of the aviary for them. By adopting such methods you will stand a good prospect of successfully rearing the next brood.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

G. Heath.—Use the seeds only. In our opinion, however, this plant is not of great value; there are others we should prefer for Canaries.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. Ida M. Snodin.—Inflammation of the bowels resulting from fatty degeneration of the liver, non-infectious, so there will be no need for disinfection.

Mr. F. Victor Randell.—Goldfinch died of enteritis (inflammation of the bowels). The seed appeared to be a very fair sample, but I should advise a change of same, as it may contain impurities not perceptible on ordinary examination, and it is evident that the trouble can only arise from dietetic origin, as there was no evidence of specific infection.

Mrs. E. Watts.—Pneumonia was the cause of death, probably contracted through a chill. Your surmise was quite correct, it was a cock bird.

J. Hogg.—It was impossible to trace the cause of death; all the internal organs had undergone decomposition, which is not unexpected, particularly at this time of year, having died so long ago.

GREATER pleasure—bigger prizes—more profits. This is what "Our Canaries" is bringing to thousands of Canary-lovers in all parts of the world. Directly you open its pages you will see how wonderfully it deals with every phase of the hobby. The experienced fancier as well as the novice will find "Our Canaries" invaluable on hundreds of occasions. Ladies, too, will gain much profitable pleasure by following the instructions in this splendid volume. The rearing of Canaries is a pastime especially suited to the gentler sex, and it is a way of adding very considerably to the banking account.

Very substantial prices are given for Canaries that possess the necessary show points. It is not half as difficult as one would imagine to rear Prize Canaries. By following the expert advice in "Our Canaries," it is possible in a comparatively short time to possess birds that win prizes wherever they are shown, and whose progeny can quickly be disposed of at splendid prices.

It is extremely simple to secure this big Canary volume. Just send a postal order for 1/- and you will receive it post free by return. You can pay off the balance by small monthly payments.

More information concerning the wonderful range of subjects in "Our Canaries" is given in an interesting booklet—FREE to all readers who fill up and send the Coupon below. Write for it without delay, as the edition is limited.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE. The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage on the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

"Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds." It is your best friend. You cannot do without it if you are a Canary keeper. It never lets you down or plays you false, but in many a difficulty it will point the way out; it will solve all your problems for you, and show you how to make money and win prizes by your pets.

In health or ailment it is a sure guide; it multiplies your pleasure and gives you the knowledge that is necessary to be right up-to-date, to have "show standard" always in your aviary, to get the very best out of your stock every time and all the time.

If you send for the booklet—as you surely should, for it is interesting and helpful on its own account—you will see that the money side need not worry you. You pay a very small sum for a few months, and have the book itself all the while you are paying for it, so that you can increase your profits and prizes by following its advice, and so make the book pay for itself.

Now is the time to have the book because you will be presented with an expensive and splendidly helpful anatomical model, which will prove a boon at every turn. So long as any of these remain—and they are getting fewer every day—they will be given free to every subscriber for

CANARIES, HYBRIDS & BRITISH BIRDS

Written by JOHN ROBSON and Edited and Revised by S. H. LEWER.

The Fancier who follows out the instructions given in this work in breeding, can always be sure he is doing the right thing, and doing it at least cost so that when selling time comes he secures the handsomest margin of profit. It is right up-to-date, and, as will be seen by a glance at the selection of main topic is given at the left of this advertisement, covers every requirement of the Canary-keeper, from the moment of buying his first bird—in which he gets dependable advice and guidance—right through every department.

He will find all help in treating ailments, will be told how to keep birds in health, and will always feel proud of any specimens he offers for sale.

In this work there is a splendid range of illustrations. No fewer than twenty-six superb and life-like full-page illustrations coloured in exact facsimile to nature in every respect. Added to this distinctive feature is a profusion of other illustrations, all of a helpful and interesting character. There are about 170 ILLUSTRATIONS IN TOTAL, including practical diagrams and plans, photographs of champions, pictures and drawings of different kinds of houses and apparatus: in short, a practical and pleasurable picture gallery of bird-life and bird requirements, such as no other work possesses. By themselves they form an education in the hobby.

To the man who breeds for prizes, this work is of proved value. Many men, previously novices, have followed implicitly the instructions here given, and have gained high exhibition honours. That is because the advice given is told in clear language, because it is advice based on expert experience, and because on all points the latest show standards are given, with full information how to reach them. In short, to possess this work means high-tide success to exhibitors: it means big profits to breeders: it means more pleasure to the man who keeps Canaries for the love of his hobby, because his birds will always be in the pink of condition, in tip-top health, and singers of quality. It is just the book for you.

THIS BOOK TELLS YOU

those secrets which have brought prizes, those things which, at little cost to the owner, send the value of the birds up to top-notch rates and yield big profits to the breeder.

THE FREE MODEL.

This model will prove to be of lifelong use to the Canary lover. It instructs, guides and helps at every step. It is printed in true-to-life colours, and the five distinct plates of which the model is composed, and the 105 named and numbered parts, give accurate insight into and familiarity with the construction of every part of the internal constitution and organs of the CANARY.

MUST BE APPLIED FOR WITHOUT DELAY.

LOST VITALITY RESTORED

The greatest food for your hens when run down; it restores them to wonderful breeding condition; hens, which have hitherto been bad feeders, after having "Phosto" will feed and bring up their young in an almost surprising manner; young birds fed on "Phosto" have health and size, full of vigour, and will leave the nest in a wonderful condition. The proof of these statements can be tried for a small outlay. Once you try "Phosto" you will never be without it. Prices, in tins, 1/-, 2/6, and 4/6. Note the name: Judge Silk, Norwich Specialist, Whitstable.

WANTED A TRIAL

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Ditchfield's medicines have been used for over six years by most leading fanciers, and are used at the London Zoo. They are genuine remedies, which can be given with perfect confidence to all classes of cage birds. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg binding, feather plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, in 7d. and (treble size) bottles, 1/1, special size 2/-. This medicine is invaluable for young birds just getting on hard seed. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's special Lung Tonic, also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. For cases of constitutional weakness and debility, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo. There is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. Revivo is invaluable as a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing; also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All medicines are sent post paid, per return, at our risk. Also two valuable seed recipes, how to feed Linnets and Rollers for song, given free to all purchasers of our medicines. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed: Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. THE BEST INVESTMENT

any Birdkeeper can make is to purchase a Sixpenny copy of that

BIG BIRD-BREEDER'S BUDGET,

'CAGE-BIRDS' 1914 ANNUAL

There are articles for every season and now the Bird-keeper is in the SECOND ROUND, he would do well to study the advice given by that well-known bird authority, Claude St. John, in his article,

Mistakes Birdbreeders Must Avoid.

A most seasonable article. Alone worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby. Besides this highly instructive article, it also contains the following:

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP & BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.
This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES.
By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

DIRECTORY OF THE JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden.
A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS.
By W. H. Gibb.
The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRDCATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.
A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

Some Secrets of the .. Hybrid Breeder ..

The breeding of Hybrids is a fascinating study, full of failures, yet brightened by remarkable successes—successes in many cases perhaps unexpected—bringing pride, joy and fame to the breeder. No other side of the cage bird hobby offers so much in return to the person who elects to take a little trouble with it, or holds out to the novice so many opportunities for springing into fame. The magnificent work, entitled written by Mr. Charles Houlton, a man who has a long list of successes to his name, and edited by the well-known fanciers, Messrs. G. E. Weston and C. A. House, should be in the hands of everybody interested in the hobby. In this wonderful book Mr. Charles Houlton has laid bare the secrets of Hybrid breeding, and in a marvellously interesting and astonishingly clear manner has given information of the utmost value to the would-be Hybrid breeder. The whole work is written in easily understandable language, and its illustrations form one of the most remarkable collections on the art of Hybridising that has ever been seen.

No less than 16 unique plates in colours, 16 art plates, and over 60 sketches, combine to make this volume the most remarkable of its kind. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

This magnificent volume may be had for 1/-, carriage paid, and 3 monthly payments of 3/-, or for one payment of 7/6.

June 14, 24 birds sang: 1, Hayes; 2, Richardson; 3, Farrar; 4, shared by Richardson and Hollingworth. Judges, Clegg and Naylor.—Walter Nayler, Hon. Sec.

Leeds Linnet and Canary Club. At the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane, Saturday match proved a decided success, 27 birds being hung. Judges, F. Appleyard and N. Soloman; time-keeper, A. Lorriman. A unique decision was given, T. Johnson and Jim Chippendale sharing 1 and 2; H. Playforth and S. Johnson sharing 3 and 4. Some visitors who came to hear T. Johnson's bird ("Musical Box"), winner of the All-England Championship match on Whit Monday, were agreeably surprised at the way this bird can sing and put his notes together. This is one of his breaks: Wharling into 3rd way of scraping, 5th way of chattering back to 2nd way of scraping, to 2nd way of reeing, to 4th way of pecing, finishing with 3rd way of chowing; clean length and form. This bird can be matched to sing (quality) any Linnet in the world for any amount. June 14, 28 of the best Linnets round Leeds sang: 1, 2, Sam Johnson; 3, Tom Johnson; 4, J. Bamfield. Judges, C. Lorriman and P. Madden. Time-keeper, N. Soloman. The following have been chosen for the committee of the above club: J. Chippendale, M. Brophy, H. Playforth, C. Lorriman, T. Johnson. Anyone wishing to join please write.—R. Ridgeyard, Sec., Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane.

Country Rambles

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

The scene of our annual ramble on June 2 was the Nae Moor Estate, access to which had been kindly granted by Mr. Mowbray. This gentleman also kindly allowed his head gamekeeper to act as our guide. We left Cowdenbeath station by the 7.43 train, laden with a good substantial basket of sandwiches. Having an hour to wait at Kinross for the Devon Valley train, it was decided to walk from Loch Leven to the Junction and inspect some of the Kinross fanciers' birds on the way. Arriving at Crook of Devon station, we were met by the keeper, and the company was augmented by one or two of the members who had been on holiday in that district. The first Bullie's nest was found by the treas., Mr. Menzies, and verified by the sec. It was situated in a spruce tree, and was composed of a layer of fibres of the spruce, rough grass and moss, and contained five eggs. From there we entered a stretch of moss and heather. We were indebted to our friend, Mr. Jeffray, who named many of the rare nests. It was here our two members, Messrs. Stewart and Anderson, were in their element, and had many nests to their credit. These seemed to be the Warblers', as one could see and hear them on nearly every bush. When reaching the top of the hill a halt was made long enough to permit a small refreshment. A song was called for from the vice-pres., Mr. A. Simpson, who gave us "King of the Forest Glade" in fine style. When our ramble was resumed nests were to be found in nearly every bush, bank, and tree. We arrived in due time at the place appointed for lunch, and did full justice to the sandwiches, etc.

Arriving again at Crook Hotel, the vice-pres., in the name of the C.C.S., thanked Mr. Mowbray in his absence for his kindness towards the society in throwing his estate open to them for the day. Arriving home in Cowdenbeath about half-past eight, the party were tired, but well pleased with the day's outing. We are looking forward to the next ramble on June 20, which takes place at Raith Estate, kindly granted by Mr. Munro Ferguson, leaving Cowdenbeath by the ten o'clock train a.m., when we hope to meet all fanciers and friends who wish to accompany us.—A. Robertson, Sec.

GREAT HORTON GOOD INTENT, AND BINGLEY O.S.

Joint ramble took place on June 6th, the weather being rather dull and cold but this did not prevent those present from enjoying themselves. About forty-two fanciers, their wives, children and friends turning up. The Great Horton fanciers took the tram at Foster Square and we met the Bingley fanciers at Cottingley Bridge. After the preliminary greeting was over we made for the woods, taking along the Black Hills; and we were not long before we were among the birds, these being fairly plentiful. The first nest was a Thrush's empty, next we discovered a Chaffinch's nest with four lovely youngsters, and, my word, didn't one or two of us long to take them to hand-rear. Going further into the woods we came across a fair number of Thrushes, Blackbirds, etc. Some with full nests of young, but, alas! most of them were empty. I fancy the lads had been before us. We next went along the river side and a few of the fanciers thought they would go boating. We now wended our way to replenish the inner man, tea being provided at the Bingley Co-operative Store's Cafe, and a splendid tea it was. After tea we wandered along the river side, some of us to wander up the lovely hill sides, while a few spent their time in boating. I must not forget, the ladies we had to push through a hole in the wall, the stiles were too narrow for them to get through. After spending a little more time here we had to be thinking of home, so we wended our way towards the tramcars; everyone having enjoyed himself to the full, and hoping it would not be the last outing of the kind we should have. I am sure we owe our best thanks to the Bingley fanciers for meeting us and taking us round. I may say that some of them seemed quite envious of the way the Good Intent wives looked after their husbands. Well, all I can say is the next time we meet you bring your wives along with you.—A. Firth, Sec.

LOCHGELLY & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Took place to Blairhill Estate, kindly granted by Mr. A. P. Haigh, the proprietor. Leaving Lochgelly by char-a-banc, we commenced our journey. A splendid run through a beautiful district, by Scotlandwell and Kinross, around the northern shore of Lochleven, brings us to the foot of the Ochil Hills, which we skirt all the way to our destination, Rumbling Bridge Hotel. Ten o'clock not having yet struck, we betake ourselves to the hotel grounds, and before leaving have a look at the golden eagle, which has been kept there in an open aviary for many years. Passing through the lodge gates we enter Blairhill Estate and commence our search. A clump or two or rhododendrons are drawn and Mr. Georgie Raith claims first find, a Blackbird's nest with four eggs. Mr. Wm. Grewar discovers a Blackbird which lays bare her homestead, occupied by four eggs. We proceed cautiously, noting the presence of a number of Grey Wagtails, a pair busy feeding on a stone in the burn. A hawthorn hedge provides a Chaffinch nest with four eggs. The river bank gives fine shelter for warblers, etc. A Dipper is seen—great excitement—most of us having never seen this species before. Almost a mile of river is travelled, and we begin to give up hope, but what is this under the ledge of rock, all moss and water weeds? The nest of a Dipper without a doubt, but no eggs. Macgregor's watery rings out next. From an oak tree a Chaffinch with three eggs. A hole in a tree supplies the Blue Tit element, and Archie Kirk counts 16 gaping mouths. The parents fly around the while. A Greenfinch is next reported, four youngsters. Song Thrush, also four young, two of which are taken as possible exhibitors. All too soon the day draws to a close and we return, happier and wiser men, after what is acknowledged by all as the crowning success in our ramble history. Much thanks is due to Mr. A. P. Haig for his great kindness in granting the freedom of his estate for this, our third and most enjoyable ramble.—R. Muir, Sec.

NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

First of a series of rambles, held May 31st, to Kirkby and Simonswood, 33 members and friends taking part. A start was made at Walton Church, the party first viewing the Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society's show ground. The party were entertained by the Brothers Stockley, two local "white hopes," aged 8 and 10 respectively, with a boxing exhibition. Mr. Broadbent fixed up a "sweep," to be awarded for the rarest nest found. The morning was cloudy and cold, and rain commenced to fall, but this did not damp our spirits. Getting to the outskirts of Fazakerley, the society's premier British bird enthusiast, Mr. Ted Williams (known to his intimate friends as "Welshie"), took the lead. Several nests were located around here, the first being a Greenfinch's, with eggs, also another with young; Thrushes and Blackbirds were very plentiful. Nearing Kirkby, a halt was made for friend Nowlan to photograph the group. All the party by this time were keen on finding nests, but up to now nothing rare had come along. At Kirkby we adjourned to the Railway Hotel for lunch. Travelling through the woods afterwards, we were in our element, and here Wilkins was in big demand, all anxious to record their finds. Mr. Holden found a Great Tit's nest, which proved to be the best find of the day. Leaving the woods, we again crossed the fields, under the care of Farmer Hesketh. Passing Kirkby Delph, this was thoroughly examined for nests, but nothing good was found here. We were met here by Mr. Aspinall, of Kirkby, who very kindly took the party through the by-roads to Simonswood Moss. Here the Cuckoo was seen and heard, also the Wheatear. We again posed for the photographer amongst the bracken, Mr. Holden taking Mr. Nowlan's place at the camera. Passing along the lane we were soon amongst the peat moss, and saw how it was harvested. I heard one of the members explaining that it was largely used in the manufacture of tobacco. I noticed one of the members was very free with his cigarettes after this. Turning around for home, we took to the main road. Stopping at the first farmhouse, we refreshed ourselves with new milk. It was here Metcalf, jun., the hero of the Wallasey ramble, explained to the farmer's wife how his father was initiated into the fur Fancy. We covered close on 19 miles in 9¼ hours, all agreeing that it had been a most enjoyable outing.—A. E. Wilkins.

There are two 5s. sps., 5s. most points champ. section, 5s. most points novice section; also medal for best novice and champ. bird, also a large number of other spls. Birds to be staged at 3 p.m. prompt. Our patronage will be allocated for at this meeting, so that any society that wishes same might let me know at their earliest; classification for patronage shows is the same as last year. Subs. now due. Wm. Price, Hon. Sec.

HASTINGS & ST. LEONARDS C.B.S

At the Royal Oak Hotel, June 24th, the Pres., Rev. J. M. Paterson, will deliver his farewell lecture on British and Foreign Birds. The chair will be taken at 8.30 by the Right Worshipful the Mayor (Councillor E. Armitage Hocking). The second of the shows will be held the same evening, at 7.30 punctually. As I anticipate a big entry, will members kindly send their birds down early? As this will be the last opportunity for members to hear Mr. Paterson, I hope to see a grand attendance. All members, I know, deeply regret losing their president, and for his final lecture there must be a big rally.—Irene Kirk-Bullock (Hon. Sec. and Treas.).

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, June 9, Mr. T. Dawn presiding. There was an exceptionally large turn-up of members. Final arrangements for N.F. show made, also details of the great all-England show to be held in November, which points to even being greater success than ever. We are again paying full prize money in every class, if only one entry, so it will pay exhibitors to keep the date in mind Special prize fund for N.F. show has turned out a great success, and will include spls. for best bird, most points and most entries in each section in addition to fixed prize money. Don't forget the date, July 4. Schedules will be posted in due course. Table show of song birds (Canaries), amateur For. and amateur Brit. followed, 7 classes in all, which brought a good number of birds before the judge, Mr. G. Browning, who gave entire satisfaction.—J. A. T. Woodale (Press. Corresp.)

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held June 4. Mr. Cattell presided over a good attendance. Following new members elected: M. Nattrass, W. Crowther (Bishop Auckland), R. Havio (Blaydon), F. Coulson (Millom), J. Lumsden (Benwell), C. W. Gregory (Jarrow), J. Marmion (Newcastle). Club's patronage granted to Newcastle, Oct. 23 and 24; West Hartlepool, Nov. 7; Blaydon, Nov. 13, 14; Haltwhistle, Nov. 20, 21; Gateshead, Dec. 18, 19; Sunderland, Jan. 16, 1915. Challenge cup and Ramsden cup will be competed for at Gateshead show. Mr. Cattell and Mr. Crawhall kindly proposed to give two valuable spls. to be competed for in Yorkshire classes at Newcastle N.F. show, July 4; Mr. Cattell's spl. for best bird bred by a member in champion classes: Mr. Crawhall's for best novice bird if more than one competitor; if no competition in novice, spl. to go for most points in Yorkshire classes, winner of Mr. Cattell's spl. debarred. Points gained at this show to count for Secretary's cup. Mr. Cattell is giving a pair of slippers, value 5s., for most points table shows, this spl. to go to opposite section to cup winner. Next table show, July 2; judge, W. Mather.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting held Lockhart's Cafe, Newcastle-on-Tyne, June 10. Mr. J. Ford Maling (Pres.) presided over large meeting. Letters read from Newcastle, Blaydon, Bradford National, Gateshead, Sunderland, for patronage. Decided to give three medals to Newcastle and three to Blaydon, one for the best old bird, one for best young bird, and one for the best novice; three to Blaydon, one for best old bird, one best young bird, one best novice bird; only one bird to win one medal at these two shows. Mr. Hutchinson is giving two medals, one to Newcastle and one to Blaydon. Decided to give cup patronage to Gateshead on Dec. 18 and 19; cup and gold medal for best old bird, and a silver medal for best old bird in each class; also a cup and gold medal for best young Crest, and a cup and gold medal for the best young C.B.; also silver medals for best bird in young classes that are in the tickets of the winners. Mr. Ford Maling promised gold medal for best bird at Sunderland show, also Mr. Geo. Dobson silver medal best novice bird at Sunderland show. Mr. Geo. Dobson elected club judge for N.C.C., and will judge at Gateshead. Members present sorry that they could not grant the patronage to Bradford National, but promised to help them all they could. The N.C.C. are not running a show this year, although they have had two successful shows, as it does not seem advisable. In making presentation to Mr. J. G. Hutchinson (late secretary) of clock and ornaments, and an umbrella and gold ring for his wife, the President said we were all indebted to Mr. Hutchinson for his valuable assistance in the past, and were deeply sorry that, owing to circumstances over which he had no control, he has been compelled to resign the post of secretaryship, but sincerely hope that club will not lose his esteemed co-operation in the future. We all wished him long life, health, and happiness. Mr. Hutchinson thanked members on behalf of his wife and himself.—Geo. Dobson, Sec.

MIDDLESBROUGH & TEES-SIDE.

Meeting held Crown Hotel, June 6. Mr. Watson presided over a good number of members. Re hall for annual show, etc. Ramble arranged for June 21 by brake to Hutton, Rugby, leaving headquarters at 9.30 a.m. Usual refreshment and knife-and-fork tea at Hutton, Rugby. Will members who are desirous of going and have not given their names, will they please do so as early as possible? F.F. show arranged for July 4, at Crown Hotel. Birds staged at 2 p.m. Judge, Mr. A. Wake. Will members bring as many entries as possible, as birds will be competing medals points? Members are not having the best of luck this breeding season. There are no very good results reported yet, but are looking forward to better results from next round. This was a good meeting, about twenty members being present.—C. W. Watson, Vice-chair

NORTHAMPTON (H.-in-H.) C.B.S.

Annual outing held June 13. Meeting at their headquarters, Mr. A. E. Dunkley's, The Old House, at Home, Wellingborough Road, at 3 p.m., brakes and horses being supplied by Mr. R. Frisby, Northampton. A start was made en route for Olney, Bucks., a large number taking advantage of the outing, and the weather was simply glorious, Olney being reached soon after 4 o'clock p.m. Some of the fanciers' rooms were at once inspected, and a few nice specimens were at once spotted out, and no doubt we may hear more of these later on at the shows. Five o'clock being the time for tea, we adjourned to our old esteemed friends, Mr. and Mrs. C. Hinde's, The Queen's Hotel, Olney, where a capital meat tea was in waiting, to which the members did good justice. After tea, a stroll round was made through the fields, some to enjoy a cricket match, others sorting the hedgerows, looking for some of the British birds they love so well. 6.30 being the time appointed for a little harmony, our host and hostess, finding us a good pianist, some good songs were enjoyed, after which a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. and Mrs. C. Hinde for their kindness. A start was made for home, our headquarters being reached just before eleven, all proclaiming that it was the best outing we had ever had.—A. W. Law.

CUMNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second annual ramble June 13, through Lord Bute's Dumfries House estate, permission kindly granted by his lordship. It was delightful weather for a ramble, and starting point was from the Auchinleck Gate House. We had as our guide one of his lordship's keepers. We first went through a plantation where nests were in abundance, and we saw some young Mavises flying about. We next proceeded to some hedges, where again we found many more nests—Chaffinches' this time. We came across two Reed Buntings' nests with four and five egg respectively, and from here we went along the water of the Lugar to Mill Affleck; here we found a Bullfinch's nest. We made our way to our turning point at Ochiltree, so we left here after having a short rest and a bit of lunch. We wended our way to the Big House Policies, and got nests of almost of all the different varieties, from the Wren to the Wild Duck and Water Hens. We went past Lord Bute's mansion, which is a beauty spot and a sight to see with flowers of nature all abloom, so from here we made for our starting point, but came across a nest with five eggs, which caused a bit of an argument which kind it was but most of them came to the conclusion that it was a Willow Warbler's. We made for our tea, which was a welcome sight, and everyone gave it ample justice too, so after tea was over Mr. J. Hainey, our worthy president, was called to the chair to make a short speech, and secretary was instructed to thank Lord Bute for granting permission, and also a letter of condolence to Mrs. Tannoch at the loss of her husband, who was one of our vice-pres.; and to another of our members, Mr. Gibb, on the loss of his wife. All agreed they had enjoyed a great day's outing.—J. Nutt, Treas.

LEITH O.S.

Annual ramble took place June 13, at Carberry, Musselburgh. The company left their headquarters in two brakes at 3 o'clock. The drive down to the coast was just lovely, the fresh breeze from the sea tempering the heat of the sun, and put everyone in the best of spirits. After a drive of about an hour we reached the entrance of the Estate, where we left the machines and proceeded on foot through the beautiful grounds. Nests were not so numerous as on former occasions, the season having been so good in the beginning of April the first nests were all grown. We came across a lot of nests with eggs just about due to hatch, mostly Thrushes' and Hedge Sparrows'. On the company looking into a Thrush's nest which contained one youngster, the parent bird resented our presence by flapping her wings and opening her mouth, screeching for all she was worth. After about three hours' tramping through the Estate we got to the other side of it, where our brakes were in waiting to take us down to Musselburgh Arms, where we were met by several of our members and friends who could not be with us earlier in the day. After having satisfied the inner man with a bite and some "pop," an impromptu concert was held for about an hour and a half. The company thanked Mr. Whitelaw and Mr. C. Sykes for their kindness by accompanying us during the afternoon. At 9.15 time was called to enter the machines for home, which was reached at 10 o'clock. All over the outing proved a great success.—G. W. Brown, Sec.

Mr. W. Young (New Brighton) is judging Garston B.B.A. show, July 4, and Ebenezer Cum-y-glo (Wales), Oct. 31.

I thank you for your promptness in sending CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It is a very handy and useful book indeed.—J. Cliff, Sec. Selby and Dist. C.B.S.

At South Birmingham O.S. Young Bird show, June 20, at Marlboro' House, Small Heath, besides a fine list of specials the handsome silver cups of the Society are for competition at the show, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, the sec.

The following gentlemen have accepted appointments to act as judges at Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A. show, Nov. 20 and 21:—Crests, Mr. Allan Chalmers (Kirkintilloch); Plainheads, Mr. A. Sloan (Glasgow); Borders, Mr. G. Hyslop (Stirling); Yorkshires, Mr. R. Heggie (Glasgow); British and Foreign, Mr. Jas. Gentleman (Avonbridge), and Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart).

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. Ward (Aldershot).

I regret to inform you of the death of a very promising member of the Reading Society, writes Mr. O. C. Smith, the sec., in the person of Mr. J. Ward, Queen's Road, Aldershot, who died in Guy's Hospital, on June 6. To Mrs. Ward and family every member will extend their deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement. Mrs. Ward will be compelled to part with all her late husband's birds (Yorks.) and appliances, and judging by prizes won, they must be very good ones.

Mr. R. L. Smith (Roslin).

I regret to inform you, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, sec Loanhead C.B.S., of the death of Mr. Robert L. Smith, Roslin, one of our members, also a member of B.F.C.C. He died on June 8th, and was buried in Roslin Cemetery, when there was a good turnout of local fanciers. Mr. Smith was only 38 years of age, and it is only about four years since he entered the Fancy, but last year he won at a number of our open shows. I am sure the sympathy of all will be extended to his widow and four young children in their sad bereavement.

Mr. A. C. Askew (Clapham).

It is with great regret, writes Mr. A. R. Coe, of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A., that I have to report the death, on June 9, of Mr. A. C. Askew. He had been ailing for about six months, and died at Charing Cross Hospital, after having undergone an operation. Mr. Askew was a very valuable and energetic member of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A., which Association is not only indebted to him for his services as its secretary during 1909 and 1910, but also for his ready and experienced help so ungrudgingly given at later open shows, as show manager. As a fancier he was very versatile, as in addition to exhibiting Yorkshire Canaries, he kept a large stock of British and bred several Hybrids. One of his most remarkable feats was to breed Skylarks in a cage. He leaves a widow and family, with whom his many friends and fanciers in general will, I am sure, feel the deepest sympathy. Mr. Askew also was a valued member of the committee of the National British Bird and Mule Club.

The Robin and the Piano.

Two Robins have built their nest in the beams of Nursling (Southampton) Infant School, says "The Standard," and one bird takes part in the morning singing lesson. When the piano ceases the bird stops too.

A London Society in Luck.

The City and Suburban A.C.B has been presented with a handsome cup for the best Hybrid bred this year, also a guinea for the best young self-coloured Norwich Green to be won outright at the young bird show, taking place on July 4th writes Mr. V. Wynn, the hon. sec. These have been presented by our esteemed lady member, Miss G. Knott.

It is an undisputed fact that Ramsden's Peppers for 1914 are the finest ever imported—such depth of bright colour, flavour and quality have rarely, if ever, been seen before. Not only are Ramsden's pure peppers used by the majority of experienced fanciers for colour-feeding cage-birds, for each day brings orders from the leading chefs for these peppers on account of their wonderful colour and aroma. The Hot Cayenne for 1914 has never yet been equalled. Sold only in canisters with Ramsden's label and coupon. No guarantee if a trader opens the canister before sale.—(Advt.)

Bird Nest Soup.

Chinese birds' nests for soup-making may be seen just now in a Piccadilly shop window. The price is ten shillings an ounce.

Nearly 60,000 Birds Marked!

Nearly 60,000 wild birds have been caught, ringed and released in England during the last five years, it is stated.

Lizards for the Colonies.

Pleased to say I have sent a pair of Lizards and a Yorkshire hen to Mr. C. I. Jeffrey, of Montreal, Canada, writes Mr. John Rukin (Rawtenstall). This is the second lot to this gentleman. The pair of Lizards comprise clear cap silver cock 1st Manchester, etc., and my best gold hen. I have also an inquiry from a gentleman in Victoria, British Columbia, for some Lizards. Thanks to CAGE BIRDS for past favours.

Blackbirds' Battle with Rats.

In walking along the side of a Derbyshire trout stream recently, a local naturalist was surprised to see a large water rat making an effort to secure the eggs of a Blackbird from a nest built at the bottom of a willow. "For some time," he states, "I watched the rat being attacked by a couple of irate 'Blackies,' and each time he swam towards the nest he was attacked by the birds, whose angry cries aroused the whole of the birds in the adjoining plantation. I examined the nest later in the evening, and I found that the whole of the eggs had been removed. There can be little doubt that in this particular case the Blackbird had been defeated by the rat, and those who believe that this little waterside animal is more useful than otherwise are mistaken in their belief."

A Poetic Appeal.

The show's arranged in such a way it's certain to attract;
We want to please our patrons, while their money we extract.
We avoid the word that may offend, with stewards full of tact;
And ye'll not be pressed to buy nowt, let me tell you for a fact.

Arranged inside are the finest birds that have come from every part.
Don't hesitate, come right inside, ye'll not know where to start.
We've got some lovely Hybrids, quite the rarest in the land;
So come and sport a "tanner" on the show that's simply grand.

The above very appropriate, if not exactly classical lines, greeted visitors to the Miners' Hall, Sunderland, on the occasion of the society's last annual show. They were attached to a large board 5 or 6 feet square, covered with CAGE BIRDS coloured plates, hung over the main entrance. The author of the lines does not wish his identity to be disclosed, having no desire to be nominated for the Poet Laureateship, as his poetic instincts can only be awakened by such an occasion as a big bird show.

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," illustrated magazine, or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies spending not less than 10s. 6d. in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries taking advantage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate-money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

Secretaries should note that we can print at very favourable rates, show schedules, posters in colours, and ornamental prize-cards. Send for samples and prices.

THE MOULTING SEASON.

The problems of the moulting season will very shortly be confronting all bird breeders. A successful moult is essential to every bird; to the show bird it is of supreme importance.

Are you prepared with that expert knowledge which alone can ensure that your stock will come through the moult in vigorous condition, with plumage fitting with wax-like tightness, and glossy as finest satins and silks?

A bird that lags behind in the moult and is weeks longer than it ought to be in getting rid of the old plumage and growing the new, is surely sapping its vitality and can never brighten its owner with cheerful song during the autumn and winter months, while its success in the breeding-cage the following season may even be prejudiced.

This period is even more critical for the show bird, and especially the bird that must be colour-fed—"red hot," too—to stand any chance of success.

Luckily every bird breeder has an expert guide at hand. Turn to page 503 of this issue, and you will find an announcement of a book which will solve every problem for you, and teach you to moult your birds with a quickness, certainty and success that even the cutest old hand can hardly exceed. Write for your copy of "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds" to-day, and be prepared; don't let the moult beat you! A free gift of an expensive and instructive model of a Canary awaits every purchaser. Write to the Waverley Book Co., Ltd., 7, 8, and 9, Old Bailey, London, E.C., and mention CAGE BIRDS when doing so.

COUNTRY RAMBLES.

Fanciers are welcome to join in any of these rambles, whether members or not. June 21, Middlesbrough and Tees Side C.B.S. to Hulton Rugby, 9.30 a.m. from headquarters. June 20, Wibsey and Dis. C.B.S. to Harden Beck. Meet at the bottom of Sunbridge Road, 2.15, for Allerton car. June 20, Bradford West C.B.A., to Luddendenfoot. Meet at Four Lanes' End, 2.30 p.m. Edinburgh C.B.S. and Juniper Green F.A., June 27, to Riccarton Estate. S. Shields C.B.S., June 28, to Morpeth (time and place of meeting not given.—Ed.). Southampton C.B.S., July 15 to Rufus Stone, New Forest.

Wild-Bird Life.

Hawfinches among the Peas

After quite a period of drought we have been fortunate enough to get a sprinkle of rain in the night. Looking at the Starlings quartering the meadowland, one can easily see how they appreciate the change. A wet night causes the worms and slugs to come to the surface, where the birds easily secure them. During a long time without rain many insectivorous birds fare badly, for although they do not starve, they miss their staple food, and have to turn their attention to anything that will form a good meal. Every little corner in one's garden that is at all likely to be damp is diligently searched by the larger birds, and where one is in the habit of watering a few seedling plants, the birds dig deep holes in search of worms and slugs, and any kind of fruit is raided by the boldest. It is very doubtful if the smaller Warblers feel this stress, during a long period of drought, for although many of these birds feed upon small worms and caterpillars, yet insect life forms their chief food, and this is generally more abundant in fine, warm weather than during a rainy time.

The young Hawfinches have been busy among my neighbour's peas. Not being a birdy man, he attributed the damage to the Blackbirds and Thrushes. If one has once seen examples of the Hawfinches' work it is not difficult to recognise it again. One may wonder how the birds know that the toothsome peas are hidden within those long green jackets; there is nothing to indicate the kind of food enclosed. It is just possible they test the green pods as looking like something to eat, and thus find the contents, or they may be taught by their parents. Few birds are so shy as the Hawfinch, and it is generally in the very early morning when he visits the peas. It is doubtful if any of our homestead birds are so little seen as this bold fellow with the big beak. Many an orchard contains a pair, all unknown to the owner of the land, and it is fortunate that it is so, or Hawfinches would soon become as extinct as the Dodo.

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Goftbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

My Fuscous Honeyeaters:

This article is No. 44 of the new series entitled "Through a Birdroom Window," being personal birdy experiences.

Related by the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

SOME time ago I one morning received a letter from a birdy friend, telling me that he was at Port Said with a big consignment of foreign birds, and that if I wanted any I was to mark the list enclosed in his letter, and return it at once to London, where it would await his arrival. I gave a goodish order, and, among others, I marked some Fuscous Honeycaters, on the principle that though exceedingly rare they were absurdly cheap. Ten shillings the pair! I wondered how it could pay my friend to import them, as the food would cost nearly this sum.

I solved the problem by concluding that he was probably a philanthropist! I had not the least idea what they were like, whether big or small, pretty or plain. I only cared that they were rare. My friend assured me that they had never been imported into England before, and so being like the Athenians of old, always fond of some new thing, I determined to try my hand on Fuscous Honeyeaters. What their future would be, I did not stop to consider. It is really safer, if you have to walk on a tight rope across Niagara, to imagine that the Falls are not there. It's only by shutting my eyes, and going on day by day, that I get on at all.

Expectation and Realisation.

After about a fortnight, I got word that the birds were in the London Docks, and that I might expect them at any moment. Excitement ran to fever heat at Micklefield, and when one morning a porter was announced at the back door with a big cage of "live things" (this was the housemaid's way of putting it), I was not long in opening the store cage to see what it contained. I found out the Honeyeaters by the process known as elimination. There were two pairs of them; they seemed in the most perfect health, and in excellent plumage considering the long voyage from Australia.

My friend told me that they had been fed on some soft mixture during the voyage; but I was rather sceptical as to how long they would have continued to live had it been prolonged. I put them into a big box cage all to themselves, and gave them a nice roomy bath. They at once took the treat with great apparent thankfulness, and were soon busy making their toilet, and seemed all the better for it, as they were rather messy after their long journey.

My next care was the food. I had no idea what Honeyeaters lived on in Australia, save that I had read in some book that they haunted eucalyptus trees when in full bloom, but as eucalyptus trees were not indigenous to Yorkshire I had to consider ways and means. I was not at all troubled. I have muddled through so many tight places somehow, like the British Army. I had never been in such a tight place before, except when I got a consignment of Musky Lorrikeets; but I said to myself, I'll wedge through somehow, like a cat through a chink in a barn door. The Honeyeaters looked something like Zosterops; so I thought I would try them with egg flake. They went for this fairly well: but they did not keep as tight in feather as I like my birds to be. Next, I tried bananas. They appreciated these up to a point; but still I knew the food did not quite suit them.

What's in a Name?

I then thought of their name—Honeyeaters! But then I had read such sad accounts of what honey did to birds that I hesitated to try it. However, I thought, it's practise not theory that works, perhaps practise is better without theories, better than theories that are never practised. Having settled this much I sent one of my children down to a college where they keep bees, with a request for a jar of their best new honey. In fear and trembling, I hung a small glass phial on the bars of the cage, and it was really laughable to see the way in which the poor little beggars went for the sweet stuff. They were down almost before my hands were out of the cage, as much as to say: Why in the world didn't you think of this before?

As I filled that little jar with honey I really quaked with fear. Suppose that I killed them; there were no more Honeyeaters to be got to replace them! I said to myself, now, my friend, remember Cranmer, or whoever it was, who said in the flames, "Play the man"—and I did it. Now, honey is the only food they care for. They have egg flake, but it is despised; banana, but it goes untouched. It is a pretty sight to see first one and then another settle on the jar and insert their long tongues in the savoury mess.

I was so elated at my success that I actually dared to dream of a nest; but romance is like the rainbow, always a little way from the place where you stand. Unfortunately it was so in this case, as you will hear later.

Most people would, if left to themselves, write off to all their birdy friends to come and see their latest novelty. It is a great mistake. Never press your aviaries on other people. Nine hundred and ninety-nine people out of every thousand don't care twopence for other people's birds, though they may all pretend to out of politeness. The thousandth will find his way to them and be much happier going round them alone. It was so in the present case.

A Friend to Cherish.

I happened to be out one day when a friend called, and being a privileged person he did not await my return, but went and spent a happy hour looking at my aviaries; and when I got home I found him standing in rapture before the Honeyeaters, and he would not rest content until I had registered a solemn vow that if ever I did want to sell a pair I would give him the first refusal. My friend is one of those rare spirits that can rejoice in another's success.

"There are werry few in this world," as Mr. Brown said, "as wouldn't rather 'ear of your troubles than of your good luck; why it's 'uman nature to 'ate everyone to be better off than yourself." My friend was the exception. I am sure he was quite as pleased to see those Honeyeaters in my possession, as if he had owned them himself.

After I had kept the Honeyeaters for quite a long time, misfortune overtook me, for one morning when I went to the birdroom to feed, I, to my great sorrow, found one of the birds lying, as a delicately-minded lady once said "lying on the front of its back." What had caused the death there was nothing to show. The body was fat and well nourished, and every feather in place. I could only bring in a verdict of death from natural causes. After all, people sometimes die; why not birds?

The three remaining birds were in beautiful condition. They went all through a long and bitter winter in a perfectly cold room where the water in the cage froze each night into a solid mass of ice, but they did not appear to suffer a bit. I rather feared they would all go off, as they are very thinly covered with feathers. We had 25 degrees of frost.

They are wonderfully tame little things, and reminded me of the man who was asked if he did not fear. "Fear," he said, "I don't know him." They will let me put my face quite close to the bars of the cage, without attempting to stir. I think this is a very high testimonial to my good looks!

Regular Water Nymphs!

In shape they are very graceful, and about twice as big as Zosterops. The back is yellow, tipped with rose colour, the eyes dark brown, encircled with a little yellow rim; the legs and feet are lead colour, the head, back, wings, and tail a pretty soft sort of olive green. Under the wing butts is a patch of saffron, darker in the cock than in the hen. Each of the birds has on the cheek a little bunch of side whiskers. Their call note is peep, peep, peep, repeated rather rapidly. They are intensely fond of bathing; and the moment they get dry they take another plunge and begin everything de novo.

You will remember that one of the Honeyeaters died. This left me with a cock and two hens; always a very awkward combination. The two hens reminded me of the young lady, who when she heard of St. Paul's uninspired opinion, that those who were married did well, but that those who remained unmarried did better, answered that she did not want to do better—but well! The cock, I think, would have been quite happy with both, but this I knew was out of the question. If they were left together, I foresaw what actors call "a short scene." When the weather got fairly warm I determined to turn the birds out in a small garden aviary in company with some Zosterops I happened to have at the time. The Zosterops had been out all the winter so I felt no great fear about the Honeyeaters. How they did enjoy themselves that first morning among the growing shrubs, and how every branch and leaf was tested for the hidden nectar.

In the cage the Honeyeaters had behaved like Darby and Joan; they were always sitting side by side and snuggling up to each other with little nudges, just like an engaged couple at Scarboro', but in the aviary all was different. Nothing that that cock could do or think of was right; the hen became a veritable little fury.

THE HOOPOE.

The Hoopoe is a graceful, quaintly-marked species, its crest, erected and depressed at will, being a conspicuous feature. The flight of the bird is curiously butterfly-like. The Hoopoe is a frequent visitor to our shores, and examples are often exhibited at the shows. It has nested with us on several occasions, which would have been far more numerous but for the deplorable way in which it is usually shot on sight.

They say that marriages are made in Heaven; but I often think of what an old man I know remarked of a married neighbour, who was a harassed, worried-looking person. Some one spoke of marriages being made in Heaven and Job remarked that the idea allus bested him when he saw such a couple as Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So. But after a few minutes thought his face brightened with a sudden idea. Mayhap, he said, the Almighty was looking t'other way. I think it must have been so in this case, or else by mistake I had chosen the wrong hen. At any rate nothing would give that poor cock a minute's rest; so I caught her ladyship and turned out her rival.

The Chicks that take longest to hatch.

The cock at first seemed afraid to trust his good fortune, and came up towards the new arrival, soft as the wife when the baby has just dozed off to sleep. Day after day I watched these birds flitting gaily about their enclosure; but I could see no signs of a nest anywhere. Of course, I didn't dare go inside and look; but one can generally tell without doing that if one has experience. Perhaps I was anxious; as Mrs. Poyser said once, "It's your dead chicks that take the longest to hatch."

About the time when I thought they ought to be nesting it came on to rain in torrents. To the statement "that a dripping June puts all in tune" should be exempted the plain person's temper. My temper fairly gave out. What chance would a flimsy little nest have in such a torrential downpour, even if it existed? Hope in an aviary is almost as helpful a companion as certainty; but there are limits even to hope, and when it went on raining day after day for about a month my hopes sank to zero. Of course, I knew too late what I ought to have done. I should never have turned these birds out, but kept them in a nice dry birdroom. There is no easier way to cure foolishness than to give a man leave to be foolish. And the only way to show a fellow that he's chosen the wrong business is to let him try it.

One's Time and Trouble.

Too late, I saw my error. I caught up the birds and replaced them in the birdroom, but after their many drenchings they seemed to grow sarcastically resigned to what I felt they regarded as my mismanagement; and as a punishment they utterly refused to attempt to perpetuate their kind. A friend came to see me about this time and I told him of my trouble. I got no comfort. "Why," he said, "it's been such weather that you wouldn't meet a Christian out of doors, unless he was a Snipe or a dispensing doctor." What could I say? I felt like Lord Melbourne. Being pressed to do something for a journalist on the ground that he always supported his lordship when in the right, Melbourne replied: "That's just when I don't want his help. Give me a fellow who will stick by me when I am in the wrong."

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

IF this device fails, then the young should be placed in the next compartment, and the wire slide placed between them and the hen, or if this is not convenient they may be put into a small cage, and hung on the front of the breeding cage; the hen will continue to feed them through the wires. Egg food, water, and a little crushed hemp, or crushed groats, should be placed fresh each day, or oftener if required, in the cage with the young birds. While the hen is finishing with the young birds she will also be busy with her new nest, and the cock should be placed with her again, to remain until she commences to sit, or only for a short period each day as previously advised.

When the youngsters have ceased crying to be fed, they should be put into a large cage, until they are able to crack rape seed easily, then they can take their places in the flights amongst the older youngsters. It is not advisable to place them immediately from the breeding cage into the company of older birds in the flights, because the last named probably will not have their egg food so rich as the younger ones, further, they would not get a sufficient quantity of food, as the older ones would be "top dog."

When they lose Mother.

The food required for the young birds when removed from the hen to the large cage will be egg-food; this should be given at first three times a day, morning, noon, and night, in such quantities that one lot will be cleared up by the next feeding time. Fresh clean drinking water must be given daily, either inside or outside the cage, in the same manner as supplied to them before they were removed from the breeding cage. If used to inside drinkers, continue with them, and also hang one on the outside of the cage until they are conversant with its use, then discontinue giving it inside the cage. A small quantity of crushed hemp and groats should be prepared fresh each day. A hopper containing rape seed can also be hung on the cage front. This will help to get them used to the head-holes.

The beginner in the Roller Fancy will learn to distinguish the majority of the cocks from the hens sooner than he would do in those varieties which have a distinct buff and yellow in both sexes, or again, where it is customary to colour feed while in the nest. Of course it should be understood that cases will crop up that puzzle the experienced Roller Canary breeder in distinguishing the sexes, as he is not infallible. Instinct is often brought to bear on the subject, there is that unexplainable something about some birds that enables the fancier to discriminate, when all outward signs such as colour, size, shape, and carriage may be at variance.

I do not trouble to sex my youngsters before they leave the nests, then I rely chiefly on the colour as a guide, as at this age many young birds of both sexes will commence a low warbling song. This is not so sure a sign as it will be when they get a bit older, say about ten or twelve weeks old, then there is a difference in the birds' attitude when going over the song. The cock sings with his head raised and straight forward, showing plenty of neck, whereas the hen sits with her head, so to speak, between the shoulders, and just raises the head to sing a short song of two or three notes, with the call note often intervening, and ending the attempt, then she lets her head fall back again.

When they are about three or four weeks old there will be, to an experienced eye, quite a contrast in the colour of the sexes, even in the light-coloured birds. It may be fairly safe to sex as cocks those showing the deepest yellow colour, especially on the head, neck, throat, breast feathers, and on the flanks or sides. Here the hens are, as a rule, very pale in colour. The feathers on the lower part of the breast and stomach in the cocks often shade to a paler hue; but the feathers on the hen's rump will often be as rich in colour as those around the head of a cock bird.

Arriving at the Sex.

In the variegated birds the feathers on the head and neck, etc. of the cock will be a deeper colour, and any lighter coloured feathers intervening, which go to make the term variegated, will be yellow, standing out quite conspicuously against the brown and pale buff feathering in the hens. The self-coloured dark birds are the most difficult to sex from a colour point of view. In these green cocks (we call them green, yet it is a poor tone to the lover of the Yorkshire or Norwich Greens) the body colour is more solid, often with a tinge of yellow showing, either throughout the body, or only in those places named in the clear and variegated birds. The hens resemble the colour of a young Linnet before it shows that nutty brown so much admired by the Linnet fancier.

When about six or seven weeks old the birds should be eating the rape seed freely, and the crushed hemp seed can be gradually reduced, until it is excluded from the diet. A few crushed groats, say half-a-teaspoonful to each bird, can be given twice a week, until they are able to break the whole ones. Then the quantity found in the mixed seed, which will be given to them a few times a week, will be quite sufficient.

Up to this time the young birds have been receiving egg food composed of four biscuits to an egg, and where it is convenient, say in the case of the number of birds being over thirty, the egg food can now be reduced in quality to five bisenits to the whole of an egg. My aim throughout has been to recommend the simplest methods, consistent with efficiency and economy. But in the event of a smaller number of birds it would be advisable to continue with the old method, or it would mean a waste of food, as it would become stale before it could be used. Neither is it advisable to give larger quantities than those laid down, as too much egg food is likely to upset the stomachs of young birds.

When they are well on seed, which means when they are eating the rape seed freely, and the crushed hemp has been excluded from the diet, the birds can be transferred to the flight cages. The quantity of egg food previously allowed can now be gradually reduced with safety until each bird is receiving barely half-a teaspoonful per day. This quantity can then be allowed to each bird of both sexes, right up to the time of completing the moult.

To Prevent Confusion.

It is advisable for those who discriminate between the sexes by the colour to place the cocks and hens into separate flights. If this is not convenient the hens can be marked either by an open ring, or a coloured celluloid ring. This is to prevent any confusion taking place afterwards, as the light coloured plumage in many of the hens undergoes a change during the moult, becoming more yellow and equal to that of many of the cocks. The hens can remain in the flights in the breeding room until they are required in the breeding cages the following year. The flight cages containing the young cocks are better out of the breeding room, as it would be detrimental to the earlier bred ones to hear for any length of time the song of the stock cocks, or a singing hen. It is not unusual for hens to sing when finishing feeding a nest of youngsters, and before going to nest again with the next clutch of eggs.

After transferring them to the flights I place the cocks on a staple diet of rape seed, varying the allowance to each bird by half-a-teaspoonful of condition seed and one half a teaspoonful of mixed seed three times a week; in addition I give a bare half-a-teaspoonful of egg food to each bird once per day, substituting a small piece of bread and milk—say a piece about the size of a sugar cube to two birds—for the egg food once per week. The young hens are treated exactly the same as the young cocks, with this exception, their staple diet consists of canary and rape. A little care should be exercised in giving baths to young birds; one may be given beneficially on fine warm days, and then as a precaution the chill should be taken off the water. The young birds can be kept on this treatment until the moult is nearing completion, which can be ascertained by the pen feathers around the head and neck, as the feathers on these parts are usually the last to be moulted.

A Recipe for Egg Cake.

For various reasons I discountenance the use of a substitute for egg food while the hens are feeding the young, my chief argument being that young birds thrive better on boiled fresh egg, mixed with crushed biscuits, but now the youngsters are in the flights, a little home made sponge-cake can be given occasionally in place of the egg food. A wholesome and nutritious cake can be made by adding to the weight of an egg equal weights of sugar, flour, and butter. Blend all the ingredients well together and bake in a sharp oven for ten minutes. When cold it can be crumbled, and be kept in a good state of preservation in an air-tight tin for a couple of weeks.

Correspondence.

The Mating of Canary with Bullfinch.

SIR,—For the last two or three years I have been trying to get fertile eggs from a large British hen Bullfinch and cock Canary. In the season of 1912 the hen laid 19 eggs, all unfertile, and last year 17, again all unfertile. Since the beginning of this year, I have had a large young cock Canary (bred 1913) in with the hen, and this morning she has laid her third egg. Both birds are in good health, agree well, and the cock is the best singer I ever had. The cock has been with the hen all the time. I should be glad if any of your numerous readers will kindly tell me if I should stand a better chance of getting fertile eggs if, now the hen has laid, I take the cock away and only run him in with her occasionally. Any other hints will be greatly appreciated.

An Experience with a Peregrine Falcon.

SIR,—Reading in CAGE BIRDS recently of a reader's experience with a Sparrow Hawk, it may interest your readers to know of mine with a Peregrine Falcon. While on the outskirts of Liverpool (Walton) watching some bird catchers at work, I was surprised to see in the distance a pair of Hawks. Knowing the Sparrow Hawk well, I knew these to be something different. I watched them for a considerable time. They at times seemed to be almost stationary in the air. They passed to the other side of a small plantation. A few minutes afterwards I was surprised by the sweep of a pair of big wings past me from the back, the bird making for the nets, and pouncing upon the cage of a hen Chaffinch. I shouted and threw my stick at it. It still clung to the cage until I was almost on top of it. The catcher having got over his amazement pulled the line on it and came running up. He made a pounce upon it in the excitement of the moment, and was rewarded with a sharp jab in the fleshy part of the hand. The Hawk was fighting and tearing away at the nets. I eventually held it down by the head, and caught it by the flights and tail. It made bold attempts to reach my hand. It was a very fine specimen, measuring about 18 inches. I believe a lady in the neighbourhood has it at present, and that it has become a great pet, coming out of its cage on her finger. The Chaffinch was none the worse for its experience.

A Remedy for Colds in Parrots.

SIR,—I note that this appears to be a very trying time of the year for Parrots catching cold, but I have never seen you advise my remedy. I have had and lost a dozen parrots, but to one I had a specialist, and a stiff price I paid him; for an extra 2s. 6d. he gave me a bottle one inch long with a sprinkler. Well, as soon as I smelt it I knew what it was. It now costs me 2d.! It is creosote, or oil of tar. I put twopennyworth on the sand and cover the cage over with an old skirt at night, and next day the Parrot is all right. Any one is welcome to know this. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success. Please don't think I am trying to teach you your business, but I have thoroughly tested this.

The Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C. Trophies.

SIR,—Can I trouble you for space to ask when the officials of the above society intend to award me the cup won, as second prize, for last year (1913)? I have seen the report published in CAGE BIRDS some time ago that the other cups had been given out, and that I was to have an oil painting. I wrote to the secretary, asking for a cup, as per rules, at the same time pointing out that I had honestly competed as an amateur abiding by the M.C.Y.C. Club Rules, and asking that the officials might do the latter. The rule distinctly states that a cup shall be awarded to the member with the most points, also that a cup of less value shall be given to the second highest, and a medal for the third prize. I consider it is an injustice to offer an oil painting without knowing if the same was acceptable to the member or not. As mentioned before, I have written to the secretary, but he has never replied.

Late Song of the Cuckoo.

SIR,—There must be hundreds of observers in the British Isles who record the earliest appearances of immigrant birds, such as the Cuckoo, the Swallow, and the Nightingale; but, judging from the meagre response in your columns re the Nightingale, very few who record late dates for the songs of such of these birds as sing. When does the Cuckoo cease to utter his call? Two late records I have in my diary are July 6, 1907, and July 7, 1909, on the latter of which dates his utterance of the word "cuckoo" was distinctly broken.

REV. G. H. RAYNOR.

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

Sir,—In answer to your correspondent, "Philomel," re Nightingale's song, a great deal depends upon circumstances as to when the song ceases. Generally speaking, the song is over by the end of the first week in June—that is, as soon as the young are hatched. Adult hens go to nest a week sooner than young hens, consequently the song ceases a week sooner. Nightingales sing at their best during incubation, as by that time the food becomes more plentiful, and the birds are in better condition. Nightingales only have one nest, providing it is not disturbed, but should the eggs be destroyed or taken, they will as a rule go to nest a second time, and in that case the bird will sing to the end of June or first week in July. I know of two cases at the present time where the eggs have been taken by egg collectors, and the birds have gone to nest again. I was in a district recently where there are dozens of pairs, and have made them my special study for twenty years.

J. JEFFREY.

SIR, -In answering your correspondent re the singing of 'Gales at largo, on which I have had a fair amount of experience, I essayed my opinion on the song in captivity, with which I have had no experience, although, as stated, I am hoping to.

Mr. Bent says I am only speaking for myself, but this is not so, as in this district a good number are annually trapped and the percentage that sing again would not reach higher than I stated. I do not need the salt Mr. Bent mentions to accept his statements, as my respect is great for opinions different from my own, and although it seems remarkable that Mr. Puck never fails to get them to sing within seven days of being caught (very different indeed from my own experience), yet I can accept the statement without being at all sarcastic.

I notice Mr. Williamson finds them very difficult to get on song, also what does our British expert and adviser, Mr. Norman, say on page 482, col. 2 of the last issue? "You are particularly lucky if you get one to sing moderately well; in confinement many refuse to sing at all." This must read funny to Mr. Bent, also Mr. Puck, who have been treated to so much song!

As I have stated, a large number are caught here and in giving my opinion I have taken into consideration the number that die from various causes, and I don't know if Mr. Bent obtains his 'Gales first hand or on food, but I should like to ask him this question: Why do experienced soft-bill trappers seize the chance to sell their cock 'Gales at 2s. or 2s. 6d. each directly they are caught rather than keep them ten days and make 7s. 6d. or 10s. of them?

We are all after money more or less, and I can easily answer the above question from a much wider range of experience than my own. The same trappers can and do keep their other birds such as Redstarts, Shrikes, etc., and make a fair price of them, but I have found it the same with 'Gales, as after treating exactly as advised by Mr. Puck the best of results do not always follow. I have not kept nearly so many at a time as Mr. Bent owing to lack of time, two being my limit, and the only difference is in my belief, luck; some fanciers can do nothing wrong, others try all their lives with little success; but "Nothing venture, nothing have" is my motto.

A Pure White Hedge Sparrow.

Sir,—I have pleasure in writing to your valuable paper, Cage Birds, about a wonderful bird I got on the 10th June, viz., a pure white Hedge Sparrow, or "dikie," as it is called here. Can any other fancier come up to this? The bird is still doing well.

Peace and War.

Sir,—Of the Sparrow Clubs in Newmarket and District, the Isleham branch, the meetings of which are held at the Griffin Hotel, has only been opened about three weeks, and we have a good record already. In the first week we killed 165 dozen, in the next fortnight we killed 300 dozen, a total of 465 dozen Sparrows in three weeks, and we are still killing them. Mr. J. Fenn, the well-known bird catcher, of Isleham, has shown the club many points which they have thanked him for. At our concert last week we were all very pleased our worthy host, Mr. George Sheldrake, had engaged Mr. Harry Allen (Leeds) to entertain us. Mr. Allen is a humorist second to none, and fairly brought down the house. Altogether Mr. Allen sang nine songs. We were also pleased with our talented piano player, who gave selections during the evening. It was the best "smoker" ever held at Isleham, and all are looking forward to our next.

Song Thrushes Breed Under Curious Circumstances.

Sir,—I have a place of business, No. 383, Harehills Lane, Leeds, and it is open all day up to 11 p.m. In the cellar directly under the shop I reared four Thrushes last year from nestlings. They are so tame that they even allow my dog to pass about them when they are on the floor and never take the least notice. This season I noticed the two hen birds taking bits of rag, straw, etc., up on to the iron girder so I placed some damp clay in a heap on the floor and other likely material for them to build with. They have both built and one had three eggs. I sold the cock bird from this pair and the hen straightaway forsook the nest. The other hen is, however, sitting on the nest, and the cock bird sometimes takes a turn on the nest. His favourite place is on the gas bracket on the wall and when the gas is lit at night it never seems to affect him in the least. I should like to hear if it is an unusual occurrence for them to breed in captivity. I am willing to allow anybody interested to see them. Since writing the above the eggs have hatched, result three young ones.

J. Boddy.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Sir,—"Yellow Green's" reply is just what I expected from him. He has answered neither my question nor my arguments, and weakly retorts that he fails to see how the closed ring is to put down dishonesty. Both he and "Buff Green" are careful to inform us that they are anxious to prevent fraud, and if this be the case it passes my comprehension to understand why they are against the rings. Admit if you like that some fanciers buy birds in the nest, but no one will argue that they can pick winners in the nest. "Yellow Green" in his former letter states that he cannot pick his winners until they have moulted, and all sensible fanciers will agree with him. There is no doubt at all that the closed ring will prevent a member of the club from buying or borrowing a good bird which he discovers in a fancier's room, or at a show, and thereafter exhibiting it as his own breeding. This exactly meets the case of the Musselburgh dealers quoted by "Yellow Green," and also the man referred to by "Sunny Leith." Can either of these parties deny it? And yet "Yellow Green" prates about his anxiety to prevent dishonesty! It is a poor argument to state, which "Yellow Green" practically does, that the rings are useless because they will not discover all cases of dishonesty. They will prevent 90 per cent. of these cases, and for this we should be thankful. The remaining 10 per cent. who are determined to cheat at all costs will have a good deal of trouble to grain their end, and, what is very important, no certainty of gaining it. They may require to buy twenty young birds in the nest, and perhaps not a winner after all. This practice I think, they will soon tire of.

Buff Green No. 2.

Sir,—"Buff Green No. 2's" reply to Mr. Allison is quite to the point. Further, as I said in one of my previous letters, some will get the lesson that "Sunny Leith" has learned before the season is out. Like "Sunny Leith," I fail to see how the closed ring scheme is to put down dishonesty. That is the very point I would like made clear to myself and others. The reply that "Buff Green No. 2" gives does not enlighten me a bit. He says "If John Smith exhibits a bird with a ring issued to Tom Jones, it does not require much perception to arrive at the conclusion that there has been some fraudulent practice." That is all very well if the S.P.C. will have every bird handled, and its number taken, then it is quite simple to know who rung the bird. I hope they do this, but it will be a serious business unless they employ an expert (not some of these chaps who put themselves out as experts). I hope the committee will make it known to the members who is to handle the birds, then members will know what to expect. It is no use putting our Norwich Plainheads on the same level as Crests, as far as handling goes, for no doubt "Buff Green No. 2" knows as well as I do that Crests are accustomed to being handled regularly, which, of course, makes all the difference. I shall endeavour to be present when the club show is judged, so I can learn what at present I do not know. I got an eye-opener when I read "Yellow Green's" letter, that only 40 voted out of a membership of 160. Surely something needs rectifying. Did the secretary let the whole of the members know the result of the voting; if not, why not?

The Treatment of Live Stock by Railway Companies.

Sir,—I wish to call the attention of the Fancy to the callous way in which live stock is treated by the railway companies. On June 12th I sent an Airedale puppy, sold through an advertisement in Cage Birds, to a gentleman at Blackwood, Mon., where it arrived almost dead, after being on rails just 25½ hours without water. The journey could have been managed easily in eight hours; but no, the animal could not speak, neither could it "tip," hence it is left to scorch in the sun and nearly die from thirst. Could not your readers help by petitioning the local members to introduce a bill penalising the companies for every hour they are over the ordinary passenger time in the transit of live stock? I consider the rate is quite high enough now to ensure more promptitude.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

Sir,—I ask your indulgence to correct Mr. Allsopp. He appears to mistake my meaning. If I remember aright I used the words "to humour the novice, cajole him, but don't scold him." There is nothing cryptic in the sentence, nothing that need reduce Mr. Allsopp to that state of mind that is "too delightfully funny for words." I used the word "humour" in its verb active sense, but he appears to have read it in its substantive sense. To humour a novice doesn't necessarily mean that one must treat him humorously. What I mean to say, and what I think everyone but Mr. A. would have understood me to say, was that a novice should be led rather than driven. There is a certain element of obstinacy or mulishness in us humans, and when it comes to a matter of hobbies we refuse to be driven; we prefer to be led, to be humoured. But Mr. A. resorts to scourging, not with whips and scorpions, but with bitter satirical criticism. In other words, his medicine—to apply his own metaphor—is a form of forcible feeding, while mine would take the form of "humouring" their palates with the choicest viands. There is a difference between being humorous and humouring people. I would like to avail myself of Mr. Allsopp's kind invitation to Cardiff, but his reference to the possibility of my not getting back suggests that the Welsh people have a way of treating offenders of their dignity in a manner that isn't either "sweetly simple" or "too delightful for words," but irregular and highly effective. He needn't be afraid for me. All they want is humouring. I know the Welsh! I sleep with one!

T. Johnson.

Sir,—This correspondence is now becoming very interesting, and should be of great value to the genuine novice who, notwithstanding all Mr. Allsopp's arguments, is still the backbone of the Fancy, as it exists to-day. We all know the hoary-headed novices Mr. Allsopp has in mind; they were flourishing long before Mr. Allsopp came to Cardiff. In the words of Kipling we shall have to take him as we find him, and let this kind of novice go on striving for the legs of mutton, etc., until the butcher tumbles, or he is given the go-by and compelled to come out in the open if he is over 16 (which he was, perhaps, about 40 years of ago). The great question is: Can a man who is always prepared to sell his best specimens at a long price, with justice throw bricks at the novice who wants to win a leg of mutton (this is not meant as a conundrum). Personally I have bred and exhibited a few good birds that were able to win practically when they were asked, but never have sold a bird that could win. I always had too much love for same, in spite of tempting offers.

What happens (?) in the Bird-room when you leave home for the week-end.

What is the Secret of Keeping Goldfinches?

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent George Lofthouse I would say at once that there is, in my opinion, no secret. You want in the first place to get hold of healthy birds and not too young; a lot die from this cause alone. The best time to buy is the latter end of October or during November. Then also they will be fairly coloured. Put them in small "box" cages at first until steady and then in larger ones; being active birds they require plenty of room. The food should consist of canary and teazle in equal proportions with, say, half the quantity of hemp and niger (inga), and a little rape; and in winter add a little linseed. Once or twice a week to each bird a teaspoonful of wild seed mixture (you will see it advertised week by week) and now and then a very little maw seed. Green food in season ad lib, such as groundsel, wild chicory, cress and even lettuce leaves. Given healthy specimens they should thrive and do credit to their keeper if kept clean—floor sanded with sharp gritty sand, and not forgetting the bath.

Admirer of this Perky Finch.

Sir,—Kindly ask Mr. George Lofthouse, a correspondent re Goldfinches, to write to me, and I will try and fill his needs. I wish Cage Birds every success; it deserves it. I read "C.B." every week, and have done so for the last four years.

R. Worth.

11, New Pilgrim St., Murton Colliery, Durham.

Sir,—As a fancier and lover of the Goldfinch, I take the opportunity of replying to Mr. George Lofthouse. Of many birds I have caught this year I selected one dozen, and have not lost one. The majority I caught in February, as I do not believe in caging young. I feed on two parts hemp and one canary, always crushed. Groundsel I give liberally every day, and a small stool of young dandelion, as soon as you can get them in the spring, every two days. I like a cage 14in. by 12in. by 7in. The bath is most essential; some birds, of course, will not take it. Then spray them. After the birds have been caged a few months, put them on to a good Finch mixture, but add extra Canary. I feel confident if "G.L." follow this, he cannot go far wrong. He will always find something useful in your valuable, I might say indispensable, paper, Cage Birds.

Hubert Burchett.

What Can Its Parentage be?

Sir,—I see in last week's Cage Birds that some one claims in the Query Columns to have bred a Chaffinch-Canary Hybrid. I have an outdoor aviary and in it a Canary reared hen Chaffinch. I have now a young bird which I believe to be a Canary-Chaffinch Hybrid. I had a hen Canary sitting on five eggs and she hatched out three young. I saw the birds when hatched and did not see them again for about a week, when to my surprise I found one of them nearly ready to fly although the other two had only the feathers sprouting through the skin. I might say this young Hybrid left the nest last Friday, June 12th, and the other two are still in the nest and not quite fully feathered yet. The colour of this young bird is, head dark brown, neck and breast yellow, back brown, shoulder of wing dark green with a few white feathers like those of the Chaffinch and a little lower down a row of feathers cinnamon colour, flights black edged on inside with green, and tinged at ends with cinnamon colour, and the last two flights in each wing quite white, beak rather dark on top, yellow underneath.

W. Watson.

[We have recently heard of yet another reputed Chaffinch-Canary (the third) bred this season. We trust one or other of them may prove authentic.—Editor.]

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Ramble to Riccarton, Juniper Green, in conjunction with the Colinton and Currie O.S., takes place June 27. Travel by trains leaving Caly or Merchiston stations about 2.15 or 2.30. Party leaves Juniper Green at 3.15. Through the kindness of Mr. Napier, the general sec. of Colinton and Currie O.S., arrangements have been made for the party having tea, after ramble is over, at a very moderate charge. Members of Edinburgh Norwich Club invited, also other fanciers. All who intend going to the ramble might kindly drop a P.C. to Sec., when arrangements will be made with Mr. Napier regarding teas. —J. C. Charlton, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting held June 11, Mr. Havenhand (chair). This meeting was to have included a table show for novices. As we had insufficient entries, however, owing to our novices doing badly early in the season, we persuaded Mr. Browning, who should have judged, to give us a few hints. He took for his title, "Breeding Troubles," and a very interesting discourse it proved. Both the short lecture and the discussion that followed were very interesting and instructive. If it did one thing above another, it proved conclusively that as long as a man goes on breeding Canaries he must, to some extent, own to breeding "troubles." If he did not, the fascination of the hobby would lessen and the value of its product would become very small. A hearty vote of thanks, suitably responded to by Mr. Browning, terminated a pleasant meeting.—E. Johnson, Sec.

L.C.B.A.

General meeting, the "El Vino," June 9, Mr. John Robson (chair). Unfortunately the sec., Mr. Jas. Bray, jun., was unable to remain during the meeting, and Mr. Wallington ably took his place. Decided to hold the young bird show on July 11, at St. Margaret's School, Westminster, birds to be staged by 3 o'clock. Mr. John Robson judge. Silver-plated teapot for most points gained at the young bird annual, and pair show, presented by President, Mr. R. L. Crisp. Judging competition will also take place at this show. Mr. Wallington gave a lengthy report of the Federation dealing with their proposed scheme for formation of sub-committee in the provinces. Mr. C. Broughton nominated for membership. Chairman called upon Mr. Easterling for his lecture on the Yorks. Canary. He dealt most fully with this charming variety. Messrs. Wallington, Johnston, Dewhurst, Robson and Sayer ably assisted with the discussion which followed. Vote of thanks to lecturer closed a very interesting meeting.—F. Knight (Press Corres.).

LONGTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Roebuck Hotel, June 10; Mr. Filkin chair, pro tem. Vote of sympathy accorded to Mrs. Ratcliffe and family on the loss of her husband. Pro. by P. Barker, sec. by S. Dale, that Mr. Filkin become chairman in place of the late Mr. Ratcliffe. Pro. by S. Dale, sec. by Mr. James, that Mr. Davies become Vice-Chairman in place of Mr. Walker, who is not able to get to meetings. Pro. by Mr. Davies, sec. by Mr. Leese, that Mr. Leadbeater becomes a member. Will all members kindly attend next meeting, June 23, as it is very special; giving prize money and specials, and deciding about changing headquarters? F.F. S. held June 13, headquarters, Roebuck Hotel, 60 birds in all being staged, but what was lacking in quantity was made up for in quality, Messrs. Davies, Lockett, Leadbeater and Barker putting down some very fine British birds; Mr. J. Weaver, of Wolverhamptou, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NOR. YELL. (6): 1, sp, 3, 4, Leese; 2, vhc, hc, Filkin. BUFF (10): 1, sp, 2, 3, hc, c, Leese; 4, James; vhc, Davies. YORKS. YELL. (3): 1, 2, 3, Hale. BUFF (2): 1, 2, Locket. Davies, best Mule.—P. E. Barker, Hon. Sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Monthly meeting and first table show, held June 5, Mr. Sutton (chair). Mr. W. Hayes elected member. Decided to have N.F. show July 4, Mr. I. Hamsom, of Penketh, judge. Entries to be made at next monthly meeting, July 3. Awards of table show were in the hands of Mr. J. W. Jones (Yorks.), and Mr. Boots (Nor.), and we heard no grumbling. Most points were gained by Mr. Boots (Yorks.), Mr. Jones (Nor.), champion section Mr. Bate, and Mr. Pool in the novice section. Mr. Boots won the sp. for most entries.—E. Rone, Sec.

CITY & COUNTY OF PERTH O.A.

Monthly meeting held in Laidlaw's Hall, Leonard Street, June 8, Mr. A. Borrie (chair). N.F. show was moved by Mr. Carstairs and Mr. Crawford to be held June 27, at 2.30 p.m., in Laidlaw's Rooms; entry money 4d. each bird. Following classes: Nor., Buff, Crest, C.-B., Border Yell., Buff, Scotch Fancy, Yell., Mules and Hybrids, Brit. bird, Goldf. or Bullf., Linnet or Greenf., small Brit. Club show to be held Oct. 24, in Good Templars' Hall, King Street. Mr. Fullarton elected new member. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to Chairman.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

CINNAMON C.C.

Annual general meeting held Blackburn, May 21 and June 4. Present: Messrs. Bentley, Dorner, Roberts, Hartup, Tweddle and Sced. First item on agenda to be considered was resignation of Sec., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, who was compelled to give up the duty owing to pressure of business. Mr. Seed elected Sec. pro tem. We cannot see our way to guarantee classes at Bristol Exhibition Show, the distance being rather too great for the majority of our members. Decided to give patronage to Manchester, Plymouth, and our club show, Bradford National. Balance sheet passed as read. Thanks accorded our late sec., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe for services rendered. Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Aberdeen, elected a member. Spls. offered by Mr. S. Wilson, of Aberdeen, accepted with thanks. Voting papers will be sent out to all members for election of officers. I shall be very pleased to receive a few more applications for patronage, seeing we have only got three. Surely there are a few more show committees who would like to classify for us; all our members are willing to support where our patronage is given.—W. E. Seed, Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Committee meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, June 13, Mr. W. A. Gowgill (president) in the chair. Mr. J. Sykes (Leeds), and Mr. F. P. Terry (Bradford) admitted members. Following gentlemen elected on committee as representatives of the club for their respective districts: Mr. W. H. Hamlyn (Harrogate), Mr. E. Clegg (Dewsbury), Mr. T. Slater (Keighley), Mr. W. T. Furness (Sheffield), Mr. C. E. Hall (Leeds), and Mr. E. Stobart (Sowerby Bridge). Messrs. G. Snead and T. Tidswell elected auditors, and Messrs. S. Binns and S. B. Grayshon scutineers for the coming year. The club's patronage granted to following shows:—October 4, Halifax and Dis. C.B.S.; October 10, Bradford East O.S.; October 24, Shipley O.S.; October 30-31, Manchester and N.C.O.S.; November 6-7, Sheffield O.S.; November 14, Tong and Dis. C.B.S.; November 21, Bradford West and Manningham Amalgamated Show; Dec. 4-5, Bradford National; June 9, 1915; Gt. Horton O.S.; and sec. authorised to take one more show if applied to in good time. Decided that the competitions be run on similar lines to last year: Champion section, amateur section (in champion classes), and junior novice in novice classes at all Y.U. shows where the necessary Green-marked classes are provided.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, Mr. Johnston's Rooms, 6, The Broadway, June 15, the items including the arrangements for young bird show, July 6th, a judging competition, and a lecture on colour feeding. Mr. W. H. Stoakley presided, and there was a very good attendance. Three new members elected, and on the recommendation of the committee decided to again become affiliated to the London Federation of C.B. Societies, which has recently been reorganised, and to leave the appointment of delegates to the committee. The schedule for the young bird show, drafted by the committee, was adopted without alteration. For the judging competition which followed the birds were divided into three classes, Borders, Nor. and Yorks., the latter having no fewer than 21 entries. Mr. R. A. Newley was the final judge, and a silver spoon was gien for the best bird in each class, provided not less than six entries were made. The awards were as follows:—

BORD.: 1, 3, vhc, hc, Pegg; 2, c, Gossling. NOR.: 1, Smith; 2, 3, Birch. YORKS: 1, Davis; 2, vhc, c, Heath; 3, Smith; hc, Clarke. Eighteen members took part in the competition, and the points won were as follow:—Mr. C. E. Nash, 21, Pegg and Whiting 20 each, Harris 18, Smith 16, Bailey and Mrs. S. Farley 15 ea., Rogers 14, Mrs. Griffiths and P. Rorke 11 ea., Easterling 10, Alexander 9, Birch 7, Clarke and Davis 6 ea., Cooper 2. Following this competition Mr. F. Easterling gave the lecture on "Colour feeding."

ROYAL CORNWALL.

The Royal Cornwall Association held its annual show this year at Fowey on June 10 and 11. The cage birds had a nice marquee, but we were very sorry to see so small an entry; the smallest, in fact, for years. One regrettable thing occurred, the birds did not have any water until 2.30, and then were given this by the fanciers who came to see them. We were sorry to see one of the team of Hybrids shown by Mr. Collins looking very sick and sorry through want of water, but Mr. C. luckily came in time to doctor it. This is a serious thing, as fanciers who send their best exhibits from a distance ought to have them well looked after, and especially with regard to water in the summer-time, as they are very delicate. The special for best bird went to Messrs. Stephens and Gaved, with a Chough, shown in the best possible form. Mr. S. Tickell (Bodmin) judged.

NOR. CL. YELL. (2): 1, sp., Andrew, good type and quality, nice wings and tail, good colour; 2, Stephens and Gaved, close up, good head and neck. TKD. EAST ARDSLEY AND DIST. C.B.S.

Show was held at the Black Swan Hotel, June 13th, only British birds turning up, but they were a grand lot, some of the Leeds winners repeating their victories. Special mention might be made of Mr. Pyrah's Goldfinch, Linnets, and Twite, and Mr. Burnell's Greenies and Chaffinches. Mr. W. Morement, of Bradford, judged and gave entire satisfaction.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

YOUNG BIRDS ILL (Anxious Beginner).—Your method of feeding is scarcely correct, and is doubtless the cause of the young not thriving so well as they ought. Try the following method, and I think you will find them do better. Give a piece of stale bread the size of a walnut soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary. In addition to this give an unlimited supply of good sound canary seed in the seed-box, and on top of this put a pinch of summer rape each day. Give separately a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts cracked hemp, niger, teazle, and broken groats every second day, and on the alternate days a third of a teaspoonful of maw, and a small spray of seedy chickweed, or seed heads of dandelion, shepherd's purse, grass, or half ripe plantain stalks, if you can get the latter yet. Do not soak any of the seed, and instead of such succulent articles or green food as watercress, substitute a little banana if the things mentioned above are not obtainable. In the water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for one day only, and after this give twenty drops of Chemical Food daily for a week or so.

ALL TOES DEFORMED (P. D. R.).—Had you been handling the birds much, or trying to put rings on whilst they were young? If so, I should imagine the cause of such wholesale deformity in one nest was due to unskilful work of this description. Beyond this I can only suspect it is a congenital defect, in which case you might expect to find a similar effect in other broods from the same pair. All toes being affected in front makes treatment on any usual lines scarcely possible, so the best thing you can do is to remove the perches, and having bound the toes gently but securely to a small piece of card in a natural position, as you will find illustrated in Part 5 of "Our Canaries," let the birds hop about the floor for a fortnight in this condition, then remove the cards from the feet and put in a kind of cone-shaped perches, placed rather low down, and as conveniently placed as possible, taking care that they are securely fixed, and do not wriggle about when the birds attempt to go on them. To make these perches, make first a strip of soft wood half inch square, then trim off two adjoining angles so that you have a triangular strip; just shave off the sharp edges of these, and blunt the apex of angle a little, and the perches are ready to put in cage. Put them in with the wide part of the triangle downwards, and the apex pointing upwards for the birds to perch on. When these have been in a month or so, begin to remove them one at a time, and put in their places the round thin perches you have often seen described here, and later on gradually revert to the usual type of perch. Do not make the changes too quickly. It may be necessary to keep to these special perches over a period of six months or so in all.

AS FRESH AS NEW-LAID (D. F.).—The cause of the eggs appearing quite unchanged after being sat upon the full period of incubation was that they were not fertilised. The cause of this may be due to so many things that it is useless to speculate about it without full particulars of treatment, feeding, etc., and you give no atom of information on these points. The cock may have been out of condition temporarily, or the lack of fertilising power may have been due to no other reason than a sudden snap of cold weather occurring just at an inopportune moment. You should feed up the pair a little prior to going to nest again, by giving a little egg-food every day for a time, a little of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, chopped sunflower seeds, and broken groats, every second day, and give a young stem of growing dandelion fresh daily, or, in lieu of this, you may give a good supply of the seed heads of this plant. To prevent further mistakes get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d. post free.

TWO EGGS MISSING (E. Matthews).—Sorry, but I really cannot explain the mystery of the eggs' disappearance beyond saying what are the usual known causes of such phenomena. If a hen has access to nesting material after she has commenced to lay, it is not uncommon for her to go on adding material to her nest until all the eggs are laid, and, in consequence, one or two of the first laid eggs are buried out of sight in the bottom of the nest. You might carefully examine the nest to see if this is what has happened in your case. Then an egg may be flicked out of the nest when the hen leaves it at any time, especially if she flies direct off the eggs, as some hens do, instead of hopping on to the side of the nest first, as a quite careful hen will do; or they may be tossed out if the cock continues to "drive" the hen after she has commenced to sit. In either of these cases you would find the eggs, or the remnants of them, on the cage floor. If whole and apparently undamaged, return them to the nest, and probably no harm will accrue from the accident. Lastly, in exceptional cases both the cock and the hen are known to eat the eggs sometimes. This can only be proved beyond doubt by careful and patient watching. If the cock is the culprit, the remedy is to remove him and leave the hen to hatch out and rear the young by herself. If the hen is the delinquent, the only remedy is to transfer the eggs to another hen to be hatched out, and the young reared by her.

A THIRSTY SUBJECT (Novice, Leicester).—In addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of banana daily instead of green food, and withhold the latter for a time. In each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this daily for a week instead of plain water. After the first week give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a fortnight. If bird is not quite well in that time write again, referring to this reply, and I will advise you further.

A RASPING VOICE (Mr. Arthur).—All cock Canaries are not born to shine as songsters. The purity and timbre of the voice with them varies in individuals just as it does in the human race, and I should say that your bird is just one of those that are not endowed by Nature with a fine voice. As he has never sang, and yet remains in good health, as is shown by him filling clutches of eggs, it is not likely that any treatment will have any effect on the quality of his voice, so you had best be content with him as Nature has made him and not inflict useless treatment upon him.

WILL NOT SING (Downhearted Novice). Your feeding is not quite correct, and red millet is not at all suitable for Canaries. When millet is advised for any purpose, it should always be the white that is given. The constant moulting also points to the birds being kept either in a draughty situation or one where the temperature fluctuates a good deal, and either or both of these causes must be removed before you can expect the birds to be any better. Keep them in a bright and cheerful place, where the temperature is as equable as possible, which, in your situation, will be at a good distance from the fireplace. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition give separately half a teaspoonful of egg-food with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for two or three weeks. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, cole, and broken groats. Give a small growing stool of young dandelion daily, cut off just below the ground, and give to the birds whole. You may give a supply of the seed heads in addition to this. When giving dandelion seed heads, gather when the seed in them is well formed, and still in the milky stage, cut off the downy part with a pair of scissors, break the head in halves, and throw in the cage. In the drinking water add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel, every second day for a fortnight or so. It is useless treating the birds for lack of song. The song should come naturally soon after the moulting is stopped, and the birds are in good condition again, but it is doubtful if this will occur now until the birds have moulted properly for the year. It is also quite useless expecting them to breed whilst in this condition.

YOUNG BIRDS DYING (M. Sweetman).—I have no doubt that the cause of the young dying was the hen wanting to start nesting again too soon, and she was also evidently plucking the quills from the young. As the cock has been with her each time you should have removed him when she began to sit this time, and tried her alone. Many hens succeed well enough by themselves, even when they make a hash of things if they have the cock left to assist them. Remove him now if the young are not yet hatched. Give plain canary seed for staple diet. When the young are hatched begin giving egg and sponge cake in equal parts at first, and gradually alter this by easy stages until by the end of the first week you are giving soft food composed of equal parts egg, crushed sponge cake, and stale bread crumbs, and continue with this until the young are reared. Give only moderate quantities of soft food at a time, and supply fresh at least twice a day—three times would be better now the weather will be getting warmer. On the third day give a morsel of fresh green food—lettuce, watercress, chickweed, or the flowering tips of groundsel—but do not give any dandelion, and from this stage continue giving a little green food freshly gathered each morning and afternoon. When the young are eight or ten days old give a teaspoonful of cracked hemp daily, and a few days later you may also add a similar quantity of soaked rape daily, but see that the latter is not allowed to get sour. If the hen appears to flag in her duties offer her a bath in which you have dissolved as much common salt as will make the water faintly saline, dissolve a small crystal of sulphate of soda in the drinking water for a day or two, and add a pinch of maw seed to the soft food.

YOUNG YORKSHIRES MOPY (W. Farnes).—You do not say how you are feeding the birds, nor whether you have taken them away from their parents, though I take it you have done this, and in all probability the trouble is due to you either soaking seed for them or trying to wean them off soft food too suddenly. See reply to "Anxious Beginner" in this issue, and treat your youngsters in the same way, and I think you will find them improve in condition. Separate them from the parents, if you have not already done so, and keep in a moderate-sized cage until they are more active and lively.

A QUESTION OF MANAGEMENT (T. H. W. B.).—(1) Yes, you have done quite right in putting the young birds into a nursery cage, and returning the cock to the hen. As the young are three weeks old, and consequently well able to do without the hen, except for feeding, this was much better than leaving them in the breeding cage and introducing the cock among them. He may, or may not, have been spiteful towards them, but it is better to avoid any possible chance of such risk when the youngsters are as old as these. Keep a little egg food in the nursery, and also a box of canary seed, with a pinch of summer rape on top, so that they can learn to pick up for themselves. It is not very likely that the hen will wholly neglect them, and if she did the cock will probably see that they do not starve. As long as they are on the breeder they will doubtless be all right so far as getting enough food to keep them going is concerned. If they get a little short sometimes they will take no harm, and will learn to pick for themselves all the quicker. (2) No. 1 hen is not likely to be so long this time before going to nest again as she was with the first nest, but if she has not laid her clutch of eggs before it becomes imperative to mate up the second hen, you must allow the cock to run with each hen for one half of each day. Change him from one to the other at mid-day each day, and none of the eggs will suffer in fertility. Yes, the fertilising of the first clutch of this hen was rather quick work, but not at all exceptional when birds are in good breeding condition when mated.

SUCCES AT LAST (N. E. C.).—Am very glad to learn that by following advice given the Rollers are now doing so well, and truth the brood will be safely brought to maturity. (1) It is quite correct that the eyelids remain closed for some time after hatching—a week or so. The exact length of time depends upon the vigour of the birds and rapidity of development, but in all ordinary circumstances the eyes will appear somewhere between the sixth and tenth day. You are mistaken in thinking that they should appear almost at once after hatching. (2) It is quite safe to give nasturtium flowers to the birds when they are moulting. It is often done under the impression that it improves the colour of the new plumage without resorting to the orthodox method of colour feeding. (3) If the hen shows no signs of beginning to nest again you may allow the cock to remain with her until the young are out of the nest and beginning to make attempts to pick for themselves. Then remove the nest and all nesting material, which will tend to remove any desire to nest again on the part of the hen, and the birds may all be left together until the young can feed themselves, provided the hen does not ill-treat them. In the latter event, and also if she shows definite signs of wanting to nest again, take her away and leave the cock with the young to complete their rearing, which he will doubtless do quite well after they have left the nest.

ENCOURAGING (E. M. T.).—(1) Thanks for your letter. I am very glad to know that the Lizard has at last given you so much encouragement. As she is evidently of rather a fickle mood, I think it most likely that she shows partiality to the chicks that seem the strongest in the brood, which might easily account for her rearing only the two. All you can do in this matter is to endeavour to get all the eggs to hatch out in the shortest space of time, so that one has no unfair advantage of strength over the others. To do this you can only trust to removing the eggs as laid each morning, and keeping them properly stored in a small box of bran in a cool dry place, and giving them a half turn each day. Return them all on the evening of the third day. When the next brood is hatched, if she appears to neglect one or two of them, so that they perceptibly lose size, either hand feed these chicks once each morning and evening for a time, or give them to another hen having a brood about the same size, if such a one is available; the latter method for preference. Beyond this interfere as little as possible. (2) You may try putting a light cover over part of the cage front of the Roller hen that stays off her eggs for half an hour at a time. The extra seclusion and quietude may keep her more closely to her duties. You can do nothing else to prevent her gadding about if she is inclined that way. Still, you should always allow such hens to sit on their clutches the full time, as you will frequently find that after all the exposure has not been detrimental to the success of hatching out.

POOR LUCK (F. H. E.).—You certainly appear to have been unfortunate in your attempts at breeding so far, but if you followed closely the instructions in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," as you say, you should have met with more success than this, provided you have healthy stock to work with, and the lack of this does not appear to be the cause of your failure, so much as the loss of the young after they have reached some age, which should certainly be avoidable, if you followed the advice in the book as to general feeding and management. I am rather hampered by lack of details, as you should have given fullest particulars of your general treatment, and any symptoms shown by the birds prior to death. Try the following method when you transfer the next brood to the nursery, and if the birds then go wrong, write at once, and give all particulars, when I will advise you. After placing them in nursery continue giving the parents the usual egg food, and hang the young on the front of the breeder in such a position that the parents can reach them conveniently to feed them. Also keep a shallow box of egg food, mixed rather dry, in the nursery, for the young to pick at themselves, and renew this each afternoon. As soon as you see that the young are picking up a little of this food for themselves, add a box of canary seed, on top of which add a little summer rape, dry, each morning. Give nothing else in the nursery until you find the young beginning to eat the rape or canary; they will probably begin with the rape. Then add a water vessel with pure fresh water, for an hour or so for a few days, and gradually increase the time, until by the time they are ready to take off the breeding cage you can leave it on the cage altogether. When feeding freely on the seed continue the canary with a pinch of rape on top as staple; give a heaped teaspoonful of egg food for a brood of four twice a day, and in the afternoon a teaspoonful of cracked hemp. In a fortnight or so gradually withdraw the egg food, and add a little of a mixture of equal parts cracked hemp, rape, teazle, niger, and broken groats. When well on the seed diet, not before, add a half-ripe plantain stalk, or spray of seedy chickweed, seed-heads of dandelion, shepherd's purse, or grass, daily. Keep the cage floor and perches as clean as possible, and see that the food and water vessels are quite sweet and clean always. Beyond this adhere closely to the instructions in the book as to feeding and management, and I feel sure you will not have such wholesale losses in future.

A TRIPLET (A. M. C.).—(1) You should wait a few weeks now—until the end of the breeding season—before buying birds for next season's breeding. From November to February would be as good a time as any. Then, as you are quite ignorant of the subject, your best course would be to look up the addresses of some of the most prominent breeders of Rollers, which you would find in "Cage Birds Annual," select any one you prefer who has a reputation to maintain, and place yourself in his hands to make a suitable selection of stock for you, saying at the beginning what you are prepared to spend, or asking for a quotation of price for a given number of stock birds which will meet your requirements. (2) In doing up cages and filling cracks, you must be careful to do the work thoroughly, so as to leave no chance of the cracks re-opening, or of any being overlooked, and thus affording harbour for insect pests. It is a good plan to use putty softened with copal varnish, and work it well into the bottom of the cracks, and allow time for this to dry before proceeding further; then, if the putty cracks in drying, it can be retouched before applying enamel. Any good enamel, such as Aspinall's, is suitable, but if you do not mind the extra expense of bath enamel, there is no objection at all to its use. There is no risk whatever in employing any of these enamels if you allow it to become thoroughly dry and hard before introducing the birds. (3) No, the smell of a cage washed out with Izal would not do birds the slightest harm, even if introduced immediately the washing was completed.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

BULLFINCH-CANARY (E.M.T.).—I am particularly interested in your doings with the Bullfinch and Canary. Why not let the hen sit on the eggs herself and, if any young, rear them? I say "if any young," because our experience is that the cock Bullfinch is not a fertile breeder when in captivity, or if so, only very occasionally. If any young are hatched give the hen hard-boiled egg mixed with stale sponge cake and a little best quality insectile food, the whole made slightly moist, also soaked seeds, green food, etc., as advised to F. E. N. in this issue. If you are successful I should esteem it a favour if you will kindly drop me a post card.

FAILING TO REAR (Edith Pearce Brown).—It appears to me that your want of success is caused through not supplying some form of insect food, although kindly remember that our British Finches are not to be relied upon to incubate and rear their young ones, even in an aviary. Before the young ones are hatched I would advise you to supply the parents with a little hard-boiled egg, stale sponge cake, and a little best quality insectile food. When the little ones arrive add to this a few live ants' eggs and green fly. For seeds supply canary, rape, teazle, hemp and sunflower. Soak daily a little rape and teazle, and give in a separate vessel. Collect seeding groundsel, chickweed, shepherd's purse and all the various grasses, a good bunch of this food should be given daily, also supply them with currants, strawberries, raspberries, etc. If you cannot get them to rear upon this diet I fear you will have to try a foster mother another time, either a Canary or pair of Greenfinches, for of all the British birds these are the most likely to succeed.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (V.B.).—In an aviary the size you mention you would be able to keep a couple of dozen Finches and Buntings. I would advise you to commence with the following, which you can procure in the Autumn, and then add to your numbers when you have had some experience. All should be cock birds. Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Twite, Redpoll, Chaffinch and Siskin; the Buntings should be a Yellow, Reed and Cirl. All these would live upon a seed mixture with suitable green food. I think your ideas of construction are quite admirable. Do not make the roof too steep, or in the summer the hot sun will melt the tar, so that you will have it constantly dripping. Have the roof to come well over the front, and board up a foot or so at the bottom, as this will assist in keeping the floor dry in the winter. Your door in the partition should be a sliding one (not on hinges) and workable from the front; with this you will not have to go inside the aviary so frequently.

LINNET-CANARY WITH COLD (E. Greenaway).—Try the following remedy for your Hybrid. Take equal quantities of glycerine, whiskey, and lemon juice, and give 20 drops, in the drinking water. Three days a week offer a small quantity of bread soaked in hot milk, with three drops of cod liver emulsion on it. If he is very fat, reduce it with a dose of Epsom salts, and feed freely upon green food and wild seeds. Put him in a large cage, and let him bathe freely, and keep in a fairly even temperature, free from draughts.

HAND-REARING WOODPECKER (Woodman).—Yes, it is quite possible to hand-rear and keep Woodpeckers in captivity. When first taken they must be fed on a mixture of hard-boiled egg, home-made spongecake, and ants' eggs (live ones if possible), if not the best quality dried ones, soaked in warm milk, moisten the mixture with milk, and feed the young ones every hour. Do not cram them, but see that they have just sufficient to last them until the next feeding time comes round. A little experience will soon teach you how much to give. Feed as early as possible in the morning, and up to sunset, when they should have their heaviest meal. You should commence to feed them at the same time each morning, not early one day and late the next. Occasionally add a pinch of fine grit to the food, and keep the young and nest (which will be a handful of hay) as clean as possible. As they grow, add a little best quality insectile food to the mixture. In addition to this food, they should have some insect life of some kind—cut mealworms, baked or scalded gentles, small beetles, caterpillars, and any flies you can get hold of. When feeding themselves, insectile food will be their staple food, and if you encourage them when quite young to eat soft fruit, it will greatly assist in keeping them in health. A box cage with some pieces of Virginia cork fastened on the back and sides is the proper one to keep them in.

NAME OF SEED (J. Webb).—The name of seed sent is teazle, a most useful seed for all the Finches. It is a capital sample, well ripened and full. For Linnets you could mix two parts of it to three parts of canary; for Goldfinches equal quantities. A little of it soaked in cold water for twenty-four hours makes a capital pick-me-up for birds slightly out of condition.

GOLDFINCH AND CANARY (B.S.J.).—Do not apologise; we are always pleased to assist our readers. To commence with, your cage should have a sliding partition, so as to be able to shut off the perch when the hen is expected to lay, or he will most likely destroy the eggs. Perhaps you can procure a small cage to run him in, which will do equally as well. If the beak of the Finch is clear—that is, not black stripe down the upper mandible, he is in breeding condition, and he should occasionally sing to the hen. Give them a nestpan, some moss, and cowhair to build with, and when the nest is completed, shut off the Finch over night. If the hen has laid, in the morning take the egg away, placing a dummy one in the nest; you could then return the Finch until night, when remove him again. When the hen has laid three eggs, put them all back again, and do not interfere with her any more. On the thirteenth day give a little egg and biscuit, and crushed hemp. If she is a good mother she will feed the young upon this food, with a spray of watercress, dandelion leaf, lettuce, or chickweed. Your feeding appears to be about correct, excepting that I would advise a spoonful of crushed hemp twice a week, and half-a-dozen sunflower seeds daily for the Finch. If you are unable to procure green food, you should place a little rape seed in some shallow dishes, and keep them damp and warm, when they will soon commence to germinate. You can then cut out a wedge and give to them (but not while the hen is sitting, she should have canary seed only). If you have two or three trays going, you can keep up a constant supply, but vary it with other green food if possible. (2) A little of your home-made sponge cake would be quite the correct thing to give them.

REARING FINCHES (F.E.N.).—To rear your Finches, if any are hatched, supply the old birds with hard-boiled egg and stale home-made sponge cake, and as you say the hen will eat greenfly and ants' eggs, these should also be given. In a separate vessel supply soaked rape and teazle, and a spoonful daily of crushed or lightly cracked hemp. The same food would do for the Bullfinches. Up to the present we have found nothing so useful as hard-boiled egg for rearing purposes, and although the authority you quote says it causes blindness, it has not been my experience, and I have reared some hundreds of all kinds, egg being the main ingredient. For green food, supply seeding food rather than green leaves. You will find they will do far better upon it.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

RED AND GREEN PARRAKEET (L.J.N.).—I am not at all sure of the species of your bird, and I think it would be better if you send colour of beak and examine its tongue and ascertain whether it is quite smooth, or if it is brush tipped, and let me know. Again, it is a young bird and not yet in adult plumage. It is most likely that the loss of feathers on the head is occasioned by the bird's wildness. It ought to begin to show signs of settling down now, but you'll have to persevere on this point. Be very quiet and still when in the vicinity of its cage, especially when renewing food supplies, etc. You must continue the sop for the present, and give it a seed mixture of canary and white millet in equal parts. Also offer it a little of whatever ripe fruit you happen to have about. It will ultimately take to it. For the next two months put a few drops of cod-liver oil on to the sop daily, and put one-third of a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water, for some little time to come. The bowels should be kept moving freely, but the voidings should not be watery. Whenever the voidings are at all stiff, a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia should be put in the water in lieu of the phosphates, for one day, and repeated as may be necessary to secure free movement without undue looseness. You must not use a metal drinker when giving drugs. Keep cuttlebone and grit in the cage. Report progress a month hence.

AILING BLUE-FRONT (E.H.).—I suspected you had been indulging the bird in unwholesome items. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day so long as the voidings are not watery loose. On the intermediate days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Diet: A little boiled maize (about a tablespoonful) daily, boil till soft, drain off all water, then add ten drops of cod liver oil, and supply to the bird when cool. Seed mixture: Two parts each canary, white millet, and oats, 1 part each wheat, hemp, and sunflower seeds, half part shelled nuts, well mix and keep supply in cage. Also give, so as to vary the diet, ripe fruit ad lib, dry crusts, biscuit, plain cake, and various nuts. Keep cuttlebone and grit, and a piece of half-rotten branch of a tree continually in the cage. Before commencing to give the phosphates, give three doses on consecutive days of bromide of potassium; dissolve three grains in a little syrup, and stir this into the drinking water, repeating it three days running. If the bird gives any signs of the attacks coming on, having recourse to the bromide treatment may ward them off. Treat as above and report progress in fourteen to twenty-one days, but if it becomes worse write at once. If it should die, send the body for post-mortem examination to Mr. Yates.

GREEN PARROT, ETC. (Collier Boy).—One pint each canary, white millet, and oats, half a pint each hemp, sunflower, maize, wheat, and shelled nuts; well mix, and keep a supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit, shelled nuts, plain cake, biscuit, stale crusts, and keep cuttlebone and grit continually in the cage, also a piece of a half-rotten branch for it to exercise its beak upon. As it has been deprived of water for a time, you must only supply this at interval—that is, let it have a drink and take it away again, three or four times a day; in about a fortnight it should be quite safe to leave it in the cage altogether. Re Budgerigars, when out of breeding condition there is not much difference between the ceres of the sexes, but that of the cock is invariably the darker blue. The hen in breeding condition has the cere varying from dark cream colour to ruddy brown in respective individuals. Providing the hen is not quite young or moulting, if there is no change in a month, I should exchange one of them for a hen in breeding condition, as indicated by the cere.

NERVOUS PARROT (Polly).—The nervousness will pass; it is merely a matter of time. Continue the treatment till the bird is quite well. As regards the tiresome performance, whenever this becomes too pronounced, cover it up, but do not throw cloth over in a manner likely to scare it. At other times interrupt it by talking to it, etc., and as it gets more advanced and increases its vocabulary, the other may be gradually unlearned. The thing is, whenever it makes the objectionable noise cover it up or interrupt, but not in a way to occasion a scare. Settling down is merely a matter of time, patience, and kindness, and varies with respective individuals.

WILL IT PAY? (Mowgli).—I am afraid those who make foreign bird keeping pay are few and far between. Most aviarists find their hobby costs them something per annum. I fear you can't do much with an aviary of the size you name, though it is a handy size to fill with one gregarious species. If you have space for several of them, one could be given up to five pairs of Yellow Budgerigars, another up to the same number of Green Budgies, yet another could be given up to a pair each of Red-rump Parrakeets, Cockatiels, and Black-faced Lovebirds; others could contain three pairs of Zebra Finches and one pair Bib Finches, pairs each of Ruficauda and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Gouldian, Parrot, and Diamond Finches. I must say, though, that except for Budgerigars, Zebra Finches, and one or two others, foreign species are very should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-Keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." erratic as to breeding, doing well one year and nothing another, or trying one's patience sadly before they make a start. With ordinary luck, Budgies, Zebra Finches, Black-faced Lovebirds, Red-rumps, and Cockatiels should pay their way, though with the exception of Budgies you may get no result the first year. Consider this reply, make up your mind definitely what you will keep, then query me on any doubtful points.

SUGARBIRD AND GOULDIANS (T.W.M.).—The Y.W. Sugarbird moults and goes out of colour in the autumn, becoming green with a few blackish feathers in wing, etc., resuming the gorgeous black, purple, turquoise, and yellow in the spring. Goulds will also moult in late autumn. Diet for Sugarbird—milksop, prepare so: two pieces of spongecake about one inch cube, one teaspoonful Nestle's milk, one teaspoonful honey, about three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, and well stir together, if not sloppy add a little more boiling water. Also supply ripe fruit; some specimens like a couple of mealworms daily, others will not touch them, but all will take small flies and spiders. Re the Gouldians, keep them in a cage by themselves for a while, so that they get a restful and quiet time. Put them on a course of Dinneford's Magnesia and hynophosphates; give the Dinneford's every fourth day, and the phosphates in between, half a teaspoonful of either in the daily supply of drinking water. Supply greenfood, principally seeding and flowering green at this season. If the Goulds will take a little milk it will do no harm. Take the water away for a time, and then give them a little chilled milk, containing one drop of brandy or whisky to each tablespoonful. When the bird has had a good drink, take it away and replace the water, offering this once a day if the birds can be induced to take it, it will certainly help.

CRYSTAL PALACE AVIARY CAGE (A. Porter).—You have two of the compartments occupied, I gather, by Canaries and Budgerigars, so that you have only one available for the foreign Finches. Presumably the division is about 18 inches square—really only breeding accommodation for one pair, or half-a-dozen mixed birds. If you have the mixed lot, add a pair of Gold-breasted Waxbills (4/6 pair), and hang up three rush nests to the top of cage as song sleeping quarters for them. If you want to breed otherwise dispose of your Waxbills, and get a pair of Zebra Finches. They are on the market at the present time at 10s. per pair. Your Orange-cheek was a newly imported bird, and most probably died from exhaustion following thereon. Get our Nutshell "Waxbills," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, and treat your birds as advised therein. At the present juncture, you could put half-a-teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water each Sunday and Wednesday for two or three weeks, and on other days the same quantity of syrup of phosphates. Give them some tufts of flowering grass and other weeds to pick over.

WHAT ARE THEY? (A. Abbott).—I am quite at fault from your description. Please try again at a description, and if there is any one spot of distinctive coloration, carefully name. Also compare them both as to size and form, with some well-known bird. While I do not recognise them from your description, it would almost appear from same that they are different species. Could you make a very rough coloured diagram? If not, give me information asked for above, and I'll have another try. Am keeping your query by me.

PHEASANTS, ETC. (R.H.W.).—You will have little or no luck with several species of Pheasants in the same aviary. Again, you must not keep either Tree-pies, Blue-pies, or Hangnests in an aviary containing Weavers and Whydahs, or similar sized birds. The Pies would also be sure to steal the Pheasants' eggs, also to dine on the newly-hatched chicks if they got the opportunity. Again, the definition of "finest" is an open one. Some would apply it to gorgeous species, and others to beautiful species of a quieter hue. As regards the former, there is the well-known Golden Pheasant, and as regards the latter, the exquisite Peacock Pheasant. You will do better to put in a cock and several hens; single hens are often killed by the ardour of their mates. Here are a few: Gold, Lady Amherst's, Elliot's, Peacock, Monaul, or Impeyan, Silver, Reeves, and Swinhoe's. I do not care to give values on the spur of the moment, as it is very variable. Peacocks would be costly, and Monaul more costly still, excepting perhaps the Gold and Silvers none are cheap. These two would vary from (approx.) 40s. to 60s. for a cock and three hens. The others mostly very much more costly. I certainly only advise one species. I think in Foreign Bird advertisement column some handsome species were advertised in our issue of June 6th. You should look it up and write for details and prices.

AVIARY QUERIES (J. W. R.).—You give me no idea of size of aviary, so I can't express any opinion as to whether you are overcrowded or not. Diet is about right—it's a case of the idiocynerasies of individual pairs. All you have to do is to exercise a little patience and they'll settle down to nest; even November is not too late for them. Cutthroats like a little live food when they are rearing young. Live ants' eggs and gentles are the best, but I have reared many on dry ants' eggs, seed, and green food. If you keep a few pieces of broken biscuit about while the Rosellas are feeding young, that is all that is necessary in addition to the usual menu, and they may not take these. Keep a separate tin of white oats in the aviary at this period. Re the Cockatiels, sometimes they have very large broods, but eight is a heavy drain on the parents. Supply oats and crushed oats to assist them. The soaked household bread should be squeezed almost dry before giving to the birds. I never give it; prefer to use broken biscuit.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. T. Easton.—We have forwarded your letter, for which, by the way, you omitted to enclose postage.

T. Eaton.—We consider it has been clearly established, in at least one case, that Mules have bred. It is an exceptionally rare occurrence, as is only to be expected.

A. S. Colne.—The opening of the catching season varies in many counties and districts, as do the birds which are protected all the year round. You should send two penny stamps to Messrs. Wyman, Printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C., and ask them to send you a copy of the Wild Birds' Protection Act for whatever county you require.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. Bailey.—Splenic apoplexy, a disease arising from the introduction of poisons in the blood, either generated in the system, or introduced as ptomaines. It may occur as part of another disease (this was not evident). A history of the case, however, would have been beneficial.

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird-keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kineh, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatoels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK. 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

MARK YOUR YOUNG BIRDS NOW, or you will regret it when breeding time comes round again.

Perhaps at the moment you haven't given it a thought, but for your success it is absolutely necessary to correctly identify your birds. You may know every one now, but will you with certainty months hence? Follow the leading fanciers' example, and mark your birds with the neatest safest, and best rings known. "Cage Birds" says: "One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." The cost is small—the advantages great.

SUPERIOR ALUMINIUM RINGS. Distinctly numbered, with or without year. 100 2/6, 75 2/-, 50 1/6, 25 10d. Supplied with or without flanges, in sizes for all varieties.. THE EASIEST TO ADJUST OF ANY CANARY MARKING RINGS.

FREE.—My Practical "Pedigree Book," with oders for 75 or more rings; with smaller orders send 3d. It will help you to keep an accurate record.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They can run like German Canaries. This class of bird has won the English Derby, all the English championships, and the world's greatest contests. They are the birds in England for catching with, and for time-singing they have no equal. They are at workingmen's prices: 1/-, 1/6 and 2/-; a few with quality notes, will sing anywhere, 2/6 and 3/6; and a few, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, 5/-. I challenged the world with this class of bird from £25 up to £100 aside for quality Linnet singing. The above are all good birds and in full song. Beautiful Yellow cock Greenfinches, like paint, 1/- each; sure winners for the bench, 1/6. Young German Roller cocks, bred by myself, taught under my well-known champion Roller, 4/6 each. Beautiful cock Bramblefinches, 1/- each; Redpolls, 1/6 apair. Beautiful cock Larks, singing with full loud voice, perfect in feather, singing all day, 1/6 and 2/6; a few hand-reared ones, sing indoors or out, 4/6; and one, a real champion, right for contest singing (this is a real topper), 6/-. New Lark cages, 1/6 each, fit for any room. My book of secrets, 1/-, which is the best book published of its kind, sent by return of post, 1/-. Notice to Linnet singers who want a first-class bird, either contest Linnet or match bird; real quality Linnet singing or time singers, properly trained, and can win anywhere, from 15/6 to 25/- each. Write to me for any kind of bird, British or Foreign, show birds or singing birds. The original Linnet and Canary whistle, 6d. each; plenty in stock; no waiting; post card before birds; so send to the old British bird champion: Harry Allen, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (1676)

BIG BIRD-BREEDER'S BUDGET,

'CAGE-BIRDS' 1914 ANNUAL

There are articles for every season and now the Bird-keeper is in the SECOND ROUND, he would do well to study the advice given by that well-known bird authority, Claude St. John, in his article,

Mistakes Birdbreeders Must Avoid.

A most seasonable article. Alone worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby. Besides this highly instructive article, it also contains the following:

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP & BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.
This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES.
By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

DIRECTORY OF THE JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden.
A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS.
By W. H. Gibb.
The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRDCATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.
A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird-keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete Instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

"CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL."

A wonderful sixpennyworth of birdy literature.

See special advt. on Page 519.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

First annual N.F. show, June 20th, South Moor Hotel, one of the nicest rooms we have yet come across, any amount of size, grand light, and absolute freedom from draughts. For a first attempt the show was a capital one, and as the enthusiasm of the members appears to be unbounded, there is every prospect of a fine future for this promising society. They are well led by that keen Border enthusiast, Mr. G. Bates, who as chairman leaves nothing to be desired, and he in turn is well supported by the vice chairman, Mr. J. Teasdale. The hon. sec., Mr. C. Davison, appears to thoroughly understand his duties, and all his work was carried out without the slightest hitch, while his courteous and kindly manner deservedly entitles him to the esteem and respect in which he is held by all the members. A hard-working committee is composed of Messrs. J. W. Robson, W. Laxton, J. Lowerson, J. Biggs, A. Dawson, and A. Roxborough, and one and all did their best to make the show a thorough success. We understand the members have not been blessed with a very good breeding season, yet a fairly good entry turned up, about 70 birds facing the judge. The Canaries were a nice lot, with the Borders predominating in point of quality, several really classical birds being staged in this section. British were also very nice, most of the birds being well up in feather and condition. The show was well attended, and there is every prospect of it being a financial success. Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland) judged.

The Harold Baker challenge cup was won by A. Hirst, runner-up W. Crawshaw. Special for three best novice birds, W. Parkinson.

CREWE O.S.

Annual N.F. show held Co-operative Hall, June 13, when about 100 birds were staged. Mr. T. Harrison ably judged. A pleasing feature of the show was the success of the younger members, and the old hands will have to look to their laurels or the novices will wrest the Victor Willliams cup from them this year. There was a good attendance, which augurs well for the open show to be held in October. Awards:

ALFRETON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First N.F. show held June 13. A good number of visitors turned up and great interest was taken in the various classes, which were well filled. There were about 50 birds entered and competition was very keen in most of the classes. This Society has amongst its members some of the best fanciers in the district. Two new members were made during the evening, and several others have promised to join. Mr. Simpson, of Pye Bridge judged, and gave every satisfaction in the unavoidable absence through illness of Mr. A. Wilson.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

First annual N.F. show Mail Coach Inn, Wellgate, June 13. Entries were very good, 67 in all, and quality was better than for years past. Visitors attended from the surrounding districts. Mr. J. Warrender (Hoyland) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Mr. Brotherton took most points, but Messrs. Smith and Bagnell ran up very close. Mr. Taylor carried off most points in Norwich, Mr. Griffiths second, Mr. Bagnell third. Mr. Brotherton also took most points in British, Mr. Jones second, Mr. Allott third. Mr. Webster's noted bird, Bronscio, was on exhibition, not up to the usual form, no doubt from having a heavy breeding season.

HALIFAX O.S.

F.F. show June 20 at Pluminet Line Hotel. Mr. R. Halliday (Shipley) judged. 85 birds faced the judge, which was considered very satisfactory considering another F.F. show was being held in the town at the same time. The judging appeared to give satisfaction to all, and several outstanding birds were to be seen, which, without doubt, will be heard of later in the season. A good array of British birds were present. Competition was keen, and seems likely to create interest throughout the series of shows. for the champion specials were tied for by Messrs. Burdekin Bros., S. Wilkinson, and D. A. Macpherson, with 13 points each, and novice specials by P. Child and C. Craven with nine points each.

PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY, AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First members' show of season held June 13, Fleece Hotel, Stanningley. The entry was not over large, which was due to the bad breeding season we are experiencing in this district. Forty-one birds were staged in 6 classes. Mr. J. Chambers, of Leeds, placed the cards in a very able manner. Most points were gained by Messrs. W. Winn (19), E. Marsh (19), and A. Noble (18).

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, held June 11th, Duke of York, which proved very successful. Mr. F. J. Weaver officiated. Mr. J. Gibbons brought forward motion re joint membership. After lengthy discussion, adopted. For the future, should two members exhibit jointly and keep their birds at one residence, their yearly contributions will be 7s. 6d., instead of 10s. Date for annual N.F. show, July 18th. Messrs. W. G. Andrews and G. Baker elected to judge. Judges for July 2nd evening show, Messrs. J. Gibbons, J. Millicamp, Hall, and Tinton (Nor.); and Messrs. Robinson, Hampton, Rowley, Louch (Yorks.); Messrs. F. J. Weaver and J. A. Tonks elected as master judges, that is, in the event two of above not coming to terms over an exhibit.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

First members' N.F. and British bird show June 20, Cwm Assembly Rooms. The show was fairly patronised, many old exhibitors from around the district being present. Entries were not so many as previous year, many of our members not having a youngster to stage, but I hope they will make up at our next show, held July 18. Norwich were not numerous, but a few nice quality birds were amongst them. Mr. F. Selby doing well in the novice classes. Yorks were a good lot, some promising birds were staged by J. Pritchard. Also some of Mr. A. J. Salter's birds should be heard of again. The Borders were a fine lot and turned up very well, some good birds being staged by G. T. Jones, W. Cooper, and W. Lapworth. In the British, Mr. D. Edwards had best bird in show with a noted Goldie in fine bloom, some nice birds also being shown by H. Mortimer and J. Meredith. Spl for most points in Norwich was won by Geo. Broome: Yorks, J. Pritchard; Borders, G. T. Jones; and Brit. and Mules, H. Mortimer. Mr. A. E. Moule judged Canaries, and C. Lewis British and Mules, and gave every satisfaction.

HAYLE F.A.

Annual show, June 18, entries came up well considering that breeding is in full swing and there was a record entry. Norwich were good, especially the young class, 21 entries, and after the moult many will be heard of again. Yorks were a very fine lot, the young birds were champion, the class containing 22 entries; the winner is a gem of the first water. Hybrids and British class were the best seen in Cornwall for a long time, and well worth going a long way to see; the winner in the Hybrids, Palace winner, was a grand specimen of the Redpoll-Bullie, good size and col., Goldies were a nice level lot, the winner being a gem. We cannot speak too highly of the committee who are all genuine fanciers, and looked well after the interest of the exhibits; the Hon. Sec. is the right man in the right place. The Local Silver Cup for best three birds was won by Messrs. Rowe and Richards, and the Challenge Vase for most points was a tie between Messrs. Rowe and Richards and F. Collins with 94 points. Mr. W. J. Medlin (Falmouth) judged, and his awards were well received.

BRIDLINGTON, DRIFFIELD C.B.S.

First N.F. show, Assembly Rooms, Driffield, June 19. Mr. G. A. Hunter judged, and his awards met with the approval of everyone. He had a difficult task to choose the winners, for the youngsters were one of the finest lots ever put down in a First Feather show; some of them will take beating in the coming show season. The buffs, both in Yorks. and Nor., were nearly double the entries of the yellows. British birds were a treat, ten species on view, some of them big winners last season. The greatest disappointment of all was the terrific thunderstorm, which lasted during the time the doors were open for the public. The result was a very poor gate, and a financial loss to the Society.

BUFF YORKS.: 1, 3, Dixon; 2, 4, Watts. YELLOW: 1, Watts; 2, 3, 4, Dixon. BUFF NOR.: 1, Clayton and Smith; 2, 3, Pressey; 4, Mallinson. YELL.: 1, Clayton and Smith; 2, 3, 4, Mallinson. We hope for a fine day this time. Will intending members please communicate with Sec. Subs. due.

DONCASTER C.B.S.

Meeting June 13, Druid's Arms, Bentley, Mr. Blanchen presiding over a good attendance. Classes for second N.F. show decided: Yorks Yell., Buff, Nor. Yell., Buff, A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hyb. (old birds), ditto (young birds), Goldf. or Bullf., Greenf., Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll or Twite, A.O. Hardbill, Softbill. Birds staged at 2; fee 1s. Judge, Mr. G. A. Pogmore. Members elected: Messrs. Evans, Cook, and Bates. First nest feather show, 54 birds were staged, some nice Yorks and Norwich were put down by Messrs. Norman, Freeman, Twine and Evans. British classes filled well, and some toppers were benched by Messrs. Bescoby, Tonkinson, Blanchon, Simpson and Cook. Mr. F. Barker judged, and gave general satisfaction. Special for best bird (a gold medal value 10s. 6d., given by Mr. W. Marshall) was won by Mr. Blanchon with his noted winning Goldie.

HALLAM AND ECCLESALL.

After a lapse of two years cage birds were again introduced into the schedule of the Hallam and Ecclesall Agricultural Society, and a fairly good entry was received. The show was held in Endcliffe Park, Sheffield, June 18. Our old friend, Mr. R. Colton, was steward in charge, and right well did he attend to his duties. Some of our most noted northern exhibitors of British and foreign birds supported the show, thus, while the entry was not great, quality was splendid right through. Mr. H. J. Chick judged.

YORKS (3): 1, 2, 3, Cray, neat, shapely, stylish, close feathered variег. buff hen, and two stylish lengthy yells. NOR. cancelled. BULLF., ETC. CARDIFF.

First of two young bird shows June 17 at Naish's. Entries were down owing to the wretched breeding results locally, some of the oldest hands even not being able to stage a bird. Not a single British bird or young mule turned up, although only a few years back this section at our members' shows was quite equal to many open events. Norwich were a nice level lot, but with one or two exceptions nothing particularly striking. Special for best novice Norwich in open classes fell to Mr. Phelps with a typical var. yellow of some promise. Yorks were a disappointment—at least in the champion classes. Not so, however, in the novice classes, for here was found, amongst other good ones, a slashing clear buff at present almost faultless, belonging to Mr. Charles, quite a young member, whom we congratulate on his achievement. This bird won special for best novice Yorks in open classes and also the 10s. 6d. spl for best bird in show. Borders were not so strong as expected, seeing we have now more members breeding this variety; a couple of lovely quality youngsters were amongst the winners. Spl for best novice Border was won by Mr. Raymond with a smart little buff. Mr. E. J. Banks judged Yorkshires and Mr. E. J. Davies the remainder.

Twitterings.

On account of shortage of entries at Redruth Cage-bird Show, write Messrs. Opie and Kemp, the time of closing is extended to Sunday morning's post.

Mr. A. Wood, hon. sec., writes that Mr. Walton (Leicester)will judge Burton-on-Trent summer show, July 18, at the new headquarters, New Inn, Station Street.

Islington F.A. schedules for members' show, July 11, have been sent out. Anyone overlooked should send postcard to the hon. sec. Geo. Wainwright, 23, Tibberton Square, Islington, N.

Will members of Beamish and Dis. C.B.S. note there will be no meeting or table show on June 27, as our neighbours Annfield Plain are holding their young bird show on that date. We hope they will have a good show. —J. Elliot, sec.

Mr. J. Hayhurst, Burnley, will judge our N.F.S., June 27, writes Mr. G. Whitaker, hon. sec. Burnley O.S. Show will be held at Star Inn, from 3 to 7.30; admission 2d. There will be a meeting June 26, when entries close.

Three classes for cage-birds are provided at the Fordingbridge Horticultural show, July 15. Prizes are 3s., 2s., 1s., and fee 3d. Mr. J. F. L. Warburton is judge, and entries close July 8 to W. A. Smith, West End, Fordingbridge.

Mr. R. Lile, sec. Scottish Metropolitan Open Derby, writes that Messrs. G. Fulton (Patrick), J. Hendry (Glasgow), J. Pringle (Selkirk), and J. Park (Govan), have been engaged to judge at the annual show in Buccleuch Parish Halls, Sept. 26.

I was much surprised and very pleased to see the sketch of my ticked yellow Yorkshire on the front page of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. W. J. Heath. It does your artist, Mr. H. Norman, great credit; please convey my best thanks to him.

We hear from Mr. R. Rennie, sec. Falkirk C.B.S., that the judges at the annual show Oct. 31, will be: Norwich, Mr. J. McLay; Borders, Mr. F. Findlay; Brit. and Foreign, Mr. W. Sharp. Mr. James Jeans (Camelon), and Mr. Alex. Eadie (Falkirk) will judge at the first feather show, July 11.

If any member of Newcastle C.B.S. has not received a schedule for nest feather show July 4 in Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook, and will inform me, writes Mr. J. W. Reed, sec., I will gladly forward one. In future meetings will be held in Purve's Cafe, Clayton Street, opposite Bird Market.

Sunderland C.B.A. members are having a ramble to Corbridge on June 20; train leaves Sunderland at 12.43; members meet at north end of station five minutes before train time. If any fanciers or friends would care to join us, writes the hon. sec., Mr. J. Peacock, we would be pleased to give a look out for them at the stations en route.

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," illustrated magazine, or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies spending not less than 10s. 6d. in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries taking advantage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

Secretaries should note that we can print at very favourable rates, show schedules, posters in colours, and ornamental prize-cards. Send for samples and prices.

We have received a sample of Mr. W. Errington's (Bradford) "X.L. Red Feed," as offered in our advertisement columns, and find it very good indeed—rich and bright in colour, palatable, and ground to just the right degree of fineness. It has also the merit of being most reasonable in price.

Sparrow in the Bedroom.

A Sparrow has laid three eggs in a nest it has built on the top of a venetian blind in an occupied front bedroom at the house of Mrs. Atkinson, Chesham Road, Kingston-on-Thames.

Another Record.

At the young bird show of the City and Suburban A.C.B., to be held July 4, we note there are to be 52 classes (Canaries, Hybrids, and Brit. and For. birds), while the special prizes total already no fewer than 64. The latter, we understand, is a record for the society (we should think, too, for any young bird show) and speaks well for the enthusiasm of the members. Truly the genial hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn, travels from triumph to triumph.

A Thrush's "Anvil."

One of the most recent acquisitions to the natural history department of the Royal Scottish Museum at Edinburgh is a Thrush's "anvil," found at Aberlady by Mr. William Evans. The well known Song Thrush feeds largely upon snails, and breaks their shells upon some selected stone in order to reach the dainty morsel within. The stone and all the snail-shells shown in the exhibit were actually collected by the donor, and by the aid of a photograph, which he also supplied, the whole group has been arranged so as to reproduce the "anvil" and its surroundings as accurately as possible. A bird has been mounted in the act of breaking a shell. All the snails in the collection belong to one species, the common Helix nemoralis (garden snail).

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. Herdman, Pelton Fell.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Jas. Stanger, that I have to inform you of the death of my partner, Mr. John Herdman, who died June 18, in his 69th year, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Errington, at Preston, North Shields. Poor Jack and I have been exhibiting together for over 25 years, and I can safely say no more enthusiastic fancier was to be found in the North of England, until a couple of years ago, when, owing to failing health, he was unable to get about as formerly. His chief hobby was Crests, and older fanciers will remember, amongst others, his champion yellow "Cock of the North," which in its day was undoubtedly the best of its kind seen up to that time. He is survived by a widow and grown-up family, to whom I feel sure all who knew him will extend their sympathy.

Swan's Seven Cygnets.

A week or two ago a correspondent raised the point as to whether seven Cygnets were not an unusually large number: Mr. H. J. Fulljames tells us that whilst on holiday recently he had the pleasure of seeing a Swan with seven bonny Cygnets in one of the beautiful reaches of the River Wey—they made a most charming picture.

A Treat at Newport (Mon).

By the generosity of Mr. W. R. Lysaght, J.P., who is giving prizes to the amount of £150, the 4,000 workmen employed by the well-known firm, of which Mr. Lysaght is the head, will have a rare treat on July 18. On the football ground in Somerton Park there will be held a show of flowers, fruit, vegetables, examples of handiwork, live stock of all kinds, etc., and, in addition, there are to be athletic sports (25 events) and an air-rifle competition, and dancing on the green. There are 14 classes for cage-birds (confined to employees of the firm), judge Mr. J. H. Payne, of Gloucester, so that this section should be not the least interesting part of the function for readers of CAGE BIRDS who may be able to attend.

Curious Case Under the W.B.P.A.

A peculiar anomaly of the Wild Birds Act was made apparent at Beverley on June 15, when two youths, Robert Long and John Wilkinson, were charged with shooting a Thrush. There was a further charge against Long of firing a catapult on the highway. The offence, which was admitted, was reported by Sergeant Jackson, of the East Riding police, who found the injured bird fluttering on the ground. The Chief Constable pointed out a curious anomaly in the Act, as for the offence with which they were charged the Act provided that for a first offence they should be dismissed with a caution, whereas if they had taken a bird's egg they would have been liable to a fine of £1. The magistrates dismissed the case with a caution, and ordered the defendants to pay the costs between them.

Skylark's Remarkable Nest.

A Lark has built its nest on the cricket ground, writes Mr. B. Elford, M.A., Headmaster Allendale School, Rochester, to the "Daily Mail," within 5ft. of the centre of the pitch, and refuses to desert its nest, in spite of the fact that the boys play daily. As soon as the game is over the bird returns to the nest. Needless to say, it will be allowed to remain unmolested. The nest contains four eggs.

Fanciers' Society Takes First Prize.

I beg to thank you for the posters, etc., for the decoration of our car for the local hospital carnival, writes Mr. Harry G. Whibley, sec. Tunbridge Wells and Dist. F.A., and to say that we were fortunate enough to secure first prize (two guineas). The car was made up of wire-netting pens of poultry, pigeons and rabbits on grass runs, with an aviary of British birds (festooned with foliage, etc.).

Comedy of a Town's Swan.

No such Swan as that which Bury St. Edmunds has just acquired for its public gardens is to be found in any other gardens in the world. Still, strange to say, the town is not proud of its Swan. In fact, it is doubtful whether the public will ever be permitted to see the bird, and it will probably be surreptitiously murdered with a hammer. Until recently a pair of Swans sailed majestically on the pond in the public gardens. Then the male bird died, and the female was left a widow. The tender heart of an alderman was touched by her mournful solitude, and he discussed with his colleagues the question of finding another spouse for her. Shortly afterwards he received word that a fine Swan, the very bird for the council's money, was to be sold by auction. A note was sent to the auctioneer instructing him to purchase, and the bird was knocked down to the alderman. What he said when it reached his house is not recorded. It proved to be a swan constructed years ago for a bicycle carnival. It is doubtful whether it would even float. A local photographer and the Duke of Grafton have come to the rescue, and although the town will never flock to the gardens to see the record Swan, it now possesses a pair of birds. To mention a Swan to an alderman is to receive a haughty stare!

"Referring to my advt. in CAGE BIRDS offering Linnet Mule in exchange for Bullie, I have had so many replies from all parts of England and Ireland that I have not been able to reply to all. Please thank all who responded to my advt. The first one (from London) was delivered at my house only a few hours after the publication of CAGE BIRDS."—R. PALMER (Great Yarmouth),

"Re my advert of Roller Canary. Owing to the enormous amount of answers to above, I am unable to reply to them all by post. I am astonished at the number of enquirers after the bird. Now I know what a wonderful advertising medium CAGE BIRDS really is, I shall certainly send all my adverts. to CAGE BIRDS, and I wish you every success."—F. J. SMART (Dinas, Rhondda),

Wild-Bird Life.

The Home of the Hawk.

The Kestrel and Sparrow Hawk are frequently met with in the writer's district, and a pair almost daily soar round the large trees in the old park; these probably nest among the pines just outside the village, an almost ideal spot for such birds, commanding a good view of the surrounding district. Another pair have made their home in a more wooded district, where birds of all kinds are plentiful. Their haunt is a small wood almost adjoining a narrow by-road, beloved of cyclist and pedestrians. It was quite by accident the writer located them. While resting about half a mile from the wood, a Hawk was seen soaring. Presently it was joined by its mate, which had to pass to get to the wood; as it went by it was seen to be carrying something. This one dropped into the wood, its mate flying off in another direction.

Upon our next outing we determined to seek their home. Leaving the road, we skirted down the side of the wood until we found a convenient opening; a pair of Doves overhead were "talking," and a Nightingale occasionally opened at the further end; a noisy Chaffinch greeted us as we moved on, his nest one could plainly see fixed securely against the bark of an ancient elm, supported by a few slender twigs. Carefully searching every large tree, we at length found what we were seeking. In the upper branches of a stately oak a huge collection of sticks had been brought together; this we suspected was the home of the Hawks. We had hardly found it before one of the old birds appeared settling upon a branch about a dozen feet away; she was evidently suspicious, and remained perfectly motionless for some time, and then, taking wing, shot upwards high above the tree tops. We found it impossible to reach the nest, but by taking advantage of another tree, we could manage to get a better view of it. It was very bulky, probably one used for several seasons. We could see bits of feather and white down scattered among the sticks, and something occasionally moving, which we had no doubt were young ones. The Sparrow Hawk is a bold, dashing flier, and there is no more fascinating sight than to see it chasing a smaller yet strong-winged bird; the Hawk never swerves from his course, no matter how many birds there may be about, nor how much the quarry twists and turns. He seldom fails when he hunts in earnest.—H. NORMAN.

Nest Built in Train.

A Song Thrush which built her nest in a railway carriage is an interesting incident in bird life reported from Limavady. The railway carriage travelled each morning to Derry at 11.35 a.m. and left Derry again at 4.50 in the afternoon. Here the Thrush built her nest, and engaged in hatching four eggs. The nest was built on the top of the steam heating pipe under the carriage seat, and the bird travelled with the train.

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary, any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

THE SUCCESSFUL BREEDING OF NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

A South-country champion exhibitor gives his views.

A lecture by Mr. J. Hodder (London, E.C.) before the members and friends of the London and Provincial O.S.

DON'T get disheartened with your birds because they are not perfect, but strive to improve them each year. But you must have something to improve them with, so get a bird each year as fresh blood, but be sure it is in advance of anything you possess, or your money will be wasted. Don't waste your money by buying birds here, there and everywhere.

There is one more thing to deal with while on the subject of the bird as he should be, and that is quality of feather. I touched on this just now. I am indeed afraid if we do not soon wake up we shall find the quality of feather in the Norwich greatly deteriorating. More and more the tendency is to pass by the question of quality. As I said, we go to extremes on one point and forget others quite as essential to the make-up of a good bird.

Do you know that a bird with excellent quality of feather always moults out a much better colour than the coarse-feathered specimen? It is a fact that the colour food has a ten times better chance of showing its effect in feathers of silky texture, and you have a beautiful mealing in your buffs that glistens like frozen snowflakes in the sunshine on a clear winter's day. There is nothing that gladdens the heart of a true lover of the Norwich more than to see a beautiful undercolour bursting through, as it were, this mealing. If you want to breed birds like this you can only do so by studying to keep the richest quality of feather in your stock, and have the feathers of a boxy nature, close and compact.

The Carriage Makes all the Difference.

You have it said at times that such and such a bird has too much feather. Now I respectfully submit that no bird can have too much feather, if properly carried; that is the point. The more feather the better, only be sure that in the case of one of each pair it is close and compact, each feather falling into its proper place, and the better the quality the more likely it is to show to best advantage on the bird's body.

There is another kind of feather which seems to lie on the bird's body quite properly but is not so pleasing to look upon as this boxy feather. I mean the wavy feather, undulating on the surface. You will no doubt understand what I mean. This may be of good quality but does not look so nice; and a bird with this kind of feather, however well carried, cannot, in my opinion, beat a bird with the solid close firm feather, if only equal in other points. There is no need to discard these birds, but be careful in pairing them. This brings me to the question of correct pairing.

No breeder of Norwich Canaries can hope to do much on the show bench unless he pays great attention to the mating of his birds. It is really no use going haphazard. An old book says, "Men do not gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles," and it is equally as difficult to breed winning Norwich from wrong mating. You cannot, for instance, pair up a bird with the V-shaped head to another with the same defect, and hope to have in the progeny birds with good full skulls, and the same applies in regard to shape, feather, wings, tail, colour, etc. All these matters need the most careful attention.

A Double-Bufting Problem.

Some fanciers are keen on double buffing. They say it broadens and deepens the chests of the birds, so, for this reason I suppose, a good deal of double buffing is indulged in at the present time. A novice said to me not so long ago, showing me two birds he intended pairing up (they were buffs), "Do you think I shall breed something worth possessing from these?" I looked them over carefully, then told him he would have bundles of feathers if he persisted in pairing those two together. They were both loose woolly-feathered birds of altogether the wrong texture to produce the desired effect.

Perhaps some of you may have handled birds bred from this kind of stock. When you take hold of them your hand closes in on them as you endeavour to discover if there is any bird on which the feathers grow. In double buffing the utmost caution should be taken to avoid this sort of pitfall in Norwich breeding. If I were going to pair up two buffs I should select a cock with a tight-fitting jacket; one of those we term red buffs, with firm feather, buffs that have only just escaped being yellows, a bird with some solidity about him, and I would have a hen with the finest quality and well mealed over with a glistening frosting, as I said just now, but she, too, I would take care carried her feathers as close as possible. From this kind of mating I would expect the desired results without losing but little, if any, of the colour, especially if the cock were ticked.

A Question of Highest Import.

I believe many have retired from the Fancy because they have not given the time and attention they should to this question of pairing. They find that headway has not been made, so they lose heart. They forget that Rome was not built in a day, and it is equally as true that first-class Norwich are not produced without a great deal of patience, plodding, and hard work. Now let us consider for a few moments the question of colour. Let me say at once that no amount of colour-feeding will be of much use unless we are careful to keep the colour pigment in the bird's blood. It is a well-known and often discussed fact that the bronze-green carries the best and deepest colour, but I would warn any inexperienced breeder not to overdo it by using too much green. One or two green birds should suffice, then get clears to pair to them. Get the colour well diffused through all your stock.

If you commence with two or three green birds, and an equal number of clear birds you should have enough green blood to last you four years in a small stud. By pairing ticked or marked birds to clears you breed the colour well into your stock.

The Scimitar Babblers are lively and engaging birds, deservedly popular with many British aviculturists. The species here figured by Mr. Goodchild, our artist, is that known as the Rusty-cheeked. These Babblers have very short wings, and "loose" plumage, also they have the habit of holding pieces of food in their claws while devouring it.

The Nightingale: Its Keeping and Hand Rearing.

By E. A. BUSH (Worthing).

AN account of my experiences with Nightingales may be of interest to the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS. The Nightingale was the first Softbill I kept, and well I knew it. Nothing seemed to go right, and when at last I gave it away, I was quite glad. But a little later a friend, hearing of it, came to me to find out the cause. After hearing my plaintive tale, he laughed; but he gave me a piece of advice I have never regretted taking. This was to take in CAGE BIRDS every week—truly a grand piece of advice.

Since that time I have never been without a Nightingale or Blackcap in my possession. Neither is difficult to keep; indeed, with a little care and attention they will become more tame and trustful than a good many Finches. Both birds are Softbills; that is, birds that eat mostly insects, worms, fruit, berries, and other "soft" foods. Several of these Softbills are resident with us all the year round, while some come over in the spring and depart in the autumn, and others visit us in the winter and depart again when spring begins to make its presence felt. The Nightingale, of course, is one of the spring visitors, usually arriving in this country about April, when the woods are gay with flowers. He departs again in the month of August.

Advice about Food.

As regards food, a very good stock mixture can be made of the following: Ants' eggs, two parts; ground biscuit, two parts; and dried flies or silkworm pupae, one part. Sufficient raw carrot, boiled potato, or chopped green stuff should be added to make the daily portion "crumbly" moist. A few mealworms or gentles should be given now and again, and a little hard-boiled egg or desiccated yolk may occasionally be added to the food. A first-class packet insectivorous food, made by one of our well-known bird-food dealers, will be welcomed by the birds for a change. My method is to give them the food I have recommended for the first half of the week, while for the rest of the week I give them the packet mixture. No fancier should think of keeping Softbills unless he is prepared to supply them with really good nourishing food. I have found it is useless trying to keep them otherwise, even the bigger Blackbirds and Thrushes, and other large birds, must be well looked after and cared for; and for the small delicate species the best food obtainable is necessary.

As I have said before, the Nightingale is a spring migrant and everybody who takes an interest in this splendid songster is early on the watch for his coming. If a certain wood or plantation once becomes the haunt of a 'Gale, it is almost certain to be visited by one each succeeding year. It is to these haunts the birdy man should make his way; if the birds have arrived he will not have to wait long to hear their song. To catch this fine songster at his best one should, if living in the country near the woods, wander into the woods at sunset. One may then both see and hear the musician. Once listen to those rich, wild notes, and I do not think you will say that his song has been overrated.

Soon after their arrival they pair up for the breeding season, and after a little while begin to think of setting up housekeeping. While the cock cheers his mate by his song the hen begins to build a nest. This is placed upon, or near the ground, among the thick undergrowth, where it is practically hidden from sight. The nest is chiefly made of dried grass, moss, and a few small dead leaves; it is usually lined with very fine roots and horsehair. The eggs are four to six in number, and are of an olive-brown colour.

Hints on Hand Rearing.

If one wants to try his hand at rearing these birds, I should not advise him to take the birds too young, but to leave them with the old birds as long as it is safe to do so, for every day they are fed by their parents is to their advantage. If one does not intend to take the whole brood, pick out the largest and brightest looking birds only, as these will most probably prove to be cocks. They should be placed in a basket, with a little hay in the bottom and a piece of blanket round the sides, for warmth is needed if they are to thrive and get on.

I should give them their first meal about 5.30 a.m. But do not feed early one morning and late the next. Their first meal in captivity should consist of egg that has been boiled for ten minutes. Grate the egg, both white and yolk, very finely. Mix it with good ants' eggs (good ants' eggs should be greasy to the touch), a little crushed biscuit and a few shreds of raw, lean meat. Mix well together, and give to the nestlings just damp; they must have two or three drops of water after feeding.

They should be fed at least every two hours. Do not force them to eat a lot; "a little and often" is good advice. I always keep my birds in the nest as long as possible, as they thrive and do a lot better there than on the perch. When the young first commence to feed themselves I find they should be watched carefully, as they are so very likely to over-feed. I lost several good birds through this before I found out the reason.

When the young birds can feed themselves thoroughly well, they should be put into separate cages. The young cocks will soon commence to warble, but one must not, of course, expect them to sing well for quite a time.

Hand-Reared Birds for Breeding.

If one cares to try and breed, these hand-reared birds are just the ones for the purpose, as they get so tame. My Nightingale aviary is 9 feet long, 5 feet high, and 3½ from back to front. I run one cock to two hens, to give the cock a choice, and when he has paired up with one, I take the other hen out and leave the pair together in the aviary. The floor is turfed over, with ivy growing up the back, and thick brambles, etc., on the turf. I have never yet been successful in rearing young ones, but I hope soon to be able to record it. Nightingale breeding is a very interesting hobby, and if the birds do have some young ones the bird fancier will be amply repaid for his time, care, and trouble.

Adult Nightingales are obtainable in the spring, which should be done as early as possible, before they have paired up with the hens. These fresh caught birds require very careful handling. Up to the time of catching, the wild Nightingales have been feeding on insect life generally, and on being caught they must be fed as near as possible to their wild food.

The bird lover will have to be fairly liberal with live food, and he must be sure to give his captive a good supply of mealworms and gentles. He will have to feed his bird on these for the first few days, also giving the bird all the live insects he can lay his hands on. After the first few days he had better put a little stock mixture under the mealworms, and after a time, when the birds have settled down to cage life, and appear fairly contented, the number of mealworms must be gradually diminished, and the quantity of the soft food must be increased daily.

When they are Tamed.

These wild caught birds soon become tame and familiar. I put my Nightingales, when they are tamed down, into a box cage about twenty inches in length, with a door in the front, and also one at the side. The food and water vessels are placed inside, near the bottom of the cage, where the bird can see and get at them easily. The Nightingale is very fond of bathing. He should be allowed to do so, at least once a day, but care should be taken not to give the bath too late in the day, as it is desirable that the birds should be quite dry when retiring for the night.

A house-moulted Nightingale has no particular song season. He will sing at all seasons, but, of course, the spring and summer are his best periods. Some wild caught Nightingales very often will not sing in captivity, while others will sing freely.

In choosing a Nightingale for show, the main points to be considered, are excellence of size and richness of colour. They should have a good full eye, and their wings should be carried very tightly. They must also be in the best of health and feather, or otherwise they will stand but little chance of success.

THE CORNCRAKE HAS ARRIVED!

Extracts from an "appreciation" of the voice of the Corncrake which appeared in a recent issue of "Punch."

THE Corncrake has arrived. As I turned in at the gate last night he reported himself in the usual way. So now we are in for it. The priceless boon of silence in the hours of darkness will be denied to us for many weeks to come.

I do not know how to describe his utterance. It could not without extravagance be called a note, still less a chirp, and least of all a song. It is not a bark—not quite. It is hardly a growl or a grunt or a snort; I should be sorry to call it a bray or a yelp. And yet I am not going to admit that it is a quack or a bleat; and it isn't a screech or a squeal or a sob. Nor is it a croak, though now we are getting nearer to it. The puzzling thing about it is that it was clearly meant by Nature to be an interjection. Uttered once, suddenly, from the far side of a hedge it would admirably convey such a sentiment as, "Hi!" "What ho!" or "Here we are again!" But in practice it is the one sound in the whole landscape that never interjects. It is a monument of barron reiteration.

An Unmusical Monologue.

I wonder why he does it. No doubt he has some end in view. He must get something out of it—some bodily ease or mental stimulus or spiritual consolation. But he must surely have been born with a prodigious passion for monotony. It may surprise you to learn that in the course of the season he will make that same remark over two million times. I have worked it out. Two million is a conservative estimate. It only allows for eight hours' work out of the twenty-four, for a term of six weeks; so that it is well within the mark.

Our Corncrake—I don't know what the usual standard may be—does ninety-eight to the minute. He is as regular as the ticking of a clock You can't hustle him and you can't wear him out. At times when I have thought he might be getting tired or thirsty I have imagined that he was slowing down; but he never gets below ninety-six. At short measured intervals he punctuates the night with his dry delivery, unhasting yet unresting, his sole idea to get his forty-seven-thousand up without a break before the morning.

At first I used to throw things at him out of the bedroom window—hair-brushes and slippers and books and all sorts of odds and ends. I had to go round with a basket after breakfast collecting them. But it was no good; he never dropped a beat. Then I deliberately devastated the garden, with a view to deprive him of cover. I had all the bushes taken up and the flower-beds removed, and I laid down, just under my bedroom window, a wide expanse of tar-macadam, as bald and flat as a mirror—a beetle couldn't have hidden himself on it. (I had to call this a hard tennis-court for the sake of appearances).

There is nothing more that I can do, and it is only fair to admit that the whole thing is my own fault. When I built my house six years ago I might have shown a little common foresight in this matter. I got everything else right as far as I could. My rooms are well placed for sunshine and they have the best of the view. The water-supply is good; there is plenty of fall for the drainage system; we are well out of the motor dust. But I omitted one precaution. I should have had the ground surveyed for Corncrakes.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS' EXPERIENCE OF CAGE BIRD KEEPING.

My system of feeding is so similar to others that it is hardly worth mentioning, except that of late I have moistened the egg food (egg and Osborne biscuit) with a little water, believing it is easier for the hen to disgorge when feeding the young.

Touching on the question of egg binding, I have not had a case for the last four or five years, and I attribute my freedom to the fact that during the time of laying I always use a drop or two of cod liver oil with the egg food, and give plenty of maw seed, with an occasional pinch of niger. In cases of inflammation of the bowels, which, as you know, or probably soon will, is a great scourge with youngsters, I would suggest that instead of painting with turpentine you try Elliman's embrocation, as it is not quite so strong, and is quite effective. These few details are perhaps distinctions without much difference from what Mr. Ellis told you last month, and if you keep his directions by you, as I do, you cannot do better than follow them.

The Latest Love.

I have perhaps wandered a little from the heading of my paper, so will at once get on with the last four or five years of my experience, which brings me to the subject of my latest love (in the bird way), the Yorkshire Canary. In this breed, as in nearly every other since I started 35 years back, there have been great alterations of type, though it is interesting to notice that, as far as the printed standard existing in 1879 and 1880 is concerned, there is very little alteration from that of 1914, which I will refer to later.

The Yorkshire is one of the varieties that has stood the test of time, as, together with the Norwich and the little Border Fancy, it occupies the greater part of the Canary Fancy of the country to-day. Lizards, Belgians, Coppies, Cinnamons, and Crests are declining, while the London Fancy has practically disappeared, and has, perhaps, never been seen by many here to-night. At the time I first visited the Palace there were well-filled classes for all these varieties, and the smaller numbers this year, except the Yorkshires, which, I believe, contained more entries than ever before, speaks louder than anything I can say for the popularity of my favourite bird.

Shape is the Essence.

As you probably know, I was first announced, or billed, to give a lecture on this variety, but I felt it presumptuous, in view of the short time I have kept them, to attempt to teach members who are old hands, so that I shall state nothing beyond what I believe should be avoided, and what encouraged.

In selecting your stock for breeding show specimens we should aim at producing a bird of which shape is the essence. There are, of course, other points to consider, but that is the first to aim for. How shall we do it? Suppose we start in the recognised way of mating, i.c., buff to yellow. Let us be careful to obtain hens that conform to the following description, for like produces like, as a general rule.

The head should be round, narrow in the skull, without having any browing, which gives a sour look, and tells seriously against a bird when being judged. The neck should be long and straight, the shoulders round, and not showing any prominence (which tells of the Belgian cross). Wings, tip to tip, long and taper, with the flights tightly tucked away at the end of a long narrow back, which should be well filled, and show no hollow or spout, while the tail should be long, and shut so closely as to give the appearance of a flat pipe. If a pencil is laid on the back of the bird it should show nothing that requires either filling up or cutting away. The breast should be round, without frill, and from the breast downwards the bird should taper away gradually till it ends in a fine waist, where there should be no loose or fluffy feathers, the whole body of the bird being, so far as appearance is concerned, like wax.

Aiming at the Ideal.

This body should be supported on legs, straight and long without being stilty, and the bird should stand as upright as possible, any disposition to stand across the perch being sure to throw out a bird in good competition. Combine these points with length and size, and you have practically an ideal bird, and this is what we aim at producing. "Yes," you say, "but who has birds like this?" Well, not many of us here perhaps. If we had good Yorkshires would be plentiful and cheap, so we must make the best we can of the materials we have in hand.

We see the principal thing to keep in view when selecting our stock is to secure shape, style, and length without corners. We can generally find shape and neatness in the smaller birds, but our difficulties are likely to begin when introducing the size which we must have as well. I have found it comparatively easy to breed small, neat birds, but directly I have tried for size coarseness has shown itself. As, at the same time, it is no good breeding from two small birds, I try to select as shapely and neat birds as I can get hold of.

Putting in Size.

I prefer introducing size on the side of the cock, as I have invariably found he gives size to the youngsters, while a neat, shapely little hen will help to give them the style and polish we aim at. I would, as far as possible, avoid pairing two birds both showing frill on their breasts, as it is an obstinate fault to get rid of, and I would avoid putting together birds which each show the same faults; for example, if the cock bird is flat on the head, try to counterbalance this by having a hen with good head properties, and so with wrong carriage and other points, though there is one point which I try to avoid in both birds, and that is a broad tail, however good they may be otherwise. I trust many good Yorkshires, as near the ideal as possible, may be bred in Hastings this year, and at our next show may there be strong competition for the cup, and may the best bird win.

Mr. Wraight here read the old and new standards for judging to which he had referred earlier, and concluded as follows: In spite of the apparent lack of any difference, I don't think the Yorkshires of 35 years ago would stand much chance on the show bench to-day, nor, for that matter, would the Norwich, the Crested, or the Cinnamon.

Six Hens in One Nest.

SIR,—Respecting the above, a like experience once befel me only mine was years ago when I first started poultry-keeping. I built a little wooden hut, bought three broody hens, also three ducks, and set them with ten eggs each. On entering the hut next morning I was greatly surprised to find the whole six on top of one another in a hen's nest in the corner. I tried everything within reason to make them stop on their own nest, but without success. Then I thought of a bright idea; why not make one large nest in the magic corner and let them sit in it to their hearts' content. No sooner thought of than done. Talk about a sight for a circus! Fancy three hens and three ducks sitting on sixty eggs, all in one nest! Thinks I, I'll bet there's a game on here when they hatch out. At last the great day arrived. Out jumped 27 ducklings and 25 chickens. What a sight. Still more remarkable, when the young grew up the chickens used to go "quack-quack," and the ducklings went "cock-a-doodle-do!"

Did Birds Spring from Reptiles?

SIR,—If I were to read from some of our professors of modern thought that the cosmic scheme was only an accidental concourse of atoms; that Cleopatra's intercourse with Anthony was purely platonic; that Nero wasn't half as bad as he has been painted; that George Washington never told a lie—I could read all such without turning a hair; but at this piece of temerity I was astounded: "That the bird has been evolved from the reptile is a baseless assertion which has never been proved by any scientific body of men." In these days, when we are so prone to swallow all these scientists tell us, it is as refreshing as an east wind in the Highlands to see a writer courageous enough to oppose opinions based on purely theoretical conjecture. Nowadays, it is only necessary for one of the professors of science who has passed years of discretion to launch a theory and all his followers embrace it with both arms and it is accepted as an established fact. He doesn't support his conjecture with even problematical evidence. If a professor says so, it is so; and we accept his statement with the approving air of a couple of Sparrows surveying a dish of chicken meal. Mr. McLean's letter has pleased me very much, and surely if the theorists have a grain of indisputable evidence in support of their conjecture they will bring it forward. T. JOHNSON.

The Fancy in Aberystwith.

SIR,—I was in Aberystwith during Whit Week in connection with the Oddfellows A.M.C., and was fortunate in meeting Mr. Tudor, a Welsh fancier, who kindly showed me his birds and room—he had eight pairs and eighteen young. We then visited Mr. Williams, who has had no luck with eight pairs, having only four young, but several hens sitting. Mr. Evans, a Roller breeder, had forty young on the sticks, and a large number in the nests. This fancier is about the most successful I have ever met. Mr. Meredith had five pairs and twenty-seven young, also two Goldies (Welsh), one of which is the largest and best I have ever had the good fortune to see. I am surprised that with the considerable number of fanciers in the town, a club cannot form, for some reason or other; although they can combine to make some very successful shows. I wish to record my thanks for the hearty welcome given me by Mr. Tudor, and to express my appreciation of his kindness in introducing me to the local fanciers, as far as time allowed.

ARE SPECIALIST CLUBS IN DANGER?

SIR,—This is a question I am interested in and really meant to have dealt with before. Mr. Crisp has suggested that the Fancy is on the wane, there being, he says, a shortage of recruits. I am not convinced there is any evidence of the latter in my district, but would admit that the present high prices of seeds have a deterrent effect—that is as certain as that the last rose of summer blooms before the 1st of October. Anyone suggesting that the Fancy is on the wane must have a shock when they see the enormous quantity of advertisements in CAGE BIRDS. Lethargic in exhibiting? Of course, no one denies that; but the specialist clubs are in part to blame. Fanciers not in the running for the cups simply lose interest, and either refrain from showing or send their birds to a show where they are likelier to make their expenses. I make that statement at the risk of being called "mercenary" by the club sentimentalists, but I think I am writing not only for myself but for the bulk of fanciers. A great majority are working men, and they can't afford to overlook that point which is a great factor to the success of exhibiting—expense. Mr. Ley is an exhibitor of Crests, and his reference to the half-prize-money rule reflects more on the exhibitors—or, should I say, the non-exhibitors—in those classes than in any other. I think I shall be within the mark if I say that Crest classes throughout the country the last show season have averaged about six entries. Now, although a good bird can win in a large class as easy as in a small one, we must admit that a medium bird has a better chance of getting in the money in a class of six than in a class of twenty-six. And we must also admit that a fancier with a medium stud has a better chance of making ends meet when exhibiting in half-prize classes than he has in large classes. Four 3rds in half classes are better from the expense viewpoint than four v.h.c's. in large classes. And that is what is making the Fancy lethargic. Where a specialist club's patronage is given, competition is so keen that the fancier with his medium team can't get in, and he can't afford to merely patronise shows unless he has a big banking account. He thinks he has done enough patronising when he has paid his subscription.

There is no one who admired Mr. Tey more than myself for his courage when he launched his scheme of a few seasons ago for the benefit of the Crest Fancy, and it must have been the means of him having to dip pretty deeply into his cheque book; but even he must admit that the Crest Fancy is not exactly so robust as it might be with such stalwarts as himself to support it. His scheme of giving most points for reserve, and so on, even if Utopian, is better than the existing one; but he will find that those fanciers who are making the hobby into a business will not relish his scheme. What they are out for are the cups and trophies for advert. purposes. A few shillings in prize-money are of no consequence.

Mr. Spillman's suggestion of altering the rules will not obviate the danger; that is, not the rules he wants altering. Mr. Cole has set out a scheme which is as the radium to cure the cancerous growth. I like it, too, because it is first cousin to the one I advised in your columns not long before, which provided for the specialist club to give two extra prizes at the tail end of the cards to their own members; and although my letter didn't bring forth any comments, either for or against, perhaps when the Fancy sees such an able writer and enthusiast as Mr. Cole advocating it, they will hang on to it. His is a scheme to give the specialist clubs a new lease of life, the elixir which will keep them at their zenith.

Mr. Cole's other remedy is a very much needed one—that of different judges for each show. I think I am right in saying that one judge officiated at nearly all the S.N.P.C.'s shows, and if our judges were any of them infallible, we could say nothing against it; but each has his own particular fads, and I don't suppose this one is the exception which will prove the rule. Speaking of Norwich, I am reminded of two birds which were recognised by experts to be as near an approach to the ideal as have been bred—Mr. Davies' well-known Buff cock, winner of diploma at the Crystal Palace Show for best Norwich, Dewar Challenge Shield and Aitken Cup at the Scottish National Show, and many other prizes under as many different judges; only once was he beaten that season. The other is Mr. Sam Cook's (unflighted) Yellow hen, also only beaten once that season, and it fell to the lot of the same judge to keep her out. The judge who enjoys the distinction of being the only one not to have noticed these birds' good points is a well-known Southern judge. Of course, he must be right, and all the other judges wrong.

The Colour of Nets.

SIR,—Would any of your readers kindly tell me the best colour to have nets that are set on grass land for Linnets, etc. Any information would be gratefully received.

PONCY.

A Motherly Cock Canary.

SIR,—I have a very interesting pair of Norwich Plainheads. The cock bird did a share of the "sitting" or hatching of eggs by day, and from the time young were out of shell he commenced feeding them. But this evening he has gone still further, as upon going into room at 10 p.m. I find him "brooding" the five small young in nest, with his wings spread, and the hen asleep on perch. Never before have I seen a cock Canary do so much "house work." In fact when I saw this cock sitting on the eggs the greater part of day I thought he had "chilled" the lot, but all five eggs hatched, and young doing well.

Robin's Nest in a Conservatory Flower Basket.

SIR,—I have taken CAGE BIRDS since it came into existence, and take pleasure in forwarding you the enclosed photograph of a Robin's nest, which may interest my brother fanciers. This was taken by Mr. Carless (one of my young masters) of Simpson Croft, Hepscott, who is a keen nature lover. This Robin has built its nest in a flower basket hanging in one of the conservatories of the house. It has now five eggs in it (three when photographed) and though the plants in the basket are watered every day by one of the gardeners, along with the other flowers in the place, the birds, both cock and hen, take not the slightest notice, nor of the passers-by. They seem quite at home and happy.

JOHN W. PURVIS.

Truant Mules that Returned Home.

SIR,—I thought this might be of interest to the great number of readers of CAGE BIRDS; I have been one myself for a great number of years. I go in for British birds, and I have in cages Goldfinches, Bullfinches Linnets, and a Siskin Mule, also brown Linnet Mule. Well, sir, last Monday I had them all hung out of doors, and to my great surprise as I passed by the cages about three o'clock in the afternoon, I found the cage doors of the two Mules open, and the birds gone. You can imagine how I was vexed about it. I left all the birds out, and the empty cages hung up, thinking the truants might come back. I then went on with my work in the garden. Presently I saw both flying about the garden enjoying themselves. Night came on, but no birds; so next morning I put all the others out in their usual place, and took a walk round the garden, when I saw my two Mules on the ground. I went in and had breakfast. After this I go out to my work in the garden and lo and behold my Siskin Mule is back in his cage, with the door open. Of course, I shut the door and made sure of him. About 12 o'clock, too, sure enough the Linnet Mule was also in his cage helping himself to food. How can it be cruel to keep birds in cages if, when they have had their liberty for a day and a night, they come back to the old home again? I am a real lover of dumb animals.

National Appeal for Railway Concessions.

SIR,—The final conference in connection with the above scheme was held in the rooms, 142, High Street, Edinburgh, on Saturday, June 20. All the delegates, with the exception of the Perth representatives, were present, there being Messrs. Gibb and McLean (Glasgow), Watson and Drysdale (Edinburgh), John Brown (Galashiels), Peter Arnott (Alloa), Thomas Arnott (Kirkcaldy), and R. T. Campbell (Dunfermline). Mr. McLean (Rowhill) was called to the chair. The delegates tabled the suggestions from the various district conferences, while the secretary read a communication containing a copy of the petition used by the English societies in their appeal for similar concessions some time ago. The delegates expressed the great satisfaction they felt for the interest taken and the hearty support they were receiving from the London Federation of Cage Bird Societies, sent by their esteemed secretary, Mr. Birch. Each point raised by the delegates received due consideration, and the concessions we are likely to ask through our petition were considered reasonable in the extreme. Messrs. Gibb and McLean were asked and kindly consented to frame the petition. This in turn will be forwarded to each delegate, then placed before the Fife Cage Birds' League at their conference, to be held in Coaltown of Wemyss, July 4 and finally (with the consent of the Editor) we hope to circulate the said petition to the Fancy through the medium of CAGE BIRDS. We were more than delighted to have such a satisfactory return of signature sheets; still, it was thought advisable to again appeal to each secretary to forward us a postcard only, containing the name of his society, along with the signature of the president and sec., and the total number of members on his books. This, we are convinced, will bring up the total considerably. I make this appeal to my brother secretaries in the hope of receiving their full support, for only by better facilities in travelling our stock can we hope to keep, far less increase, the entries at our exhibitions.

How Canaries Beautify Society Functions.

Ascot Race Meeting Sets the Fashion.

SIR,—The hiring of Canaries is an innovation, but I hear it is increasing. The birds are hired for many purposes, though as a rule for giving a homely appearance to the surroundings. Theatres and musical halls often hire birds for a time, and so do other exhibitions. At the recent Horse Show, at Olympia, a number of Canaries were obtained on hire for the ten days during which the exhibition was open. The cages were hung round the old baronial buildings. At the last race meeting at Ascot all the ladies' retiring rooms, and the first-class refreshment rooms had birds in them for the first time. Cinematograph firms hire birds also in depicting scenes of home. It is said that the change of surroundings affects the birds so that they do not sing much, but as they are only obtained for appearance this is not a drawback from the hirer's point of view. The plan of hiring the birds instead of purchasing them outright is not due to a desire to save money, but to save trouble. A couple of dozen birds are required. The hirer sends a note to this effect to one of the dealers, and receives the birds at once. When there is no further need for them the dealer is informed and sends for them and hands in his bill. Ascot is, so far, the only race-course that has hired birds, but now that the ball has been set rolling no doubt other fashionable race-courses will follow suite. In some cases the value of the birds is more than paid for by the charges made. The dealer takes all risks, I suppose, and can make no claim in case of the death of, or injury to, his birds.

The Mating of Bullfinch Hen and Cock Canary.

SIR,—Many thanks for inserting my letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS. The hen laid her fifth egg on June 15, and to-day (22nd inst.) she has laid the first egg of the second round. Unfortunately she will not sit above a day. The five eggs were dropped from a very low perch, and I have set them under a hen Canary. She had, however, made a rough nest in half a cocoanut shell. This round she has laid in the nest, and will, I think, continue to do so. The cock has fed and been with her all the time. Do you think the hen Bullfinch laying again so soon causes the eggs to be unfertile?

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

SIR,—I am glad to note from Mr. Lewis' remarks in your last issue that he respects the opinions of others. I did not give an opinion, however, but stated my own experience. I may mention that I have kept Nightingales off and on for nearly forty years, of course with varying experiences, as birds differ in their individuality the same as human-beings; there are scarcely two alike in their behaviour. Some are shy and nervous and will never make pets, do what you may to try and tame them, and only experience can teach you what kind of bird to select when caging a freshly-caught one. I would much rather give a very wild bird its liberty than cage it, but if you hit upon the right sort of bird and obtain him immediately upon arrival, before he is mated, and give him the proper kind of food mentioned in my last letter, the bird will not only "sing moderately well," but repay you with its full song, the same as when at large, as they have invariably been doing with me. The reason why Softbill trappers sell their freshly-caught 'Gales at low prices is not far to seek. In the first place very few of them will go to the trouble of properly steadying down a 'Gale. It takes too long for their purpose. If several are kept in a cage together for some time, they will only damage each other by fighting and knocking about, so that their chances of singing, when caged off separately afterwards, are in most cases spoilt for that reason. In the second place the food bill would not only be heavy but live food in quantity would be needed, for many difficult to procure, and I think for that reason alone trappers are anxious to get them off their hands. In conclusion I think if Mr. Lewis pays attention to proper selection he will be convinced that it is not a question of luck, but that he will meet with the same success as I have always done. Of course he must not keep two birds in the same room if they should happen to come into song at the same time; one is sure to "drown" the other, and one bird will stop singing altogether.

OTTO PUCK.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Light Linnet Mules Bred at Longton.

Another Side to the Case.

SIR,—I hope you will pardon me for drawing your attention to a little matter that I think should be ventilated. In last week's issue I noticed an advertisement under "Mules" from a Mr. Perrins, of Longton, offering for sale the parents of two "clear Linnet Mules," and saying "see CAGE BIRDS of June 13th." I remembered the letter in your issue of that date, announcing the birth of these "Mules," but my recollection was that the writer described them as "almost clear"—not clear. On looking up the letter I found that this was so, and that the writer was a Mr. T. Bown. So presumably Mr. Perrins bought the two birds (the parents) he himself offers from this Mr. Bown. Now my point is that Mr. Perrins' remark "see CAGE BIRDS of June 13th" would lead readers to assume that you had in some way or other vouched for these "Mules," and would lead them to think they really were "clear Linnet Mules." I need hardly point out to you, sir, how this kind of thing might even be deliberately "worked," though I do not for one moment suggest anything of the kind happened in this instance. We all know, however, how frequently in the past young "clear Mules" have been announced, especially by novices, which have afterwards shown themselves to be nothing but Canaries. Now I hear from a Longton correspondent, who is a competent judge, that these "Mules" of Mr. Bown's are really Canaries, i.e., that the breeder has by some means fallen into error. If this is so, what is Mr. Perrin's responsibility to your readers, to whom he may have sold the Linnet and the Canary as being the parents of "clear Mules"? What do they think of it?

INTERESTED.

SIR,—The two "clear Linnet Mules" mentioned in your paper as being bred at Longton I went to see, and they are only young yellow Canaries.

E. TAMS.

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

SIR,—However much Mr. T. Johnson intends to support his contention that some of our novices require their palates humouring with the choicest viands, I am going to say plainly all the time that if there is a successful breeder and exhibitor who is thriving upon anything else but his own grit and dogged determination to succeed, I shall be glad to learn of him. Incidentally, if there is a more reliable backbone in the Fancy than that which is composed of such fanciers, novice and champion, then let me hear about it with all speed. When the good, plain, wholesome fare, which the Fancy always provides, is pushed aside in preference for a diet all "bubble and squeak," depend upon it there is some dyspepsia knocking about; which I expect really accounts for the perverted views entertained by many sufferers, whose backbone gets a nasty kink in it even if I only look at it. I observe he does not enthuse much in respect to my invitation to Cardiff, and seems desirous of diverting my attention to his sleeping partner, but somehow I prefer to keep awake a bit longer in an endeavour to serve the best needs of our novices, many of whom I always admire, and some of whom I don't and have said so. The only matter I wish to touch upon in the letter of "Old Fogey" is the statement about always being prepared to sell my best specimens. Such is very far from truthful, which many would-be buyers can well support. No money has yet tempted me to part with a Plainhead intended to take its place in my stud. Otherwise, no matter how good, I sell them at a price, as their retention to form one of a team merely for exhibition purposes plays no part in the scheme of joy and happiness which I have long since mapped out and followed, though I do not claim that my measure of joy and hapiness is one whit more than the pleasure of "Old Fogey," or even the exhibitor who would sweep the deck.

A Pure White House Sparrow.

SIR,—Perhaps it may interest you to know I had a young fully fledged House Sparrow, pure white, with pink eyes; but it only lived two days.

A New Use for the Fil-up Feeder

SIR,—For those who have birds that will not bathe and possess no spray, a good plan is to fill the Fil-up feeder with water, and by placing the finger lightly on the end a good spray is obtained. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for several years, and find it most instructive and interesting. I always recommend it to anyone making a hobby of birds. Wish it every success.

The Treatment of Live Stock by Railway Companies.

SIR,—I have been treated in the same manner as Mr. James Ferrabee. On May 4, through an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS, I sent four birds to Byfleet, Surrey, by the 8.26 p.m. train from Caerphilly. On May 5, at 7.14 p.m., I received telegram stating "birds not arrived." On May 6 I received postcard stating "Birds arrived safe, one a bit mopey." Now these birds were kept about from Monday night until Wednesday morning. It is a mystery how they lived. I sent one bird in April to the same place, and after being delayed for 24 hours, it arrived dead. I got another order for three cock Canaries to be sent to the same place (Byfleet). I was a bit nervous about sending, after the way the others had been treated, and I made sure that they should not suffer in the same way. I arranged with the buyer for me to take birds to Cardiff and send them on from there, while he would be at Paddington Station to meet them. Those birds arrived safely. I should like to see some alteration in the way the public are treated by railway companies (re live stock), and hope some abler pen than mine will take the matter up.

BURNHOPE C.B.S.

Meeting June 13, Mr. H. Barron chair, with a good turn-up of members. Stewards were picked for young bird show. G. Dawson, H. Barron, J. Robson, G. Bates, C. Davison, H. Edgar, J. Lowerson, J. Skivington, A. Herdman were elected members. Any member who has not got a schedule for young bird show, July 4, please apply for one.—J. W. Robson, Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting, 81, Kilbowie Road, June 18, Mr. McGown presiding over a good attendance. Mr. McGown gave a report of the meeting held in Glasgow in connection with the Fife C.B.L. in regard to approaching the railway companies. Mr. Sheridan's motion was brought forward, and after some keen discussion it was agreed that the sec. write the other clubs in Dumbartonshire and find if they were favourable to it. Letter read from Mr. Rennie, Falkirk, in regard to the testimonial to Mr. Hugh Morland, and a sum of money was collected for this worthy cause.—Wm. Rane, Sec.

ALTRINCHAM (Open) C.B.S.

Meeting June 17, Station Cafe. Mr. T. Harrison presiding over a good attendance, who were very anxious to hear what Mr. W. Fairhurst would have to say to them in reference to British birds, and members were rewarded by hearing some very good advice and valuable hints; the novice members especially should find it of great assistance. Time unfortunately curtailed much that Mr. Fairhurst would have liked to say. At the close he was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Next meeting July 1st, Station Cafe, at 8. Lecture on colour breeding and colour feeding by Mr. T. Harrison.—C. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

HALIFAX C.B.S.

First N.F. Show, June 20, in the King Cross Band Room, Mr. H. Sutcliffe, Shipley, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. The judge, in his remarks, said although there was not a large entry, what was short in this respect was made up for in the quality. Some very good birds were shown all round, and with a good moult will be heard of again. Mr. E. Benson, novice, won sp. for best clear or tkd. bird with a nice clear yellow, quite a typical Yorks., and a credit to the owner.

OPEN CL. or TKD. YELL. YORKS.: 1, Walsh; 2, Priestly; 3, Savile. BUFF: 1, 2, Stobart; 3, 4, Savile. EVEN, ETC. YELL.: 1, 2, Priestly; 3, Stohart. BUFF: 1, Walsh; 2, Priestly. NOV., CL. or TKD. YELL. YORKS.: 1, sp, best cl. or tkd. bird, Benson; 2, Wilson. BUFF: 1, 3, Gelder; 2, Benson; 4, Corney. EVEN, ETC., YELL.: 1, Wilson; 2, Corney. BUFF: 1, Benson.

This, the first show in connection with the society proved a success. Next N.F. show, July 4, when it is hoped that members will then have more birds ready to exhibit.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec., 46, Hammond-st., Halifax.

SOUTHERN YORKS C C.

Tenth annual general meeting held at the El Vino, Piccadilly, April 30, President Mr. R. L. Crisp in the chair, with a good attendance. The balance sheet was adopted. The prizes were presented to members present, the greater part having been sent prior to the meeting. The result of the ballot for the election of officers, etc., was:—President, Mr. R. L. Crisp; vice-pres., Messrs. W. G. Elsmore, A. E. Pattrick, J. Robson, F. Easterling; committee, Messrs. H. Smith, P. Rooke, J. Carson, J. Dewhurst, H. Jones, J. Hawes, H. Knight, Capt. Fellowes, L. Bousfield, E. Holliday, Col. Roath, F. Tebbs; treas., Mr. R. L. Crisp; sec., J. W. Rennie; auditors, Messrs. H. Smith and J. Tyson. The President explained the case of Mr. Granville, and it was decided that the win should not count. Notice of motion that in the event of any tie, the member who takes most prize money wins. To this there was an amendment that the specials should be divided. The amendment met with the approval of the meeting, which recommended it to the committee to adopt. Notice of motion to amend novice teapots, etc., was lost. Notice of motion that nomination papers be only sent to four or six of the committee was carried. Mr. W. G. Elsmore very kindly offered a £5 5s. cup for unflighted birds, also Mr. R. L. Crisp a £2 2s. cup for novices with unflighted birds. Mr. Skinner also offered a dozen table knives for first year champion, also a special for the novice member making most points. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—J. W. Rennie, Hon. Sec. (The above report reached us on June 24.—Editor.)

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Meeting June 22, Assembly Rooms, Market, Carnarvon. Present: Chair, Mr. James Jones; Mr. John Wynne Parry, Mr. Edward Jones, Mr. J. W. Jones, Mr. J. O. Parry, Mr. Richard Hughes, Mr. R. Davies, Mr. H. J. Williams, and R. E. Griffith, Sec. Mr. James Jones (chairman) and the Sec. wished to resign, but eventually agreed to stand for another year, the Sec. hoping that the new committee would attend meetings more regularly than the old committee. Mr. Edward Jones was elected hon. treas., and Mr. R. Lloyd Jones auditor. The committee are:—Chair, Mr. James Jones; vice-chair, Mr. John O. Parry; hon treas., Mr. Edward Jones; committee, Messrs. J. W. Jones, R. Green, John Wynne Parry, George Jones, Richard Hughes, R. H. Davies, John Hughes, Howell J. Williams, Harrison Morris, W. R. Roberts, and Sec., R. E. Griffith; the presidents and vice-presidents being held over till next meeting. A vote of thanks was passed to the late committee for kind services during 1913 and 1914. We have fixed Dec. 26 for next open show; the challenge cups will be up again. The entrance fee for membership is 1s., and I beg fanciers of North Wales who intend to join to send on postal order for 1s. We have only the small balance of 1s. 4d. in hand, and fanciers may help by joining at once, so that we may have funds to carry on our efforts to have a grand open show again. If any fancier would like to support us in any way we shall be very thankful for any little cash or special. We shall have no members' show this year, only an open show. The cup presented by Mr. Herbert Jones (present holder, Mr. James Jones) will be competed for at the open show for points with unflighted Canaries shown by members only: it has to be won twice in succession or three times in all. Committee meetings in future will be held every Monday at 7.30 at Assembly Rooms.—R. E. Griffith, Sec., Balaclava Road, Carnarvon.

SOUTH CO. (Dublin) C.B.A.

A young bird show will be held July 25 in the Court House, Town Hall, Kingston, confined to members. Eight classes each for Yorks and Nor. Fee 6d. Birds staged 3. There will also be a British bird section for juveniles, fee 2d. Mr. Barclay will judge Canaries and Mr. Carroll the juvenile section. Will members who have not yet sent in their annual subscription kindly do so at once, so that they will be able to take part in the first young bird show run by the association.—D. Smyth, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, June 20, Mr. Farrer presiding. Sec. read a letter from the N.C.C. stating that Mr. J. Ford Maling was giving a gold medal for best bird, and Mr. George Debson a silver medal for best novice bird, both confined to members of the N.C.C. exhibiting at our open show, which kind offers were gratefully accepted. Decided to have a ramble to Corbridge on June 27, train leaving Sunderland at 12.43, all invited. Second N.F. show, July 4, at Headquarters, at 6.30; Mr. Connaughton, of the Empire Aviaries, has kindly promised one stone of seed for most points at this show. Mr. W. Tallantyre's election to membership was confirmed. —J. Peacock, Hon. Sec.

BATH.

Table Show, June 18, at Mr. Taylor's camp, Canaries unfortunately were absent, undoubtedly owing to the breeding season, but Brit. were good in quality. Mr. S. E. Jones judged. GOLDF. or BULLF. (9): 1, 2, 3, sp., Russell, two good Goldies, leading, 3, a real good Bullie, with a moult will want stopping. GREENF., ETC.: 1, 2, 3, Jones, Siskin leading, correct type, good qual., and 2, Leseer Redpolls. A.O.V.: 1, Russell, F.-M. Bramble, good feather and steady; 2, Wise, Yellow Bunting, credit for novice; 3, Taylor, ditto. MULE or HYB.: 1, 2, 3, Jones, staged in the usual way. FOR, SMALL: 1, sp, Mabony, charming pair Budgerigars. LARGE: 1, 2, 3, Taylor, two good Amazons and Cockatoo.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting, Maskell's Hotel, June 18. Mr. Allsopp presided. After some discussion re judges for the Young Bird Show in July, Mr. E. J. Banks was elected to judge Yorks, and Mr. E. J. Davies remainder. Resolved that entry fee be 6d., and no birds to be removed before 9.30. Messrs. Wiseman, Peace, Charles, and Raymond, to act as stewards. Specials promised: 2s. 6d. by Mr. Allsopp, for best bird shown by a novice in the open classes; sp., value 10s. by Mr. Banks, best bird in show, bred 1914; Mr. Townsend. 2s. 6d. for most points in novice Yorks.; Mr. H. C. Smith, 2s. 6d., most points in novice Nor.; Mr. E. J. Davies also promised a special. Mr. Banks raised the question of holding a members' show in October; decided to deal with this at next meeting. Prize money won at Young Bird Shows will be paid at next meeting. Subs. now due.—E. Thomas, Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

The above society held a very successful smoking concert at the Land o' Cakes Hotel, June 17; about thirty members and friends were present. Our chairman, Mr. Fulcher, occupied the chair, and, with his usual ready wit, kept the company in a very good humour. The artistes were numerous, and their songs, etc., were of very high merit. We were surprised to find such a lot of hidden talent amongst our members. The evening's entertainment opened with a pianoforte solo by Mr. A. Butler, who also accompanied the various artistes throughout the evening in a very masterly style. The following gentlemen sang in fine form, and many encores were called for and given:—Mr. Butler, Mr. Riddlesworth, Mr. Massey, Mr. McKail; Mr. Griffiths gave several grand concertina solos. Mr. Brown proposed a toast, "Our President," which was ably supported by Mr. Robinson. Mr. Moorbey proposed "Our Society" in a few well-chosen words, and was ably supported by Mr. McTurk. We were very pleased to see our friend Mr. Atkinson present. A very enjoyable evening was terminated by singing "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King."—F. Hayward, Hon. Sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Meeting, Cossars Tea Rooms, June 5, President A. Moffat in the chair; classification was gone through for annual show; agreed to have 13 classes for Norwich, 12 Borders, 19 for Mules, Brit., and For. Judges: Norwich, Mr. T. Morrison, Burnbank; Borders, Mr. W. B. Smart, Loanhead; Mules, Brit., and For., Mr. J. Livingstone, Bathgate.—A. Hoyle, Sec.

NEWTONGRANGE C.B.S.

At a recent meeting the auditor's report was submitted and approved. Sec. stated that the income had been £62 2s. 3d., and expenditure £44 1s. 4½d., leaving a balance of £18 0s. 10½d. This was considered satisfactory, as there were various necessary items of expenditure which will not occur the following year. Mr. George Nelson and Mr. James Smith were appointed trustees. Office-bearers appointed:—Pres., Mr. A. M. Gardiner; vice-pres., Mr. W. Thomson; sec. and treas., Mr. W. Bryson. A committee of management was also appointed. Decided to have a first feather show Aug. 1. Classes: Two Nor., two Borders, one A.O.V., one Mules or Hyb., and one Brit. Agreed to solicit the services of Mr. Steele (Dalkeith) as judge. The date of the open show is Dec. 19. Agreed to give guarantee of advertisement to CAGE BIRDS. Next meeting June 20, at 3, for nomination of judges, to consider the classification, and any other competent business.—A. M. G.

Country Rambles

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD, C.B.S.

A good muster of members and friends went for a ramble through Epping Forest, June 13th. The weather was delightfully fine, and bird life was in abundance. Leaving the station and skirting the right hand of the lake we turned into forest and glade, and a more enthusiastic lot of seekers it would have been difficult to find; we were soon rewarded for our trouble by bringing to light a nest containing four bonny young Linnets about 5 days old; we also found young and eggs of the Blackbird, Thrush, Robin, and another which, after some discussion we had to write down as unknown On arriving at The Owl we all did full justice to a splendid meat tea, after which we wended our way homeward to the merry song of the Thrush, Blackbird, Chaffinch, etc., just before they retired for the night. It was with a feeling of regret that we realised another grand outing had come to a close.—J. Hyde, Hon. Sec.

DUNFERMLINE C.B.S.

Annual outing, June 20. The Mecca was, as in former years, Pitreavie Estate, Mr. Henry Beveridge having kindly granted permission to the members and their friends to view the beauties of bird life in the estate. The main party left by tramcar at 1.30, joining a few of the country members at Halbeath. Passing down a beautiful shady lane, we came to the boundaries of the plantation, where we were met by Mr. Oswald, the forester, to whom we are greatly indebted for assistance, which went far to help the success of the ramble. The first nest found was a willow warbler's, discovered by Mr. Scobie. Although nests were discovered galore, the next strikingly interesting thing was when Mr. Cumming found a squirrel's nest. He was fully compensated for his stiff climb, as on examination, the nest was found to be lined with the skins of five young squirrels. Soon after this a Wood-pigeon's nest was found by Mr. Allister, but the climax was reached when Mr. Penman discovered a young Horned Owl, sitting on a tree a little from the nest.

The company then adjourned to Mastertown, where they were entertained to tea by Mrs. Oswald, after which a business meeting was held, but owing to the importance of the matters on the agenda, they were remitted for discussion and disposal to a later meeting. The company was then conducted over the grounds of Pitreavie Castle, including the beautiful rock gardens, and were also shown the interesting model railway at the back of the castle. To say that it was a success is to say the least of it, although we all missed the cheerful company of Mr. Campbell, the society's enthusiastic secretary, who was unable to attend, as he had to be present at a West Fife League conference in Edinburgh. The attendance numbered about twenty.—J. Anderson, Asst. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Members Spend a Day Amidst Beautiful Woods.

On awaking on Sunday, June 14, all eyes were turned heavenwards to see whether fortune would favour us on this great day. I say great day because it had been looked forward to for months, and has been the talk of all since the 1914 programme was formed. None of the members forgot the glorious time we had in the same district in 1913, and for that reason everyone was very keen on being present. What a glorious day! Fortune had again favoured us, the sun was shining in the heavens hours no doubt before the majority of those participating were astir, although some were up betimes looking after their birds, so that they might have the afternoon clear to enjoy nature to the full. We met at the Park Hotel, Hillsboro', and a glorious meet it was; the numbers present eclipsed all expectations. The route was through the famed Bulley Woods, through Greno Woods on to Norfolk Arms Hotel for tea and home. About five hundred yards from the Park Hotel we reached Bulley Woods. The beauty of the district is that in ten minutes we are in the depth of the woods, no matter which route we take. Nature was absolutely at its best, after the rains of the early part of the week, the trees, grasses, and flowers, had, as it were, put on their very best attire to greet us. Over-head was a Woodpigeon making love to his better half, while she was looking after her duties of incubation; immediately after a Blackbird with young was discovered, Friend Milne said he found a Nightingale. A lovely Tree Pipit would indeed have held its own in the strongest competition. Bird life appeared more abundant than I have seen on any previous walk through these woods. We keep on to the paths in the woods for about four miles, but then have to take to the road for about a mile and climb a steep hill, with a burning sun overhead, not altogether to the liking of all. We kept trudging on, however, and eventually were rewarded by once more entering the shade of the wood, where the soft grass was like carpet to our feet.

Making headway to the "Halfway House" in the centre of the wood, an ideal spot was selected for refreshments, and this necessitated a rest of about half an hour, during which time our photographer got to work. Here we found our genial treasurer, Dr. Craig, awaiting us. After we had refreshed and rested we commenced the latter half of our journey, this half being by far the most interesting. The woods are literally alive with ants, and therefore with Softbills. Our guide was in his glory here, for the last forty years he has traversed the paths in the woods; he knows every nook and corner. His particular forte is "ants and their habits"; he thinks nothing of putting his hand in the midst of a nest with thousands of ants running about, carrying their eggs to what they consider a place of safety.

We cannot stay too long on this interesting little spot as tea is ordered for six o'clock, so we make headway once more. The Softhills were in abundance hereabouts, Redstarts, Tits of all kinds, Wrens, Gales, etc., etc. A brake to our left in the woods was overgrown with thistles, a few Goldies were hereabout, but it is a little early for them to find their favourite seed. There is a magnet in front, just on the top of some trees which lie before us, as we are now on the descent, we see the tall white chimney stack of our hotel, some say they smelt the ham and eggs, at any rate, we were all ready for it, and everyone did justice to it. After tea we had an official photograph taken outside the hotel.

Forty-one sat down to tea, a nice little muster, and at the conclusion of tea our chairman pointed out what the society aimed at, and how we tried to encourage the Fancy. This was the means of making ten hon. members and four ordinary members, not bad for a ramble. After tea some of the party, not having had sufficient of the woods, made another journey in them. The roll call for home was made about 8.30, and home was reached about ten o'clock, everyone having spent a most enjoyable time. Our next ramble, July 12, via Cardwell Valley, is being looked forward to already, for everyone knows the beautiful scenery Derbyshire can give us.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

Great Discovery!

This article is No. I of the new series calling "Cage Birds" readers attention to a remarkable Holeproof Cloth that will not tear.

A REAL GOOD TIP! CLOTHES BILL MORE THAN HALVED!!

Remarkable Cloth that won't wear out—won't tear. In fact absolutely holeproof. Free samples for "Cage Birds" readers.

Readers of a serious turn of mind—those who think—yet not deeply, must recognise the remarkable changes made in every industry—the outcome of scientific study and research. The result of years of experimentation frequently gives to the world the most simple invention—so very simple, yet which in a few months scraps all old methods and appliances, and results in a better article at half the price for the public. The changes in methods in all businesses are simple yet remarkable for their results, yet to think that science has given us a cloth absolutely untearable—and of such hardwearing qualities that the manufacturers willingly guarantee it, no matter how hard it is worn, for at least six months and at the same time offer clothing at half the price of that made from ordinary tweeds is certainly most astounding.

The Cloth.

As previously stated, this really marvellous cloth is absolutely untearable—you cannot tear it, no matter how hard you try; but possibly the thought arises that being of such hard-wearing qualities, it must resemble in some shape or form the ordinary old-fashioned cord. This is not so. Side by side with the latest designs in tweeds, and the best of our fancy worsteds, readers without testing the cloth would be unable to say which was holeproof and which was ordinary tweed. It is absolutely identical in appearance, and for considerably less than a sovereign, it is possible to obtain the design and colouring which in ordinary tweeds could not be procured under £3 or £4. The designs are suitable for office and best wear and field or rough wear, so that readers, whether at work or at leisure need have no hesitation in wearing garments made from this remarkable cloth. The cloth could not be torn by a barbed wire fence, it is quite impossible to tear it, and the manufacturers predict that just as soon as the public learn of its remarkable wearing qualities, ordinary tweeds and serges will become a thing of the past.

THE BLACKCAP WARBLER.

Prices Extraordinary.

The prices of garments in this holeproof cloth are truly remarkable—of course, they are cut very low, more or less, to induce the public to test the cloth. It is possible to procure a really well-cut, smartly-finished suit consisting of jacket, vest, and trousers for the absurd sum of 14s. 9d., whilst a pair of trousers guaranteed for six months' solid hard wear could be obtained for merely 4s. 6d., or gent's riding, cycling or walking breeches for 6s.

Method in Making.

Readers naturally ask the question, can these goods be well made for the money? Here again is the result of the employment of modern methods and machinery, the outcome of years of experimentation, which have rendered it possible to supply a suit of clothes for 14s. 9d., which our grandfathers could not possibly have obtained at anything like treble the price. As an instance of the labour-saving devices, it might be mentioned that every sewing machine used in the making of these garments is driven by electric power; no work except the actual guidance of the garments through the machine falls on the worker, with the result that double and treble quantity of garments can be turned out with absolute assurance that every garment is really well made. This is one instance of how the method carried from the beginning to the end of the business has resulted in a better and cheaper article for the public.

The Result.

Readers would do well to investigate this offer, and the result to themselves, will be a considerable saving of money in their tailoring bills, besides being able to wear garments made from a cloth, which looks really smart, and yet will wear even better than the ordinary common cords.

Generous Free Samples for Readers.

To induce readers to give this remarkable cloth a trial, the manufacturers offer to send either a sample pair of trousers for 4s. 6d. and 4d. postage, if readers will send their waist and leg measure, or for merely a ½d. postcard asking for free samples, a generous supply of cloth cuttings, fashions, and a most remarkable measurement chart, which will enable readers to measure themselves, as well as any tailor could measure them, will be sent absolutely free of charge by return of post. Readers would do well to study the advertisement beneath, and either write for the sample trouser or send a post card for the free samples of cloth cuttings, etc.

GREAT DISCOVERY! SAVE YOU POUNDS!!

Remarkable Cloth—Won't Tear—Won't Wear Out—Absolutely Holeproof.

We will give any reader a pair of Trousers, Breeches, or Complete Suit, free of charge, if he can wear the smallest hole in six months, no matter how hard he wears goods. We have discovered a really remarkable cloth that will not tear or wear out—absolutely holeproof, looks exactly as finest tweeds and serges, made in all the most up-to-date designs and suitable for farm and rough wear or office and best wear. Just to introduce this remarkable cloth to Cage Birds' readers we offer a pair of well-cut Gent's Trousers for only 4/6; Breeches 6/-, or complete stylish suit for 14/9, and send in parcel a guarantee, plainly stating if the smallest hole appears in six months (no matter how hard you wear goods) we replace the garment absolutely free of charge. Send 4/6 and 4d. postage, together with waist and leg measures, and state colour, for sample pair of Trousers (Breeches 6/4 post free).

WARNING! We have warned the public over and over again to beware of unsatisfactory imitations. Our earnest wish is that you compare our patterns with others. You'll see at once the difference between imitation and genuine.

FREE SAMPLES. Send just a postcard mentioning "Cage Birds" for grand free range of patterns, fashions, and easy measure form. Say Trousers, Breeches, or Suit patterns.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

TWISTING FEATHERS (Yuakey's Houses).—Your query is really too vague for me to give you any definite advice. Is what you describe as something like a fur close to the skin a scurfy substance, or simply a short downy kind of feather? You should also have given full particulars as to how you feed the bird, where it is kept, and how long it has been affected in this way; if it appears otherwise in good health, and its probable age. Try the following treatment for two or three weeks, and if there is not a considerable improvement in that time, write again, and give the fullest particulars you can. Keep bird in a bright, healthful position, and the cage floor and perches as clean as possible, and allow bird to bath freely. In addition to the seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk, slightly dusted with flour of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give in the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice. Do not forget to give a little green food in moderate quantity, and of a varied kind.

TO CURE ASTHMA (Anxious).—When well established asthma may be regarded as incurable. Treatment is only palliative, and can only be so when the exciting causes are removed, and the bird kept under healthful conditions. But you ought to have described the symptoms, and given full particulars how you feed the bird, and where and how it is kept, as it may not be suffering from asthma at all. Anyway, try what the following will do for it. See that it is kept in a bright and healthy place, free from direct draughts, or great fluctuations of heat and cold, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings. During the first week limit the diet to plain canary seed, supplemented with a liberal supply of green food in variety, and add to the water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day. For the next fortnight after this give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, and shake well together. If not well in this time, write again, and give particulars as named above, and I will advise you further.

TO MAKE HIM WHISTLE (Novice).—I'm afraid I cannot tell you how to make a cock sing if he does not want to. But any healthy, vigorous cock Canary that has not commenced his moult, should be in song long before this time. As it has only sang a month in the last eighteen months, I should, unless he gave very strong proof in that short time to the contrary, be inclined to doubt his sex. As the moulting season is very nigh, I doubt if he would in any case begin to sing now until after he has moulted. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece. Allow it to bathe freely, and give a liberal supply of seed heads of dandelion, shepherd's purse, mouse-ear, and seedy sprays of chickweed. If this does not have the desired effect, write again, and refer to this reply.

SITS RUFFLED UP (Tango).—If, as I assume, the bird was in good health and lively up to three weeks ago, and has gradually fallen off to this listless condition, I do not suppose there is anything more the matter than the moult about to commence. Possibly the bird may have commenced to shed feathers by this time, in which case there will be no more doubt. If this is the case all you need do is to keep the bird fairly warm, and out of direct draughts, give a little egg food, or any substitute you may prefer, three times a week, and on the remaining days give a little seed mixture (in case you do not feed on a mixture as staple), and a fairly liberal supply of varied green food and wild seeds as mentioned in reply to "Novice." If it appears that this surmise is not correct, treat the bird generally as advised in that reply, except that in your case you must omit the medicine in the water, and give instead ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and after this four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

A WATERY BLADDER (Mrs. Strickland).—A small sketch, no matter how crude, to show the position of the substance, would have been useful, as I cannot decide from description whether it is on the abdomen or the root of the tail. If in the latter position, you might try painting it with tincture of iodine twice, allowing an interval of three days to elapse between the paintings. If this does not cause absorption, and there is any kind of a "head" to it, prick with a clean needle, after bathing for a few moments with warm water gently press out the contents, wash clean, and anoint for a few days with Lanocyllin ointment. If the substance is anywhere on the abdomen, do not interfere with it, but treat as follows and report result. For one week add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day, and after this dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of water a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half this size, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid, and give this in place of plain water for drinking every second day for a fortnight.

BREAKING UP (S. A. M. James).—(1) If the cocks were removed when the hens commenced to sit, and the hens are bringing up the young broods by themselves, there is no difficulty whatever in breaking up the pairs for the season by simply withholding the cocks from any further access to the hens. In a great number of cases the hens will make no further attempts to nest again this season, but in those few cases where they do, the removal of the nest and all nesting material, where nest is not still occupied by the young, will be a sufficient deterrent to stop them going on. Very prolific hens may lay a casual egg or two, or in exceptional cases a full clutch, but it will be better to destroy these than to let them attempt another brood of young, and turn the hens altogether into a large flight cage as soon as they are quite freed from the necessity of feeding the young. If the cocks are with the hens helping to bring up the broods, then, as soon as the young are well free of the nest, if the hens show any signs of beginning another nest, remove them and turn them into the flights, being careful to see that no nesting receptacle or material is about for them to play about with, and leave the cocks with the young to finish the weaning of them. In all cases, as soon as the young are well out of the nests and do not return to it, remove it, and do not allow any scraps of nesting material to be about the cages. The mere absence of the latter is, in most cases, sufficient to stop breeding efforts at this season. It is not essential to keep the cocks out of sight of the hens, but this acts as an extra deterrent in the case of prolific hens which are anxious to go on breeding. Cocks may be kept together in one flight, and hens in another. Only very belligerent specimens need be caged separately. (2) I see no objection to breeding with the hen with the hind toe turned forward next year, if she is otherwise robust and in good health. As you were too late to use a rubber ring you might yet do something for the toe by modifying the perches for a time, as advised to "P.D.R." in last issue.

LOST ITS VOICE (D. Newman).—It may be too late now to do much in restoring the Roller's voice prior to moulting, as it is very near the time when you can only expect it to be silent on this account. See that it is not exposed to direct draughts, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. Apart from draughts, keep it in a bright and airy place. In addition to the seed diet, give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and two drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and finally sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water 15 drops of a mixture of equal parts glycerine, honey, and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece. After giving this a fortnight, miss a week, and then resume, and give it for another fortnight. If the voice does not return soon after the moult is finished you had better write again, and refer to this reply.

DIED YOUNG (F.P.).—Your dietary is decidedly at fault, and is doubtless mainly responsible for the loss of the young. Also, from your remark as to supplying the soft food in a glass on the floor of the cage, I surmise you have not a proper breeding cage, and this may possibly have contributed somewhat to the loss. The actual cause was clearly that the hen did not feed them, and you do not say whether the cock was with her or not. If he was, try removing him next time the hen is beginning to sit, and leave her to hatch out and rear the young by herself. Give a staple seed diet of plain canary seed, and add a pinch of summer rape on top of it each day. When the young are due to hatch, give the egg food in small quantities, and fresh at least twice a day, three times would be far better if the weather is very warm. If the hen does not seem to begin to feed well by the second day give a tiny leaf of crisp young lettuce at once, otherwise begin to give it on the morning of the fourth day, and give a little either lettuce, chickweed, flowering tips of groundsel, or watercress, fresh each morning and afternoon. At the end of eight days or so you may give a little soaked rape daily, but be careful not to allow this to remain to become sour, and a few days later add also a little cracked hemp daily. Do not interfere with the arrangements more than is quite unavoidable, and with this method of feeding I think it likely you will do better next time. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you, post free, for 7d. It would save you making many mistakes.

EGG DRIED UP (Wm. Charters).—The egg you sent arrived quite smashed, so it would have been useless to return in any case. The condition is quite a common one, and is caused by the egg substance drying up in the shell during incubation. Such eggs are probably unfertile in most cases, but the chief reason of drying up is undoubtedly an imperfect condition of the structure of the shell. When the hen is going to nest again keep a little smashed old motar strewn about the sand on the floor of the cage, and add a teaspoonful of lime-water to the drinking water every second day until the eggs are laid. This may prevent a recurrence of the trouble.

RECORD OF UNFERTILITY (A. P. W.).—It is not possible to be dogmatic about the real cause of the unfertility of which you send record. In the case of the first nests it is not at all uncommon to find the whole of the clutch unfertile, and these to be succeeded by clutches of fertile eggs for the remainder of the season, and this is most likely to occur when the birds are mated early, and the weather is more or less unfavourable; or it may be from the birds not being in a sufficiently forward condition for successful breeding, though they may be in quite good health; or again, it may be owing to the birds, one or both, being more or less out of health, or in a low, run-down condition. The fact that every egg in the second and third clutches of No. 1 hen proved fertile, whilst those of No. 2 hen again all proved unfertile is not so peculiar as it may seem at first sight, as it may be due to this hen being out of condition; or she may be older; or it may be simply due to a lack of affinity between the two birds—or, as it is often put, they do not "hit." If you try this hen again this season you should mate her with another cock, one in good song and vigorous health, to see if this alters her record of uselessness. If you do this, leave the new pair together permanently until the clutch of eggs is laid, when you can either remove him or let him remain to assist in the bringing up, as you have found to work best with this particular hen.

MORE EGGS WANTED (Rather Anxious).—Sorry I cannot tell you any infallible way to make a hen lay more eggs in a clutch which has laid only two in each of three successive clutches. Small clutches may be natural to her, just as abnormally large ones may be to unusually prolific hens. You do not say anything about the age of the hen, so I cannot even tell you whether she is likely to do any better next year or not, beyond saying that if she is a last season bred bird it is not at all unlikely she will lay clutches of the full normal number of four or five. To assist towards this end you may, when preparing her for breeding next spring, feed her up rather liberally, avoiding, of course, making her in any way fat; add a sprinkling of yellow mustard seed to her mixture of seeds, and in the egg food add a small pinch of crushed mustard seed and a few chopped sunflower seeds. If this method of preparation does not result in bringing about larger clutches you may give it up as a bad job, and either replace her with another hen, or rest satisfied with her small clutches. If the hen is several years old your best plan is to discard her without more ado as a stock bird. I do not advise you to try her again this season, but judging from your experience of her idiosyncrasy this season you would do well to always take the cock out of sight and ear-shot each time she begins to sit on a clutch of eggs.

NO RESULTS (G. Watts).—You should have given me some idea how old the birds are, and also said whether all the empty eggs have been obtained from one hen, or whether both hens are equally barren of results. Anyway, you may put the idea of the heavy traffic being responsible for the unfertility out of your mind, as there is not the least reason for supposing that this is the cause. Neither is the fact of running two hens with one cock likely to be the cause of it. If these two hens have only had two nests each, and are anxious to begin again quickly, this is supposing both hens are responsible for a share of the unfertile eggs, you may let them have another try, and feed them as advised to "Rather Anxious" in this issue. Also, before beginning to feed them up, dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the drinking water for three consecutive days. A staple of plain canary seed, or at most a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape would be much better for breeding birds than a more elaborate mixture.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FOOD FOR SOFTBILLS (A. W.).—Although one is able to make up a good mixture to feed the Warblers upon, I have found that it is quite as economical to purchase a good brand of food from some reliable maker ready mixed for use. The following would perhaps suit you, the ingredients for which could be purchased separately; but be sure you procure all of them of the best quality Powdered Osborne biscuits 4 parts, best ants' eggs and dried flies 2 parts each, powdered silkworm pupæ one part, meat meal half a part. This should be mixed dry, and the quantity required for the daily consumption made damp with scraped raw carrot or a little chopped green food, also encourage the Warblers to take soft fruit; it is a very valuable food for them. In addition to this they will, of course, require a fair amount of insects, mealworms, flies, caterpillars, beetles, etc.

THRUSH OUT OF CONDITION (John McBride).—Although the food you are giving your bird is no doubt a good one, it does not evidently quite suit him, so you had better give him a complete change. Either buy a good brand of insectile food or make your own, following the receipt given to "A.W.," but using six parts biscuit meal instead of four parts, which would make a nice food for a Thrush. I would also advise you to give him as much Glauber Salts as will cover a shilling, dissolved in his drinking water for one day, then miss a day and repeat. Discontinue giving him earthworms, for although birds will almost live on them in a wild state, they do not appear to agree with them when in captivity. They can be given occasionally, but then only select the small ones. You had better rely upon mealworms, caterpillars, beetles, gentles, and an occasional garden snail. If the bird is really blind in the one eye you can do nothing for it; but if the eye is simply sore or inflamed, bathe it with warm water in which has been dissolved some boracic powder, in the proportion of a spoonful to a cup of water. Keep cage and perches perfectly clean, and let him bathe on every fine day.

THRUSH WITH COLD (J. Lally).—I am not particularly fond of either of the foods you mention as a staple diet. They would do nicely for a change, but you would do better by using a higher grade mixture. Read the advice given to "John McBride" respecting food, and treat your bird in a similar manner. A piece of bread dipped in hot milk is good for them occasionally; but if used continually would be inclined to cause looseness of the bowels. Make up the following mixture: 2 parts honey, 1 each of whisky and fresh lemon juice, and give a small teaspoonful in the drinking water. Use warm water so that it mixes properly. When he regains his voice let him have a course of Chemical Food, half a teaspoonful to two tablespoonsful of water, or you can mix it in a little of his soft food.

SEXING DOVES (Alpha).—The birds you describe are not Ring Doves, but Turtle Doves. The Ring Doves have a white patch on the side of the neck. They are the big Wood Pigeons and are resident with us the year round. The Turtle Doves are migratory, arriving in the South of England in the latter part of April and May. There is no distinguishing marks denoting the sex, the hen being generally rather duller in plumage. This is quite distinguishable, even in dead specimens, so you should have no trouble in sexing your birds, providing, of course, that you have some of each. The birds without the ring are young ones, so no doubt the one you name as "B" is of the female sex. The only way you can settle the sex of "A" is to compare it with "B," and if you can place it in a cage close to the other, its behaviour would convince you. (2) Any of the birds you mention would eat a fair number of flies, but I should think the Chaffinch would suit your purpose as well as any. Some of them will consume quite a quantity, particularly when they have been caged a year or two. The Canary is not much of an insect-eater, although one will sometimes nibble at a mealworm and chase a stray fly round its cage, but it is all done in the way of "sport," or something to do.

CANARY-BULLFINCH (A.P.).—In your letter you ask if there are any Bullfinch-Canary Hybrids about. I presume you mean Canary-Bullfinches, as this is the way this Hybrid is produced. It has now been bred by various fanciers for a number of years. The fancier you mention possesses a splendid example, which has won for him a number of first and special prizes, against all comers, it is probably the best bird of the kind in the world at the present time. The exhibitor was the fortunate breeder.

GREENFINCH-CANARY HYBRIDS (F. Cole).—If your two clear birds are genuine Greenfinch-Canary Hybrids they are valuable for exhibition purposes, that is, of course, providing they are large, of good shape and feather. The dark ones are not of much value unless exceptionally good. When they grow up you should recognise them by their beak being heavier than the canaries, and also by an indescribable Greenfinch appearance. You could further make certain of distinguishing them by marking them with Canary rings; these are advertised in our columns and are made to fit upon the leg of the bird. They are numbered and are easily put on and taken off. You should procure some and put one on at once. If your birds are quite clear they would be called "Clear Greenfinch-Canary Hybrids," but should either of them have a small mark it would then be a "Ticked Greenfinch-Canary Hybrid."

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (T. B.).—Yes, the autumn would be the best time to stock your aviary although you should watch our advertisement pages and see if you could pick up some hand-reared specimens, if so you would find them much more tractable than freshly caught ones. When first procured wild birds should be fed upon soaked canary-rape and teazle, a little cracked hemp, and wild seed mixture, and gradually brought along until they can do on hard seeds only. The mixture you mention would do admirably as an occasional tit-bit, but your stock mixture would have to be made up to suit the most delicate birds. It is a very good plan to have a three-compartment self-feeding seed hopper, containing canary summer rape, and teazle, and give mixed seeds every other day, with sunflowers daily, and wild seeds and grasses as often as possible. When you procure your birds, perhaps you will write again if you need further advice.

BULLFINCH WITH DIARRHŒA (C. J. T. Mobbs).—There is evidently one of the seeds in your mixture that does not agree with the bird. I would advise you to discontinue the linseed until the autumn and winter, when a little is good for them. Offer a pinch of maw seed daily until the bird is well. Give a few sunflowers daily. For one day dissolve as much glauber salts as will cover a sixpence in the drinking water. In future let all his water be boiled before use, and add to it a small teaspoonful of chemical food. When the diarrhœa has ceased gradually commence to give green food and fruit, this is a seasonable diet and should assist in keeping him in health. (2) In the seed mixture for your Linnet omit the linseed and hemp for the present, and give plenty of wild food, being careing, etc., rather fully, so would advise being careful to select the seeding tops of groundsel, chickweed, shepherds purse, and grasses. Make a mixture of tincture of rhubarb and tincture of gentian, and put half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water, let him have this for a week, when no doubt he will have recovered.

GOLDFINCH ILL.—Your bird is certainly far from well, and although you say he has had just the same treatment as the others, I fear in this way you have made a mistake, because my experience has been that no two birds thrive well on exactly the same treatment. When a bird develops an abnormal appetite it is a sign that he is not doing well. First catch the bird and see in what condition he is in, if fat give him two or three doses of glauber salts, missing a couple of days between each dose. Dissolve as much as will cover a sixpence in his drinking water. If in only fair condition do not give the salts, but offer the bread and milk every other day. Make a mixture of equal quantities of tincture of rhubarb and tincture of gentian, and give half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonsful of water, daily for five or six days, follow this up with a course of chemical food. Soak a spoonful of summer rape and teazle, and give on the days you are not giving the bread and milk. Offer sunflower seeds daily, a little lightly cracked hemp three times a week, also maw seed and niger. Try to procure a good wild seed mixture for him; but if not able to do so you could purchase dandelion, thistle, and gold of pleasure, these you could make into a mixture, and offer when you are not giving the maw and niger. Collect seeding wild food, such as chickweed, groundsel, various grasses, particularly one that the country children call "Tinker Tailor, etc." Finches are specially fond of this. Place the bird in a large cage, keep him out of draughts, and let him bathe on fine days.

CONCERNING A YOUNG STARLING (Mowgli).—It is not unusual for hand-reared Starlings to develop the manners you mention. I would advise you not to let him out quite so frequently, but talk to him and handle him as much as possible, do not tease him, or you will possibly make him spiteful. They want very careful management when young, or they acquire habits that are not at all nice. (2) If you have a good feeding hen you could remove the eggs from your Bullfinch hen and let her rear them, if not you must give the Bullics a chance, although they are not to be relied on. You will have to supply them with soft food, etc., to feed on, or I fear you will not succeed. If you look up last week's CAGE BIRDS you will see I answered this question to two readers: Edith Pearce Brown and F. E. N. I went into the feeding, etc., rather fully, so would advise you to follow the advice given to them.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

BUDGERIGARS (C. W.).—Whatever the cause (this somewhat obscure), it would be better to cage the two affected birds up separately, away from their fellows, till in condition again; treat as follows: One teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water daily, till the bowels have been well moved, when this occurs, once a week will suffice afterwards, and on the intervening day put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water; continue this till the birds are fit again. Supply the usual menu, plus as much seeding and flowering grass and chickweed as they will eat. When catching them up examine closely to see if there are any parasites, and if so, either wash the birds thoroughly with a quassia solution, using a camel-hair mop brush; or blow pyrethum powder or similar insecticide into the plumage. Watch them carefully, and not if they are abrading the plumage against cage anywhere. Report progress a month hence.

SHOW QUERIES (A. J. M.).—You did not comply with the rules for a reply per post. Assuming that you have given me full class headings, I should class as small common the following:—Cordon Bleu, Firefinch, Cutthroat, Zebra, Spice, Red-headed, Cuba, Olive, Alario, Bib, Lavender, Saffron, Striated and Sharp-tailed Finches; Red and Green Avadavats; Orange-cheeked, Gold-breasted, Grey, and St. Helena Waxbills; Bronze, Black-headed, White-headed, Magpie, and Tricolour Mannikins; Pin-tailed and Paradise Whydahs, Red-billed, Orange, Grenadier, Crimson-crowned, Madagascar and Napoleon Weavers, Cape Canary, Grey and Green Singing Finches, and Java Sparrows. It all depends on the scope given by the wording of the schedule—really in point of numbers in which they have come over. Gouldian and other Greenfinches, also such as Superb, Scarlet, Black Tanagers, etc., come within the scope of "common." As regards the rarer kind, we can only name a few: Rufous-backed Mannikin, Violet-eared Sydney, and Black-cheeked Waxbills; Dufresne's, Melba, Fire-tailed, Cherry, Parrot, and other Finches; Zosterops, Sugar and Sunbirds; Black-throated, Black-cheeked, Festive, Necklace, and other Tanagers, and many others. If you have given me a definite wording of the classification, I think it is a case in which a definite query should be put to the secretary, as to whether certain species, e.g., Gouldian Finches, costing above a certain amount, though imported in some numbers, are to be accounted as rare or common. It is not possible to deal with your query fully in this column.

WHAT IS IT (R. H. M. S.).—It is a Common or Grey Waxbill, which, is usually upon the market in good numbers and obtainable very cheaply; in fact, it is one of the most freely imported of foreign species.

WHAT COCKATOO? (X. Y. Z.).—Your description appears to me to describe the Slender-billed Cockatoo, unless it is larger than a Grey Parrot, it must be that species; if so, the upper mandible is much longer than the lower. If the beak of the bird is of the normal type, then it is probably the Bare-eyed Cockatoo, which species would also fit your description as to size and colour. If the former, the value is about 20/- to 30/-; if the latter, 30/- to 40/-. The bulk of both species do not make much of talkers, but cases turn up of really talented talkers of almost any and every species, and a few others of varying merit.

WHAT SHALL I DO? (New Year).—The simplest and best thing to do is to procure a hen Zebra Finch and give them a nest receptacle (small box, husk, or rush nest), and supply a little nesting material, and they will probably go to nest. Zebra Finches have been rather scarce on the market this year, but a few are to be had now if you look out at once. Of course, if you only want a few pretty birds in the cage, then you could put in with him three or four other cocks, say, the Goldfinch, a Green Singing Finch, and an Alario Finch.

AFRICAN WEAVER (L. N.).—How can I answer your query when you neither tell me how you feed nor where you keep. The African Weavers are almost legion, but most of them do well on canary, white and spray millet, green food, an occasional live insect (mealworm, etc.), grit, cuttlebone, and water. The chemical food will do no harm, neither will making the drinking water just saline with Epsom salts for one day; the chemical food may be given for a month or longer.

EGG-BINDING, ETC. (F. E. N.). — You cannot compare Foreign Finches with Canaries; the latter have been domesticated for years, and breed freely as a rule, though some fail with these. Foreign Finches, however, are quite as ready to nest as our own wild Brit. species; in fact, compare very favourably with them in this respect. Owing to the freak climatic changes we are subject to in this country, no one is immune from losing hens from this annoying complaint, but my losses out of doors in a garden aviary are very small. The season lasts longer with these Finches than with Canaries, and under the artificial conditions of bird-room life, I should advise keeping the sexes separate, out of hearing of each other, and not mating (turning them loose into room) them up till May. Supply green food ad. lib., and do not use any hen for breeding that is not in perfect condition. Budgerigars, White Java Sparrows, Bib Finches, Magpie Mannikins, Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Grey Singing-finches, may all be termed fairly free breeders flying loose in a room or outdoor aviary. I think you can let the birds choose; I think you'll find they'll eat greenfly freely; the others not much. Do not offer them blight from laburnum, lilac, elder, or laurel.

COCKATEEL (Simpson).—The substance sent me was simply an imperfectly formed egg, which probably gave the bird some trouble to get rid of, and it is rather surprising you did not lose her. It would be well to keep this bird separate for a time, say, for a month at least. Sopped bread is not needed; Canary, millet, oats, crushed groats, green food, grit, and cuttlebone, is all they need. If you wish to give them anything extra when feeding young, supply a small pan of dry broken biscuit or stale dry crusts of bread, or both. If the hen referred to will eat either biscuit or stale bread, give her a small piece daily, first soaking into it about ten drops of cod liver oil. Also put a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into her drinking water twice a week, and on the other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates.

AMERICAN BIRDS (A. Monroe).—If by America you mean the United States, I believe you are not allowed by the bird laws to keep either in cage or aviary any native bird; and you will be reduced to the necessity of falling back upon South American or some other Foreign species, and a visit to the nearest bird emporium would be your best course, ascertaining when you make a purchase all details as to how it has been fed, and treating it accordingly. If this does not meet your need, please repeat query and state wherein your inclination lies—seed eating or insectivorous species. A query to your nearest Zoo Soc. would secure you the information if any species of United States bird may be caged; I understand not.

BUDGIES, LOVEBIRDS, ETC. (G. W. P.).—(1) You have got either aged or ricketty stock, and I do not consider them worth trying to improve, and I advise you to have them mercifully chloroformed and procure fresh stock, and see that you get large-sized birds, in perfect feather and clear of eye. Get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free, from our manager, and treat any new stock as directed therein. If you had given your county and stated size and aspect of aviary, and how you acquired your stock, also how long you have had them, I could possibly then have formed some idea of cause. (2) Some pairs of Cockateels act just as yours do, other are just as prolific, and bring up brood after brood without trouble, and I should get rid of them and try another pair. There is one reservation, however: Have mice access to the log or barrel, and is this the cause of their giving up?

CUTTHROATS NOT INCUBATING (Cuttbroat).—I do not think you'll do any good by separating them; both sexes take part in incubating and brooding the young. Some pairs are both bad sitters and feeders, others just the reverse. Most probably by the time this appears the birds will be busily incubating the eggs; if not, remove the eggs about 14 days from the laying of the last. I should leave them pretty well to themselves, except when feeding or attending to cage. It might be well to examine the husk, if you have to remove the egg, and see if there are any parasites therein; if so, well soak it in boiling water, dry in open air before replacing it. If any young are reared, the nest should be examined as soon as they leave it, well cleaned, and then treated as above with boiling water. Give ants' eggs and a few mealworms or gentles when they are feeding young, in addition to ordinary diet.

COCKATOO (Halloa Billy, Seacombe).—It is a Lesser Sulphur-crested Cockatoo, so far as I can gather, but you do not state the colour of the body plumage. Treat the bird as follows:—Continue the boiled maize, but after draining off the water, soak into it ten drops of cod-liver oil, and then dust with flowers of sulphur daily. Keep a tin of seed in the cage, also cuttle bone and a piece of a half-rotten branch, with the bark on preferably, for it to bite at. Continue to give the fruit, crust; also give pieces of biscuit and a few shelled walnuts. Keep the bowels moving freely, but the voidings should not be continuously watery; a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water once a week should suffice, and half a teaspoonful of hypophosphates in the water on the other days should assist in toning her up. Treat as above for a month or five weeks, and then report progress.

PEKIN NIGHTINGALE, ETC. (T. H.).—Soft food (any good make), ripe fruit according to season, and live insects, mealworms, and any garden pests you can capture, such as spiders, etc. If it cares for it, a teaspoonful of canary and millet-seed can be given twice a week. They are very fond of bathing, and should have a daily bath. As regards the Java Sparrows, they are not hard to please, either a travelling cage (perches, front wires, and other fittings removed), rush nest, husk, or small box. A canary nest-bag will do for building material, or loose hay only and half-dry grass.

IS IT LARGE ENOUGH? (S. Potter).—I have seen pairs of Budgerigars kept in cages no larger than the one you send a sketch of, and they did fairly well therein, and you should meet with a like result, especially if, as soon as the birds are tame enough, the birds are allowed a fly round the room, they will return to cage of own accord when hungry. Of course, a cage half as large again, or double the size, would be much better. If these birds are new to you, you had better get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," and read it up before procuring your birds; it is 2½d. post free, from our manager.

MEYER'S PARROTS (J. C.).—I should keep the birds in a cage for a week, putting the cage outside daily a little for the first few days, then keeping them in the cage for a few days longer with the cage hanging or standing in the shelter of the aviary they are to occupy, but if their wings are cut, or they cannot fly, it will be better to keep them caged till they can do so. When the times comes for letting them out, simply open the cage door and leave them to find their way out unaided, food, of course, being first placed ready for them. Whatever they have been brought over on continue to supply some of this for a time. Seed mixture: Three parts each of canary and white millet seeds, two parts oats, and one part each hemp and sunflower seeds, well mix and keep supply in cage. Ripe fruit, piece of biscuit, dry crust, shelled nuts (walnuts are best), will keep the diet varied. Only supply water and grit with caution at first, till they have become accustomed to them again. Keep cuttlebone in the cage.

RED-RUMPS NOT BREEDING (Frederick George).—It's a mere case of capriciousness in an individual pair, and you'll have to possess your soul in patience till they choose to do the right thing. Your case is not at all uncommon, but once they settle you'll have no further trouble with them, but you'll be wise to remove the young as soon as they are quite independent of their parents. I should keep the odd hen out of sight and hearing of the mated pair. My opinion is that they'll go to nest before the summer is over, but if they should not, then keep the cock as a bachelor during the winter, and do not let him see the present hen he is mated to during the whole period, then about March, or even February, put him and No. 2 hen in cages side by side for a couple of weeks before turning them into the aviary. However, my opinion is your pair will nest before the season closes; even September is not too late; you can be sure of one thing, if you do not get impatient success will ultimately come your way. I have known aviarists who have kept a pair three years before they went to nest, and other pairs which did so the first year.

NOT PROPERLY FEATHERED (Speed).—It may be a case of old age and consequent weakness. In addition to the diet you name, give this bird any kind of fruit it will take, also a little of some good make of insectile mixture and moisten this with a small quantity of cod-liver oil. If the bird will not take this, then put ten drops of the cod-liver oil on a piece of sponge or Madeira cake; they usually take this. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, and on other days half a teaspoonful of hypo-phosphates. In addition to mealworms, give it any spider, small beetle, smooth caterpillar, etc., you can capture. Putting a mealworm or two in the insectile mixture might cause it to more readily eat the mixture. Let me know how you get on in inducing the bird to take various foods and drugs.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. Morton.—Congestion of the lungs induced by the recent close and stormy weather. I have forwarded bird as desired to Birmingham.

"Ring No. 3."—Inflammation of the bowels, otherwise very sound and healthy. I consider the cod liver oil quite superfluous during warm weather, and overheating; and the chemical food need not be given at all unless found really necessary. Continued use interferes with digestion. I do not agree with the systematic use of medicines given to birds mixed in the food. These should only be prescribed when necessary.

J. Morton.—The bird has been returned to me by Mr. Popplewell. He says he is unable to do any good with it, as the body should be skinned out and entrails not removed. This, you see, would have been impossible for purposes of post-mortem examination

"Blue Pigeon."—Male bird. Death occurred from internal hemorrhage due to injury.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page and Column are stated by the advertiser.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

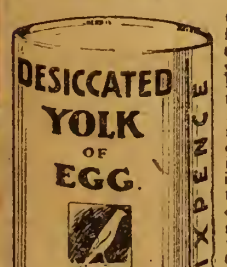
LIVERINE LIMITED,



Claim they are responsible for the splendid results obtained this year with the youngsters through all the British Isles. It is difficult to find a district where Desiccated Yolk of Egg is not extensively used, and of the few fanciers not using it most of them are grumbling. Why waste so much time with the boiling of eggs when you have the genuine thing ready to mix with the biscuit, and cheap too. A 6d. tin will rear a nest of young. The proprietors have an output for the white of the egg, so can offer the yolk at a low figure.

WANTED A TRIAL

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. Ditchfield's medicines have been used for over six years by most leading fanciers, and are used at the London Zoo. They are genuine remedies, which can be given with perfect confidence to all classes of cage birds. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg binding, feather plucking, and inflammation of the bowels, in 7d. and (treble size) bottles, 1/1, special size 2/-. This medicine is invaluable for young birds just getting on hard seed. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's special Lung Tonic, also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. For cases of constitutional weakness and debility, get Ditchfield's famous Revivo. There is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. Revivo is invaluable as a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing; also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. As an advertisement, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All medicines are sent post paid, per return, at our risk. Also two valuable seed recipes, how to feed Linnets and Rollers for song, given free to all purchasers of our medicines. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed: Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They can run like German Canaries. This class of bird has won the English Derby, all the English championships, and the world's greatest contests. They are the birds in England for catching with, and for time-singing they have no equal. They are at workingmen's prices: 1/-, 1/6 and 2/-; a few with quality notes, will sing anywhere, 2/6 and 3/6; and a few, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, 5/-. I challenged the world with this class of bird from £25 up to £100 aside for quality Linnet singing. The above are all good birds and in full song. Beautiful Yellow cock Greenfinches, like paint, 1/- each; sure winners for the beach, 1/6. Young German Roller cocks, bred by myself, taught under my well-known champion Roller, 4/6 each. Beautiful cock Bramblefinches, 1/- each; Redpolls, 1/6 apair. Beautiful cock Larks, singing with full loud voice, perfect in feather, singing all day, 1/6 and 2/6; a few hand-reared ones, sing indoors or out, 4/6; and one, a real champion, right for contest singing (this is a real topper), 6/-. New Lark cages, 1/6 each, fit for any room. My book of secrets, 1/-, which is the best book published of its kind, sent by return of post, 1/-. Notice to Linnet singers who want a first-class bird, either contest Linnet or match bird; real quality Linnet singing or time singers, properly trained, and can win anywhere, from 15/6 to 25/- each. Write to me for any kind of bird, British or Foreign, show birds or singing birds. The original Linnet and Canary whistle, 6d. each; plenty in stock; no waiting; post card before birds; so send to the old British bird champion: Harry Allen, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (1676)

Club Reports.

NORTH-WEST LONDON F.A.

Meeting June 25, when entries closed for summer show at Stag's Head Hotel, Hawley Road, N.W. Exhibits must be at show room not later than 9 a.m.—W. Sutton, assist. sec.

EAST ARDSLEY C.B.S.

Very interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. Norton, of Leeds, June 27, on the Yorkshire Canary. After the lecture Mr. Norton kindly answered questions, and the meeting was brought to an end with a vote of thanks to the lecturer.—H. Cockrem.

POPLAR C.B.S.

Meeting June 25, All Hallows School Room, East India Dock Road, the general business being the young stock show at above, July 25. This bids fair to be a success, there being a good array of specials. Birds must be nominated at this show to compete for three of the ten cups which the Society now has. Poplar C.B.S. is getting a move on. Mr. Leech was called on to give his lecture on the Norwich Canary, which was listened to with attention and well digested, as the various questions put to the lecturer showed.—F. H. Marnoh, Hon. Assist. Sec.

RUGBY F. AND F.S.

Meeting, Wine Barrel Hotel, June 12, for the purpose of discussing Young Stock Show. Mr. T. G. Hough presided. It was decided to hold a Young Stock Show of 20 miles radius, July 15, in the Town Hall. A good classification has been arranged, and should be the means of bringing some good young birds onto the show bench. Prizes will be 8/-, 4/- and 2/- for classes with eight or more entries, besides numerous specials, and with such able Secretaries as Messrs. Easton and Chadwick and a good working Committee the show should prove a great success, if only exhibitors will do their best and send entries along; by so doing they will be helping forward the Cage Bird Section in Rugby and district. Look out for show advert. in this paper.—C. H. Webb, 7, Charlotte-st., Ruby.

PORTH & RHONDDA VALLEYS.

Meetings, June 25 and 27, at headquarters. These were good meetings, and as one was the half-yearly meeting, a good many settled their cards. Will those who did not do so kindly do so at next meeting? Prize cards were selected, and other matters re young bird show arranged; entrance fee is 6d. per bird. Prizes on sliding scale. Mr. John Shephard's resignation was accepted, and Mr. J. S. Jones elected new sec.; all matters relating to the above society should be sent to Mr. J. S. Jones, 53, Highland Crescent, Treiarog Road, Porth. Decided that no charge be made for admission to show; entries to be in by July 4. Sec. to write all members re the variety and number they wish to enter. Mr. D. Escott was elected treasurer. Anyone wishing to join or help in any way should attend our next meeting at Tramway Depot, July 4.—J. S. Jones, Sec.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS.

PRESENTATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Second F.F. Show at the Royal Oak Hotel, June 24. There were over 40 birds. Mr. J. Stevens, the judge, considered the show extraordinarily good for the time of year, especially considering the drawbacks of the early part of the season.

NOR., CL.: 1, Mrs. Crofts; 2, Turner; 3, Whiffin; vhc, he, Olle; c, Cragg. TKD.: 3, Pennells. MKD.: 1, Mrs. Crofts; 2, W. Turner; 3, he, Whillin; vhc, Cragg. YORKS., CL.: 1, he, Veness; 2, c, Slack; 3, vhc, Morris and Son. TKD: 2, Veness. MKD.: 1, Veness; 2, 3, Morris and Son. BRIT.: 1, 2, he, Rev. Paterson; 3 vhc, c, Relf. FOR.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Rev. Paterson.

The Mayor (Councillor E. Armitage Hocking) presided at the subsequent lecture. He confessed that he had not made a study of ornithology, but he was sure the study of bird life must be most interesting. It afforded him the greater pleasure to come when he remembered the kindly interest which the Society took in the opening of the aviary in the Alexandra Park. The aviary was a splendid advertisement for the town. (Applause). The Rev. J. M. Paterson, who was formerly in India, and is returning to that country, gave an interesting lecture on birds of Northern India. For some years he had had very happy associations with the society. He hoped they would get new members. He would help them to get one new member, who had the finest collection of foreign birds he had ever seen. He thanked Mrs. and Miss Kirk Bullock for the tremendous push on which they gave to the society. He personally thanked them, and hoped they might long continue. The Rev. J. M. Paterson having presented the prizes, the Mayor made to him the presentation of a large framed photographic group of members of the Society. He expressed the hope that it would recall the happy days in Hastings, and that some time the Rev. J. M. Paterson would come back to them. The Rev. J. M. Paterson feelingly responded. Miss Kirk-Bullock said it was the first time a Mayor of Hastings had taken a prominent part in regard to the society. She sincerely hoped it would not be the last. The Mayor replied, and assured Mr. Pennells that he had kept a canary for 11 years. Thanks were accorded to Miss Kirk-Bullock, on the proposition of the Mayor, for the splendid way in which she carried out the duties of hon. Sec. and Treas.

The President's farewell lecture was the finest we have heard him deliver. It has caused the deepest sorrow to all members that it must be Mr. Paterson's last lecture. He has proved himself to be a grand president, and we deeply regret losing him. We all wish the President and Mrs. Paterson a safe journey across the seas, and God-speed in their new home.—Irene Kirk-Bullock, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND Y.C.C.

Meeting held June 24, Mr. J. Nixon chair, with a poor attendance. Members elected, Mr. T. Harrison, Mr. J. Nicholson, Workington; Mr. J. Smith, Whitehaven, and Mr. J. Nichol, Maryport. Decided to hold young bird show July 8, in the school room, Furnace Road, birds staged by 6, Mr. J. Nicholson judge, when we hope to have a good entry. Secretaries please note, we have patronage for other two shows to dispose of yet; if any society desires it, please apply early.—J. Huntington, Hon. Sec., 19, Nelson Street, Maryport.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting, headquarters, June 22. Mr. R. A. Newley in chair, and a fair number present. Sec. read a letter from the Rev. H. A. Soames, offering one guinea cash or plate for most points in green or cinnamons at the patronage shows. The offer was accepted with much enthusiasm, and sec. was instructed to write, thanking the donor for his generosity. No meeting until the fourth Monday in September, unless anything of importance should necessitate a special meeting being called. Will members who have changed their address and have not notified the sec., kindly do so at once, so that their correct address can appear in the club year book?—F. W. Burton, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON P.P. AND C.B.A.

Meeting Bedford Hotel June 26, Mr. S. Stables chair. Judges were selected for open show Nov. 4 and 5. Mr. F. J. S. Chatterton to judge cage birds. The £5 limit of previous show was discussed, and it was decided to have no limit at forthcoming show. Mr. J. W. Beer who is organising the summer outing reported that all arrangements re brakes and tea had been made. The outing will be to Paulton's Park (by kind permission of Capt. Sloane-Stanley), tickets 2s. 6d. inclusive. Rules as revised by committee were read, and it was proposed to cancel old rules and adopt new, but a month's notice being considered necessary they will be brought up again at next meeting.—G. J. Slade, sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

At last committee meeting the following shows were given our patronage for next winter show season: Skelmanthorpe, Oct. 17; Shipley, Oct. 24; Sheffield, Nov. 6-7; Tong and District, Nov. 14; Bradford West and Manningham Joint show, Nov. 21; Bradford National, Dec. 4 and 5; Huddersfield, Dec. 12; Windhill, Jan. 2, 1915; Doncaster, Jan. 9. Nine shows in all; we could do with one more, and any Society holding a show on dates other than the above, and who will provide 4 open classes for Cinn. Mkd. Yorks., may have our patronage if they write me before July 11. I am having our Year Book printed, but have lost list of alterations of addresses during last year; will members who have previously given notice of alteration of address drop me a post card? Books will be forwarded as early as possible. Members please pay subs. early, and thus lessen my work. Members joining before July 11 will have names in book; sub. 1s. 6d. per year. Three competitions, open, amateur and novice, for prizes value £25: all information from R. Garnett, Sec., 22, Carr Lane, Windhills, Shipley.

OPENSHAW, GORTON C.B.S.

Meeting, "Club Room," Alhambra Building, June 24. An important lecture was given by Mr. Harrison, of Altrincham, before a good attendance, on "Colour Feeding and Breeding for Colour," stating six different ways of improving the colour of our Canaries. Mr. Harrison dwelt very much on the advantage of double buffing and the disadvantage of dark double buffing. He also gave us six different reasons for Greens, pointing out the advantage and disadvantage of breeding with green capped birds. When colour feeding, Mr. Harrison does not believe in taking away the seed boxes, or keeping the birds in semi-darkness, but advised keeping a blind partly drawn over the windows. He also does not think it necessary to colour feed every day during moult, as some overdo colour feed. At the close of lecture many questions were asked, not only on the subject of the lecture, but such as breeding season difficulties, seeds, making of good milk sop, colour foods, etc. All were very ably answered by Mr. Harrison and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer. Schedules and tickets for F.F. show, July 18, were given out. We are expecting a good show, as some have very good luck this season: a light Goldfinch Mule is expected to make its debut.—W. Hathaway.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Second N.F. show, Oldham, June 20, 118 birds being staged the largest number for some time. Excellent young birds were shown by Messrs. Plunkett, Greatrex, Maxwell, and Corbett in Yorks., and Messrs. Woods and Vogel in Norwich. Mr. Lloyd showed a bird which is supposed to be a variegated Bullfinch-Canary, which is meeting with a lot of comment; some say it is only a variegated Canary, but a number of British bird and Mule men agree that it is a Mule, but not a Bullfinch-Canary. It has been 1st and 2nd in our two most feather shows.

HANLEY C.B.S.

N.F. show, June 27, Birches Head Hotel, a new venue for a cage bird show in the district. There was a very fair entry and some promising youngsters on view. Mr. Pygott staged a very smart cinn. mkd. buff which was much admired; Mr. Beckett's yellow was a good one, and should do well with a good moult. British were few in numbers, but several choice specimens were staged, the Linnet class being much above the average. Mr. J. Pitchford, Stoke-on-Trent, judged.

GWYFRAI.

Third annual open show at Bontnewydd, June 27. Entries were 150, similar to last year. The cage bird section contained some real tip-top specimens, Messrs. Griffiths, Hughes Bros., and Jones, of Carnarvon, all put down some real good ones, fit to win in the keenest competition. Hyde's special was won by Mr. Roberts, of Penygroes. Mr. Rhys Jones makes a capable and obliging sec., he had everything in tip-top order, and he was well backed up by a willing lot of stewards. If the management would advertise their show it would greatly increase their entries. Mr. J. Walsh, Blackburn, judged, and his awards were well received.

YELL. NOR.: 1, Parry; 2, Griffiths; 3, Miss Jones. BUFF: 1, Miss Jones; 2, Miss Boxer; 3, E. Owen. YORKS., YELL.: 1, H. Jones; 2, Miss Jones; 3, W. R. Roberts. BUFF: 1, P. C. J. METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

N.F. show, Kelvedon Hall, Walham Green, June 20. Entries were in advance of last year, over 100 birds being staged, and the attendance was excellent, the show being a financial success, great credit being due to the officials present. Mr. Easterling won special for best champion Yorks., and Mr. Piggins best novice Yorks. Champion Norwich were entirely absent, but novices were all there for type and quality. Mr. R. Nichols winning spl. for best in this section. Borders turned out well, Miss K. Wilson, Mr. Pegg, and Mr. Harrison putting down some nice birds. British classes were all well filled with excellent specimens, and taking the classes all round it was quite evident the members are making rapid strides in the right direction. Mr. J. C. Shepherd judged.

REDCAR C.B.S.

First N.F. show, June 20, Crown and Anchor, Mr. E. Freeman (Thornaby) judged and his awards were received with every satisfaction. In the absence of sec. Mr. T. Dixon undertook the secretarial duties in a capable and efficient manner. Entries totalled 39, which was disappointing. The Norwich and Mule classes had to be cancelled on account of local breeders having had such poor results, but from all accounts we should have a better turn-out at the second N.F. show, July 18. Mr. Marsey's (Lingdale) special for best Novice Yorks. was won by Mr. R. Eastgate. YORKS., YELL. (5): 1, Harvey; 2, 3, 4, Bray; vhc, Mallory. BUFF (8): 1, 3, 4, Harvey; 2, vhc, hc, Dixon; c, Bray. PRESTON O.S.

F.F. show, Foresters' Hall, Market Street, June 25. Judge, Mr. P. Warcing. Owing to the bad breeding season, the show was not a huge success, but we had an entry of about 60, and what was lacking in numbers was made up in extra good quality. It was admitted by all that they had not seen such a splendid lot of youngsters. Mr. H. F. Marsh had several fine specimens on view, his variegs. yell. winning the trophy. He also had the reserve bird for same, and won medal for most points for P.O.S. cup. Mr. A. Fry won silver medal given by Mr. J. W. Clemlnson for best novice bird, a bonny tkd.-eyed buff, which should do well for him.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

This young society, which has now a membership of over 60, held a F.F. show, June 24, at the Kingsland Assembly Rooms, and a very nice display indeed was made. The officers had everything arranged very nicely. Messrs. Holliday (chairman), L. Page (sec.), and White (assist. sec.) did everything to make the show a success. The birds were well staged, and competition in some of the classes was very keen. Mr. G. T. Webb judged.

NOR., CHAMP. YELL.: 1, 3, Page, nice type, good round body; 2, W. T. White. BUFF: 1, 3, Page, grand buff, slightly ticked, Bullfinch type; 2, W. White. NOV. WALKLEY C.B.S.

9th annual N.F. show, June 20, headquarters, Westmorland Street. It proved, owing to the indifferent breeding season, the worst in the annals of the society, many members not having any birds to show, and others only just a few. However, what was lost in quantity was gained in quality. Some splendid specimens were staged. Mr. F. Jones staged a splendid team in members' Yorks. classes. Special winners: Best Yorks., J. Carr; most points, 1 J. Matthews, 2 Carr; most points Brit., Falliding; most points, nov. Yorks., J. Carr; members' Yorks., 1 F. Jones, 2 T. Ridal; most points novice Nor., J. Matthews. Mr. J. C. Barnes judged, and gave every satisfaction.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

N.F. show, June 27, Attercliffe Vestry Hall. The exhibits, which numbered 100, were a fine lot, especially the Canaries, Norwich being the best we have ever had. If we do not find some of these winning after the moult, I shall be greatly surprised. Special mention might also be made of Mr. J. Hibbersou's really fine team of foreigners, which were a very attractive feature. The gate, although slightly better than in previous years, was not what it might have been, owing no doubt to our date clashing with Sheffield C.B.S. Let us hope we can obviate this in future. Specials were won as follows: Best Yorks. in show, best members' Yorks., and most points members' Yorks., J. R. Webster; 2nd best member's Yorks., W. Blunt; best Nor. and best member's Nor., W. Grainger; 2nd best member's Nor., Messrs. Richardson and Hibberson; most points member's, L. Havenhand; best Brit. and 2nd best, M. Darlow; best F.M. Brit., W. A. Hailstone; most points Brit., B. Dnee; best and 2nd best nov. Nor., A. Green; most points nov. Nor., W. Jones. Judges: J. Browning (Rotherham) and P. Walsh (Hillsboro'), and their awards gave entire satisfaction.—E. Johnson, Sec.

From catalogue received, we gather that the principal winners, other than those given above, were: YORKS., Merrills, Exton, Blunt; NOR., Hollingsworth; MULES, Hartley; BRIT., Bolsover, Blackley, Glover. —(Ed.)

WIGAN.

Young Show, June 27, Legs of Man Hotel Assembly Room. Nearly 50 birds were on view. Quality was good and very level, and quite a number of promising youngsters made their debut. Mr. Barron won most points for Amateur Aggregate Cup Competition. Messrs. Green and Ball were also special winners. Mr. Ball, Hon. Sec., had matters in good order. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged and his awards were well received.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Young bird show, June 20, headquarters, Marlboro Hotel, Small Heath. Close upon 50 birds were staged, the smallest number for many years, two chief causes being a very poor breeding season and many attractions in the way of works outings, while the big air race attracted many away. We are hoping for better results at July show. Mr. Roe judged, and gave every satisfaction. Yorks. were well to the front again, and it was pleasing to find two of our newest members taking specials and firsts at the first time of asking. Special winners: Best bird, Mr. Cowley, with a superb Buff Yorkie.; best novice, Mr. Thompson, another delightful Yorker; best British, Raby, grand Goldf.; most entries, Raby, best second clr. or tkd., Mr. Atkinson; best in variegs. classes, Thompson. The society's best thanks are extended to Messrs. Andrews, Raby, Swindon, and vice chairman Hughes for their valuable help and assistance, as owing to illness at home the sec. had to leave immediately after tea. The second show is held on July 18.

The Greatest Book of the Year

'Our Canaries'

The Most Wonderful Canary Volume Ever Published.

Its contents form the most helpful collection of directions on Canary keeping and breeding ever thought of. It is already bringing pleasure to thousands of Canary-keepers throughout the world. The pleasure accruing from Canary-keeping is more easily obtained when an understanding knowledge of the subject has been digested. "Our Canaries" gives the reader the most delightful reading imaginable, and its object is not fulfilled when the reader has spent his enjoyable periods with the book—the knowledge gained, which by the way is easily understandable and readily grasped and remembered, brings in the future the bliss that follows from the certainly that you are doing the right thing by your birds.

"Our Canaries" is as interesting as the most powerful novel ever written, and it contains the information and facts of the most "dry as dust" scientific work.

Send at once for our fully illustrated book, describing how you may obtain this wonderful volume for 1s. Don't fail to write at once, it costs you but a halfpenny, and you are under no obligation to buy the book if you are not satisfied with its description. Remember the greatest authorities have collaborated to produce the information from lack of which they themselves probably suffered in the early days of their Canary-keeping experience.

One opinion (similar to many others which we have received) from a delighted purchaser

No. 6, Co-operative Houses,
Brierley, near Barnsley.

Dear Sir,

It is with great pleasure that I thank you for sending me that most wonderful volume entitled "Our Canaries." I am sure it is worth every penny you ask for it, and will certainly recommend it to my friends.

It is a marvellous volume on the anatomy of Canaries alone. You can make any use you like of this letter, because "Our Canaries" is a book that needs circulating among Canary lovers. Thanking you again, I remain, yours faithfully,

THOS. S. WALLIS.

Twitterings.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) is judging North Liverpool and Bootle Nest Feather Shows.

I am a regular reader of Cage Birds, and take a great interest in it, and wish it every success.—P. C. McGhan (Fort William).

I have started one or two bird fanciers here, and, needless to say, they take Cage Birds, writes Mr. G. S. McCreath (Beaver, Kent).

Special for best Yorkshire shown by a novice in open classes Cardiff was won by Mr. D. Raymond, and not by Mr. Charles as stated.

Mr. A. Wellings, Prescot, has been engaged to judge our annual show held Town Hall, Newtownards, Dec. 4 and 5, writes Mr. W. Montgomery, sec.

Will members of the East Bowling and Dist. B.F.A. please note that the show due to be held on July 4 has been cancelled, writes Mr. Levi Booth, the secretary.

Cage Birds no bird-lover should be without. I have gained very useful information from it. Please renew my subscription.—R. G. W. Parsons (Affpiddle, Dorchester).

Mr. F. A. Hasler, late of Rainham, writes that he has removed his bird and appliance business to Baddow Road, Chelmsford. Our "Nutshells" may be obtained from Mr. Hasler.

The Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S. are fortunate in having two silver cups, best Norwich and best Yorkshire, presented by Mr. J. P. Ayers to be won outright at young stock show, July 11, writes Mr. J. Hyde, sec.

Samples of the cloth used in the manufacture of "Hole-Proof" clothing may be had free from the Holeproof-Proof Clothing Co., at Dept. C.B., 56, Theobald's Road, London, W.C. This firm sends out explicit directions for the self-measurement of anyone requiring a suit, and their advertisement on another page is well worth reading.

Exhibitors should note that sixteen open classes are provided for cage birds at the Bath Flower, Poultry, etc., show on July 15-16. Nor 3, Yorks 3, A.O.V. 1, Brit 4, Mules 2, For. 3. Prizes are 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d. for a fee of 1s. 6d. Mr. J. H. Payne will judge. The secretaries are Messrs. Dutch and Thyer, The Red House, Bath, and entries close July 8.

I thank you very much for the honour you have done in putting the sketch of my ticked yellow Norwich on front page of Cage Birds. Coming as a "surprise packet," I think I appreciate it the more. The bird was bred in 1912 from my capped buff, which you did me the honour of pourtraying in Cage Birds Annual for 1912. The ticked yellow was one of three in the nest, the other two being hens, and both turned out winners.—G. W. Saunders (Haslemere).

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," illustrated magazine, or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies spending not less than 10s. 6d. in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries taking advantage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate-money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

Secretaries should note that we can print at very favourable rates, show schedules, posters in colours, and ornamental prize-cards. Send for samples and prices.

The City and Suburban's Young Bird show taking place to-day (Saturday) must be your rendezvous, for a more profitable hour could not be spent. You will see all the well-known features maintained, such as quality and number of birds, and artistic display of numerous trophies. The Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, is within a couple of minutes of Baker Street (Metropolitan) and the Bakerloo stations, and 'buses pass the street.—(Advt.)

With the June number of "Bird Notes" is issued a plate of the Red-spotted Conure to accompany the article in the May issue. Mr. Page continues his "Easter tour Among Members' Aviaries," with plans and photographs of the aviaries of Dr. Lovell-Keay. The Marquis of Tavistock writes "Some Experiences of Cockatoos," telling of many misfortunes experienced in the endeavour to keep the various species at liberty on his estate. Mr. D. Dewar contributes "An April Morning in Northern India." Mr. Wesley Page writes of "Jackson's Whydah in Captivity." Dr. Lovell-Keay shows how to distinguish the sexes in Rosellas, and Mr. Whistler continues "Birds of the Jhelum District." Nesting Notes, a British Bird Calendar, correspondence, a report of the Club Dinner, etc., complete an interesting number.

West Stanley Show Cancelled.

The members of the West Stanley C.B.S. have cancelled their young bird show for July 11, writes Mr. W. Elliott, the secretary.

Glad to be Home Again.

Last Saturday a hen Goldfinch flew out of its cage, and after being away all Sunday and Monday, returned to its cage on Tuesday afternoon, and was found sitting on the perch (cage door, of course, was open) looking very tired and glad to be home again. The bird belonged to me, but having no use for it I gave it to my mother, and she had only had it a few weeks. This helps to prove that caged birds are not unhappy.—F. G. Smith (Leytonstone).

An Old Favourite Ailing.

We hear with extreme regret from our old friend Sam Cook of the serious illness of our mutual friend the veteran Joe Hills, so long associated with Mr. Cook as co-judge of the British bird classes at the Crystal Palace. Mr. Cook says in his letter: "I went to see our old pal on Saturday last and found him in bed suffering from an internal malady." We are sure that the great number of our readers who had the privilege of Mr. Hill's friendship during his long association with the Crystal Palace, which ended at the Jubilee show, will join us in our wishes for his speedy recovery.

OBITUARY.

Mr. M. Cox, Halifax.

It is with regret, writes Mr. Harry Clegg, sec. Halifax O.S., that I have to report the death, on June 23, of Mr. M. Cox, one of our members. To Mrs. Cox and family every member will extend the deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement. His death came as a surprise, as he looked in the best of health at our last meeting. He was regular in attendance at our meetings, and took a great interest in his birds. Mr. W. H. Ball attended at his funeral June 26 on behalf of the society.

FIRST FEATHER SHOWS.

The following First Feather Shows have been arranged; we shall be glad to be notified of any omissions: July 3, Bridlington, Driffield C.B.S.; July 4, Glasgow and Dis. Davidson, 6, Eden Vale, Sunderland.

A Curiosity.

It is said that a Mr. Short, of Haslemere, has discovered a young Cuckoo in a Wagtail's nest in a hole some 2ft. inside the trunk of an oak tree.

Unkind Death.

A railwayman going to oil the points just outside Mitcham Station, on the Wimbledon to Croydon line, on June 26, found a Barn Owl, with its claws firmly embedded in a rat's neck, lying dead on the line. From the position of the bird it was clear that it had been struck by a passing train just as it was about to fly off with its prey. Owls are common in the neighbourhood, the station being surrounded by trees; and rats make a practice of licking the oil off the points.

When your Hens Feed Badly.

Breeders who are troubled with bad-feeding hens should find in the following method of hand-rearing nestlings a boon and a blessing. Obtain from the local chemist a 3d. size glass syringe. Withdraw the plunger, and having made the egg-food into a paste, three parts fill tube. Replace plunger, and a slight pressure on same projects the food right into the crops of young, in the manner of the hen feeding, a most essential action, not obtained by the ordinary hand-feeding implement. It is cleanly to use, and there is no waste. Placed in a bowl of water when not in use, it cleans itself.—B. Hatton (Charlton, S.E.).

SCOTCH MIXTURE.

By DAN McARTHUR.

(Concluded from opposite page).

My birds get some gentles and as many grocer's currants as they want (these I can recommend, if the birds like them, as they have plenty of colouring matter in them). A bit of apple, potato, or vegetable chopped up is always useful, but there is no hard and fast rule; a good fancier soon finds out that one bird's food is another bird's poison. Mine like their food, and I have no trouble with cleaning, as a properly kept softbill isn't half so dirty as people (who think pease-meal enough for them) seem to think. The only trouble I have is to make them eat enough; they sing so much that food is a secondary consideration with them. Bless them all! I'd bless them more if they'd go back (as they used to do) to their cages after their bath sooner. But they know my weak side, and wait for a tit-bit or two (more, sometimes) before returning. They are quite up to date, I notice, for when I give them a bit of "Rag Time" on the piano they roar the place down in rivalry, but more sedate tunes fail to draw them.

Defending the Fancy.

I had the pleasure lately, in our leading local journal, of vigorously defending the Fancy against an extreme faddist's views. I pointed out that bird-keeping, under proper conditions, need entail no hideous cruelty, that the lives of the birds could be made not only happy, but actually prolonged, and that much instruction and pleasure could be gained by it. I think it would be a good plan if all fanciers who notice such stupid attacks of the "Humanitarians," would not let them pass unanswered, but "spread the light."

Our little friends come and go, some of our birdy hopes are realised, and others shattered, but we come up smiling, and think of our earlier birds (their likes were never seen, eh?) who gave us of their best and then went their way. I conclude with Whyte Melville's beautiful words:

"There are men, both good and true,
Who hold, that in a future state,
The dumb creatures we have cherished here below
Will give us joyous greeting at the Golden Gate.
Is it folly that I hope it may be so?"

CUPS OF THE NORTH LIVERPOOL C.B.S.

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, Cage Birds is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

Cage Birds suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. E. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents, hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for Cage Birds Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in Cage Birds, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of Cage Birds will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

SCOTCH MIXTURE: A Rambling Account of my Birdy Pets.

By DAN McARTHUR (Edinburgh).

I'VE never brought off a nest of Budgerigars yet, but I don't grumble. They are such a happy pair and afford us so much fun by their playful ways. Their deep tray comes in handy for the huge handfuls of grasses I give them in the summer. Sitting, nearly hidden in their miniature hayfield, they go through it methodically and contentedly. I let them out regularly, and they like nothing better than a scamper along the top of the blind. Only I have to watch the cock, for he has a bad habit of knocking over every water tin within reach (never a seed tin, curiously enough). I get them in all right by asking the cock to come on my hand (he is finger tame) and pop him into his cage, where his frantic chirps soon bring Jenny down. Easy to keep, hardy, and cheap, they deserve the attention of all fanciers.

A Kind Linnet.

I got a Redpoll given me last year, and a wretched wee lad he was too. Given to me, gratis, "in disgrace" (he never sung and only ate his head off). In poor condition, I put him on a natural diet, and he moulted out a beauty, and repaid me for the trouble. He likes to be talked to. His song, while never loud, of course, is a pleasure, and his never-ending somersaults and back-throws are most amusing. These he will do dozens of times on hearing the words, "Over you go, wee man." My two Starlings in vain try to copy him. He is a lazy bird too, and will wait until his neighbour (my four-year-old Linnet) has got some seed out of a dandelion head, then down he'll go and ask to be fed, and "Jockie," I am glad to say, never refuses him. They get on well together, and the Linnet has improved in song a good deal, and is also a demon for a bath.

An Ambition Realised!

I have a special soft side for Foreigners, and at a bird show I spend most of my time among them in envious admiration. I don't exhibit, but I like a bird big enough to handle, and I want song, so the small, cheap Finches are of no use to me (they are attractive enough and charming little pets, in their own way) and at a show I hankered after one of four birds. (I'd keep them all, if I could. Alas! I have not yet won a Derby sweep.) These were a Shama, a Mocking Bird, a Virginian Cardinal, and a Green Bulbul. Now comes the funny part. Specimens of these species have been for sale often during the last two years, but I have not had the "necessary," and when last summer I had got the £ s. d., (No, I didn't save up my soap wrappers), not a decent bird that I wanted was to be got, despite advertising several times for it. And I felt vexed. But I bucked up, for I was lucky enough to secure from that well-known aviculturist, Major Horsbrugh, a fine hand-reared Mexican Thrush, by no means common over here, and have never regretted it. They are highly prized by the natives for their song, which I can quite understand, as mine (a youngster) is giving my other birds lessons now, and has a soft, flute-like song.

As big as our own Thrush, he lacks the familiar spotted breast, being a light brown all over his breast and underparts, with whitish legs, a snaky head and neck, a big brown eye, a long dark-brown tail, and a strong broad bill. A well set up bird, "as bold as brass," he has fed from our hand, and bathed from the day of his arrival, and looks like taking first place in our affections. I feed him much the same as the Starlings, only he takes a little soft food, but is "a demon currant-swallower," and has a huge appetite for earthworms, which I am able to satisfy, fortunately, as he likes these best of all. Never a gaudy bird, he will be handsomer after his moult, and I'll see he gets plenty of fruit, as his native land has fruit in super-abundance.

A Believer in Wild Food.

A famous speech made in the U.S. Senate contained the remark—"Mexico!—land of flowers without scent and birds without song." But after keeping Jimmy a few months I must beg to differ, as will anyone who has kept a good Cardinal or other Mexican bird. All the same, it is curious that the gaudy-coloured birds, as a role, have not much song, and our humble-clad birds are such gems—the Linnet and Lark for instance. But I am straying off the track.

I need not say I believe in wild food. As a light medicine, as a colouring agent, and a money-saver, dandelion seeds, hardheads, thistles, rats-tails, and teazle (I put them in the order of their ripeness) are hard to beat; they are easily recognised and fairly common everywhere. If gathered on a dry day and stored for winter use they will be eagerly relished by hardbills, while the rambles to the country in search of them will do the fancier a world of good, and broaden his knowledge of Mother Nature in her many moods. I have spent many a glorious afternoon that way, "spotting the stuff" I wanted on my way out, and gathering it (for freshness' sake) on my way home. Even an odd shilling or two can be made by selling your surplus stuff to fanciers who have not the countryside at their doors.

Cage-Making a Pleasure.

"Potting new wine into old bottles" never pays, and patching up old cages is pretty much the same, so I welcomed the removal to new quarters last year, as it enabled me to make "a clean sweep" (is that an Irishism?) of my odd-sized old cages, and make a set of uniform shape and size. As a change from my daily task (I wield the pen, alas) the work was enjoyable, and, not being in a hurry, I was able to work in several little ideas that I fancied. These I frankly admit were all culled from the pages of CAGE BIRDS at different times and pasted into a book—you never know just when you'll need an item. Of the box type, measuring 24 by 15 by 15 inches, with a deep zinc tray (which lasts for years, can be scrubbed, dried easily, and doesn't rust), covered food and water dishes (all outside) so that the birds cannot foul them either when in or out of their cages; easily removed perches and fronts (including a perch running full length of cage, which they must stand on to feed (this keeps them off the floor and keeps their feet in nice condition) and a wood slide to remove tray without opening cage door, I think I have got as up-to-date as possible for an amateur joiner.

I am very pleased with the result. Stacked up on a little stand in a corner near a window, they get light, air, sun, and no draughts, and being in our living-room we have their cheery company all day long, and evening as well. The cages are in two tiers, so that though my birds can hear each other they can't see their neighbours, and the friendly rivalry helps their song a great deal. Lastly, any particular cage can be cleaned or fed without interfering with another—a very important point, as fanciers know, in a bird-room.

A "Jekyll and Hyde" Starling.

I am never without a Starling, and have two just now. One (four years old) is a regular "two-faced" bird. By day, a quiet, tame bird, singing lostily and talking a little; but at night, phew! A militant suffragette hasn't a look in with his performance. Up and down his cage he'll jump in the most irritating way, and covering up only made him worse. For a time we used to let him out of his cage at night, and he slept quite quietly on top of a chair; but last summer even this didn't please him, so he was shifted to a room by himself, where, in splendid isolation, he could carry-on to his heart's content. We didn't hear, peace reigned, and we slept the sleep of the tired (I nearly wrote "just"). It is a curious habit, and had he only done it during the migration period I might have understood it (for he might have been an adult-caught bird and felt the "Wander-Lust" now and then), but as he did it from the first day I got him, and ever since, I am puzzled.

He is a wonderful songster for a Starling, but not a linguist, like my first love, "Sandy" (who is sitting in his glass case, with his head cocked knowingly at me, as I write), and with all his faults, we love him still! The younger Starling I got as a nestling, and he is a grand, tame, attractive bird too. A much handsomer bird than "Joey," and far cheekier, while his song is going to be "a knock-out." It was most interesting to see him moult out of his brown nest-feathers, into his adult coat of spangled purple. A Starling is a far prettier bird than many imagine. It is his commonness spoils his value, I suppose. "Aleck's" chief joy is to knock his water tin over and open his cage door.

Keeping Softbills Fit.

No colour food, but plenty of baths, exercise, and a varied diet, are the secrets of keeping softbills fit, and mine get all three in abundance. I have never an invalid; for which much thanks! With a good fly round after a bath, a leisurely toilet (always on the same chair I notice) before going back to their cages, and a cage long enough to make them jump from perch to perch, they don't "run to fat" (always a danger). I don't worry about food much, using a much advertised food, to which I add a fourth part of ants' eggs and dried flies, as a stock food.

A SURPRISE PACKET FOR BRITISH BIRD JUDGES.

The Dunlin, a bird about the size of a Lark, which frequents marshes and moorlands in summer, and the sea-shore in winter, is included in the classification of the big club show being held next autumn by the National British Bird and M.C. The black breast patch is lost in the winter plumage, when the bird is grey and white.

KEEPING AND BREEDING FOREIGN FINCHES IN CAGES.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., &c.

BY request I am writing up the general principles of this fascinating hobby—for once my pen must be entirely silent about aviaries, for my theme is cage birds for those who have no convenience for an aviary, but long for and can accommodate a few pets in cages. It is a laudable desire and a most fascinating hobby. Moreover, it is one which can be carried to an entirely successful issue, and if the would-be bird-keeper will only master the elementary principles of the subject before acquiring his cages and their occupants, neither cruelty nor unhappiness will be inflicted upon the objects of his solicitude and care.

Now, before pursuing the topic further, I may perhaps be permitted a personal note: There is no finality to the "Cult of Bird-keeping" whatever phase our particular fancy may be—therefore I disclaim all desire to dogmatise, for whatever our experience, we are learners to the end of the chapter, and the more knowledge we acquire the more we know how little we really know; therefore I urge my readers not to be slavish followers of either individual or text-book, but to think for themselves, to study cause and effect, let the demeanour of their birds and their condition teach their own lessons, and the same with failure. When this comes, think back, find out the cause if possible, and thus lay the stepping stones to increased knowledge and success.

To Help You to Start Successfully.

My remarks are not for the experienced, but for the beginner; in fact a series of first steps, detailing conditions under which birds have been healthily kept, have lived happily and contentedly and in many instances have reproduced their kind in captivity. Thus I merely aim at supplying the base upon which my readers may rear their own edifice of practical experience and success.

I think also that it is highly important that we grasp the possibilities and limitations of the subject before embarking thereupon, else we may simply pass through disappointing and discouraging experiences that need never have come our way, and possibly throw up the pursuit in disgust instead of acknowledging ourselves as responsible for the failure. It seems to me the best way to reach this end is by a comparison. Many of those who desire to begin Foreign bird-keeping have had experience with Canaries, have used these as a comparison and have been most dissatisfied with the result. What else could one expect? It is unfair to compare a wild species with Canaries that have been domesticated for ages. Where then can we find a suitable comparison? In our own native wild birds. Compare our native birds with Canaries when kept in captivity as to breeding and the comparison is still more disappointing. But compare Foreign species with British species, as to breeding results under the conditions of cage-life and the comparison is all in favour of the former.

Wild versus Cage-Bred Birds.

What then is the result we have arrived at? I think we might tabulate it somewhat as follows:

1. There is a stronger individuality with wild species than with domesticated varieties.
2. The element of uncertainty can never be eliminated.
3. Successes will always be variable, not only with pairs of the same species, but even with the same pair from year to year.

Do I hear one of my readers saying, "Is the game, then, worth the candle"? Yes! And here I would propound another question: Would we have it otherwise? Surely the "glorious uncertainty" constitutes its greatest charm. If breeding birds were as easy as "shelling peas" how long would the craze or interest be sustained?

Now, before closing this phase of our topic, another and very pregnant query presents itself, viz.: Is there any reasonable prospect of success? Most certainly yes! What has been done can surely be done again; thus while we cannot eliminate the uncertainty as to breeding results yet results there should be, but not, I fear, pro rata with those of Canaries.

Possibly a review of some of the elements of uncertainty will be a help, even in the introduction, and clear the way for our subject proper—naming these from the common standpoint so freely put forth: "I got a pair of birds a month ago, gave them a roomy cage and have supplied their every known want, and they have not gone to nest yet: Will they do so?"

Wild species (Foreign birds are wild species) do not settle down as quickly as domesticated varieties, and the uncertainty is made more pronounced by individual pairs varying so considerably as to the time taken—thus a definite reply to the above query is not possible. Again, some species are naturally shy in demeanour; at home in their native haunts they are skulkers, and not often seen save by the close and persistent observer. Again, most species of birds naturally court retirement when choosing a site for their home, and all these traits have to be overcome with wild species when subjected to the conditions of cage life.

A Fair Field Remains.

Then there is the question of suitable food and how to supply it—in a state of nature birds work for their existence, and the "peace and plenty" which they get without effort in confinement is a most unnatural condition and often militates against success, but such points as the above will fully develop as our subject opens out under the headings of: Cages: Birds to Keep: Food and Treatment.

I will close this introductory chapter by stating that in this country the hobby of breeding Foreign species in cages is as yet in its infancy, but the pursuit has not been barren, for Gouldian, Ribbon, Zebra, Bib, Grey Singing, Crimson, Bicheno's, and Long-tailed Grass Finches, Java Sparrows (both Grey and White, and crosses), Bengalese, Silverbills, Budgerigars, Passerine Parrakeets, etc., have all successfully reared young in cages.

To those who have the capacity for taking pains, are willing to learn, will study their birds' demeanour, help them in difficulty, and will supply all their wants, not merely in gross plenty, but intelligently, according to the altered conditions of the birds' life, a good measure of success is sure to come.

THE warbling of the young cocks should be taken as a guide when removing them from the flights into the song cages. In the event of having an exceptionally forward singer it may remain in the flight and help to tutor the others, but any that bring out loud, or other, noises that are objectionable to the ear should be removed. Otherwise it may be safely said that they can remain in the flights until nearly the completion of the moult. Even then there is nothing to be gained by transferring them to the song cages and a subdued light so long as the song is delivered in a low, or even a normal tone; but there are not many that will retain a normal tone for any length of time if allowed full daylight.

Another guide, and one that may be simpler than the above, will be to cage them off separately when the warbling gradually unrolls itself into recognisable tours or rolls. A very old-fashioned term for this is "Just as the bird is attaining its pipe." The proper time to cage the young cocks is frequently a stumbling block, as many will place them in the song cages and commence to curtail the light as soon as the birds are on seed. I have known some fanciers to go further than this and cage off both cocks and hens, and have them used to closed shutters before they even commenced to moult. Thus in their eagerness not to let a cock bird slip past them and also for the want of a little knowledge they deprive both sexes of the exercise in the flight cages that is so essential in producing well-developed bodies and new plumage. It is, so to speak, only the fittest of the fit that can stand this treatment during the moult, and any inherited weakness is brought out, and often intensified, whereas with the invigorating exercise the flight affords and proper attention in dieting, this weakness may be grown out of.

Getting Over the First Moult.

The first moult is a trying time for the birds and the new fancier will now understand that they should be given all the exercise that can be allowed. In the case of the hens there is the strain of growing the new plumage, flesh, and bone; in the case of the cocks this exercise is necessary to produce, in addition to plumage, flesh, and bone, that particular muscular development essential to the production of the deep sounding tours and rolls. I would also emphasise that even if the birds are intended for the market they must receive the same attention as though they were for the fancier's own breeding cages, as it is likely to bring the fancier's name into disrepute should his stock be unfruitful through the lack of proper development.

The young birds in their first moult only cast the body feathers; the flight feathers in the wings and the long tail feathers are not moulted naturally until the following year when the first adult moult takes place, usually from July to September. The scales on the legs are also cast in the adult moults, but this may pass unnoticed only in those birds that grow them to an abnormal size. Usually large scales indicate old age, but this cannot be taken as being an infallible guide, because many birds of both sexes will produce them in their first or second year.

Neither the young nor the old birds should be overcrowded in the flights, as in addition to being detrimental from a health point of view, it is the chief cause of them plucking each other's feathers. I think it is done more in a spirit of mischievousness, and their attention should be attracted by placing pieces of cuttlefish, old mortar, bacon, and pieces of stout twine on the wires of the flights. A bird that becomes badly plucked should be isolated until the new plumage has grown again; the culprit should also be removed, or it will probably find another victim. The bird that has been plucked should be allowed a little extra nourishing food.

A Common Trouble with Youngsters.

One of the most common ailments in young birds is stomach and bowel trouble, and it will often appear in the best regulated bird-rooms without any apparent cause. To minimize this trouble I make a hard and fast rule never to give young birds green food of any description until they have completed the moult. I rely upon the bread and milk to keep the bowels working smoothly, and to prevent constipation. Neither do I give wild seeds in large quantities. A small quantity of ripe plantain heads, or "rat tails," as they are known in some localities, say one between three or four birds, could be beneficially given twice a week, varying them with a little shepherd's purse, dandelion seed, or any of the other wild seeding heads that are usually given to Canaries. These should be gathered in a nearly ripe condition, and stored to ripen. A good plan is to place them head-downwards in a paper bag, tie the stems and the mouth of the bag together, and place them in the sun. By enclosing them thus, they will be kept clean, and the seeds as they ripen and fall will be retained. Wild seeds are not a necessary article of diet for the "Roller," and unless these seeds are supplied in a thoroughly ripe condition to the young birds, it is far better to withhold them. Unripe seeds, green food, and stale egg-food are all conducive to stomach and bowel trouble in young birds, a complaint which often turns to inflammation if not taken in hand and treated at once. The latter may also be caused by a chill, brought about by allowing them to bathe when the weather is chilly or cold

The cold bath may in some cases bring on lung complaints, such as coughs or bronchial troubles, known to the layman as asthma, but birds bred from parents unaffected with lung troubles, and kept under sanitary conditions, out of direct draughts, generally have an immunity from this complaint. No affected specimen should be introduced amongst them, the ailment is easily detected by the bird's very laboured breathing, often accompanied by a sharp sneeze or cough, and the distinctly observable up and down movement of the tail.

It is natural for young birds to sleep at intervals during the daytime; otherwise, healthy specimens are bright and lively, with tight-fitting plumage, two conditions that are lacking in an ailing specimen. The latter sleeps more than the others, and is loose in feather, in contrast to its companions' tightly-carried plumage, frequently drooping the wings until the flight feathers, i.e., the long feathers in the wings are carried below the tail. The sick bird should be removed and placed in a separate cage. For colds a little honey and glycerine, with two drops of eucalyptus, should be well mixed with the drinking water, fresh daily, or one of the advertised remedies for lung troubles—which are simple to use—can be obtained from any of the providers of fanciers' requisites.

Signs of Health and Otherwise.

If it is apparent that the cause of the trouble is not a cold, the stomach should be examined. In the healthy young bird, it will be found fuller and rounder than in an old bird, and will be covered more or less with a layer of fat, whereas in one suffering with stomach and bowel trouble the skin on the stomach (that portion extending from the lower point of the breast bone to the vent) will be a distinctly reddish colour. If immediate treatment is not given the colour deepens, the blood veins begin to show, and afterwards the outline of a large bowel will appear, raised above the level of the stomach. (An examination of a dead specimen would show this large bowel to contain a quantity of watery matter.) The bird is now in a critical condition, and the most effective remedy I have yet found is equal proportions of the best brandy and glycerine, giving two drops for a young bird, and three drops for an old bird, from the end of a quill direct into the mouth, repeating the dose every hour until an improvement takes place, then the dose can be given at longer intervals. Take the bird's seed and water away, and give bread and milk, sprinkled with maw seed, to eat, and substitute milk in the place of water to drink. For the minor trouble, when the skin of the stomach is only found to be red, this bread and milk diet, with milk to drink for a few days, will soon effect a cure. (To be continued.)

Correspondence.

More Light Linnet Mules.

SIR,—I am pleased to inform readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that I have been successful in rearing three Linnet Mules of which one is clear and two variegated. If any of your readers doubt my words, I will willingly allow any judge or fancier to come and inspect them any time between the hours of 3 and 8 p.m.

Haydock. ALBERT E. HELPS.

[We sincerely hope that our correspondent has made no inadvertent mistake. We have this season enquired into three cases of clear Linnet Mules, and two cases of clear Goldfinch Mules, and on seeing the birds all of them, in our opinion, were just Canaries, purely and simply.—EDITOR.]

Is the Novice Coddled Overmuch?

SIR, I am a novice and have read the correspondence re the above. Mr. Allsopp's writings are effective, similar to the recent frost experienced, nipping young stuff in its tenderest growth. Being one of the "young stuff," I should like to ask Mr. A. if he will tell us how and from whom he obtained his stock, and state the highest figure he ever paid for a bird; also how long it took him from time of purchase to produce "Welsh Queen." I am anxious to learn how to breed a champion myself. Size is the one great craze. Well, Mr. A. kindly say what class of bird you introduce to maintain size; if it is crest bred or coppy? Mr. Hodder has recently told us we have gone on size so much that long wings have cropped up. True, sir, and half crest breds: it is no use trying to get out of it. Mr. Hodder states the coming Norwich shape is that of a fish. Mr. Hodder gave some useful hints and I am just beginning to feel sure the novices will some day surprise the champions. But they must keep their first feather birds out of the selling classes, and give them the 2nd year's trial trip. J. LOCKE.

A Chance for a Cinnamon Canary Revival.

SIR,—The Cinnamon Canary Club has decided to hold its Club show at the Bradford National Exhibition, to be held Dec. 4 and 5. Six classes will be provided for champions and four for novices, with Mr. H. W. Battye to place the cards. It now rests with fanciers of this interesting, if somewhat neglected, variety to show what they are made of. The accommodation and convenience for both birds and visitors are all that could be desired, along with the fanciers to attend to the wants of the birds, so that no one need have any fear about sending their choicest specimens.

S. MIDGLEY, Show Sec.

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

SIR, I am sorry I misconstrued Mr. Harrison's statement. But even now he does not make it very clear, as he does not state in the dark, or by gas light. I have had plenty sing by gas light, also one this spring that sang in the dark. I think it is conclusive that a 'Gale that sings at Christmas is not uttering a "love song." It may be a love song in the bird's wild state, but I fail to see how it can be in captivity. Regarding Canaries singing the 'Gale's song, I should most emphatically say no, for the simple reason that a Canary is a different bird altogether to a 'Gale—one is a Hardbill and the other a Softbill; besides, the song of the Canary is too harsh and choppy; I would sooner say the Canary would spoil the 'Gale's song. In reply to Mr. Lewis, I must apologise if I was in any way sarcastic, as I did not mean to be. Mr. Norman's statement does not read at all "funny" to me, as I don't take any notice of what I read in books. I simply go on my own experience. I get my 'Gales first hand, and get them on to food myself. I prefer to do so, and I may say I very rarely lose one. I have had considerable trouble with one this year. I went into my bird-room and saw it on its side, apparently dying; so I rubbed some food on its feet. The bird at once commenced to peck the food off its feet, and is now doing well. The only answer I can give to your question is that it clearly proves their inefficiency to get 'Gales on to food. Moreover, I do not know any catchers that sell their birds for 2s. 6d. If Mr. Lewis will be so kind as to forward me their names and addresses, I will give them an order for a dozen at that price. F. BENT.

SIR,—I am delighted at Mr. G. Lewis' firm stand against bolstering the Nightingale trade up. Given the right food and treatment (and season) a cock should sing for one owner as well as for another. If not, it is a born sulker, which never did and never will do any good, i.e. singing. Mr. Lewis' contribution disposes of the piffle "change of food, a different owner," etc. Most bird-keepers have had some such ungenerous Lark or Linnet, or other bird, but with Nightingales it seems to be the rule. Let the novice beware of other kinds of singing (?) 'Gales. Number 1. What becomes of trapped hen Nightingales? Is it—For sale, a cock Nightingale on song. Number 2: One authority states there is a most striking resemblance between the hen Redstart and a cock 'Gale, and warns buyers from unscrupulous persons. Number 3: Large fledgelings of uncertain sex are sold as house-moulted winners, pets, and what not, for a good price. To spot these, let them loose in the bird room; they will be running round your feet in typical fledgeling manner, are unable to fly to curtain pole and clamber up curtain. Two days later, for a cert, you find them dead at bottom of cage, and in this case the singing (of a type) is done by the novice. F.

[The latter part of our correspondent's letter reads curiously, as (1) fledgeling Nightingales can be easily and unmistakably told by their spotted plumage, which they lose at the first autumn moult; (2) there is no reason why any fledgeling should not fly, and fly strongly; (3) one surely cannot expect a Nightingale to "clamber up" curtains; (4) we never knew that running round one's feet was typical of fledgelings, nor that they die for certain in two days.—EDITOR, "C.B."]

The Clear Linnet Mules at Longton.

SIR,—Before I reply to "Interested's" letter, I ask him, as a man, to come from behind his nom-de-plume and sign his name, as I don't believe in writing through the Fancy press to men who won't sign their names to their letters; also I ask him to give me the name of the competent judge who saw the young birds and pronounced them Canaries, as there were only two men saw them before I purchased the parents. When I called to see them on Friday I was told they had been sold in the morning. While visiting Longton Show I was told they had not been sold, so I went along with a well-known British exhibitor and son to have a look at them, when I saw Mr. E. Bown for the first time in my life, and he told me they had been sold to a gentleman from the Meir (near Longton) on the Friday morning. One bird was clear, and one had a mark on the neck. When we asked him if he had had a cock Canary in with the hen, he said he had never had a cock Canary in the house, and he has lived in it ten years; also he had had the hen six or seven weeks before pairing her with the Linnet. So I will leave it to the readers of CAGE BIRDS to form their own opinion about them. As Mr. E. Bown signed a paper to the effect that they are genuine Mules, I have sent a copy to the Editor for inspection. G. PERRINS.

[The enclosure sent by Mr. Perrins is not signed by Mr. Bown, but, probably by mistake, bears the signature "G. Perrins." If we may be pardoned for saying so, surely the young birds themselves would afford the best evidence of their parentage. Mr. E. Tams, of Longton, well-known as an exhibitor and judge, stated in our paper last week that he had seen them, and that he considered them young yellow Canaries. Mr. Perrins ignores Mr. Tams' letter. Breeders of genuine light Linnet Mules know that they do not show any trace of yellow when in nestling plumage: they are practically as white as snow.—Editor CAGE BIRDS.]

The Canary Fancy Out In Saskatchewan.

Good Birds Scarce, but Plenty of Lovers of Them.

Sir,- Having recently become a reader of your interesting paper, Cage Birds, the same being sent out to me every week, I thought I would endeavour to explain the situation in the bird line out in this part of the globe, and describe what is being done to foster and create more interest among lovers of birds. As far back as I can remember anything about birds, and right up to the time of leaving the Old Country, I always kept birds of one sort and another. That being the case, it was only natural that I should endeavour to keep up the interest after taking up my abode in Saskatchewan. As soon as I got settled down I started to look around for some of our feathered pets. Being so far west at that time (nine years ago) I found it very difficult to get any, unless one sent down to Eastern Canada, or the States, and then you had to have what was sent you, and take a long chance on them arriving alive. Even if they arrived in anything like decent condition, it was very disheartening to find out that they were no good to do any breeding with, as they were either too old, or instead of getting a pair you more often than not got two hens. However, after a long time I managed to secure a pair that would breed, and ultimately succeeded in rearing a few young ones.

Finding a ready sale for what I could rear I turned my attention to breeding more extensively, and this year started out with some twenty pairs (mostly Germans) these being about the only kind that could be got. They were mostly one and two years of age, having been reared in this city. The conditions here being somewhat later than at home, I have more or less been experimenting as to when is the best time to put birds together, and during which month you get the best results.

The result of my experiments so far has proved that by breeding too early (February and March) with the weather so changeable at that time, the results are very unsatisfactory, the birds either dying in the shell or within a few days after hatching. With those breeding later you generally find that thunderstorms will upset all one's calculations. I came to this conclusion (after having several promising eggs go bad) by testing some previous to the storm and again the morning after. In many cases the hens themselves will forsake the nest during a storm. Feeling somewhat disappointed with only safely rearing two young I allowed the birds to have the use of the breeding room entirely to themselves, never bothering them except at feeding time. I am now awaiting the results of four sittings. Anyway, the outcome cannot be any worse than what I have already experienced. Neither am I, according to the statements made to me, the only breeder who is having this run of bad luck. However, never say die, so I am going to keep plugging along. I have still some eight or ten weeks ahead of me before moulting time.

As to the class of birds we have here, as I stated earlier, the majority are the Germans which are imported into this country in large quantities every year. Evidently most of them are discards. Being known as the only person in the city keeping such a number of birds it seems natural that I receive the large number of enquiries that I do. In nine cases out of ten the question asked is, "Have you got any good Norwich Canaries?" or "Have you got any Yorkshires for sale?" Such questions as these, I may say, are asked by old countrymen, who have at one time or another kept these kinds of birds, and would do the same again if they could only be secured. There are, I admit, a few good ones here, having been brought out by their owners. About the best cost from ten dollars to twelve dollars per pair (40 and 50 shillings) from Ontario, exclusive of travelling expenses, and these birds are probably worth from two to three shillings apiece.

A few of us are anxious to form a small cage bird society for the purpose of creating more interest and raising the standard of cage bird-keeping. Will you kindly oblige me with a copy or two of club rules? Same will be greatly appreciated. One step was taken towards this end at the poultry show held here in March, when cage birds were admitted. Altogether some thirty birds were shown by only four exhibitors. Out of my eight I took three firsts and two seconds. Another reason for our desire for good birds is to kill as much as possible the actions of certain so-called bird men who travel through the country with several hundred birds at a time, and locate at some store in the towns and cities for a few days, selling so-called "guaranteed songsters" which in a great many cases are nothing more than hens. So you can readily see that until we can get the better class of bird, birds that can be guaranteed, we bird-lovers can hardly hope to create the interest that we would desire. Well, sir, I think I have taken up too much of your time with this. I wish Cage Birds every success.

A Cure for Inflammation in Young Birds.

Sir,—At the time of receiving my copy of Cage Birds on Friday last, I had two young Canaries with inflammation of the bowels, and on reading the lecture given by Mr. F. Wraight at Hastings, I saw he recommended the use of Ellinan's Embrocation with a camel hair brush. I soon applied some to the part affected, at the same time giving two or three drops of castor oil direct into the beak with a fountain pen filler I keep for the purpose. I removed their seed and gave milk sop instead, and to-day (Monday) they are practically well, and jumping about quite lively. Through you, I beg to thank Mr. Wraight for the "tip," and would advise anyone who has the misfortune to have any of their birds troubled with the complaint to try it. I wish Cage Birds continued success.

Frank Thomas.

The Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C. Trophies.

Sir,—As Chairman of the above club I cannot let Mr. G. Salt's letter of June 20 pass without protest. I have before me a postcard (no date) and a letter dated April 5th, sent by Mr. G. Salt to the Secretary of the above society asking when he is going to receive the cup won by him, and a more insulting way of writing to a secretary it has not been my duty to read, and neither do I want to read such again. He writes for something he is not entitled to. There was no cup up for second most points in novice section. The only authorised letter sent out by our secretary to any secretary of a show having our patronage was the one to Hanley, and published in their schedule, viz., 1st, cup, value £2 2s.; 2nd prize value £1 1s.; 3rd prize value 10s. Where does your correspondent get his idea of a cup from? I suppose from last season's special list. I notice on P.C. to secretary he is asking for silver cup, but has moderated that in letter to Cage Birds, and says cup. Also he takes exception to Mr. Ratcliffe (since deceased) taking a gold medal value 12s. 6d., half-a-crown more than stated value; let me tell him Mr. Ratcliffe paid the extra and also gave a donation of 5s. to fund, and also a pair of plaques, value 5s. This is more than your correspondent has ever done, as I cannot trace any gift to the society by him. Now, as giver of oil-paintings, which he despises, according to his correspondence to the secretary, I gave them for the purpose of saving club funds, and stipulated how they were to be disposed of, and the secretary is quite in order in offering him the one put up for second most points under novice section. It seems to me some fanciers are only in the Fancy for what they can get, not for the love of the Fancy. If such fanciers would only take more interest in the financial side of the society they are members of no doubt cups would be able to be put up; but when members expect cups that have not been put up for competition, then the sooner they are disillusioned the better. May I ask your correspondent how and when he got the idea of the cup? May I also state that the oil-painting offered is fully the value of £1 1s.? W. G. Andrews.

The Financial Difficulties of Irish Societies.

Amalgamation Suggested as a Solution.

Sir,—As the Ulster O.A. (Belfast) and also the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland are in financial difficulties, with little prospect of either holding an open show for an indefinite period, might I suggest that the Norwich Plainhead Canary Club of Ireland should admit to membership the Yorkshire Canary breeders of Ireland, and alter the name of the society to "The Norwich Plainhead and Y.C.C. of Ireland"? If this sugestion were agreed to I have not the slightest doubt an annual open show could be held (in Belfast and Dublin on alternate years) second to none in Ireland. Those interested may rest assured that silver cups will be forthcoming for the Yorkie. section, to put them on a level with the Norwich, if such a combination takes place. It is rumoured that the Leinster O.S. annual show will this year be open to the United Kingdom; if so, may success be theirs.

Yorkie.

Linnet Singing at Devonport.

Sir,- Many of our Linnet fanciers here at Devonport are very anxious to form a Linnet Singing Contest club, and we ask the kind help of Cage Birds and fanciers who belong to a contest club. Will the latter kindly inform me how such clubs are kept up, officers required, entrance fee charged for each bird, how long birds are hung on the nail, whether they are hung in order that they can see each other or not?

Pure White Hedge Sparrow.

Sir,—I write in answer to Mr. G. Cathcart re the White Hedge Sparrow. There were two caught here at Swinhill, Larkhall, in 1912. The old birds were normal in colour and there was only one egg laid in each nest, and the young ones feathered very quickly. The first one was caught by John Kelly, and the next one by myself, at Swinhill. The White Hedge Sparrow shown at the Crystal Palace was one of these birds.

A. M'Lean.

Over 100 Young Birds Expected.

Sir,—I was agreeably surprised to see my saddle-marked buff Norwich depicted on the front page of your valuable paper, Cage Birds. I must congratulate your artist, Mr. Norman, for it is life-like and not overdone. I need not comment on the bird's success on the show bench, for he is well known. I might say that I have had a successful breeding season so far, having got between 80 and 90 young birds, and I expect to get well over 100 before the season closes.

J. R. Houghton.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

Sir,—I think "Yellow Green" deserves praise for opening up this correspondence. I am one who also thinks that the S.P.C. is just in the hands of a few who do and say as they think fit. I am not in favour of ringing birds, for I don't think it is right for the feathered tribe to go about with rings on their legs just to satisfy some who go about with their hearts in their mouth fancying that every one is "doing" them. Still, if I had had notice in time, I believe I should have rung my birds, seeing that I was in the club. I think that to do justice to all the members we should have another ballot. It would give more satisfaction to all, and if carried again it should not be compulsory this year. I think that is quite fair to all. If the rings are to be pushed through this fluke (that is what the vote was) I am another who is finished with the S.P.C. Why do not more members give their opinion of the farce?

A Wee Fifer.

Sir.—I would like to inform "Buff Green No. 2" that there are no bird dealers in Musselburgh. All our fanciers are wokingmen who keep birds as a hobby, and who like to have a few young to sell to clear expenses, the same as all fanciers do, and if they are lucky enough to breed a good one they certainly sell it if they can get plenty for it. Where are the fanciers who won't sell if they get plenty of money for what they breed? Money rules all now, Mr. "Buff Green No. 2." Perhaps if you are not a dealer you will give us an insight into what you do with all the birds you do not require. Does the missus make a Canary pie of them and see that all the rings are taken off first? Glad to see the letter of "Sunny Leith." His is another case of disaster through the rings; and there are plenty more if the breeders would only own up to it. Is the S.P.C. afraid of defeat, and therefore will not take another ballot on the ring question? Surely "Buff Green No. 2" does not know much about a Plainhead when he talks of handling them to examine the rings. As "Buff Green No. 1" says, they are not on a level with Crests, which are used to handling and being mostly practically blinded with feathers can easily be caught. Not so a Plainhead; a bird of life, always on the move, and judged for type and quality. Nice specimens they would be, judged after a judge catching and handling them; more likely minus some of their feathers. After this process, where would type and quality be? That will not do. Rings are a failure; you will have to get something better. Here is another item concerning our judges. We have some big men (three that I know) with hands developed by honest labour, who cannot put their hands through the door of a club show cage, let alone take a bird out. Through this farcical rule accidents will happen; birds will get out, and who is going to "pay the piper" for all birds lost or destroyed for exhibition purposes? May I suggest another scheme for S.P.C. faddists?—a new club cage with a big door to suit the hands of big judges; or, better still, when engaging a judge get the measurement of his hands.

BIG BIRD-BREEDER'S BUDGET,

'CAGE-BIRDS' 1914 ANNUAL

There are articles for every season, and now the Bird-keeper is in the SECOND ROUND, he would do well to study the advice given by that well-known bird authority, Claude St. John, in his article,

Mistakes Birdbreeders Must Avoid.

A most seasonable article. Alone worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby. Besides this highly instructive article, it also contains the following:

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP & BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS.
By F. Meakin.
This is a very helpful article for those who are thinking of taking up the keeping of Foreign birds. It describes the most suitable cages and their fittings, the various commonly kept Foreign birds, their average price, feeding, and management, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES.
By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

DIRECTORY OF THE JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden.
A most interesting article on the food values and properties of the various seeds used by bird-keepers, giving also the different birds the various seeds are suitable for.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS.
By W. H. Gibb.
The breeding of Budgerigars is one of the most interesting phases of Foreign bird-keeping. In this article Mr. Gibb gives a full description of the methods he has found most successful in housing, feeding, and breeding these charming little Parrakeets.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRDCATCHING.
By J. W. Steel.
A soundly-instructive article, giving some simple methods of catching the various British birds. It also tells how to make birdlime, and the uses and abuses of this material; in fact, is a complete guide to the art of bird-catching.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Lizard Canary Going Strong in the North.

SIR,—The Lizard Canary up North is very strong, numerically, this season, and the quality just splendid. One breeder alone has between 20 and 30 Lizards, some of which, with a good moult, will make the pace hot later on.

Sunderland. G. DAVIDSON.

Bird Life at Aberystwyth.

SIR,—I too spent Whitsun week in Aberystwyth, but unlike my Bro. Crutcher did not come across any fanciers. I wonder if those he met showed him any of the wild birds of the neighbourhood? During the whole week I did not see even one perky House Sparrow, and only heard one in the thick trees near the municipal buildings on the Thursday morning before breakfast. Not a cock Robin met my eyes. Where were the Gulls on the sea front, with such an extensive bay; only an occasional one appeared here and there. I climbed Constitution Hill one morning early, and thought I should hear Skylarks galore; again I was disappointed. On the run through the Rheidol Valley to the Devil's Bridge, with the exception of Jackdaws and Starlings, our feathered friends were few, an occasional Blackbird and Thrush and now and again a Chaffinch were all the bird life to be seen. Perhaps our friends in Aberystwyth can tell us whither they had flown? I should have liked to have seen Mr. Meredith's Goldies. I was very much struck with the absence of wild birds in the vicinity; perhaps Bro. C. has better sight than

A Dispute at the Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S.

SIR,—I am not surprised at the officials of the society not replying to my letter in CAGE BIRDS of June 13th, as when the petition was before the committee at a previous meeting the vice-chairman (Mr. Dann) told the committee they had done wrong in signing same, it being against his wish, etc. At the meeting held afterwards, on March 30th, I was told I must comply with Rule 8 and pay the 2s. deposit. On April 27th I paid the secretary the deposit and at the committee meeting held on the same day the committee, seeing I was going all the way, having nothing to fear, decided to consider the matter at a special committee meeting on May 25th, and hoped I would be there. I was asked to state my case. I told them they had a petition before them to deal with, which read thus:

> Mr. Hyde, Hon. Secretary:—We the undersigned members of the Highgate and Hampstead Society do protest at the action of Mr. G. Gardner, the chairman, towards Mr. G. H. Neal, the founder, late secretary, and committeeman of the society, at the Annual General Meeting held in January, 1914, knowing as we do the interest Mr. Neal has taken in the society, and that when he speake he has cause for same. We therefore call upon you to summon a special general meeting for him to defend himself against the charges made against him; all members to be notified of same.—Yours Respectfully (Signed by Twenty-six Members).

Twelve of the above members were on the committee and, I might say, signed first, on my going to their houses and stating my case. I might say there were only about three committeemen had anything to say. One was going to break out in my favour but was soon "snapped up." The chairman, Mr. Gardner, would not answer questions, but said he left things entirely in the hands of the committee, with the result that they would not let the actions come forth. I tendered my resignation, which Mr. Gardner and the selected three were pleased to accept sooner than come to the footlights. But Mr. Gardner, who was down to lecture at the members' meeting so shattered his nervous system that he had to go home, the vice-chairman being able to stay because he sat still on committee and uttered not a word. But if they will read up the New Testament a bit more they will see their folly and give ear to my supplication so I may be at peace with all men. G. H. NEAL.

Another Case of Two Birds Out of One Egg.

SIR,—A little wonder came to light in my bird-room on Friday morning—two birds out of one egg. I was quite delighted when I saw the chicks. I called my wife to see them because she was there when I tested the eggs on the tenth day. There were three eggs in the nest, but two were unfertile. So you see these birds must be "twins"—two in one egg. It is years since I heard of a thing like this, and little did I think I should ever come to breed them. The birds are doing well.

Dukinfield. STREATTLE HURST.

[Several instances of "twins" were notified last season in our columns.—Editor.]

Did Birds Spring from Reptiles?

SIR,—This question arose from a chance remark of mine in a letter upon another subject and I did not reply to Mr. McLean's letter, not only because he agreed with me on the two questions I was discussing and only disagreed with me in the manner in which I arrived at my conclusions, but also because I considered that if debates were begun on every side issue this correspondence might go on indefinitely. In view of Mr. Johnson's letter, however, I feel I should like to say just one last word on this matter. I quite agree with him that one should not "embrace with both arms" any theory which is propounded regardless of its barrenness of reasons, but at the same time I think one should keep an open mind until one can find evidence to disprove it. I mentioned this subject quite casually and I believed (and believe still) that it was generally accepted by ornithologists. I do not think that the fact that a Canary never throws back to a reptile is of any use as evidence. A Canary does not throw back (and I say this deliberately) even to a perfect specimen of the wild Canary from which man bred it, so that it is hardly likely to throw back to remote periods. However, all I can say, as a plain man who does not profess any scientific knowledge, is that birds were hardly likely to have survived the deluge, if they existed before that epoch, and that it is to my mind quite reasonable to assume that their evolution began after that, and that reptiles seem to be the most likely root of their evolution.

THE SHOWS.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S. (Plymouth).

Second N.F. show, Oddfellows' Hall, June 24. The show was a decided success, 86 birds being staged. Yorks. were 19 in two classes, the gem of the collection being Mr. Peathy John's winning yellow. In Norwich, Mr. Pope's team excelled, especially in size and type. Crests were a failure in numbers, and appear to be on the down grade in Plymouth. Some very fine British were exhibited, and in this section the W.C.O.S. shows great improvement. Judges: Yorks., Mr. Oliver; Nor., Cinn., and A.O.V., Mr. Spillman; Crests, Mr. Davey; Brit. and Mules, Mr. Large.

YORKS., YELL. (7): 1, 4, Peathy Johns; 2, 7, Snell; 3, Luscombe; 5, 6, Craven. BUFF (12): 1, Snell; 2, 4, Craven; 3, 5, 6, Luscombe; 7, Peathy Johns. NOR. YELL.: (12): 1, Pope; 2, 4, Peathy Johns; 3, Ough; 5, Moffit; 6, Deakin; 7, Smale. BUFF (11): 1, 3, 4, Pope; 2, 6, Ough; 5, 7, Peathy Johns. CINN. YELL. (4): 1, 2, 3, Brown. BUFF (4): 1, 2, 3, Brown. A.O.V. CAN. (5): 1, 2, Rowe; 3, Bailey. CRESTS (2): 1, 2, Barage. C.B. (2): 1, 2, Hutchings. LIGHT MULE (2): 1, 2, Cheney. DARK (4): 1, 3, 4, Rapson; 2, Hambley. GOLDF. OR BULLF. (7): 1, 2, 4, Cheney; 3, 6, Wills; 5, 7, Smale. LINNET, ETC. (9): 1, 2, 4, 6, Cheney; 3, Smale; 5, 7, Wills. A.O.V. SEEDEATER (5): 1, 5, Wills; 2, 3, 4, Cheney. FOR. SMALL (2): 1, 2, Hutchings.—T. Pope, Hon. Sec.

STOCKPORT AND HAZEL GROVE.

First members' show, Trinity House, Stockport, June 20; 82 birds faced the judge, a very nice total for a start. Some very promising young ones were staged, particularly by Messrs. Hird and Wright in Yorks., and Messrs. Sykes and Bennett in Norwich. In the Champion Section Mr. W. E. Sykes won sp. for best bird and best Nor. with a clinking clear buff Nor.; Mr. Hird ran a close race for best bird with a charming clear buff Yorks., this bird taking special for best Yorks. In novices Mr. H. Sykes won sp. for best bird and best Nor. with a good cl. yell. Nor., Mr. Bennett being close on him with a very nice cap mkd. buff. Mr. J. C. Wright landed special for best Yorks. with a lovely mkd. yellow. Points specials: Messrs. A. Bradley and W. Taylor, A.O.V.; Messrs. W. E. Sykes and J. Hadfield in Norwich; Mr. J. Potts in Yorks. The show was considered to be a success, being well patronised by visitors and fanciers from surrounding districts, to whom we tender our thanks. Mr. J. Raynes judged and gave every satisfaction.—W. Stafford.

From award list sent we gather that the principal winners, other than those mentioned, were: YORKS., Potts, Beswick. NOR., Bowden, Hadfield, Beswick, Stafford, Marsland, Garbutt, Bradley. NOV. YORKS., Taylor, Wild. NOV. NOR., Bowden, Russell. MULES, Taylor. BRIT., Hird, Marsland, Taylor.—Editor.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

F.F. show, June 27, Lecture Hall, Rotunda—a room splendidly adapted for the purpose, being of convenient size and possessing a good top light. Entries were somewhat below the average, but a very good collection of birds was staged at a convenient height on a scarlet covered stage. Borders took pride of place in point of numbers, and some very promising birds were staged. Norwich were good, but we should like to have seen more; and British classes were by no means well filled. There was a nice little collection of foreigners, and we noticed two or three new exhibitors in this section. Novices came up fairly well. Mr. J. H. Payne, Gloucester, judged.

Readers Great Interest in "Cage Birds" Tip.

AMAZING RESULT OF OFFER MADE ON PAGE 529 OF LAST ISSUE.

IN an article in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS it was suggested that there would bound to be a heavy demand for the patterns of that most remarkable Holeproof cloth to which our readers' attention was called. The cloth will not wear out or tear, and could not be torn by a barbed wire fence, yet it is the same in appearance as the very best tweeds and worsteds. The anticipated demand was nothing compared with that experienced during the two or three days following the publication of CAGE BIRDS. During the few days some hundreds of applications were received for free samples, but for the benefit of those readers who are not yet familiar with this new clothing, extracts from last week's article are given under the heading "Timely Hints."

Timely Hints.

Readers of a serious turn of mind—those who think—yet not deeply, must recognise the remarkable changes made in every industry—the outcome of scientific study and research. The result of years of experimentation frequently gives to the world the most simple invention—so very simple, yet which in a few months scraps all old methods and appliances, and results in a better article at half the price for the public. The changes in methods of cage-bird keeping are simple yet remarkable for their results, yet to think that science has given us a cloth absolutely untearable—and of such hard-wearing qualities that the manufacturers willingly guaranteo it, no matter how hard it is worn, for at least six months and at the same time offer clothing at half the price of that made from ordinary tweeds is certainly most astounding.

THE BLACKCAP WARBLER.

The Cloth.

As previously stated, this really marvellous cloth is absolutely untearable—you cannot tear it, no matter how hard you try; but possibly the thought arises that being of such hard-wearing qualities, it must resemble in some shapo or form the ordinary old-fashioned cord. This is not so. Side by sido with the very latest designs in tweeds, and the best of our fancy worsteds, readers without testing the cloth would be unable to say which were holeproof and which were ordinary tweeds. It is absolutely identical in appearance, and for considerably less than a sovereign, it is possible to obtain the design and colouring which in ordinary tweeds could not be procured under £3 or £4. The designs are suitable for office and best wear and field or rough wear, so that readers, whether at work or at leisure, need have no hesitation in wearing garments made from this remarkable cloth. The cloth could not be torn by a barbed wire fence, it is quite impossible to tear it, and the manufacturers predict that just as soon as the public learn of its remarkable wearing qualities, ordinary tweeds and serges will become a thing of the past.

Prices Extraordinary.

The prices of garments in this holeproof cloth are truly remarkable—of course, they are cut very low, more or less, to induce the public to test the cloth. It is possible to procure a really well-cut, smartly-finished suit consisting of jacket, vest, and trousers for the absurd sum of 14s. 9d., whilst a pair of trousers guaranteed for six months' solid hard wear could be obtained for merely 4s. 6d., or gent's riding, cycling or walking breeches for 6s.

Method in Making.

Readers naturally ask the question, can these goods be well made for the money? Here again is the result of the employment of modern methods and machinery, the outcome of years of experimentation, which have rendered it possible to supply a suit of clothes for 14s. 9d., which our grandfathers could not possibly have obtained at anything like treble the price. As an instance of the labour-saving devices, it might be mentioned that every sewing machine used in the making of these garments is driven by electric power; no work except the actual guidance of the garments through the machine falls on the worker, with the result that double and treble quantity of garments can be turned out with absolute assurance that every garment is really well made. This is one instance of how the method carried from the beginning to the end of the business has resulted in a better and cheaper article for the public.

The Result.

Readers would do well to investigate this offer, and the result to themselves, will be a considerable saving of money in their tailoring bills, besides being able to wear garments made from a cloth, which looks really smart, and yet will wear even better than the ordinary common cords.

Generous Free Samples for Readers.

To induce readers to give this remarkable cloth a trial, the manufacturers offer to send either a sample pair of trousers for 4s. 6d. and 4d. postage, if readers will send their waist and leg measure, or for merely a ½d. postcard asking for free samples, a generous supply of cloth cuttings, fashions, and a most remarkable measurement chart, which will enable readers to measure themselves, as well as any tailor could measure them, will be sent absolutely free of charge by return of post. Readers would do well to study the advertisement beneath, and either write for the sample trouser or send a post card for the free samples of cloth cuttings, etc.

HOLEPROOF

GREAT DISCOVERY! SAVE YOU POUNDS!!

Remarkable Cloth—Won't Tear—Won't Wear Out—Absolutely Holeproof.

We will give any reader a pair of Trousers, Breeches, or Complete Suit, free of charge, if he can wear the smallest hole in six months, no matter how hard he wears goods. We have discovered a really remarkable cloth that will not tear or wear out—absolutely holeproof, looks exactly as finest tweeds and serges, made in all the most up-to-date designs and suitable for farm and rough wear or office and best wear. Just to introduce this remarkable cloth to Cage Birds' readers we offer a pair of well-cut Gent's Trousers for only 4/6; Breeches 6/-, or complete stylish suit for 14/9, and send in parcel a guarantee, plainly stating if the smallest hole appears in six months (no matter how hard you wear goods) we replace the garment absolutely free of charge. Send 4/6 and 4d. postage, together with waist and leg measures, and state colour, for sample pair of Trousers (Breeches 6/4 post free).

WARNING! We have warned the public over and over again to beware of unsatisfactory imitations. Our earnest wish is that you compare our patterns with others. You'll see at once the difference between imitation and genuine.

FREE SAMPLES. Send just a postcard mentioning "Cage Birds" for grand free range of patterns, fashions, and easy measure form. Say Trousers, Breeches, or Suit patterns.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest.

(7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).

(8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must, of course, be sent to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A NEGLECTED SONGSTER (G. A. P.).—The insects you see running about the bird at night are red mites, and if the cage had not been used before, nor near any infested source, the bird must have been in a shocking condition for it to have borne these insects about with it. They harbour about the cage and appurtenances, and only go on the bird at night, as a rule, to feed. As regards the lumps on the legs, you should have described these more minutely. Are they on the toes rather than the legs? If so, they are probably lumps of hardened droppings and sand, which have adhered to them at various times and dried into hard lumps. To remedy things first overhaul the cage, remove bird, clean cage well, and at once burn all the debris, then wash it well with water in a pint of which you have dissolved a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash. Return bird when it is quite dry. Offer a bath daily, and three times a week for the next week or two add a little of the potash to it in the same proportion as advised above for washing the cage, and twice a week touch the ends of the perches, joints of door, and any adjacent cracks with a brush dipped in essence of quassia. Cleanse the feet by holding them in a saucer of warm water for a few minutes until the concretions are softened and can easily be washed off. You can assist the softening by gently pressing the hardened lumps from time to time as soaking goes on, but you must not on any account attempt to pull the lumps off dry. You will probably have to wait now until the bird moults, which will not be long, before the ruffled plumage shows much improvement.

PANTING ALL DAY (Geo. Whitaker). You ought to have given more details about the symptoms shown by the hen, and where and how you keep her. It is quite possible the panting may be due to nothing more serious than an overfat condition, or it may be of a bronchial origin. Try the following, and if not successful write again in three or four weeks' time and give the fullest details you can. For one week give a diet of plain canary seed only, and supplement it with a liberal supply of green vegetable food in variety, and add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece for two consecutive days, and then every second day for the rest of the week. After this time add to the diet a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and twice a week a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle, and during this fortnight add to the water every second day 20 drops of whisky, five drops each of oxymel of squills and Ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil. Shake well into the water.

SWELLING UNDER WING (Miss W. Harris). The swelling is probably due to serous effusion into the tissues of the skin, which may have begun with an attack of inflammation. I will endeavour to get the fluid pathologically examined, and let you know in this column if anything particular results. Meantime treat as follows for a week or two and then report result. Do not prick the substance any more. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed, and in addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of scalded rape, and on the alternating days a similar quantity of egg or biscuit food, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur twice in each week. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of mixed seeds, and some green salad daily. In the water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and add ten drop of lemon juice every second day for a week. Afterwards substitute a similar quantity of sulphate of soda, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and continue this for a fortnight every second day. If the swelling reappears you may paint it lightly once with tincture of iodine.

EXTIRPATING RED MITES (Miss E. Vaughan).—Baking the cages a few times at intervals of a week or so may suffice in your case. In addition, give a bath twice a week for a time in which a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash has been dissolved in each pint of water used in the bath. Hand washing would be decidedly the quickest way of clearing out the grey lice, but as you object to this, the bath just mentioned will prove as effectual for this purpose as the other, but will take a little more time. If the birds do not bathe freely you may spray the above solution of potash on them twice a week, provided you take due care that they are not exposed to chill afterwards. Powdered pyrethrum, which is much the same thing, is the next best thing to Keating's for dusting in the plumage, but the above treatment should render dusting unnecessary. Any good brand of carbolic soap on the market will do quite well for scouring the room or cages. Hall's Sanitary Washable Distemper is one of the best things I have used for the purposes for which you require it. Possibly others may be as good, but of that I have no personal knowledge. In using quassia chips place a tablespoonful of small chips in a pint of water overnight, stir well next morning, and pour off the clear fluid, and use it in the baths. Of the essence, use a few drops to the bath as advised on the bottle in which it is bought.

YOUNG CANARIES DYING (A. P.).—The symptoms you describe were due to severe diarrhœa in the young, and this was undoubtedly the real cause of the deaths. This you might possibly have corrected by adding a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinking water, giving a small teaspoonful of maw each day, and dusting the egg-food each time a fresh supply was given with arrowroot powder. It is essential to see that the food and water supply is always kept fresh and sweet, and particular care should be taken that any hemp supplied is sound and good. You should get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and follow directions therein closely next time. If the late brood was the first the birds have had this season, it is not unlikely they may want to go to nest again, and in those circumstances you may allow them to do so provided they get to work quickly. But it is very late now to start another nest, and I would not advise you to afford them any special encouragement to go to nest.

SOAKING EGGS (A. Jones, Cricklewood).—If you think the failure of the eggs to hatch was due to lack of moisture, you may immerse them in warm water for a minute—not more—on the evening of the twelfth day of incubation, and again on the morning and evening of the thirteenth day if there is no signs of them hatching. Also give, or offer, the hen a bath for an hour or two on the twelfth and thirteenth days. When immersing the eggs put them in a teacupful of water, in which they will have plenty of room to float; steady them gently with the tips of the fingers, and then watch them for a few moments. If they contain live chicks they will soon show more or less lively movements—twisting or bobbing about—according to the strength and activity of the chicks within them.

SOAKING EGGS (— —). In this reply I inadvertently omitted to say that the temperature of the water in which the eggs are immersed should be such that the little finger can be borne in it comfortably for a minute or two; or if you can test it with a thermometer, somewhere about 100 to 104 degrees.

YOUNG YORKSHIRE MOPY (Jack, Watford).—You should have said whether there was any diarrhœa present, or the reverse, and if the bird eats all right. Cage the bird separately and treat as follows for a fortnight or so, and if bird is not then well, write again, and I will advise you further. Keep cage strewn with clean, gritty sand. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed, and in addition give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed, and also half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, black rape, and broken groats. For green-food give a few half ripe seed heads of shepherd's-purse or plantain stalks, if you can yet obtain the latter, three or four times a week. Add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for two consecutive days, and after this give 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. (2) The sample of canary seed marked E is small, and seems to have a slight foreign flavour, and I should make it of only second-rate quality. The sample marked G, though small, is nice and plump, and of good quality, and the better of the two. The hemp is stale and rancid, and not fit for feeding Canaries. If you have been using much of this sample, it would be quite sufficient to account for some trouble in your stock. You must get a better sample, or use none at all. Yes, you may use builders' sand on floor of cages, and supply grit in a tin.

HOW TO ACT (An Anxious Enquirer). It is very difficult to advise you on the information in your present letter, as you merely say you lose birds from inflammation of the bowels, yet it seems to be adult birds that you lose, whereas it is generally young birds of the year that are likely to be troubled much in this way. It would have been much better if you had explained the symptoms as best you could, and given full information as to how you feed the birds. The probability is that your feeding is in some way responsible for the trouble, and you would be well advised to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and see if you cannot discover some flaw in your general management and feeding which you could easily remedy by following the directions in the book implicitly. See that your cages are kept scrupulously clean; that the quality and freshness of all food and water supplied is above suspicion; and do not give green-food or egg food in sufficient quantities at one time for any to remain in cage to become stale. Should another case occur, as soon as you notice bird ailing, cage it alone, put it on a diet of bread and milk liberally sprinkled with maw seed, and offer a teaspoonful of canary seed daily. Dust the bread and milk with carbonate of bismuth each time before adding the maw. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece for two consecutive days, and after this give six drops each of tincture of quinine and dilute sulphuric acid in the water daily until the acute symptoms have passed. As regards the one year old bird with a swollen abdomen, you may give it the buckthorn and soda as above every second day for a week, then miss a week, and repeat for another week.

WHAT VARIETY? (E.C.W.). It is not possible to be dogmatic about naming a variety from a casual and inexpert description. If it is of a moderate size, and has a close-feathered head, showing no overhanging eyebrows, it is probably a Norwich Plainhead; but if it is on the large side, and has long, dense body feather, which seems to project over at the sides of the head so as to form a sort of eyebrow, it is a Crestbred. (2) I'm afraid you cannot hope to decide sex yourself. All differences are quite comparative, and often so slight as to deceive a practical fancier. The song will be your best guide. If it is continuous and unbroken, and the bird inflates its throat well, and causes it to throb whilst singing, it is probably a cock. But your best course would be to ask someone who is more expert to look at the bird and tell you what sex it is. (3) To remove the hoarseness add 20 drops of whisky, and five drops each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil to the drinking water, and shake well together, every second day for a week or so.

LIZARD'S LARGE HAREM (E. M. T.).—(1) No, it is not necessary to give the cock Lizard any extra special feeding or stimulation on account of putting several hens to nest, seeing that he keeps in a healthy, robust condition, and that the hens will probably cease breeding at the end of the present round. (2) It is certainly unfortunate that the hen you obtained for a foster-mother should refuse to go to nest. But there is still a chance that the real parents will adhere to their duties so that the services of a foster will not be required after all. Should they be deserted you can then try your hand at rearing them by means of a "Filup-up" feeder, which you will find advertised in our columns.

IN DOUBT (E. Harding).—It does not necessarily follow that you have been unfairly dealt with because the cock of a supposed pair of birds does not sing. There are many cocks that practically cease singing when mated. Your feeding is all right, and if you add a few seed heads of dandelion, or a small stool of the plant altogether, each day for a time, you may even yet find they will turn out all right in the end. For one thing, you purchased the birds very late in the season, so that there is a possibility that they have already done some breeding before you got them, and may perhaps not be keen on nesting again this season. You could, of course, write and explain matters to the vendor, and see if he would try to give you more satisfaction, but this you should really have done some time before this. You could scarcely blame him not to make any alteration after this lapse of time. Possibly a little more patience is all you need.

NO RESULTS (Socrates).—The hen is clearly out of condition for breeding, and this is doubtless the cause of the infertility. Let her sit her full time on this clutch, and then remove all nesting facilities, and give her the run of a good-sized cage wherein she can get good exercise. Give a morsel of bread and milk dusted with carbonate of bismuth daily for a week or so. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for one day only, and after this give instead a teaspoonful of lime-water in the drinking water every second day for a week or so, or until the bowel symptoms cease, and on the alternate days 20 drops of chemical food. There is no reason whatever why she should not be of full normal utility as a breeder next season.

YOUNG DYING (Disappointed).—You must have overlooked enclosing the sketch you mention, as it did not reach me. However, it is of no importance, as it is clear that the cause of the deaths was owing to the parents failing to keep the young clean, so that the bowels became blocked. This may sometimes be averted by giving a rather more liberal supply of green-food to assist the action, or if the hen fails utterly in her duty, to transfer the young to a more careful parent. If she goes to nest again she may do her duty properly next time. It is not very likely that she will do so, however, this season.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

LINNET WITH SORE FOOT (B.P.).—Procure from the chemist an ounce of witch hazel, and put a teaspoonful in a saucer of warm water, and bathe the bird's foot in it, then dry with a soft rag, and touch the sore spot with a small brush dipped in the pure lotion. Do this daily until the inflammation has gone, then fasten back the hind claw to the shank of the leg with a piece of rubber tubing or a strip of court plaster. After a few days you can remove the binding, but should the claw still be inclined to go forward, you must fasten it up again. It is quite a simple operation, and the deformity not a difficult one to cure. It will not interfere with his breeding another year. You do not say how you are feeding him, but I would advise you to discontinue the use of hemp for a time, and give him a little soaked seeds three times a week, and a liberal allowance of green food and seeding grass, chickweed and shepherd's purse.

FEEDING HYBRIDS (R. G. W. Parsons).—To successfully rear young Canary Bullfinch hybrids, you should give the hen insectile food as used to feed Nightingales, Warblers, etc., and to every four spoonsful of the food mix one of hard boiled egg, just damping the food, so that it is not actually dry. It is a good plan to give the hen a little of this food before the young are due to hatch, although most hens will eat it readily. Soak a spoonful of summer rape and teazle, and give three times a week, also a little crushed hemp and maw seed. Collect plenty of seeding grass, chickweed, and shepherd's purse, and give her a daily supply. You should not give it all at once, but offer a little three or four times a day. If the hen shows a partiality for any particular kind of seeding grass, keep her well supplied with it. If she is a good feeding hen, she should manage to bring them up on this diet, but if she does not take to the insectile food, or you are unable to get it, feed upon stale home-made sponge cake, Osborne biscuit, and hard-boiled egg, beaten up together, with a fork or run through an egg mill.

FEEDING MAGPIE AND JAY.—These birds are not difficult ones to cater for, although I have always found they do so much better if fed generously. Like most other birds, they are fond of a change, and should not be kept too long upon one food. Soaked "Melox" could be given one day, chicken meal with a spoonful of meat meal mixed with it another, and two or three times a week a feed of a good brand of insectile food. Any of these could be mixed with boiled potato, a little vegetable, pudding, or any scraps from the table. You should also supply a few mealworms, beetles, or any insect life you can procure. As a dainty, a dead mouse or small bird twice a week will be very acceptable. A large cage or aviary is the proper place to keep one in, and the bath given on all suitable days. The food and water vessels should be placed outside, and should be so fastened that they are not easily upset.

VALUE OF PARENTS OF HYBRIDS (S.A.J.).—Hybrids bred between Bullfinch and Canary are generally considered to be as valuable as any we have exhibited, consequently the pair that have produced young are naturally more valuable than ordinary birds. There are many pairs that build and lay, but the percentage of fertile eggs is very low. If you are keen upon producing this cross I would advise you to keep them, although they may not do quite so well another year; but still, this uncertainty is one of the charms of bird breeding.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

If Hybrids were easily produced their value would be small. The offer you have is a reasonable one.

BIRDS FOR LARGE FLIGHTS (A. D. B.).—Your two flights would do nicely for your Finches, and I would advise you to divide them in the following manner: In one put the Goldfinch, Siskin, Twite, and one of the Linnets, and in the other cage the Greenfinch, Redpoll, and the two other Linnets. The seed for the first cage should be as follows: Canary 3 parts, summer rape 2 parts. This for the staple food. Give a little sunflower daily. Make a mixture of hemp, maw and niger—two of hemp to one of each of the others—and give a couple of spoonsful every other day. Twice a week give the same quantity of a good wild seed mixture. The staple food for No. 2 cage will be: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape 2 parts, linseed 1 part. Give the hemp mixture and wild seeds twice a week. Each cage should be well supplied with seeding grass, chickweed, shepherd's purse, sow thistle, etc., and others as they come in season. A little sunflower would be acceptable to the Greenfinch in No. 2 cage.

TREATMENT OF BULLFINCH (E. E. C.).—The treatment of your Bullfinch appears to be right, although the fact of his being somewhat loose is a proof something does not quite agree with him. Give him boiled water to drink with a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food in it, every other day for a fortnight, after which plain boiled water. Reduce his quantity of greenfood, giving the seeding tops only. Offer a good pinch of maw seed every other day. This treatment should put him right. You could then increase his supply of seeding wild food, fruit, etc. I would also advise you to add a little good sound teazle to his stock food.

FEEDING A SONG THRUSH (J. B.).—You should have no difficulty in knowing a Song Thrush. He is so common compared to the others. In size he is not so large as the Blackbird, is brown in colour, with a spotted breast. The Missel Thrush also has a spotted breast, but is much larger and greyer in plumage. (2) You should not have much difficulty in getting meat meal, as most corn merchants stock it. All food should be given slightly damped, or what one might call crumbly moist. This can be managed by mixing a little boiled potato or scraped carrot with it, or the crushed biscuit can be soaked in hot water and the superfluous water poured off. Whatever meat you give your bird be sure it is perfectly sweet; if not, it will do him more harm than good.

GREENFINCH BULLFINCH HYBRID (A. E. Harding). The cross between Greenfinch and Bullfinch has been produced many times, but I do not remember having heard of it being bred in the way you mention, that is the Bullfinch cock and Greenfinch hen. The Bullie as a rule is known as a bad breeder in captivity, and as you have several other birds flying with them I think it would be safer to wait until the young is fully fledged before trying to define its parentage. I shall be glad to hear that you are right in your surmise.

BIRDS IN AVIARY (Larney).—If the Thrush is on good terms with the other birds there is no need to move him, excepting that you will find it rather expensive feeding him upon egg food, which you will have to put in for the Redpolls to feed on, for that reason I think it would be as well to remove him. Make up the following mixture fresh twice a day. To one hard boiled egg crush two Osborne biscuits and the same quantity of stale sponge cake. In addition to this give soaked rape and teazle and a little cracked hemp. Collect plenty of seeding grass, chickweed, and shepherd's purse, and give a few sprays as often as you can during the day. (2) It is not too late for some of the others to go to nest, if you feed them well and give plenty of building material. In a wild state some of them nest as late as the month of August, and even September.

HYBRID MATTERS (E. M. T.).—The insectile food you sent appears to me to be rather coarse, and I fear will not be of much use, unless it is soaked in hot water or milk. I am afraid that if you try to crush it you will not improve it. If you use it, soak a little of it, and mix with it an equal quantity of stale sponge cake or powdered biscuit. It is not considered to be a satisfactory method to change the cock bird when the hen is in the middle of laying a clutch. A better plan is to make the change for the next nest. The eggs of the first clutch can be removed as soon as they have been set on long enough to see if they are fertile or not. The hen does not wait long before commencing to build again.

VARIOUS QUESTIONS (Dispute).—If the birds are very quarrelsome it is quite possible for one of them to do considerable damage to the other, an unlucky blow might easily injure the sight of an eye. I have seen a vicious hen so "go" for a cock bird that in ten minutes he was unpresentable. (2) Yes, Thrushes, Blackbirds, and Starlings are all classed as Softbills, and a Chaffinch, a Hardbill, although he partakes of insects and will eat a little soft food occasionally, but his beak is certainly a hard one, and his principal food consists of seeds.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

PULLING ITS FEATHERS (R. H. S.).—Do not make any sudden change, but you must gradually wean it from the bread and milk. The following gives an ample range of diet for a Grey Parrot: Seed mixture: ripe fruit, nuts, dry biscuit and crusts, together with the usual essentials: cuttlebone, grit, water, and a piece of a branch (half rotten) with the bark on. I should leave the water in the cage, it ought not to over-drink after such a period; or better, perhaps, leave it in for two hour stretches morning and afternoon, and then after a few days leave it in altogether. You will have to give it, I suppose, a little sop, to ensure it getting enough to eat; try it with the following: pieces of biscuit or sponge cake, slightly moistened with sweetened water, and every fourth day one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to be put over the lightly-moistened cake or biscuit. Put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in the drinking water daily, except one day per week, when give clear water. Once this annoying habit is commenced, it is often difficult to check, and there are often annoying relapses. You will have to persevere with the treatment, as any change for the better will be gradual. You can assist the above treatment by keeping it interested and amused as much as possible, and if it is a tame bird taking exercise outside its cage will help matters greatly. Report progress a few weeks hence.

GREY PARROT (J. McL.).—Do not accustom it to milk, save as a medicine, and do not give it too frequently. Continue to treat as advised in our former reply, but, in addition, put a little honey and borax in its mouth twice a day; this is easily done by smearing the mixture on the end of a stick, and tapping the joint of the beak with it, as it bites at the stick it takes the mixture. The stick should be cleansed each time before being put in the mixture. What you describe is not a fit, the old trouble is not yet got rid of, but if you find a period of strong excitement coming on, dissolve three grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup, and stir this into the drinking water; repeat this for three days, and then do not give again unless there should be signs of another attack, when repeat as above. If anything like exhaustion should ensue at any time, a little tepid brandy and water will be a good stimulant, about ten drops of brandy to the fluid ounce of water.

JAMAICA TROUPIAL, ETC. (W. G. M.).—(1) By Jamaica Troupial I presume you mean the Common Hangnest, and I do not consider it hardy enough to keep out of doors during the winter in a big cage, you could so keep it during the summer. (2) They have powerful beaks and are fearless birds, but in an aviary I should judge them fairly safe with anything not weaker than a Blackbird or Thrush. (3) There is the Gold-Crested Mynah, a beautiful bird, but the species usually advertised as "Crested" are the Pagoda Mynah, though very often some vendors will call any bird crested that has the power to raise the elongated nape feather a little. (4) I am assuming you keep them in separate roomy cages. All the following are interesting and beautiful, but unless you bide your opportuuity some may cost you a little more than 30/- each: — Gold-fronted Green Bulbul, Shama, Dhyal Bird. The Greater Hill Mynah is a good talker as a rule. For colour there are the Tanagers and Sugarbirds, Silver-eared Mesia, and any species of Robin, Redstart, or Flycatcher you see advertised within your price limit.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

FOREIGN FINCHES (J. Power).—Such queries are almost outside the scope of this column, and part referring to British species you must repeat to our British bird specialist, Mr. Norman, next week. It is impossible to describe the birds you ask sufficiently clearly for you to recognise them in two or three words, this would require a whole column! Pekin Robin: olive green, more green on top of head; side of face, chin, and throat yellow; upper breast ruddy gold; red bands across wing; beak and feet red. Zebra Finch: grey above, whitish below, tail barred black and white; ear coverts and sides of body chestnut, the latter spotted with white; chest and upper breast barred black and white; red beak and feet. The hen has no chestnut markings. Cordon Bleu: mouse grey above, blue below; the cock has a red crescentic marking each side of the face. White-throated Finch: mostly black above; beneath, including the throat, white, with a black pectoral band. Common Waxbill: grey with red eye streaks, and a bright rosy patch on centre of abdomen. Cutthroats: golden brown, pencilled with dark brown; the cock has a crimson band across the throat and a patch of chocolate-brown in centre of abdomen. I suggest a hinged cover for the roof of wire flight, so that it can be raised during the summer months, except during torrential rains, and fastened down, say, from late October to April.

CREY PARROT (T. Gould).—I consider the shedding of the down you refer to to be quite natural in a young bird, and unless it should become very pronounced you need not notice it, unless you see it beginning to pluck its feathers. Do not give it egg or other table pieces, and you cannot do better than continue your present treatment. The preparation you refer to is a good one, but at present you are giving your bird all that is necessary. While the hot weather lasts a light spraying with tepid water would be helpful to the bird.

RED-CRESTED CARDINAL (C. J. Wintle).—Canary, white millet, with a few oats and sunflower seeds, also ripe fruit, green food, and a few live insects. It is a South American species, ranging over Southern Brazil, the Argentine Republic, and Bolivia. It is quite hardy, and will live all the year round in an outdoor aviary, without any more discomfort from climatic conditions than accrues to our indigenous species. If nesting is attempted, young are seldom reared unless a continuous supply of live insects can be kept up.

PEKIN NIGHTINGALES (E. L. Grindle).—For some reason this species is a very shy breeder in captivity; even in roomy garden aviaries containing living trees and bushes success only comes now and again. Your feeding is about correct, but breeding success is rather doubtful in your aviary; it would be more probable if you could put in a couple of large privet bushes or bay trees in pots, but then, as you keep Canaries, the plants would soon be pecked to pieces. Dealers naturally assume that a pair of birds will breed, but cannot speak from any other standpoint. Your birds under the present conditions should thrive and do well, and please you with their beauty and mannerisms, but I do not think they will breed in your aviary; still, I do not say it is impossible, for it is the unexpected that often happens in aviculture. If young should be hatched you must supply them with live insects every two hours, from sunrise to sunset.

WHAT PARROT? (Orion).—Your friend has the Ring-necked Parrakeet (Palæornis torquata), and your bird is the Alexaudrine Parrakeet (Palæorms alexandrina [nepalensis]). The value of both these species is not high as newly-imported specimens, 7/6 to 15/- each, according to number on the market. An acclimatised and talking specimen in good feather, 50/- to 60/-. The values refer to both species.

MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS (H. J. C.).—These are erratic breeders, breeding freely with some and doing nothing with others. You have been treating them correctly. Could you not give them a small barrel instead of the bush; one about 7ins. diameter and 9ins. deep would do nicely. Cut a 2in. hole in one of the round ends, either round or square, and then hang it up in a rather retired place, and leave the birds to themselves. If your cage or aviary is large enough, leave in the husk as well. You are supplying all that is necessary; do not be impatient, they take some time to settle down and become accustomed to their quarters. If success does not come your way this season, it should the next, and then continue.

BUDGERIGARS (Ryde, I.W.).—These Budgerigars may have been breeders with their former owner, the change of surrounding and possibly more restricted quarters may account for them having done nothing with you, but they'll probably settle down as soon as the moult is over. At this season give them as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat—as regards the wet grass, what is required is a turf, say, about 8 x 6 inches, or it can be in two pieces for convenience of putting in cage; it will last several days if it is taken out and watered daily through a fine hose; the grass should be about 3ins. high. The grass flowers and seed heads can be tied in a hunch and placed in some convenient place for the birds to get at. You need not give up hope of breeding till November.

AMAZON PARROT (Interested Reador).—As this bird has not been used to soft foods do not give any, but treat same as advised for Grey Parrot in Nutshell. You can add a little maize to the seed mixture if the bird cares for it. Also supply nuts. I think the present wildness will pass, the motor-hooters would probably scare it for a time, but after it has become accustomed to them, it will mimic them, and you'll get more than you want of them I expect. Choose a nice retired, sheltered spot when you put it outside, and the sun should not shine down on to the unprotected top of cage. As regards value, such a bird as you describe that is in good feather, talks a little, and is not an incessant screamer, should have a minimum value of 60/-, but, if it is a newly-imported specimen, though a talker, its value would be a little less.

VALUE OF CRANES (W. J. T.).—You do not state species, but the following are approximate prices. I have given the price in pairs, as the demand to-day is for such, except to make good losses:—Demoiselle, £6; Stanleys, £24; Sarus, £16; Crowned Cranes, £24; White-necked about £80; Common, 80s. to 100s. Acclimatised birds would realise a possible 25 per cent. extra.

FEATHER PULLER (J. Asheroft).—As I suspected it is the diet that has largely caused the mischief. Stop the egg, also the tea sop, and confine the diet to seed mixture, boiled maize, fruit, nuts, plain biscuit (Captain will do), sponge cake, and stale crusts. While it remains thus, stir half a teaspoonful of cod-liver oil daily into the boiled maize after drawing away all the water; also lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. It will be easy to deceive the bird about the tea sop—instead of tea, use warm water and Chemical Food of about the same colour as the weak tea as the moistening medium. Keep grit and cuttlebone continually in the cage. I should continue to use the quassia solution. You had better get from our manager the "Grey Parrot" Nutshell, and gradually bring the bird's diet into line with what is advised there; but the boiled maize must not be stopped while the bird remains thin. As the bird regains tone and recovers from the effect of wrong feeding, it may cease, or partially so, to pull its feathers. In any case, it will be a work of time.

WHAT PARROT? (W. Simm).—It is a Blue-fronted Amazon; the sexes are alike in plumage, and the other distinctions are infinitesimal and only discernible by comparison with other individuals. The value varies; new arrivals about 30s., acclimatised specimens £3 to £5, according to condition and talent in talking, etc. The plumage of Blue-fronted Amazons is so variable as to the extent of the blue and yellow areas that it is quite unreliable for sexing purposes; the points to be observed are the shape of the head and beak. By noticing these you can pick out the sexes when you have a number to compare with each other.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

E. Cherry.—Hen Canary died of congestion of the lungs, probably induced by close, hot weather.

Mrs. Gott.—Bird died as the result of a fit.

E. W. Garnsey.—Fatty degeneration of the liver of some standing; the liver structure was entirely disorganised. The symptoms you noted from time to time were consequent upon poisons or toxins generated in the system as the result of the disease.

M. Burroughs.—Enteritis, probably resulting from ptomaine generated in the food.

Use DITCHFIELD'S Famous Bird Medicines as supplied to the London Zoo.

Ditchfield's Bird Medicines have been used for over six years by most leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. We have over 2,000 testimonials, and are receiving letters every day from fanciers, telling us of the marvellous results of our Bird Medicines. Mr. Hatton, Atherton, writes: "Your medicine for soft moult is excellent stuff, it has cured me four birds in soft moult, they are now in full song." Mr. Fletcher, Chademoor: "Have used your Tonic Drops for 18 months, and they have never failed to do as advertised." Mr. W. Harris, Dorchester: "The effects of your Tonic Drops are marvellous." Major B. Horsbrough, "Your medicine is magnificent stuff." Mr. W. Reid, Greenock: "Your medicine has been a great success, for both my birds are now singing." Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, egg binding, feather plucking, and inflamation of the bowels. In 7d. and (treble size) bottles, 1/1. Special size, 2/-. This medicine is invaluable for young birds just getting on hard seed. For bronchitis, wheesing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The safest and most reliable medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. For cases of constitutional weakness and debility, get Ditchfield's famous "Revivo," there is nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the bird. As a pick-me-up for birds before and after showing, "Revivo" is absolutely unequalled. In 7d. and 1/1 bottles. Special Notice.—When ordering medicine kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. To advertise our medicines we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6. All medicines are sent post paid, per return. All bottles broken in transit replaced. Also two valuable seed recipes, How to feed Linnets and Rollers for song, given free to all purchasers of our medicines: Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (1694)

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They can run like German Canaries. This class of bird has won the English Derby, all the English championships, and the world's greatest contests. They are the best birds in England for catching with, and for time-singing they have no equal. They are at workingmen's prices: 1/-, 1/6 and 2/-; a few with quality notes, will sing anywhere, 2/6 and 3/6; and a few, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, 5/-. I challenged the world with this class of bird from £25 up to £100 aside for quality Linnet singing. The above are all good birds and in full song. Beautiful Yellow cock Greenfinches, like paint, 1/- each; sure winners for the bench, 1/6. Young German Roller cocks, bred by myself, taught under my well-known champion Roller, 4/6 each. Beautiful cock Bramblefinches, 1/- each; Redpolls, 1/6 apair. Beautiful cock Larks, singing with full loud voice, perfect in feather, singing all day, 1/6 and 2/6; a few hand-reared ones, sing indoors or out, 4/6; and one, a real champion, right for contest singing (this is a real topper), 6/-. New Lark cages, 1/6 each, fit for any room. My book of secrets, 1/-, which is the best book published of its kind, sent by return of post, 1/-. Notice to Linnet singers who want a first-class bird, either contest Linnet or match bird: real quality Linnet singing or time singers, properly trained, and can win anywhere, from 15/6 to 25/- each. Write to me for any kind of bird, British or Foreign, show birds or singing birds. The original Linnet and Canary whistle, 6d. each; plenty in stock; no waiting; post card before birds; so send to the old British bird champion: Harry Allen, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (1676)

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird-keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatecls is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tames, and teach the to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 16 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

"CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL."

A wondertul sixpennyworth of birdy literature. See special advt. on Page 543.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates, combined with first-class work. UNDER ACTUAL COST

Having purchased outright a very large private trader and breeder's entire collection of some 900 odd birds, including 75 pairs of adult Green Budgerigars (his own breeding) last year, all now in perfect show and breeding condition, these we did not want to take over (as our own enormous stud wants reducing), but were compelled to as he would not part any lots. They are all cheap at 6/- pair, but to clear immediately we are sacrificing at 4/- pair, under price we gave for them. Secure while this unique opportunity offers itself; approval with pleasure; cannot be repeated when cleared; our own strain, 6/-; Greens, Yellows, 8/-; easy terms if desired: Collingbourne and Co., East Sheen, Surrey; and at Sunbury-on-Thames. (1696)

LOOK! Hayter, Importer, Southampton, again; 150 grand Tanagers, Toucans, Mongoose, Crown Cranes, 50 Amazons, big tame Chimpanzee, Tovi Parrakeets, Yellow Troupials, Self. Blue Cat, Baboon; all good and cheap.

ALEXANDRINE Parrakeet, lovely plumage and without doubt the best talking Parrakeet living, good plain talker and mimic, with large cage, a bargain, 60/-; approval: Edwin North, 443, Manchester-rd., Bradford. (1696)

PARROTS, four magnificent acclimatised Amazons, most marvellous talkers, never swear, only 50/- each, including new cages; suitable for good homes; remember, I hold 500 testimonials: Mr. Copp, Wardrobe Stores, Dartford. (1697)

PAIRS Diamond Doves 25/-, necklace Doves 20/-, black-cheeked Lovebirds 35/-; Rosella Alexandrine Parrots 20/-, 25/- each; Egyptian Geese, 10/- each; all bred here this summer: Wm. Shore Baily, Boyen House, Westbury, Wilts. (1692)

ESTABLISHED birds.—Cock Jackson's Whydah; pair Baya Weavers; cock Speke's Weavers; cock Hair-crested Bunting; pair Calandra Larks and Grey-headed Sparrows; all privately imported: Page, Glenfield, Graham-ave., Mitcham, Surrey.

ONE pair Purple-headed Glossy Starlings; 1 pair Red-crowned Pigeons; 3 Grey-headed Blue Water Hens; 7 Brazilian Teal; 1 pair Rosy-billed Ducks; 1 pair Chilian Pintails; 3 males and 3 females Eclectus; 1 Salmon-crested Cockatoo; 1 pair Himalayan Snow Pigeons; 1 pair Bronze-winged Pigeons, etc.: Albert Edward Jamrach, 180, St. George-st., East.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once, 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

MISTAKES BIRDBREEDERS MUST AVOID.

A most seasonable article. Alone worth the small amount asked for the whole book. Mr. St. John's thoroughness in answering queries on the subject of Canary breeding is well known to the majority of our readers. This article, written in the author's best vein, gives in detail mistakes in bird breeding which must be avoided by all who would make the greatest success of their hobby. Besides this highly instructive article, it also contains the following:—

STARTING A COLLECTION OF CHEAP BEAUTIFUL FOREIGN BIRDS. By F. Meakin.

HYBRID BREEDING IN OUTDOOR CAGES. By G. R. Pippet.

A HANDY GUIDE TO BIRD MEDICINES, AND THEIR USES.

THE SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT OF BRITISH BIRDS.—By F. Terry.

DIRECTORY OF THE JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

SEEDS AND THEIR USES. By W. Hobden.

HOW TO PROFITABLY BREED BUDGERIGARS. By W. H. Gibb.

SOME SIMPLE METHODS OF BIRDCATCHING. By J. W. Steel.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.—By H. Norman.

MY METHOD OF BREEDING CANARIES. By E. T. Sheppard.

£1,000 ACCIDENT INSURANCE COUPON.

In addition to this wonderful budget of bird literature, this marvellous little handbook also contains numerous sketches and art plates, and also of the two best birds of the year, by the well-known bird artist, Mr. H. Norman,

YOU MUST HAVE IT. SMALL PRICE——BIG VALUE.

REDRUTH F.A.

Annual show, Recreation Ground, July 1 and 2. The exhibits were well looked after by a band of experienced fanciers, with Mr. F. Collins as chairman, and exhibits from a distance left the show by 4 p.m., and all birds had left the field by 7. Entries were a little below last year, but quality was good. In Norwich the winning yellow captured specials for best Norwich, best in Mining Division, best Canary, and second best bird. Yorks. were small in number, but of good quality; the winning yellow took the special for best Yorks. and deserved it. The Cinnamon and A.O.V. classes were good in quality, the Cinnamon taking the special over the Crests, a bird of grand size and quality. The young stock classes were champions, and had to separate, and with a good moult will be heard of again. Mules and Hybrids were excellent, and the special over the three classes fell to a four point yellow Goldie Mule, shown in tip-top form. The British hardbill class was champion; two sets of winners could have been found. Special for best in show was won by Mr. Muscott, from Wales. The secs., Messrs. Opie and Kemp, had everything in apple-pie order by the time the judge, Mr. W. G. Poole (Stratford-on-Avon) arrived.

GLASGOW (Queen's Park) C.B.S.

F.F. Show, Marie Stuart Halls, Crosshill, July 4. Entries were somewhat below average, numbering only 40, and as usual the Norwich section was the strongest. Special for best bird was won by Mr. W. Steel with a cl. yell. Yorks. cock which with a good moult should do well for the owner. The special for best rung bird went to Mr. E. Holliday with a clear Buff Nor. cock which was greatly admired. Mr. A. McFarlane, Glasgow, judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Annual N.F. Show, June 27, in the central and well-equipped Montgomery Hall. The entry was not over large, bad results from the breeding season being responsible, but quality made up the leeway. Messrs. F. Jones, W. H. Champion, and J. Carr staged some fine Yorks., and in Norwich Messrs. F. Hemming, L. Woolhouse, J. Carr and J. A. Curley put down bonny specimens. Choice Britishers were shown by Messrs. F. Bearder and L. Fallding, the latter staging a magnificent team that was greatly admired. Mr. A. Hobson knows the secretarial duties to a nicety, and results admirably. Mr. L. Woolhouse assists nobly as assistant sec. Messrs. Fallding and Bevan trot well together as stewards, and keep everything in apple-pie order. Mr. J. C. Barnes judged, and his awards were capitally received.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, July 2, headquarters, Duke of York, and a grand lot of birds faced the judges. Norwich were the pride of the place, not only in numbers but a grand lot were staged by Loach, Hampton, Robinson, and Weaver. Yorks. were not so good in number, but there were some very typical birds amongst them. Points gained at the two shows for specials: Gibbons 39, Hampton 39, Loach 36, Robinson 28½, Weaver 24½, Trusselle 18, Ball 10, Rowley 2. Should any member find this list not correct, kindly notify same. Mr. J. Gibbons judged Nor., and Messrs. Hampton and Robinson Yorks., and gave every satisfaction.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Second Y.B. show, July 2, proved another success, entries being about the same as last year, which, considering the indifferent breeding season many of the members have had, was very satisfactory. Special best in show was won by W. H. Gardner's variegated Nor., a very fine bird. Mr. J. H. Joplin, who had out a very fine team, was the runner up with a clinking yellow mkd. Bord. Judging was over in good time, and there was an excellent attendance. Mr. E. Meades judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

HULL C.B.S.

Annual N.F. show held Oddfellows' Hall, July 4, when about 200 birds were shown. The quality was grand, and some of the winners in the novice section could very well have held their own in open competition. The champion section also contained some toppers. Messrs. WATFORD.

Tenth annual Y.B. show, July 4, the Conservative Hall. The show was disappointing, very few birds being available owing to a bad season, but some of the members are doing a bit better now, though not up to the usual average. Norwich were very weak, but quality was good. Mr. Fox took all the firsts, also cup for best bird. Yorks. were worse, only a few typical birds to make up for the deficiency. Only one young Hybrid appeared. British were fair, but not numerous. Foreign fair in numbers, but of grand quality, both Mr. Watts and Mr. Rackley putting down some grand birds. Old birds and selling classes made up a fair number. Mr. Rackley, the hon. sec., had everything in order in his usual businesslike form. Mr. John Goodall judged, and gave general satisfaction.

INTERESTING DISCOVERY!

No Reader Should Miss This.

A Certain Money Saver.

Readers of a serious turn of mind--those who think—yet not deeply, must recognise the remarkable changes made in every industry—the outcome of scientific study and research. The result of years of experimentation frequently gives to the world the most simple invention—so very simple, yet which in a few months scraps all old methods and appliances, and results in a better article at half the price for the public. The changes in methods of cage-bird keeping are simple yet remarkable for their results, yet to think that science has given us a cloth absolutely untearable — and of such hard-wearing qualities that the manufacturers willingly guarantee it, no matter how hard it is worn, for at least six months and at the same time offer clothing at half the price of that made from ordinary tweeds is certainly most astounding.

The Cloth.

As previously stated, this really marvellous cloth is absolutely untearable—you cannot tear it, no matter how hard you try; but possibly the thought arises that being of such hard-wearing qualities, it must resemble in some shape or form the ordinary old-fashioned cord. This is not so. Side by side with the very latest designs in tweeds, and the best of our fancy worsteds, readers without testing the cloth would be unable to say which were holeproof and which were ordinary tweeds. It is absolutely identical in appearance, and for considerably less than a sovereign, it is possible to obtain the design and colouring which in ordinary tweeds could not be procured under £3 or £4. The designs are suitable for office and best wear and field or rough wear, so that readers, whether at work or at leisure, need have no hesitation in wearing garments made from this remarkable cloth. The cloth could not be torn by a barbed wire fence, it is quite impossible to tear it, and the manufacturers predict that just as soon as the public learn of its remarkable wearing qualities, ordinary tweeds and serges will become a thing of the past.

Prices Extraordinary.

The prices of garments in this holeproof cloth are truly remarkable—of course, they are cut very low, more or less, to induce the public to test the cloth. It is possible to procure a really well-cut, smartly-finished suit consisting of jacket, vest, and trousers for the absurd sum of 14s. 9d., whilst a pair of trousers guaranteed for six months' solid hard wear could be obtained for merely 4s. 6d., or gent's riding, cycling or walking breeches for 6s.

Method in Making.

Readers naturally ask the question, can these goods be well made for the money? Here again is the result of the employment of modern methods and machinery, the outcome of years of experimentation, which have rendered it possible to supply a suit of clothes for 14s. 9d., which our grandfathers could not possibly have obtained at anything like treble the price. As an instance of the labour-saving devices, it might be mentioned that every sewing machine used in the making of these garments is driven by electric power; no work except the actual guidance of the garment through the machine falls on the worker, with the result that double and treble quantity of garments can be turned out with absolute assurance that every garment is really well made. This is one instance of how the method carried from the beginning to the end of the business has resulted in a better and cheaper article for the public.

The Result.

Readers would do well to investigate this offer, and the result to themselves, will be a considerable saving of money in their tailoring bills, besides being able to wear garments made from a cloth, which looks really smart, and yet will wear even better than the ordinary common cords.

Generous Free Samples for Readers.

To induce readers to give this remarkable cloth a trial, the manufacturers offer to send either a sample pair of trousers for 4s. 6d. and 4d. postage, if readers will send their waist and leg measure, or for merely a ½d. postcard asking for free samples, a generous supply of cloth cuttings, fashions, and a most remarkable measurement chart, which will enable readers to measure themselves, as well as any tailor could measure them, will be sent absolutely free of charge by return of post. Readers would do well to study the advertisement, and either write for the sample trouser or send a post card for the free samples of cloth cuttings, etc.

Can it be True?

The reader asking can it be true that the cloth supplied by the Holeproof Clothing Co., of 56, Theobalds Road, London, W.C., is absolutely untearable, need only send a post card and become satisfied that the statements are true.

A firm certainly has a strong argument in its favour when free samples are offered. We advise all to "sport" just a card, and get these samples.

Swan's Seven Cygnets.

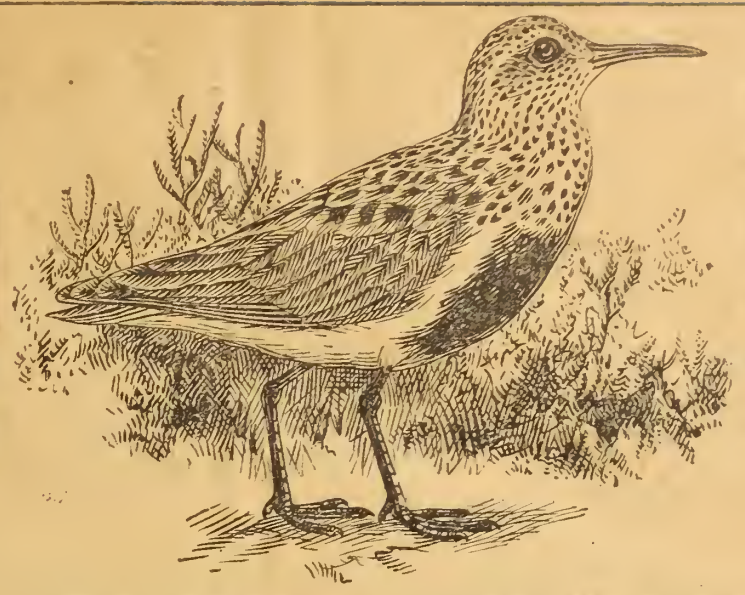
A week or two ago a correspondent raised the point as to whether seven Cygnets were not an usually large number: Mr. H. J. Fulljames tells us that whilst on holiday recently he had the pleasure of seeing a Swan with seven bonny Cygnets in one of the beautiful reaches of the River Wey—they made a most charming picture.

Nest Built in Train.

A Song Thrush which built her nest in a railway carriage is an interesting incident in bird life reported from Limavady. The railway carriage travelled each morning to Derry at 11.35 a.m. and left Derry again at 4.50 in the afternoon. Here the Thrush built her nest, and engaged in hatching four eggs. The nest was built on the top of the steam heating pipe under the carriage seat, and the bird travelled with the train.

A Remarkable Experiment.

Yes, the Holeproof Clothing Co. recently offered 10s. to passers-by who could tear one of the cloth submitted in their Theobalds Road premises. No one was able to claim the 10s., the cloth being absolutely untearable. Yes, drop them a card for samples by all means.



The Dunlin, a bird about the size of a Lark, which frequents marshes and moorlands in summer, a the sea-shore in winter, is included in the classification of the big club show being held next autur by the National British Bird and M.C. The black breast patch is lost in the winter plumage, wh the bird is grey and white.

The annual show of the Sutton-in-Ashfield C.B.S. is fixed for November 7, writes Mr. B. Gabbitass.

We hear that Mr. H. Tams, Longton, judges at Market Drayton September 17, and (Fenton) Stoke-on-Trent October 30.

The Edmonton F.A. Young Bird Show is to be held at the Charity School, Church Street, on July 16th at 7.30 p.m., writes Mr. Jackson, the hon. sec.

We have appointed Mr. Roe (Birmingham) to judge our annual members' show to be held December 5th, writes Mr. G. Baines, secretary Long Eaton and Dist. C.B.S.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding re date for our second F.F. show, writes Mr. G. Hunt, hon. sec. Doncaster C.B.S., will members note that the date is July 18, at Black Bull; birds staged at 2.

Mr. W. Gilbert, 42, Cowcross Street, London, E.C., writes that he has taken over the secretaryship of the London and Counties A.C.B. The young bird show, which opens at 6.30, will be held July 18 at headquarters, the Victoria Hotel, corner of Charterhouse Street, Farringdon Road.

A real good First Feather Show on July 11th is practically assured, writes Mr. P. W. Jeffries, hon. sec. of the North London C.B.A. Entries are well up to the average and competition for the various trophies will be keen, new members being well to the fore.

Secretaries of club and open shows might kindly note, writes Mr. E. Barron, sec., 119, Montrose Street, Glasgow, that the Scottish Plainhead Club will, early in August, meet to allocate patronage. Societies desirous of patronage should make application not later than August 5. Fanciers desiring to join the club will receive information from sec., as above.

Societies in Yorkshire and Lancashire wishing for the patronage of the Yorks and Lancs. British Bird and Mule Club should apply at once, writes Mr. T. H. Inman, sec., 43, Derby Road, Thornbury, Bradford, as we are wanting to get new books out. There were 331 birds shown at nine shows last season where patronage was given, and we hope to have more this season, as we have about twelve more exhibiting members.

Those well-known seed and food dealers, Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co. (Bishopsgate, London) are making a unique offer with a view of getting the merits of their tasteless colour-food widely known amongst possible users. During July and August they offer to send double-weight at the usual price of 1s. 6d. per lb. (that is, 2lbs. at the cost of 1lb.). This applies both to the red pepper itself, or the colour-food mixed ready for use. Note their advertisement this week; besides the above, other advantageous offers appear therein.

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," illustrated magazine, or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies spending not less than 10s. 6d. in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries taking advantage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate-money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

Secretaries should note that we can print at very favourable rates, show schedules, posters in colours, and ornamental prize-cards. Send for samples and prices.

Bath Entries Extended.

Entries for Bath show will be accepted up to Saturday's post, July 11. (See advt. under "Shows.")

A Novel Bunker!

An object of much interest is to be seen at present at the Festiniog golf links. A young Cuckoo is in full possession of a Lark's nest, right on the fairway to the fifth hole.

On View at Chingford.

The City Corporation is arranging at Queen Elizabeth's Lodge, Chingford, the magnificent collection of British birds and eggs recently presented by Mr. R. S. Mitford, C.B., to the citizens of London.

Watford's Bad Spell.

We regret to learn that the nest feather show of the Watford C.B.S. was not a success, owing, our correspondent informs us, to the "luck being perfectly rotten" up to date in the local breeding rooms.

A Pure White Swallow.

The Rev. R. I. Salmon reports in "The Times" that a perfectly White Swallow was seen on Tuesday four miles from Lewes by himself and three others, when driving near Barcombe Mills, in Sussex. "On our return journey, about an hour afterwards, we had another and closer view of it, as it was sitting or a wire fence by the road-side, and remained sitting till we got within six yards of it and had an opportunity of verifying our first impressions that it was perfectly white from head to tail."

The Beginning of Bird-Keeping.

At what time people began to keep birds in confinment as pets may be known to some learned persons, but is not known to the present writer, says Sir M. Conway, in "Country Life." Alexander the Great, I believe, is said to have kept a bird in a golden cage, but that is legend, and the cage has not come down to our times. Hawks, of course, were kept and trained throughout the Middle Ages, but they were not kept in cages, nor were they exactly pets. In 15th century pictures, at any rate, pet birds are occasionally depicted, usually in the hand of the Child Christ. Such pet birds are generally Goldfinches or bright plumaged local birds, not foreign importations. Sometimes the child holds the bird by a string fastened to one of its legs. In South America I have seen children with a bird at the end of a string, and it was a sad sight, for children are frequently cruel, and the poor little captive birds were dreadfully tortured. I imagine they seldom live in such captivity for many days.

COUNTRY RAMBLES.

The following rambles have been arranged; fanciers are invited to join, whether members or not: Southampton C.B.S., July 15, to Rufus's Stone, New Forest; Wibsey C.B.S., July 11, to Hardcastle Craggs, meet at Bottomley's Arms Shelf at noon; Sheffield O.S., July 12, meet 2.25 Midland Station, to Dore and Totley Station.

FIRST FEATHER SHOWS.

The following First Feather Shows have been arranged; we shall be glad to be notified of any omissions: July 11, Macclesfield and Dis. C.B.S., Shettleston C.B.S., N. London C.B.A., Haltwhistle tleston C.B.S., North London C.B.A., Haltwhistle C.B.S.; July 15, Hastings and St. Leonard's C.B.S.; July 18, Irvine and Dis. C.B.S., London and Counties A.C.B., Abertillery C.B.S., Windhill C.B.S., Beamish C.B.S., Birtley C.B.S., South Birmingham O.S., Halifax O.S., Coventry Godiva C.B.S., Stoke-on-Trent C.B.A.; July 25, South Shields C.B.S., Falkirk Good Intent, Derby C.B.S.; July 30, Upper Rhondda C.B.S.; Aug. 1, Pelton Fell C.B.S., Sunderland C.B.A., Edinburgh C.B.S.; August 4, Darvel C.B.S.; Aug. 29, Dunfermline C.B.S.

In the Courts.

Cruelty to Thrushes Punished.

At East Ham Police Court on June 30, William Jermy, labourer, 28, Grantham-rd., Manor Park, was summoned by Chief Inspector W. Rogers, of the R.S.P.C.A. for cruelly torturing three young Thrushes by withholding food and water from them. The Inspector stated that on Tuesday, the 16th ult., at about 8.30 p.m., he was in Grantham-rd., Manor Park, and saw three young Thrushes confined in a Canary cage outside a house, No. 28, Grantham-rd. He said to the defendant, "I am an officer of the R.S.P.C.A. Will you kindly let me examine those birds?" The defendant handed the cage to the officer, and they were in a filthy state, their feathers being matted together. They were emaciated, one of them being unable to stand. The cage (which the officer produced) had not been cleaned out for some considerable time, and smelt very offensive. There was no water in the cage, only a little sour food in a small glass receptacle. The birds had evidently been neglected for some time. The Inspector added that the birds were so bad that he destroyed them at the request of the veterinary surgeon.

Mr. Scales, M.R.C.V.S., corroborated, and Mr. Grubb, the magistrate, after examining the cage, said to defendant: "I wish I had the person before me that sold you the birds, I would convict you both for another offence. You have been guilty of horrible cruelty, and had it not been for your youth I should have sent you to prison. You will pay 20s., or in default 14 days' imprisonment." Defendant applied for time, but his Worship refused, and defendant was committed to prison.

How Shall We Make Our Club a Success?

A paper, by an anonymous member, read before the Newcastle C.B.S., and applicable to societies generally.

THE question is often asked "How shall we make our Club a Success this year?" Well in the first place there is one word in the dictionary that means a lot, and that is "Co-operation," and if each member understands its fullest meaning a club cannot fail to be a huge success. To co-operate in the first place means to obliterate one's self and one's individual interest to thoroughly weigh up each movement or suggestion from the club's standpoint and in the best interests of the club. We all know we want most classes at the annual show for our own variety, yet each member should consider carefully before making any proposition, "Will the section pay?" After all a club is like a business; it must pay, or it will cease to exist, and then where are the prizes coming from and where shall we show our birds? Opposition, judging from its effect in everyday business life, should act as a tonic to each member, and make him consider the situation and say to himself, "Well, how can I help this year, and what can I do to further the fortunes of my club?" The answer may be that one can only do a little. All are not blessed with the fluency of speech, nor with a deep pocket, and that is where co-operation comes in. All the little efforts go to make one huge telling effort that eventually means success to the whole body. There are many little ways, such as regular attendance at meetings, obtaining new members by introducing the subject of birds at all times to friends, and thus interesting them in the hobby and also spreading the fame of your club. There must be many hundreds of people who have a dormant interest in bird life and only need a little conversation to awaken it. Some members may not be able to do this, yet they could interest other members and make the meetings more interesting by a little paper on some subject relating to bird-keeping. If you are shy send it under a nom de plume to the secretary (poor hard-worked beggar) and he will read it, and I have no doubt it will raise some discussion, even if it does nothing else, and that in itself will be sure to bring forth some good. Some very enjoyable nights may be spent in bird-washing, lectures, egg-food making, etc. Surely a room full on occasions like these must provoke a good feeling and do some good. One section of any club that demands attention always is the novice section. I do not mean at show time only; all the year through the novice is seeking information and help. We must keep the younger ranks interested, and make them feel that they are of as much consequence in the club as its older members, or where shall we be in a few years' time? We want to see our club go on and do better each year, and it is only by careful thought, interest and consideration on the part of each member that it can do so. When selecting judges, carefully consider the following that each man will bring. Do not vote for a man because he likes your type, or because you know him. Take it as a business transaction, and see that he is well worth his fee in every respect. A real good judge will always help to fill his classes; specials help to do that also, so prompt your friends and business people and see how the land lies. There is a great deal in preparing anybody, and it often comes off that a sudden question and asking means that a firm will say no, while they would have said yes if they had been allowed a little time to consider. Don't forget that your secretary has a heavy time, and any little suggestions made early may save him a lot of time later on, and enable him to devote his time to more pressing things as the show comes nearer. One suggestion on my part would be to have a press correspondent who could report all meetings, and also write up and read the minutes at each meeting. He would need to be a sort of advertising agent also, one who could make the club's doings well known locally, besides in the Fancy press, and thus help to gain interest and support locally. One cannot expect a secretary to devote much time to this end of the work. I sincerely hope that these few words will awaken a few thoughts and suggestions that will lead to new ideas, and thus maintain the high standard and moral tone of Newcastle C.B.S.; and I also hope that each member may put his shoulder to the wheel and do a little. "Every little helps."

A Treat for the Golfers.

Golfers going to the first green on the Selkirk hills and getting into the heather are at present compensated for their trouble by seeing the unusual spectacle of a young Cuckoo in a Skylark's nest. The nest was discovered for the first time about a fortnight ago, and at that time there were two Cuckoo's eggs in the nest, and three Skylark's eggs lying at the outside, having been ejected, presumably, by an adult Cuckoo. Only one of the eggs apparently hatched.

"Undomesticated" House Martins.

There are few places now where we can see the House Martin nesting in the manner it did before man built houses and provided eaves, writes "F.Z.S." in the "Liverpool Post." On one of the Anglesey headlands which I visited, the home of Guillemot, Razorbill, Herring Gull, and Kittiwake, numbers of Martins have plastered their round nests on the frowning face of the grey rocks. Here they skim with the gulls over the water or hunt the flies above on the rabbit-riddled turf. They are as much at home on the wave-washed cliff as amongst the houses in village and suburb, and their cheery twitter mingles harmoniously with the weird laughs of the Herring Gulls and the hoarse growls of the Guillemots.

PRIZES FOR NEW VARIETIES

And the Breeding of British and Foreign Birds.

TO encourage all readers to try what they can do in the matter of evolving new varieties of the Canary, of producing new kinds of Mules and Hybrids, and breaking fresh ground in the breeding of British and Foreign birds in cages and aviaries, CAGE BIRDS is adopting the scheme outlined below, which we hope will commend itself to, and stimulate into action, every bird-keeper who can possibly join in it.

CAGE BIRDS suitable and valuable mementoes are offered to any breeder who succeeds in

(1) Producing and rearing any new variety of Canary, bred in either cage or aviary.

(2) Producing and rearing any new variety of Mule or Hybrid, bred in either cage or aviary.

(3) Breeding and rearing in a cage any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

(4) Breeding and rearing in an aviary any species of British or Foreign bird which has not previously been so bred.

The mementoes we offer take two forms:

(1) A large suitably-inscribed silver medal in case.

(2) A hand-coloured certificate, suitable for framing.

The choice will rest with the successful breeder.

An additional prize of £1 1s. Cash will be given to the breeder of the Rarest British Softbill in a Cage.

This is presented by Mrs. H. Warren Vernon.

Cash Prizes for the Best Written Accounts.

In addition we shall award to each sender of the best written essay in each of Sections 1, 2, and 4,

A Cash Prize of £1 1s.

that is, three guineas in all. In Section 3 the sender of the best written essay will receive

A Cash Prize of £2 2s.

presented by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker.

Rule 6, of course, applies also to the awarding of all essay prizes, to compete for which the essays must be of not less than 1,000 words in length. In fact the explicitness and helpfulness of the details given will be the chief features taken into consideration when making the awards.

The Governing Conditions.

(1) Claims for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes must be lodged with Editor within ten days of the young birds being hatched; and an independent witness skilled with birds shall certify to having seen the young in the nest or with the parents.

(2) All young, excepting only Canaries and Mules and Hybrids, must be entirely reared by their own parents; hand-rearing not being permissible.

(3) To qualify for CAGE BIRDS Breeders' Prizes the young of Hardbills and Softbills must live for at least three weeks after leaving the nest, young Quails six weeks, and the young Canaries or young Mules or Hybrids until after their first moult. By "young" is meant one, or more.

(4) Our definition of a cage is: A cage to come within the scope of Section 3 must be one that can be easily moved, without being taken to pieces, from place to place by one person.

(5) Written accounts of the breeding, for publication in CAGE BIRDS, must be lodged with us within four weeks (28 days) from the date the young birds leave the nest.

(6) The decision of the Editor of CAGE BIRDS will be final and binding in every case and he shall have the right to call together a committee of expert bird-keepers if need be to assist him in coming to the said decision.

My Scaly-Breasted Lorikeets:

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

This article is No. 45 of the new series of personal birdy experiences entitled "Through a Birdroom Window."

MANY years ago, one cold and dreary morning in late February, I received a telegram telling me that a big arrival of Australian Finches and birds was expected at the London Docks on a certain date, and that among them was a good pair of Scaly Breasted Lorrikeets. The price was £4, and if I wanted them I was to wire at once. I wanted them badly; but where was the £4 to come from? However, that was a mere detail, and the problem would no doubt be, as Dr. Barry, afterwards Primate of Australia, was so fond of saying, in his rich musical voice, solvitur ambulando. At any rate, I hoped it would. Off went a letter of enquiry, and I spent the next week (not as I ought) in fear and trembling; but in sweet and pleasant expectation.

One morning the usual message arrived: "Please, sir; some birds." Sad and surprised looks from the table, a painful attempt on my part to look calm and unconcerned. "Surely, you've never been buying more birds; those dealers do know you, they've only to send off birds, and you're sure to keep them. You must be a perfect god-send to them." In vain I tried to defend myself; I had only made enquiries. It was all no good. "It's no good talking," I was told, "people don't send birds to us." Perhaps, I thought, it is as well; as if left to your tender mercies I should say what Phil Robinson once said to his wife, when she told him she was going to buy a Bullfinch—"God help the poor bird." Of course it doesn't do to say such things openly; but I thought it all the same. Under the circumstances, I thought the less I said the better, and picking up the cage I passed away with Adam's averted face, for I had, like him, fallen.

Filling In Spare Time.

It has been observed that haste is of the devil; I don't quite think it is so, always. Certainly not with railways, for I feel confident that if the journey had been much longer I should only have had the Lorikeets to stuff; and that I do not care for. I have no sort of use for stuffed birds. The weather, as I said, was late February, and it was bitterly cold, and the birds had been sent off over-night from St. Pancras. They had been well packed in a travelling cage, and no doubt carefully wrapped up in thick brown paper, but railway porters are full of curiosity, and someone had torn the paper, just to see what was inside. It would never strike a porter that birds accustomed to tropical Australia might feel just a bit uncomfortable on a February night in Yorkshire. Probably they think, like an East-End mother I once knew who, speaking of children, said that in her opinion the way to bring them up was "to punish them well whenever you've got a moment to spare." On the same principle, no doubt, porters and clerks consider that whenever they get a consignment of birds it is their solemn duty to pull off the wrappings whenever they get the opportunity. At any rate, in this case they had done so, with very nearly fatal results.

As I looked at those two poor shivering birds I felt like a devout Catholic who sees a tourist try to enter the church with his hat on. My first step was to "get them to the fire," as I believe Ridley and Latimer remarked on a certain historic occasion, and to get them thoroughly thawed. I popped them on top of the oven, where they pretend to warm the plates for dinner, and after a few moments I was relieved to hear faint movement and shufflings along the pe[illegible]; so that I knew there was still a bit of hope. I left them to get thoroughly toasted for a quarter of an hour, and then I took them up and had a good look at them.

First of all I looked at the food tin, and I was horrified to see it full of canary seed. Although I had never kept these Scaly Breasts, yet my own innate common sense told me that this was the wrong sort of diet for brush-tongued Parrakeets. I suppose they must have eaten some, for hunger is a hard taskmaster. They say you can get used to anything; the dog can, after a while, sleep well in the cat's basket; but how long these Parrakeets would have gone on living, I should not like to say. I determined, however, that the experiment should cease forthwith, and going to the cupboard I got out a pot of honey and filled a little china pot, and hung it on the wires of their cage. In a moment they were down, sucking it up with the greatest avidity, on the same principle, I suppose, as a cannibal chief once gave for loving missionaries—"because they were so good."

A Disaster in the Night.

I got out my bird books, and carefully read up all I could about Scaly-breasted Lorikeets; but it was [illegible] much, and it was of very little practical good. It simply told me to get them on to a seed diet as quickly as possible; it didn't tell me what I was to do to keep them alive during the process; but these difficulties only whetted rather than blunted my determination to succeed. The Alps had been crossed before, therefore they could be crossed again.

I carried them up into my bird-room at the top of the house, and put them into a double breeding Canary cage, out of which I had taken all the inside fittings, and I covered the front with a bit of old blanket, and left them for the night, with a fervent prayer that I might find them alive in the morning. In a night many things may happen, as I know to my cost, especially in the winter. I was up long before it was light, and though I crept up very quietly, I was rudely asked why I wanted to wake the whole house at that time in the morning. I had resembled Nebuchadnezzar on the night, for though no instruments of music were brought before me, "my sleep went from me"; so where was the good of remaining in bed, when so many things might have happened? Of course I hoped for the best, but I expected the worst.

When I drew back that bit of blanket, I knew that the worst had come. The birds were not on the perch—there was only one other place where they could be—on the floor. I daresay if anyone could have seen me at that moment that I looked as worried as a Chancellor of the Exchequer; and then only a week before I had been almost popping with pride. There was nothing for it but to get rid of the bodies of the dead. I sneaked down quietly, before anyone was awake, dropped the corpses into the kitchen fire, and crept up to finish my toilet. Illusion was in its grave, the funeral was over—but I mourned.

Tempted to Another Fall.

I may say, in passing, that Scaly-breasts are rather nice little things, they are of a bright iridescent green in colour; about the size of Turquoisines, only rather more Dutch built, and with well-arranged yellow scales on their breast—hence their name. I felt quite miserable for about a week. There are some events in life of which it is difficult to speak without bitterness—this was one.

Late in March, as far as I remember, there came another subtle letter telling me that some more Scaly-breasts had arrived "in fine order." That did it. Good resolutions melted like snow before the sunshine, and an order was secretly dispatched for another pair. They soon came to hand, and as the weather was more open, I had greater hopes of saving them. By the way, why don't they bring Australian birds over in our summer, and not theirs?

Of course I was told by the powers that be, that I was only riding for a fall, the others had died (I wonder how they got to know this), these would do the same; but I cheered myself with words which a dear old friend once spoke to me: "How often," he used to say, "have I told you not to curtsey to trouble till it comes round the corner." Of course this is a strong metaphor, as I am not a girl, nor even a Suffragette!

When the new birds came to hand, I was relieved to see that they looked fit and well and nice and tight in condition, so I had quite good hopes that we should long continue together.

In Its Good Graces.

They say that there is a special department of Providence about for the protection of fools, of which I suppose I am chief. I am sure it must have been busy that day on my especial behalf, as really these birds were in lovely condition, and I felt I should be disgraced if I could not keep them alive. I believe I even ventured to dream of breeding them at some time.

I knocked off the canary seed, to which I was told they were well on, to fall back on honey, mashed potato made into a nice cream with condensed milk, and good ripe bananas, and I was glad to see that week by week they improved in general appearance. To see the cock on a warm sunny day puffing out his neck feathers and jumping up and down on his perch beside the little hen, was as charming a comedy as you would be likely to meet with in a lifetime. Occasionally she would give him a little nudge, as much as to say, "Do remember there are people looking on!"

I had no idea as to the age of the birds. It is very difficult to judge correctly in the case of Parrakeets, unless they are in their baby feathers. When asked to give my opinion on such a difficult point, I am always reminded of what a rude boy said to a young girl who had just put up her hair: it constituted, so he said, a decided improvement, in that she might now be taken for any age. Well, my Scaly-breasts might have been any age. There is nothing that can look so old as a Parrakeet, if it likes—Methuselah is a mere boy in these cases. Still, judging by experience, I thought they would be about two years old, and so like to go to nest, if I had any luck at all. About the middle June I put them into a good big compartment of my indoor bird-room, all to themselves, gave them some [illegible] apple branches for perches, and a couple of snug nesting boxes to choose from. Then having done all in my power, left the affair in the lap of the gods.

THE SONG THRUSH.

I heard from morn to noon a merry Thrush
Sing hymns to sunrise, while I drank the sound,
With joy, and often an intruding guest
Watched her secret toils from day to day.
How true she warped the moss to form her nest,
And modelled it within with wood and clay.—Clare.

For a few weeks the birds simply played about. Th[illegible] they began to go in and out of the nest-box, and my ho[illegible] went up by leaps and bounds. I even ventured to boa[illegible] always a fatal thing to do, especially where birds are c[illegible] cerned. I met a friend in Leeds, who also keeps birds, a[illegible] I told him arrogantly that I had some Scaly-breasted Lo[illegible] keets going to nest. He didn't say anything, but he look[illegible] a lot. I felt quite nettled and I said, "Don't you thi[illegible] I can do it?" "Oh," he answered, "I shouldn't like [illegible] say. You've talked like this before." After this the c[illegible] versation grew a little bit strained, and we parted.

Going Off—Not Going On!

When we next met, his first question was, "Well, a[illegible] how are they going on?" And I had to tell him, as w[illegible] as I could, that the poor cock had unfortunately shuff[illegible] off this mortal coil, just as he should have "won a meda[illegible] "Well," said my friend, "why doesn't she get marr[illegible] again; she ought to have her troubles, like anyone else[illegible] "Because," I sadly answered, "I can't find he[illegible] a ma[illegible] Do you think that Scaly-breasted Lorikeets can [illegible]'c[illegible] up any time you want them?" I advertised, on the pr[illegible] ciple that the baby that cries not never gets the milk; it was quite useless. I never so much as got an offer. It was now September, and I had not only los[illegible] one pair a[illegible] a-half of Scaly-breasted Lorikeets, value something [illegible] £7, but a whole season was gone. Alas, it is often m[illegible] congenial to be an ass than to acknowledge that you h[illegible] been one. Still if you had asked me that day what I re[illegible] thought about myself, I should have told you that I [illegible] no more fit to keep birds than a cow is to fly.

Nothing remained but to try and sell the hen at a g[illegible] price to some brother or sister who perhaps was wicke[illegible] keeping dark that he or she had a bachelor cock. I [illegible] an advertisement in the paper in the most alluring ter[illegible] but I only got one offer, sugesting I should take half w[illegible] I had asked. What could I do? Nothing is of more va[illegible] than you can get for it, and a ton of diamonds is worth[illegible] to the lost traveller in the desert. The odd hen was[illegible] good to me, so I let her go. Whether she ever bre[illegible] never heard, so I conclude she didn't. That is my [illegible] consolation; and now I had better close. I'll tell you [illegible] why. We once had a member's wife that would sing at [illegible] meetings; we couldn't stop her—she cost us 50 votes ev[illegible] time she sang! My readers will be able to draw the mo[illegible]

A lecture by Mr. J. Hodder (London, E.C.) before the members and friends of the London and Provincial O.S.

A BREEDER may be keen on breeding good clears and he has so well managed his stock that rather than risk a point or two he will pair clears to clears; if this is persisted in year by year he may have perfect type and fair quality, but he will lose badly in colour; and what follows? He may put down the most typical bird in the show, but it is passed because it has no colour worth mentioning. A poor coloured Norwich Plainhead is lacking in one of its most essential qualities and stands little chance on the show bench. You may have all your birds a blaze of colour if you will only carefully study this question of breeding year by year systematically for colour. Study all the points when pairing up, and make up your mind not to sacrifice any one point for a temporary advantage in some other way.

I used to think the end of February or beginning of March a most suitable time for pairing, then I thought the end of March best, but I am beginning to think now, after many years of careful study of the subject, that if we would only be satisfied with two nests, and pair up towards the end of April, it would be much more satisfactory in every way. Of course, to do this will require some skill to regulate the birds that are the most forward and so ward off complications and illnesses which may result from not pairing the most forward amongst them.

Disappointment in the Eggs.

I have noticed of late years that birds may apparently be in perfect health and excellent breeding condition and yet the eggs turn out to be unfertile, and where not unfertile, addled, or young fully formed dead in shell. Someone may say it is because of some constitutional weakness in the parent birds; I do not think it must of necessity be so. Early pairing and the changeable conditions of the weather have everything to do with it. Birds may be in perfect condition, and yet you will have unfertile eggs and the other disappointments already mentioned. I have noticed particularly that the birds bred towards the end of May and June are by far the best, the warmer and more settled conditions no doubt assisting greatly in their growth and condition. I have experimented considerably with young cocks, and I certainly think now if we could only afford to keep them over until the second year it would be more satisfactory in every way.

I find that not more than four out of every ten fertilise when they are paired up before the third week in April. Can anything be more disappointing than to go to nest after nest and find the eggs all clear? I would strongly recommend that only over-year cocks should be used for the first round and the younger ones kept back until the end of April or May, or if possible not used at all the first year. They will turn out to be much better birds the next show season, and most certainly carry a much deeper and better colour. Birds bred from, especially if worked very hard, will not moult out so quickly or so good in colour as the birds used sparingly, or not at all.

Keeping Show Birds Just to Show.

If we could only afford to do it I think it would be to our advantage in other ways never to breed from show birds. They would live much longer and do good service for a much longer period on the show bench: It stands to reason that a bird cannot last very long if he is breeding all the summer, then has to undergo the strain of moulting, then sent for hundreds of miles about the country to shows for the rest of the year. It is a wonder many of them live as long as they do considering the strain that is put upon them in this way.

Now a word on breeding. The season is now in full swing and many of us have begun to calculate as to what the final result will be; maybe some of us are already glad and some sorrowful. There is nothing that has its ups and downs more than Canary breeding, but he that endures to the end succeeds. I find the birds will soon go to work if properly cared for during the winter months. I believe there would be fewer failures at breeding if we only cared more for the stock all the winter. Take the hens, for instance. You cannot give them too much exercise. Keep them in the largest cages you have. It is very noticeable what a beneficial effect it has upon them to give them plenty of exercise. I have not had one case of egg binding this year, and I attribute it to careful feeding during the winter, together with plenty of exercise. I always give niga seed from January to the end of April, and plenty of mutton suet or bacon fat, also cuttle fish as much as they will eat.

It is best to remove the eggs as they are laid, until the third egg is laid, then set the hen on the evening of the day on which the third egg has been laid. When she has begun to sit, leave her alone absolutely. Some hens won't stand being interfered with. Never mind seeing whether the eggs are clear or opaque; risk that and leave the hen alone, it pays best in the long run. If the weather is warm give a lukewarm water bath about two days before they are due to hatch. This will do all the necessary moistening of the shells for hatching.

Why the Hatching Time Varies.

Some fanciers become very anxious and agitated on the 13th morning if no young birds are hatched, but don't be alarmed. Very often birds hatched in April are two and sometimes three days late. I have had young hatched this year on the 16th morning. The cold evenings and hens not sitting closely are no doubt the cause. When the young are hatched I give yolk of egg and a little powdered Osborne biscuit, and after the third day I give the white of eggs as well. I use one hard boiled egg to four Osborne biscuits. I have tried other things such as bread-crumbs, etc., but I find nothing answers so well as the egg and biscuits.

Sometimes if a hen becomes careless about feeding I try her with a little milk sop or soaked rape seed in separate vessels. I also give dry rape seed, hemp seed, and sometimes I mix maw seed with the egg food, and a very good thing is to add a teaspoonful of emulsion to each cupful. The best green-food for town fanciers I believe to be watercress, but be sure there is no frost in it early in the season. The safest plan is to use sweet apple until the end of April.

I give the green-food about the third or fourth day after the young are hatched and continue twice daily until they are reared, increasing the quantities daily as they grow older. When you have a bad feeding hen you would do well not to risk the young with her, but distribute them amongst your other good feeding hens, carefully ringing them before putting them with the others so that you have a record of their pedigree. It is a great inducement to hens to feed if you give the food freshly made three or four times daily, and especially at daybreak every day.

Some young birds will do for themselves when they are 23 or 24 days old, and some are 30 days old before they can pick for themselves. Never take a young bird away from its parents so long as it cries for food. The hen has laid her new clutch and begins to sit, maybe before the young are properly finished off, and under these circumstances it is by far the better plan to remove them and the cock to a cage by themselves and he will finish them off. Then give him a rest before putting him back in the breeding cage with the hen, and give him every attention. It is best to crush all seeds for young birds as their little beaks are too soft to crack them. I continue to give the egg-food morning and afternoon fresh to the young birds after they leave their parents, at the same strength as when being fed by their parents.

How the Young Are Fed.

When they are six weeks old I give the egg and biscuit in equal proportions and gradually reduce to two parts biscuit. But at noon each day every young bird has a supply of milk sop from the time of leaving parents prepared in this way: I soak the bread in warm water, then squeeze out the water and well soak the bread in boiling milk, then allow to stand until cold, squeeze out a little of the milk so that it is not too sloppy and give the birds with a little maw seed occasionally sprinkled over it. They also enjoy rape seed that has been soaked for 12 hours in cold water, and sprouting rape seed is very good for them and for feeding hens too, if kept quite fresh with pure water running over it at intervals.

Be careful when giving young birds water; drinking water too freely when leaving parents accounts for the deaths of multitudes of young birds. It sets up intestinal troubles. Some fanciers add a few drops of gentian to the drinking water, which prevents them drinking too freely. After careful study for many years of the causes of young birds dying when they reach the age of five or six weeks I have come to the conclusion that it is much safer to give them milk to drink in preference to water until they are seven weeks old, not forgetting milk sop as well. It may be a little more expensive, but it pays in the long run.

KEEPING AND BREEDING FOREIGN FINCHES IN CAGES.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., &c.

CAGES should be so constructed as to give the occupants a certain amount of privacy, and these requirements can be met easily, even by those having but little to spend, while a man who is handy with his tools may make cages de luxe for a trifling cost.

Of course, a cage with close-fitting joints, leaving no crevices as harbouring places for parasites, is the best, but the fancier who is no carpenter and who has very little to spend need not despair if he is prepared to give the extra care and attention which rough cages call for in keeping clean and parasites at bay.

Before proceeding further it will be well to settle the minimum size which can be used to give the occupants a reasonable opportunity to breed. It is as follows: 30 inches long, 15 to 18 inches deep, and at least 18 inches high—even for small species I do not advise a smaller cage, for such are frequently the most active of birds, and if not given space in which to indulge their activity very seldom approach real breeding condition, and such attempts as are made usually prove abortive.

Scorn the Merely Ornamental.

We will now consider the cages: First I wish to decry ornamental or pretty types, there is more dignity about a plain, neat cage (or aviary) than in an elaborately designed one, and it is more easy to keep clean and free from insect pests. I do not approve of all wire cages, it is difficult to keep the occupants of such free from draught, there is no privacy or retiring place whatever. The cage I favour is of the box type and of the size already given or thereabouts, and as these call for no description I only give the figure or diagram of a front, leaving the rest to individual taste and depth of pocket, merely noting that I prefer doors in each end of the cage, as well as those in the front, such are a great convenience in running the birds from one cage to another without the scare of catching, and also for getting at the respective parts of cage as required.

The Slender Purse Considered.

As regards the box, of course, a properly jointed joiner-made one is the best, but for those who can't run to this, then the neatest and best grocer's empty you can get will meet the case and only cost a few pence; it is best then to go over this at once, first rub it down with sandpaper, then give it a coat of good priming, after this thoroughly stop up all cracks and crevices, both inside and out, with a good putty containing plenty of white lead; then give another coat of paint; after this smooth up again with sandpaper and give the final coat of good enamel paint, putting on thinly and evenly—dark oak or black outside and pale sea-green inside, would form a good setting for nearly every species.

Now we have to consider the fronts and I propose to do this by giving an alternative diagram.

The gable shown is optional; if provided it affords a double retiring compartment. The wire part (¾in. mesh) is best made of one of the ordinary market loose wire fronts, these are so cheap that it is not worth while bothering with wire netting, as when comparing the difficulty of fixing the latter to make a neat job of it, and the finished effect, with that of a loose wire-front, the saving of a copper or two is not worth considering; besides the wire front being removable facilitates the necessary cleaning.

Twiggy Branches for Perches.

No mention, save this reference, will be made as to straight perches, as the writer does not approve of them. For perches all that will be required will be a twiggy branch at each end of the cage, and these should be so arranged as to hang from back to front or vice versa, and sufficiently far apart to necessitate a short fly from one to the other. Food vessels are better attached to small doors in the front of the cage; a small wire grating closes up the opening when the door is opened wide to replenish food supplies; when the door is closed the grating stands out at right angles inside the cage.

Food vessels are best of glass or china. For seed-eaters a self-supplying hopper can be formed at one end (not the screened end) of cage, the back of which is a door opening outside the cage, and it will thus be easily cleaned and replenished, such a hopper may easily form part of the end of cage. Then as regards nest receptacles for those which weave spherical nests, Waxbills, Mannikins, Grassfinches, Weavers, and Weaving Finches, or those which nest in holes, a rush nest (flask-shaped) is as good as any, while for those which form open cup-shaped nests a small rush basket answers the purpose well. The best way to arrange these is to get a bushy heather twig and fix the flask nest or basket in this and then fasten the twig in the screened portion of cage; of course, where the cage is gable (span) topped, a receptacle can be fixed both in the screened portion and up against the span of top. If the top is made waterproof the cage can be hung out of doors during the greater part of the spring and summer.

Keeping the Floor Clean.

I find I have said nothing about draw tray, this is better quite distinct from the hinged flap at front of cage, and should be of zinc, but if this is not convenient to the amateur cage maker then the draw tray can be dispensed with and the cage bottom kept clean by the use of a small scraper through the hinged flap in front.

I will add here that I have seen many excellent cages constructed with a little time and trouble from grocer's empties and I have bred British species in them in the early days of my avicultural experience, when it was a case of trying to get a florin value from the modest "bob."

If any point is not quite clear in above I am sure the Editor will not mind any reader using the Query Columns to elucidate same.

Front view of the cage advocated by Mr. Page. It would be excellent for breeding Hybrids, as well as for Foreign Finches. A: screened part, 9ins. wide, with door at B. C: front rail, with doors admitting food vessels at E, E. D: hinged flap, either for cleaning purposes or for insertion of zinc draw-tray. The use of the span roof is optional.

Two Canaries Out of One Egg.

SIR,—I see in CAGE BIRDS that a reader got two birds out of one egg, in fowls; that is not funny, as I can tell you I have got two Canaries out of one egg. The hen had four eggs and one was clear, and I took it away. Last Sunday morning my wife told me there were four birds. I said, no; but it was so, four birds out of three eggs. They are two weeks old. If you care to see them you can call at my address any time, by appointment. H. MARTIN.

[Our correspondent of last week was not referring to fowls; his two chicks were Canary chicks. We have, too, known several similar cases.—EDITOR.]

A Fine Record in the Breeding of Goldfinches.

SIR,—I read very often in CAGE BIRDS about Goldfinches and how to keep them. I have one pair. Last year the hen built a nest in a cage 18x12x9, and laid five eggs. I put her eggs under a Canary, and gave her the Canary's eggs. She hatched them, but the cock bird killed the young. She laid two more lots of eggs, five in each, fifteen eggs in all, and every egg had a bird in it. I have two young cocks and one hen from the above pair. I have paired these to Canaries, and I have two mules from one on seed, also three mules in one nest, and four in another nest; also one hen with four eggs down again from my young stock. These Goldies have all hemp seed, canary and rape, and nothing else. The old birds have built again this season. The hen has laid five eggs, and been sitting five days, so I think there is no secret about Goldfinches and their keeping.

The Collection of Exhibits from Shows.

An Extra Charge Instituted.

SIR,—Enclosed is letter received from the Great Northern Railway Co. This I consider another injustice to fanciers, and would like to hear if other societies are receiving the same notice, as it is time it is properly discussed. Means should be found to prevent this extra charge before the coming show season opens, as it means more expense to all societies holding shows.

Dear Sir,—I beg to advise you that it has been decided that in connection with Poultry and Agricultural Shows where we are required to perform collection or delivery after 8 p.m. an extra charge of 3d. per package shall be made for such services. Will you kindly note, and advise others interested.

Yours faithfully,

The Financial Difficulties of Irish Societies.

SIR,—With reference to the letter appearing in last week's CAGE BIRDS, although we members of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland are by this time becoming rather accustomed to the periodical attempts of certain individuals to create disunion in our Club, this attack, delivered from behind the shelter of a nom-de-plume, for pure unadulterated cheek far surpasses anything that has previously been hurled at us. I presume that I, as hon. treasurer of the above society, am better acquainted with its financial standing even than "Yorkie," who appears to be so well versed in the movements of the Irish societies, and I cannot understand how your correspondent, even in the wildest flights of his imagination, can truthfully refer to us as a society in financial difficulties, considering the fact that we issued our annual balance-sheet a few months back, showing a very respectable credit balance, which is all the more praiseworthy when one remembers the difficulties under which our annual show was held last year, owing to early dates and especially to the Labour disputes which were at their zenith at that time. I would also draw attention to the fact that since the time when that balance-sheet was issued the funds of the society have been greatly increased. We have arranged our next open show for Nov. 11 and 12, 1914, and have engaged Mr. R. Halliday (Shipley) as judge, so I think that, in spite of "Yorkie's" fears to the contrary, it looks very much as if we would really hold one, after all. As I have not the pleasure of being a member of the Ulster O.A., I am not in a position to contradict, or otherwise, the statements made against them, but I feel confident that there is no truth in them. I can assure your correspondent that I have only written the foregoing because I consider it my duty to do so, in case any may be foolish enough to put any credence in his wild statements. If "Yorkie" is a member of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, he ought to be helping his society, instead of trying to do it an injury. If he is not, he is not entitled to any information, and unless he wishes to come from behind the kindly shelter of his pseudonym, his future communications will be ignored. ARTHUR I. WHITTY.

An Egg Within an Egg from a Budgerigar.

SIR,—One of my Budgerigars has laid a very small egg, which contains another egg inside it. The size of the outer shell is hardly any larger than a pea. I would like to know if this is a common occurrence.

E. GALLAGHER.

The Song of the Nightingale in Captivity.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Bent, I presume the 'Gale that sang at night on the window-sill was in a box cage, and so would not get any gas-light, unless perhaps from a street lamp. I would like to know whether 'Gales in a wild state sing on dark nights or only on moonlight ones. Mr. Bent does not think it possible for a Canary to sing the 'Gale's song, because the former is a Hardbill and the latter a Softbill. But a Lark is a Softbill, I once had a Canary which sang the Lark's song. I have had Canaries which picked up one or two 'Gale notes. Being obliged to breed my Canaries in a cold room, I cannot get the young ones early enough to hear enough of the 'Gale's song. I am inclined to think that if young Canaries could hear the 'Gale's song for about three months they would pick up a good deal of it, and I dare say a Linnet Mule would prove a better scholar than a Canary. It would be important that the young Canaries should not hear the Canary song, which could be managed, of course, by allowing the hen to rear the young herself. C. HARRISON.

A Remarkable Case of a Homing Bullfinch.

SIR,—On July 4th, at our young bird show, one of our members surprised us when we were having a discussion on bird life. He told us about a homing Bullfinch he bought from a gentleman who had had him caged two years. After he had kept him caged for one year Bullie got away when he was cleaning out its cage, and, to his surprise, after flying about his residence (which is right in the middle of a wood, he being a keeper) Mr. Bullfinch crossed a mile of forest and flew into his former home and accepted his cage when offered him. I think this very remarkable, after being one year with its second owner.

The Probable Cause of Bad Feeding Hens.

SIR,—This trouble of bad feeding seems t be the usual trouble with many breeders, an what appears to me to be a likely cause is they breed their birds' vigour out. Surely from March to the end of June is long enough. Otherwise the old birds go into moult, they lack in condition. But when the number of young is small, fanciers try and try again, which I think is breeding disaster A friend of mine has been very unfortunate His hens let the young die, and he has only just reached two figures. On June 28 I paid a surprise visit to my friends at Ipswich They are birdy men, and I am sorry to say they have been faring rather badly. They are usually very lucky. Last year I was there in August, and they had many young in the nests, having had a very successful time. This year they are absolutely at a great loss. I remarked that I thought they bred until too late in the season, and I was nearly "told off." This year they have experienced the result. Their houses (out-doors) are very comfortable, and they have some fine birds but their hens are sitting on the young and refusing to feed. Two nests per pair is sufficient, to my mind, and if they are unsuccessful, then turn them into the flights.

Rearing "Living Musical Boxes" with the Least Possible Trouble.

The Interesting Views of a Reader in San Francisco, California concerning the breeding of Roller Canaries.

SIR,—I have read a great deal in CAGE BIRDS on individual experiences of raising birds in the aviary and I will relate the simple method I use. After giving the aviary its annual white-washing I put up twenty-four nest boxes of different models (I wanted to find out which nest the females preferred) —six little German shipping cages, with the perches taken out, six with only a back and platform, with a hole in platform to hold the nest pan, six with back and one side, and six with back and two glass sides. I let the nest pan stand up one inch above the platform, so the young birds can throw their droppings over the side and keep the nest clean. On February 15 I put in building material of all kinds, from twigs down to feathers. I started with nine females and four males of the best to be had for both strain and health, also good parents. The feathers I put in one net, and charpie in another, and hung them on the wall so the bottom of the nests just reached the floor.

As the weather was warm in February and March the birds got to work with a will, and I was surprised to see the majority of the little cages selected. The females laid, some three and some four eggs, every one good. When the first youngsters made their appearance I added to their daily food hard-boiled eggs cut in half, and cracker biscuits. I let them do their own grating, and they never left any over to get sour! I make no change in the food from mouth to mouth. The green-food consists of chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, and the young leaves of rape. The rape I throw out in the garden and when it is three or four inches high I pull the seedlings for them. They like it very much, but they prefer the chickweed well in seed to any other, as they go for that first and then feed their young. I will say that I always feed plenty of fat bacon with their greens, so I never know what an egg-bound female means—No steaming over a kettle for me! If they get plenty of exercise they get along just like the wild bird on the outside of the wires. To show the effect of egg-food, in the second nest the females laid four and five eggs each. I find it a good plan to use one male for every two females, as they have time to feed the young while the mother is sitting on the second nest. I have not lost a single bird this year after they have left the nest, and the young ones that were on the perch on April 1st are now singing as hard as they can. I do not remove the eggs from the nests in the aviary the same as if in a cage, as I find the old one has so much to attend to she does not sit while the first two or three eggs are being laid. I find when a hen has only four eggs they hatch out pretty near the same time. I treat them as if they were wild birds and believe that they know what they are doing better than I do. Next year I am going to wire in an extra 25 or 50 feet so they can fly out and gather their own green-stuff and insects and pick about in the soil.

Now for the bad side. This year I added three pairs of the very best Seifert strain I could get through a friend direct from Germany. The males are fine. They are fine songsters; they sing from 15 to 20 turns. But the females have been no good for this season; at least, they have built and laid 20 or more eggs but have had no young ones. Some few had a dead young one in the shell, but most of the eggs were addled. I would like to hear from Mr. Tomlinson what he thinks is the trouble. I think too much inbreeding. Their eggs are as smooth as silk and you could not tell the egg of one female from the other. The shell has a bluish tinge with a little dark on the large end. They do not seem to have stamina enough to fill their eggs properly. I am going to see how they will turn out next year, after a good rest and plenty of exercise.

I have a pair of Californian Goldfinches building in the aviary this year. This is their second year in confinement. Last year they did nothing. I am pleased to see the discussion going on in CAGE BIRDS about the Cuckoo. I have seen their eggs in nests along meadow banks, but never in those of the Linnet. In conclusion I would like Mr. Tomlinson to state in some of his articles what is the greatest number of turns he has heard from the Roller without stopping. One of the three that I got this year sings 20, which take him a minute and a half. I cannot understand on what note he inhales air; while the turns are short it takes a minute and a half, that is the best I have heard from the Rollers we get out here. I wish beginners all sorts of success.

The Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C. Cups.

SIR.—Many thanks to you for inserting my letter in CAGE BIRDS. As I stated, I had been unable to get the secretary to reply to me through the post. I came to the conclusion that I must appeal to you for information, namely the reason I was not to receive a cup the value of £1 1s. as 2nd prize in the novice section for 1913. That I have partially succeeded is proved by the letter, not from the secretary, who is supposed to reply, but the chairman, Mr. W. G. Andrews. Anyhow, let me ask why there was no cup for second prize. Are not the officials responsible for seeing that there is a cup provided, when they publish the rules and insert, amongst other instructions, that a cup for the winner value £2 2s. and a cup for the second value £1 1s. will be provided. Now we get the information that the chairman gave an oil-painting to take the place of the £1 1s. cup, as 2nd prize. He states the oil-painting is fully value £1 10s.; it takes a good oil-painting to fetch £1 1s. nowadays. As for members not competing for prizes, what about the president and secretary winning the two first prize cups? How much did they speculate to gain the cups? Such talk won't wash amongst fanciers, and I am afraid if the society is going to deal with members as I have been dealt with, it will not exist many years. If we are only expected to pay subscriptions and annual subscriptions, it is simply a farce to belong to the society. Anyway, without mincing matters further, let me tell them I am either going to have my prize or take steps to get it. I have finished in the press

Twites Breeding in the Shetland Isles.

SIR,—This is an extract from a letter from North Uust Lighthouse, Shetland, about the Twites I wrote you about some time back:—"I was very much surprised to find our Twites have nested quite close to the Lighthouse a little bit beyond the wall next the cliff. They were seen as if they were about to start nesting, so a few days later I went down to the place, and was lucky enough to find their nest with two eggs. This was on the 13th June, and to-day (29th) I went down again and found that the young were hatched, but only the two as far as I could see. The old asthmatic cock was on the nest when I went down, and seemed determined not to come off, but after a little coaxing I succeeded in getting him away, but only for a minute. This is the Twite mentioned in CAGE BIRDS of May 9. We always keep their cago near them, well supplied with seed and water." I may say that I send the men CAGE BIRDS every week, and the one who wrote the above quoted letter says he has had many valuable hints from it.

Pied Wagtail Nests on Railway Line.

Vibration and the Eggs.

SIR,—Some of your readers may be interested in the following, which I think is a somewhat rare occurrence. Some time ago I was informed by a fancier friend of mine of what he considered to be a curious nesting place of the Pied Wagtail, viz., on a railway line. I at once went and examined the railway which runs from Londonderry to Burtonport. I found the nest on the permanent way, between two sleepers, right under the point of two rails. The young birds were about ten days old and were doing well. Is not this a rare nesting place for Pied Wagtails? I think it is, seeing that there are all sorts of banks and ditches near at hand, also a river bank extending for half-a-mile. Does this not also do away with all the talk about vibration affecting eggs which was given so much attention in your columns some time back. There are eight trains daily passing over and within a few inches of this nest, and still a full brood is hatched. I think this is sufficient proof that vibration or noises of any kind have no effect on the hatching of eggs. I hope some of your readers will state whether they have ever known of anything like this before. Best wishes for the prosperity of CAGE BIRDS.

How Linnet Singing Clubs and Contests Should be Run.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to help Mr. Coward as far as possible in forming a Linnet contest club. Fanciers in London very seldom form clubs, contests being got up amongst themselves, and also under the patronage of the hosts of licensed houses. Each member in the contest pays sixpence for each bird he enters, and the landlord of the house generally gives a shilling for every pair of birds hung. A contest here amounts to about five pairs of birds at the most. Birds are drawn to meet each other by writing the name of each member on a slip of paper. The slips are folded up and placed in a hat, then drawn two at a time, just the same as at a sweepstake draw. For example, Harry and Jack are first drawn from the hat; the birds representing them would be the first pair hung, and so on. Each owner then takes his bird towards the nail he has chosen, and at the call of time from the watchkeeper, hangs his bird for ten minutes. Then the contestants immediately take their seats on either side of the timekeeper, taking the scores for their birds, with another man looking over each of them the whole ten minutes the birds sing. It may be needless to add that the interested parties, together with the audience, face the birds singing. No other birds should be allowed in the room while each pair contest their course. By acting together in this way you need no permanent officers. The prizes, of course, depend mainly upon the entries, as does the amount given by the host. If ten birds are entered, and a shilling per pair is also given, the amount would be 10s. to be sung for, and this would be generally split into three prizes of 5s., 3s. and 2s. Before the birds are hung each onlooker gives twopence towards refreshments, which is repeated during the time spent while waiting for birds on the nail. Of course this is the old system, followed for years among the London fanciers, and big success is attained. By adopting these methods a club is not really wanted. At the same time I will give my experience of what a club requires.

First you should get together all desirous of forming the club, and decide upon a weekly subscription, say from 3d., or even more, per week. This would enable you to hold a tournament, away and home matches, against a rival club (local), in which the clubs' best birds should compete. The amount of prize-money must be considered by the committee; possibly a sovereign aside. Each member still pays his entrance fee, also the patron provides his shilling per pair. This would, of course, help the club which wins, as it would be entitled to take one-half of the purse, the remainder to be divided among the best three birds which sang. Should the club enjoy a successful year, an outing, or even a supper once a year might be possible. Officers should be selected according to ability, and should be honorary. By following this method the club would be paying out nothing (apart from compulsory expenses) other than prize-money for open or private contests. Officers required: Hon. Sec., Treasurer, and four Committeemen. Timekeeper and referees can always be had from amongst the contestants, who would take the duty on in turns during a contest. The chairman is generally the club's patron; but this office is not really necessary for Linnet singing.

With regard to the contest room, daylight singing can be held as well as night singing. The room should be spacious, birds to be hung one pair at a time, and hung on nails driven into a black stained board about 7ft. in length and 18in. deep. Birds should not be facing each other, and at a distance of about four feet apart, and five or six feet from the ground. I should like to add that birds should be hung with cages facing a large window during daylight singing, and the same position can be used at night.

The Scottish Plainhead Club's Ring Scheme.

SIR,—I am at all times willing to enter into a friendly argument and to discuss to the full extent any topic which happens to interest me concerning our hobby, but when I read the letters of "Yellow Green" and "Wee Fifer" in your issue of 4th inst., I came to the conclusion that it would be a waste of time and your valuable space to continue this discussion. A portion of "Yellow Green's" letter is taken up with a feeble attempt at wit. I refer to his alleged joke re the Canary pie. What this has to do with the subject under discussion — or how it concerns me, I know not. I certainly did not even suggest that I did not sell my surplus stock. No breeder outside a lunatic asylum would suggest such a thing. But "Yellow Green" surely reaches the limit when he proposes that another vote should be taken, and I observe that a "Wee Fifer" also proposes the same course. Really their ideas of business are quaint. Why on earth should the will of the majority who voted not prevail? All members received voting papers, and if some did not vote, whose is the fault? And what guarantee have we that a larger number would vote at the second time of asking, assuming that the committee were fools enough to give them the chance? And, again, that childish twaddle from "Wee Fifer" that the club is in the hands of the few who do what they like. I suppose this endorses the previous reference to the "Big Wigs." Does "Wee Fifer" forget that he and others are responsible for the election of the committee? He is paying a poor tribute to the members of the club by calling down its officials. If he and his friends are not satisfied, the remedy lies in their own hands, and is obvious. The only relevant portion of the letters above referred to is where objection is taken to the handling of the birds. I quite agree that it is not the best thing for the birds, but as I stated in my letter of the 13th ult., the method employed, be it handling or otherwise, can well be left to the committee, and it should not be impossible to find a solution of the difficulty. I also stated that in any event we must be prepared for some inconvenience in return for the boon conferred by the ring. Personally I think it might be worth while merely to reserve the right to examine the ring, and this would deter the fraudulent party from exhibiting, as he would not feel at all safe. I am not called on to discuss the matter, however, as it is one for the committee, and they are quite able to tackle it. Now we have had some criticism, of a very weak variety certainly, from "Yellow Green," but we have had no suggestions. Can he give us a better scheme than the rings? If not, then I think he would do well to drop out of the discussion in which he has cut rather a sorry figure. He knows fraudulent practices exist, and he has all sorts of feeble objections to the only scheme which will remove them.

BUFF GREEN No. 2.

Did Birds Originate from Reptiles?

SIR,—The best proof of the reptilian origin of birds, which your two correspondents are disposed to doubt, is afforded by the fact that the earliest known bird, of which fossil remains have been found, had teeth in its beak, claws at the bend of the wing, and a long lizard-like tail with vertebræ, such as no modern bird possesses. Living birds of the present day show their affinity to reptiles by their method of reproduction by eggs, and by the scales on their legs, etc., which are of true reptilian character, and quite different from, for instance, the scales of armadillo or other mammal.

K. WELLS.

Rough on the Scientists.

SIR,—I quite realise and appreciate Mr. Coe's point that he only mentioned this subject—as it were—in passing, because it was generally accepted by the ornithologists. But why is it accepted by ornithologists? With us fanciers it is a case of follow my leader—just like a flock of sheep. If a great man propounds a theory, we bird-lovers who have not had the facilities nor the advantages of a higher education, receive the statement with credulity just because he happens to be a man of letters. Doesn't Mr. Coe think that instead of us finding evidence to disprove the theory, the scientist should find commonplace evidence to substantiate it before expecting us to accept it? His last paragraph surprises me, and shows that he hasn't studied his subject with the thoroughness that we expect from him. He says: "All I can say is that birds were hardly likely to have survived the Deluge, if they existed before that epoch." Surely, if he believes in the Deluge, he must believe in the Dove and the olive leaf, which afford evidence that birds existed before the Flood (unless he thinks Noah had the Dove made to order). But isn't it Huxley who tells us that the Deluge was only partial?—not that I attach any more significance to his theories than to those of other scientists—but suppose it were true, isn't it likely that some birds would have survived the Flood?

T. JOHNSON.

Not a Believer in Evolution.

SIR,—I see the question asked: Did birds spring from reptiles? I would recommend Mr. A. R. Coe to read the 1st chapter of Genesis: "Let the earth bring forth the living creature, after his kind, cattle and creeping thing, and beasts of the earth after his kind, and it was so." Let Mr. Coe try and see if he can produce anything that is not "after his kind." There are men who have said that man has descended from a monkey, but since that prehistoric human body was found in England a short time ago, and science said it was so many thousands of years old, now science says that if there is any descent between the two, it is the monkey that has descended from man. But this is not so, for everything will bring forth its own kind if man will not tamper with it. If there were no fowl before the flood, where did Noah get the Dove from? Let Mr. Coe read carefully the first seven or eight chapters in Genesis. To a man that will say that man has descended from a monkey, the only answer I would give is, he knows his relations better than I do. Could Darwin get anything else than pigeons with all his experimenting? A bird from a reptile, monstrous! A man, intelligent man, from a monkey, that which he has to teach, monstrous! All the fine buildings we see were conceived by the mind of man in his imagination before they were erected to be admired by those who look at them.

THE WONDERFUL VOLUME

'Our Canaries'

Can be obtained for

1/- DOWN.

Many people are making a Splendid Income from Canaries—you can too.

There is a great demand for high-class Canaries, and those who know the secrets of breeding and rearing them are making a splendid income. Apart from the big profits to be made, it is most fascinating to be able to develop the quality of your birds in the same way as the expert horticulturist improves the beauty and value of his flowers and fruit.

A Mine of Information about Canaries.

Every detail of the wonderful art of producing prizewinning Canaries is explained step by step in "Our Canaries"—a truly magnificent work on the subject. There are very full instructions on the selection of the parent birds, mating, feeding during incubation, and the feeding and aftercare of your Canaries when fledglings, and during the moult. There is also important information on the preparation of the birds for the show bench. In addition to this there is a mine of information on countless other matters, including the treatment of Canaries that are ailing, and how to prevent the loss that so many experience among their young birds at this time of the year.

"Our Canaries" is easy to secure.

In order that you may start right away making more money with your Canaries, arrangements have been made so that you can now secure "Our Canaries" at once for 1/- down. The balance you can pay in easy monthly payments afterwards. If you require more information about this wonderful volume fill in and send the coupon on this page for an interesting illustrated booklet. It has been specially prepared for readers of "Cage Birds," and is quite FREE. In order to lose no time, however, it is wisest to send postal order for 1/- for "Our Canaries" at once.

One opinion (similar to many others which we have received) from a delighted purchaser

LANCS AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting June 28th, at Rogue's Den, Glossop, kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. E. Fuller. There was a good attendance, and much important business was transacted. Owing to the death of our old friend, John Garner, another president was required, and this office was offered and accepted by our old friend Teddy Fuller. Several applications for patronage were read; it has been granted to the following shows: Manchester, October 30 and 31, Lancashires and Lizards; Nottingham, Nov. 13 and 15, Lancashires and Lizards; Club Show in connection with Denton Society's Show, Nov. 20 and 21; L.C.B.A., Nov. 27, 28 and 29, Lizards, and possibly Lancashires; Bradford National, Dec. 4 and 5, Lancashires and Lizards; Sheffield O.S., Nov. 6 and 7, Liverpool, Oct. 23 and 24, are still under consideration, and it is hoped to come to definite arrangements with L.C.B.A. for Lancashire classes as well as Lizards. Next meeting will be especially for consideration of Messrs. Bradley and Stansfield's offer re Lizard trophy, and the classes, etc., at our Club Show, Mr. Stansfield having made a very generous offer in regard to same. Mr. Moorbey, Broadbottom, elected a member. It was pleasing to hear that, generally speaking, members appeared to be having a right good time in the breeding room. Vote of thanks to Mr. Swalwell, who ably occupied the chair, brought meeting to a close.—J. Rukin, Hon. Sec.

BRIDLINGTON C.B.S.

N.F. show, July 3, Mart, Marshall Avenue, when a good number of high-class birds were put down. Mr. David Hunter, Scarboro', judged, and his awards met with great satisfaction. The buffs in both sections again came up in strong numbers, yellow Yorks. being the smallest class in the show. There was a good variety of British birds. BUFF YORKS.: 1, 2, Dixon; 3, Chadwick; 4, Cross. YELL.: 1, Glasby; 2, 3, Dixon; 4, Chadwick. BUFF NOR.: 1, 2, 3, Clayton and Smith; 4, Pressey. YELL.: 1, 2, 3, 4, Clayton and Smith. BRIT.: 1, Mallinson, Bullfinch; 2, Clayton and Smith, Bullfinch; 3, Glasby, Twite; 4, Chadwick, Redstart. On June 26, the report should give Mr. T. Glasby the credit for 2nd prize in yell. Yorks.—J. Chadwick.

BLAYDON C.B.S.

At the last meeting there was only a moderate attendance, owing, I think, to the fine weather, and also the local show at Newcastle. Mr. D. Page, Lintz Colliery, was admitted a member; we have secured the following eight patronages: N.L.C., Y.C.C., N.Y.C.C., N.E. and S.F.C., N.C.C., N.P.C.C., N.U.P.C., and B.F.C.C.—Geo. Havver, Hon. Sec.

DARVEL C.B.S.

A social evening was held in the Town Hall, July 3, on the occasion of Mr. James Robertson, the club's ex-sec., leaving for New Zealand. He was the recipient of some very handsome presents, which were handed over by the president, Mr. Nicol Hopkins, on behalf of the members of Darvel C.B.S. The evening was very pleasantly spent with speeches, songs, etc. Members please note F.F. Show takes place Aug. 4.—J. Fairful, Sec.

OXFORD C.B.S.

Annual young bird show, July 2, Old Masonic Hall, Mr. S. Salter judged a very good entry. NOR. CL.: 1, Wren; 2, Gough; 3, Lees. MKD.: 1, 3, Lees; 2, Wood. A.O.V.: 1, Fifield; 2, 3, Gough. NOR. (Amat.): 1, 2, Wood. GOLDF. OR HULLF.: 1, Gough; 2, Wren; 3, Holliday. A.O. BRIT.: 1, Pearce; 2, Wren; 3, Holliday. MULE OR HYB. (OLD BIRDS): 1, 2, Gough. YOUNG: 1, Wren. FOR.: 1, Miss Driver; 2, 3, Holliday.—A. F. Fifield, Hon. Sec.

ALTRINCHAM (Open) C.B.S.

Meeting, July 1, Station Cafe, Mr. T. Harrison presiding over a good meeting. The committee's arrangement of classes for the members' N.F. show, July 25, Rigby Memorial Schools, Navigation Road, Altrincham, from 3 to 8.30, was submitted for approval and accepted. Mr. Harrison gave a lecture on "Colour Breeding and Colour Feeding," Mr. Broadbent, chair. Mr. Harrison explained very fully the treatment he advocates, before and during colour feeding, and many years of patient thought and study must have been exercised during his experience as a fancier. The members very heartily accorded him a vote of thanks. Next meeting, July 15, Station Cafe, 8. Discussion on seed-bearing plants. Chas. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.H.C.

Meeting June 27, Mr. J. Mackenzie's, Mr. J. W. Lawson chair. Letters of application for patronage were read, and the following were granted same: Morpeth, Oct. 10; Newcastle, Oct. 23; Blaydon, Nov. 13 and 14; Haltwhistle, Nov. 20 and 21; Gateshead, Dec. 18 and 19; Sunderland, Jan. 15 and 16. Also the young bird cup to be competed for at Gateshead. A special meeting will be held this month, when cup funds close, to select the cups. To allow the sec. to get your books in hands of printer, will members please forward subs.? At present in hand £4 12s. 6d., and promises for next meeting from several. Date of meeting announced later. There is a suggestion of alteration in the rules of champion cup competition as regards being won outright, which will also be brought forward at the meeting. We still give a hearty welcome to any fancier who cares to join us. The best thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. J. Mackenzie for the use of room, and he said he was only sorry he could not repeat it. Next table show in connection with Newcastle C.B.S., Aug. 6.—F. W. Laidlow, Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting Mail Coach Inn, June 27. Decided that members' classes of under four be amalgamated. After the meeting we had a lecture by Mr. Pounson, of Barnsley, on British birds. He started his lecture by taking all the larger hardbills, the first being the Hawfinch. He spoke of the manner of feeding, this being plain canary seed, sunflower, and maw seed; he also gave us a good idea of the exhibition points. He told of the nesting of the Goldfinch, the way to catch them, and the difficulty of getting them on to seed, also the exhibition points of same. He also spoke of the Greypate and Hybrid pairs, and about the Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, and other hardbills. He then started to tell us of the softbills, his first bird being the Magpie. He told us of the manner of feeding the same, the points of exhibition, and so on. Thrushes, Blackbirds, Redstarts, Treecreepers, Sedge Warblers, and all the smaller softbills were mentioned. He brought his very interesting lecture to a close after speaking nearly two hours. A vote of thanks to the speaker was very heartily carried. Mr. Tonlson answered in suitable terms, and the meeting was brought to a close after very enjoyable evening. —Taylor and Bailey, Secs.

HALIFAX C.B.S.

On July 4, a discussion on the colour feeding of Canaries took place at Headquarters, the Trafalgar Inn, King Cross, Halifax, before a very good attendance. Mr. E. Stobart, presiding. Mr. H. M. Walsh opened the discussion, and brought forward some very interesting points, how to mix the feed, the quantities to mix, and to give the birds, the uses of green blood in breeding as a medium for conveying a good colour into the feathers, when to start feeding. In drawing the tails of young birds (Yorks) he draws when the colour shows down each side of the breasts, and not before, as when done at this time there is ample time for them to grow to full length by the time the bird finishes moulting. Several others put forward their methods of feeding, etc., and many interesting questions were asked. Spratt's cod liver oil food was highly recommended as a food for mixing with the colouring pepper for feeding. It keeps sweet longer than egg and bread crumbs, and saves time in preparing. One interesting point put forward was to moisten the cod liver oil food some hours before using, to allow of the food swelling to the fullest extent, as it will take up three times the space afterwards; success will be found by using four parts of the food to one of pepper. The evening proved to be highly instructive and interesting.—A. Sutcliffe, sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Young bird show, July 4, at Church Institute, Paddington Street. With a record entry of 202, and a special prize list numbering 65, the fixture proved a brilliant success, and so far the largest held this season. Norwich were the feature of the show, no less than 62 birds of high merit being staged. In the novice class of 26, Mr. W. Cobb secured the medal for the best Nor. in show. Crests and C.-B.'s were disappointing; but Yorks. held their own, the clear yellow of Mr. F. W. Ayer's taking the cup for best Canary. Borders were most encouraging—the number just doubled that of last year. In this section Miss Salter secured the beautiful silver spoon for the best Canary bred by a lady. British were unworthily supported, but Foreigners were extremely interesting, some rare species being on view. The Norwich cup was won by F. J. Martin; Border cup, H. Hobden; Wynn cup, T. L. Sayer; Hybrid cup, A. Thomas, with a Linnet-Canary; novice lady's teaspot, Miss Hobden; and champion lady's teapot, Mrs. L. M. Thynne, Mrs. and Miss Thynne, Messrs. F. Knight, F. Thynne, W. Sanders, C. Ross, A. Head, J. Taylor, and A. Beavington, gave unsparingly of their services. Mr. J. Robson judged Canaries, and Mr. A. Silver, Brit. and For., and gave full satisfaction.

HALIFAX C.B.S.

N.F. Show, held July 4, King Cross Bandroom, J. A. Taylor, of Frizinghall, Bradford, judged 37 birds, and gave entire satisfaction. The show was the second held in connection with our society, and was considered an immense success for a new society. The birds shown were of a very good quality all round, and the judge said there was not a waster in the whole show; some splendid specimens had been shown, and were a credit to the society and its members. Mr. E. Stobart won sp. for best clear or ticked bird with a splendid Buff Yorkshire. Mr. J. Booth, the steward, carried his duties out well.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

WHAT RESULTS? (B. F. G. M. S.).—(1) The results to be expected from mating a clear buff hen with a self cinnamon cock, assuming the hen has no cinnamon blood in her veins, would be self and variegated cinnamons, and greens and green-marked, and all the young showing cinnamon colour would be hens. The green and green-marked might be of either sex. The reverse mating, i.e., clear buff cock with no cinnamon blood, to a self cinnamon hen would produce greens, selfs and heavily variegated, of both sexes, but no cinnamon feathers. This, of course, is assuming no faint cf cinnamon blood in the clear birds in question, irrespective of its absence from the surface. (2) Sorry, but it is not possible to go into the details of building up an even-marked strain in the limit of these replies. The subject is much too large, so I would advise you to get Part 15 of "Our Canaries," in which the subject is treated in detail. (3) The results from a self green cock and a cinnamon hen, again assuming the green cock has no trace of cinnamon blood in his veins, would be the same as you would get from the clear bird without cinnamon blood and a cinnamon hen. There is no book dealing specially with these subjects, but you would find all these puzzling colour problems dealt with in Part II. of "Our Canaries."

MICE AND SITTING COCK (S. A. W. James).—(1) Really, the best thing I know to place near cages to keep mice off the birds is a well-fed and properly-trained cat. Fact. If you cannot command the services of such an ally, however, about the best thing you can do is to give the mice a course of the "Virus" which you will see frequently advertised in our columns. It would have been best to have done this before filling up the holes, but it is still possible to deal with them efficiently by treating the house generally with the "Virus." (2) No, do not by any means take away the cock which sits on the nest with the hen, seeing that he does not make any disturbance and is a good feeder. It will be much better to take any slight risk there may be and let the birds remain together.

SITS IN NEST (H. A. T. Lord). The hen's behaviour can only be explained as an abnormal cycle of reproduction, the ovaries not having developed to the egg-producing stage. It sometimes happens that a hen affected in this way, if given a clutch of common eggs of another hen, will hatch them out all right, and rear the young, and then go to nest on her own account and produce a normal cycle. It is too late now to expect that your hen would perform the second part of this programme, but it would be no harm to try her with a clutch of eggs, for which purpose wild Finches would do as well as anything. Otherwise your best plan is to take away the cock and all nesting material and turn the hen into a large flight, where she can get plenty of exercise through the winter months, and thus get her into a good, hard condition ready to try again next spring.

NAKED NECKS (Bareness).—You make no mention of any symptoms at all beyond the fact that the necks and throats are bare of feathers. Are there any insects in evidence that you are treating the birds with Keating's, and does the skin appear healthy or otherwise? Unless grey lice are troublesome the dusting is quite useless. If they are young birds bred this season, and caged together, it is not at all unlikely that the plucking is due to one or more feather-pluckers being among them, who are responsible for the bareness, in which case, of course, it is only necessary to remove the cause when the feathers will quickly be reproduced. If this surmise is not correct, give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur every third day for a month, and the day following this add as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence to each ounce of drinking water. Allow birds to bath freely, and give a few half-ripe seed heads, such as shepherd's-purse, plantain stalks, mouse-ear, chickweed, or dandelion, three times a week. If the plumage is not soon reproduced on this regime, write again, and give full particulars of any symptoms, appearance of the skin, age of birds, etc. But first watch them carefully to see whether there are any feather-pluckers among them. Stop dusting the birds, and do not put anything on the skin at present.

FEATHERS OFF HEAD (Jackie). The bird is probably being improperly fed and treated, but you give absolutely no information on this point. Get a copy of the Nutshell Booklet No. 5, which our manager will send you for 2½d., post free, for information how to treat it. For the present see that it is kept in a bright and healthy place, with plenty of fresh, pure air, but no cold direct draughts; see that cage is free from insect pests; allow it to bathe freely; and in addition to a staple diet of plain canary seed, give a pinch of summer rape daily, a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, broken groats, and chopped sunflower seeds, twice a week. Every third day for a month give a morsel of bread sopped in milk, drained, and dusted slightly with flowers of sulphur, and finally sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the day after giving this on each occasion, add to the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. Moisten the encrusted skin twice a week with sulphur ointment, but do not daub the plumage unnecessarily. Give a regular supply of green salads in variety. If you persevere with this treatment the bird will probably moult out into good plumage this autumn.

LETTUCE AS GREEN FOOD (H. A. P.).—Thanks for letter. Glad you found the previous advice useful. Lettuce may be used quite freely as a green-food for any birds that are partial to it. Most birds are exceptionally fond of it, and it is absolutely harmless, and being, as a rule, most easily obtainable, may be regarded as one of the mainstays of the fancier when other things fail. That is probably why it was omitted from mention in the last reply, as just now there are so many other good salads that lettuce may be reasonably given a rest, so that the birds may enjoy the privilege of having something fresh for a time.

OVERGROWN CLAWS (Salisbury).—Judging from your sketch the claws must be excessively overgrown, and this is doubtless the cause of the toes appearing sore and swollen. Catch the bird and bathe the feet in a warm solution of boracic acid for a few minutes—a teaspoonful of the acid to a saucerful of warm water. During the bathing gently remove any dirt from the feet and claws, dry gently, and by holding up the claw in front of a good light you will see just how far the vein, or "quick," extends down the centre of the claw. It is seen as a tiny pinkish streak. Make sure of this, and then, holding each toe separately between the tip of the thumb and forefinger, snip off the claw just a little beyond the extremity of this streak. If properly carried out there will be absolutely no pain or inconvenience to the bird. You may repeat the bathing a few times if necessary to quite remove the soreness from the feet.

OUT OF CONDITION (Hard Pressed). Your feeding is probably at fault, as no Canary should be fed on a mixture of canary, hemp, rape, and linseed as a regular diet. Indeed, linseed should never find a place in the staple diet, and hemp is all the better avoided in this connection. Get the No. 5 "Nutshell" booklet, which our manager would send you for 2½d., post free, and feed as advised therein. It is too late to expect the hen to nest now this season. Put on the proper dietary as soon as possible, and in addition to the staple give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight or so, and on the alternate days a fairly good supply of green-food—preferably seed heads of shepherd's-purse, mouse-ear, dandelion, and seedy sprays of chickweed. Add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water for two days, and after this give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a week.

GREY LICE (G.H.T.).—The birds are probably in a weakened, run down condition, as these pests rarely get a firm footing on strong robust birds with the opportunity for free bathing. Skilful hand-washing would be the quickest means of eliminating the pest, and this you might carry out quite safely in the case of the adult birds, but I would not advise it for the young birds so early in life. In their case you may give a bath about every third day, and in each pint of the water used in the baths dissolve a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash. Also use this solution, and in this strength, for washing the older birds if you adopt this course. Whilst any birds that are washed are drying, well wash out the cages with the same solution as used for washing or bathing the birds, i.e., a fresh solution of the same strength, and also in the case of the younger birds that are not washed you should wash out their cages twice a week for a time with it. If the youngsters do not bathe freely you may spray the solution over them two or three times a week, provided you take due care to protect them from chills afterwards until the plumage is quite dry. In addition to the staple seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar three times a week for a time, and on the alternating days add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the drinking water.

SLOW FEATHERING (D. Whitelaw).—Many thanks for your letter. It is interesting to know that you have proved by experiment that the parents' lack of proper attention to the young is the cause of the excessively slow feathering, which I suspected would be the case. It should be an easy matter now for you to go a step further and find out whether this hen, or hens, really pick off the quills of the feathers as soon as they appear, and thus prevent any feathers developing in this way. There are some hens that will do this, and it needs pretty cute watching to catch them at it sometimes. But still you should be able to do it with patience. I hardly think your surmise that the hens sit too closely would bear criticism. In either case your only course of action is to take away the eggs, or the young soon after hatching, and transfer them to better feeding and more careful hens to be brought up.

YORKSHIRE COCK BLIND (J.H.F.).—I am afraid I do not quite grip the description of the eye. Does the surface of the eye seem normal, but the pupil, on looking into the depths of the eye, so to speak, appear like a milky-white round disc, instead of the usual black disc? If so, the bird has cataract, and nothing whatever will be of the slightest avail in curing it. But if the whitish skin appears to be superimposed upon the surface of the eye, then, possibly, it is, as you have been informed, an ulcer. In this case get a chemist to dispense you an ounce of rose water in which has been dissolved five grains of sulphate of zinc, and 20 drops of wine of opium added. Then catch the bird each morning and evening and, holding it with the eye turned upward, place a drop or two of the solution on the eye, and allow it to flow around and under the eyelid for a few moments, then absorb it with a scrap of soft linen, and put on a fresh supply, and repeat process for a few minutes, finally putting on one drop and allowing it to remain. If this does not remove the trouble in a week or so, please write again, and say whether the film appears to be on the surface of the eye, or within the eyeball, as it were.

HOW TO KEEP ROLLER (C. Morgan).—You should get a copy of the Nutshell booklet, No. 10, which our Manager would send you for 2½d., post free, which would give you far more details than it is possible to do in these replies. When you get the birds keep them singly in box cages, in a bright and healthy place, with plenty of fresh, pure air, but no direct cold draughts. Do not on any account hang them in or very near a window, nor high up near the ceiling. Give a staple diet of equal parts canary and summer rape, which may afterwards be altered to two-thirds canary to one-third rape if you are not keeping the birds for contest singing, and in addition to this give separately a small teaspoonful of egg food, or any substitute, such as bread and milk, or prepared biscuit food, two or three times each week, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of mixed seed, which you may mix for yourself by mixing together two parts, by measure, of hemp and niger, one part each black rape, millet, teazle, and broken groats, a half part each of maw, and gold of pleasure, and just a sprinkling of linseed and yellow mustard. Give a spray of green food daily as long as the weather keeps mild and open, and during the winter substitute a morsel of wet apple or banana two or three times a week. Allow birds to bathe daily if they wish in mild weather, and offer the bath twice a week in the winter on mild days.

STIFF HIND TOE (Typo). Try the following treatment for a week, and if this does not set matters right, please write again, and I will advise you as to perches. Get a saucer of fairly hot water, as hot as you can comfortably bear your little finger in, for some minutes. Place beside this a saucer of quite cold water. Now catch the bird and hold the feet immersed in the hot water for a minute or so, then remove them and immediately transfer them to the cold water, and keep them there for a similar length of time, then bark to the hot for a similar period and back again to the cold, and so on until they have been in each water for six or eight times, but be careful to finish in the cold water. Then dry the feet and gently rub on the toes a drop of olive oil, or a drop of some embrocation, such as Elliman's, would be even better if it is handy. Repeat this treatment once a day for a week.

FOUR-IN-ONE (A. E. A.). (1) The failure of the hind toes is due to a little temporary weakness, which the moult has made manifest. They will doubtless come all right later on. See that the perches are well fitting and made of a nice soft wood, and are of a proper size for the birds to grip comfortably. You might treat them twice or three times the same as advised to "Typo" in this issue. No other treatment should be necessary. (2) As you prefer biscuits to bread in preparing the egg food you cannot do better than stick to the brand you now use. Osborne are as generally useful as any you can have. If, as I assume, you give the birds the first feed in the morning, I think the best way out of your difficulty would be to give a feed all round the first thing, using the proper strength of food for the young of different ages, and then mix the necessary quantity for the remainder of the day without any white of egg at all, and, of course, make this all one strength—one part egg to two parts biscuit. If you do not give any food yourself then I would advise as a stock mixture a pound of maizena wafer biscuits pounded and half a pound of desiccated egg yolk added and well mixed together. This would do for all ages of young and old, and it would only be necessary to take the requisite quantity for immediate use and slightly damp it with a drop or two of water. (3) It is impossible to say whether you would have reared more young by having an equal number of cocks and hens, and keeping the pairs mated all the time, instead of running two hens with one cock. You have got just fair results. If a cock had been with each hen all the time you might have done as well, or even better, or you might have done worse. (4) Am not sure that I fully see the gist of this question. But it certainly is not a recognised thing throughout the Fancy that more young are reared from pairs, nor, for that matter, from hens left to rear their broods alone. It is more of a question of treating each hen according to her known idiosyncrasies.

CUTTING YOUNG BIRD'S CREST (Cymro).—You were a little too impatient in cutting the young bird's crest, because it is so large that it prevented the bird beginning to feed itself as soon as its non-erected next-mates. Even if the cock was slacking in his attentions, as you feared, this would in itself in all probability have had the result of forcing the youngster to feed itself a little earlier. As it is, the bird is ruined for first feather shows, but considering its age now I see no reason why it should not be through the moult and ready for shows towards the end of October. The crest will, of course, come all right again after the moult. As soon as the bird begins to cast its feathers, keep it on the warm side; cover its cage, and it will probably be through in good time. In another similar case the best thing would be to exercise a little more patience, though you might also give a shallow vessel of egg food and a small pan of seed inside the cage to make it as easy as possible for the bird to pick up food for itself.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

COLOUR FEEDING (Quartette). The colour food advertised in our columns is the food to use for all cage birds. (2) It is an open question as to the advisability of feeding the Finches. In the case of the Greenfinch, the yellow wing bars are somewhat enriched but the rest of the plumage is certainly not improved. If you feed at all feed lightly. (3) Many exhibition Blackbirds and Thrushes are colour fed; in the case of the former bird you need not give it until the bird is well into the moult, as it is only the beak and eye cere that are deepened in colour. If you feed the Thrush he should have some all through the moult, if properly managed it puts a nice tinge of colour on the breast, a point that attracts attention. (4) You have just time to get a nest of Hybrids from your cock Goldfinch, if you run him with the hen at once, and she is still in condition to nest. It, of course, means a late moult for the young ones, but if you use ordinary care, they should come through all right.

TALKING MAGPIE (O. Ritson).—When people tell you it is necessary to cut the tongue of a magpie to make it talk, they are speaking upon a subject of which they are entirely ignorant. On no account allow anyone to interfere with your bird. To cut its tongue would be gross cruelty. If the bird is inclined to talk and imitate sounds he will do so without any operation, and for your benefit I may say that the majority of Magpies are famous mimics. (2) Clipping one wing would prevent him flying properly, but if you have a garden with a low fence he would manage to get over it. If the bird is a hand-reared specimen, he will most likely return to his cage for food and water, and to roost at night.

WHAT BIRD? (A. Porter).—I have never heard of an Australian Nightingale, and I fear you have made a bad bargain, the price should have been sufficient to have told you that it is impossible to ship birds all that distance for a few pence. By your description I should say the bird is a hen Bunting, quite useless for singing, and unless you want it for a pet, you had better take it into the country and give it its liberty.

HEN NOT REARING (W.S.).—You have evidently got hold of a bad feeding hen, these are far too plentiful in the Fancy. Try the following: For the first five or six days give egg and biscuit a little at a time, say four times a day, and green food twice a day, and in the evening a little crushed hemp. On the fifth day offer a spoonful of soaked rape, and the next day use a piece of soaked stale bread instead of some of the biscuit to mix with the egg. The bread should be quite a day old, and should be soaked in cold water for an hour, and then squeezed in the hand so as to get out all the moisture. Continue to mix the morning batch with this, and the afternoon lot with biscuit and a piece of stale sponge cake. Only give the soaked seeds occasionally. The idea is to give the hen a change of food, just as she commences to flag in her feeding. I think you did wrong in mixing the soaked rape with your egg food. This, if given at all should be given separately. If you are fortunate enough to get them on the perches, you must let the hen feed them as long as she will, by which time they will probably be feeding themselves on the soft food. Continue to supply this with cracked seed and split groats, they will soon be able to crack seed, but do not discontinue the soft food entirely or they will probably lose flesh.

BULLFINCH HYBRIDS (E.M.T.). — Several crosses with the Bullfinch as one parent have been produced, but not from the cock Bullie, the hen is the one mostly used. The cock Bullie is a bad breeder in captivity.

FEEDING BLUETHROAT (Bluethroat). - Although you are giving your bird the recognised food for Warblers, and mealworms, you are not feeding him quite as you should do. The insectile food should be mixed with the scraped raw carrot or other vegetable matter, and instead of the allotted number of mealworms, he should have greenly, small, caterpillars, beetles, gentles, etc., and I would advise you to encourage him to eat soft fruit, this he should have daily, both summer and winter. Bathe the affected parts with warm water and paint with a camel-hair brush dipped in iodine, repeat if necessary in three or four days. Dissolve as much glauber salts as will cover a sixpenny piece in his drinking water for one day only. Keep his cage and perches perfectly clean.

FEEDING A BULLFINCH (Miss Boyle).—The nutshell booklet on the Bullfinch will give you the information you require on the feeding of your bird, so I need not go into that. For the scaly legs, soak the feet and legs in warm olive oil and pick off the scales with the finger nail, doing it gradually, and re-soaking parts that are difficult to remove. When clear, wash in warm water, and anoint with a little Zam-buk, or other healing ointment such as boracic. I would advise you to carefully follow out the directions given in the booklet upon feeding and general management, but should there be any point upon which you are in doubt I shall be pleased to assist you.

ALWAYS FEEDING (S. W.).—It is not a good sign when a bird is constantly at the seed hopper, such birds generally go wrong after a time, if not treated with care. Your seed mixture requires a little alteration. For the present you will do better to give equal quantities of teazle, summer rape, and Canary, as staple food; make another mixture of 1 part linseed, ½ part each of hemp, niger, and maw, give him a little of this twice a week. Buy a good brand of wild seed mixture as put up for Finches, and allow him to have a spoonful of this twice a week on the days that you are not giving the other mixture. Give him an aperient; as much glauber salts as will cover a shilling, in his drinking water, just for one day only, and follow it up with 10 drops of dandelion juice fresh daily. With an occasional course of this treatment you should be able to keep your bird in good health. Don't forget the bath, and a spray of watercress, chickweed, or flowering tops of groundsel.

TREATMENT OF THRUSH (Constant Reader).—You should procure the nutshell booklet on the Song Thrush, price 2d. from this office. It would tell you precisely how to manage your bird. The food you are using is scarcely the right kind for always. Birds require a change. Procure some good puppy biscuits, break them up and soak in hot water; you can mix a spoonful of meat-meal or fine crissel with it sometimes, and at others a little high-class insectile food, and about twice a week let him have the insectile food only damping it with scraped raw carrot or boiled potatoes. Give him a few mealworms or cockroaches, or any insects you can procure. The better you feed him the sooner he will come into song, should he be a cock bird. It is very difficult even for experts to sex a single bird. Your description fits a hen bird equally as well as a cock; in fact, as a rule, the hens are better in markings and rather larger, but if you feed your bird as directed he should soon commence to warble, when there will be no further doubt.

FEEDING A LINNET (G. Cook).—You do not say how you are treating your Linnet, so I had better give you the method I use myself. If he is steady, place him in a cage twelve or fourteen inches long, and let him have a bath at least once a week, or gently spray him. Make up the following mixture as a staple food: Canary 3 parts, teazel 2 parts, rape and linseed 1 part each. Procure a good wild seed mixture, and let him have a spoonful of it twice a week, or, if you prefer it, you can make up the following: Gold of pleasure, niger, sesame, and thistle seeds, 2 ounces of each; mustard, dandelion, maw, and lettuce, 1 ounce of each. If you want to force him on to song quickly, you could give a spoonful of mixture daily, with a little lightly cracked hemp, the best you can procure. Don't forget to give him a spray of greenfood occasionally. You say your bird is in song now, but not very loud. Possibly you know it is not natural for a bird to sing loudly until he is in really good condition or in the breeding season. He will, no doubt, be all right a little later on.

HEN CANARY FOR HYBRID BREEDING (Novice).—If your object is to get a good dark hybrid from your Greenfinch cock and Canary hen, then you will require a large richly coloured variegated or green-marked Norwich Canary. If she is a young bird, so much the better, or if you are unable to procure this class of bird, you could, of course, use a clear or ticked bird, but there is always the chance that she may throw a young one or two with just a light feather or so, which would spoil an otherwise good dark bird. As a rule one has not much difficulty in getting variegated hen Canaries, and I would advise you to start with one of them. If you breed one or two of good size and colour, it will pay you to keep them for a year at least, as they make up a lot between the moults. Let the Finch and Canary get used to each other before the spring comes round, and then you will have no trouble in pairing them.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

REARING CRANES (Keeper).—All Cranes need a good grass, and if near a stream, pond, etc., so much the better. If not, a huge bath must be provided, and it had better be a concrete one formed in the ground, with facilities for the frequent changing of the water. The main general diet should consist of corn, wheat, barley, maize, rice in the husk, barley meal, bread cut up into smallish cubes. They also can be allowed to pick over table leavings, cooked vegetables, etc. The incubation period is about 36 days, or possibly one or two days less. They can be put under a hen, but it must be a steady one, for you, not the hen, will have to do the feeding for the first two or three weeks. Observation must show you when they can do without your help. Feed with such as earthworms, well scoured gentles, grasshoppers, cockroaches, beetles, etc., and moistened game, partridge or pheasant meal. A little meat and fish occasionally is good for the birds, especially during the winter months. But if the old birds have built a nest, and show any inclination to sit, it would be well to let them carry it through.

AMAZON PARROT (A. Brady).—You give no details of food and treatment, therefore there is no data whatever to work from. I can only say give mixed seeds, a little boiled maize, ripe fruit, nuts, stale crusts, biscuit, plain cake and greenfood. Other real essentials are grit, cuttlebone, half-rotten wood to cut up, and water for drinking and bathing, are permissible items of its dietary. Get bottles of Dinneford's Magnesia and Byrno-phosphates and put one teaspoonful of the former into the drinking water twice a week, and on the other days put half a teaspoonful of the latter into the water, and continue for a month or six weeks. Clear water may be given with advantage once a week. I should also get a box of honey and borax, and put a little into its mouth from the end of a stick once or twice daily. It can do no harm and will assist in keeping the mouth and throat clear. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

SHAMAH (A. B., Alexandria).—As these birds get plenty of liberty in the room daily, you could with advantage to their well-being double the supply of mealworms; but if you can capture spiders, beetles, smooth caterpillars, and other creeping things, which the Shamahs will take, this will be better for them than all one kind of live food. Again, while the season lasts you might easily stir in some live ants' eggs (cocoons) after the mixture is moistened. Try the following mixture for them: One part each best ants' eggs, dried flies, and crumbled sponge cake or crushed biscuit. This can be kept dry as a stock mixture. For use, take two tablespoonfuls of the above mixture, add one teaspoonful of meat dripping, a quarter teaspoonful of cod liver oil, and a tablespoonful of boiling water. Well stir together and supply to the birds. When available, a little grated carrot or finely minced lettuce may be stirred in as vegetable matter for them. The main thing is plenty of live food and as varied as your district and the respective seasons permit.

PET BUDGERIGARS (F. Gardiner).—Most of these hand-tame birds usually suffer from lack of exercise. If you conveniently let or induce your pet to take flying exercise round the room daily, you will have done much for it. Twice a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and continue this for some time; also from now on till frost comes, supply seeding and flowering grass ad lib. Diet: Canary and white millet in equal parts, a millet spray. Keep cuttlebone in the cage, also small bird grit; this is not sand, but an actual grit, and is obtainable from most bird emporiums. Try bathing the nostrils with a dilute solution (one in ten) of glyco-thymoline. As the trouble has been going on for some six months it will not readily be eradicated.

ROSEATE COCKATOO (Myosotis).—This species is as "hard as nails," but, of course, the hardiest must not be subject to a draught, but they would be perfectly happy in a coldroom during any period of the year. During the summer months let it spend the greater part of its time out of doors, except when the wind is in the north or east, and spray it regularly with tepid water containing a little quassia essence. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and on other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates. Keep a piece of a half-rotten branch, fairly stout piece, in its cage, for it to cut away at. If you can get them give it growing cereals to chew up, even if it does not eat them. You must continue on with the treatment. Once this annoying habit is taken up, even if broken of it, there are continual relapses for a time, and nothing but persistence in the treatment will effect either alleviation or cure. Sorry I can't be more definite, but these feather pulling cases are next door to incurable.

WEAVERS (Mowgli).—I am assuming that your whole query refers to Weavers. If you are sure all the eggs have been incubated twenty-one days, then they are no use, either being infertile or from some cause have become addled. I should not interfere with the nest, but if, when you see this reply, the eggs are still unhatched, then you may as well take them away. For some not evident reason, unless it be climatic, your Weaver retained its colour beyond the usual period, and as most of the Weavers are now coming into colour, your bird, instead of properly moulting, is donning another full dress, which will probably be very soon shed. That it would lack depth and richness of colour is what one would expect under the circumstances.

GREEN PARROT (I. C. Foster).—I assume this bird will be a Ring-neck or Alexandrine of some sort. They are more slender but about as large as a small pigeon in body, with, of course, a largish head and hooked beak and a long tail. Their intelligence is very variable, but if taken in hand young they usually make intelligent pets and talk distinctly; but there is a great deal of individualism in respective individuals. There is no royal road; first it must be tamed; kindness and petting will do much. Avoid anything likely to scare it in its vicinity. As you fondle it talk to it, also constantly repeat odd words, etc., and it will ultimately prove responsive. It will also mimic many sounds, calls, and words it hears uttered round about it. Respecting the Squirrel, please refer to reply under "General."

CAUSE OF DEATH (Molesey).—Only a post-mortem could have definitely revealed this, but in the first place I take it they are newly-imported specimens, and possibly you have lost them from the freak climatic changes we have been getting. However well they look, new arrivals are very subject to such sudden changes and, of course, take a few months to become acclimatised. I see your birds are not new arrivals; still, I think climatic conditions are the moving factor. Though birds have been established indoors for a time, they feel the change, and when we get a sudden swing back from one extreme to the other, some losses are bound to occur. One must, of course, take every precaution, but even with this the element of risk cannot be entirely eliminated. It often happens that birds which have been out-of-doors two or three years die at once when transferred to other quarters, where the conditions are equally good and the district possibly warmer. Mischief is often done before the newcomers find their bearings properly. I think, however, there are one or two birds you should watch, especially when shut up into the smallish sleeping compartment, viz., Java Sparrows, Ribbon Finches, and Goldfinches. The last-named is a regular "dog-in-the-manger" sort of a bird, and often keeps birds off the food long after its own wants are satisfied. Send your next body (or bodies) for post-mortem examination, giving details and asking if there are any signs of violence.

FEEDING A MYNAH (I. M. F.).—These birds are practically omnivorous, but need a fair amount of animal food to keep fit. It can have mealworms pretty freely, but it would be better to ease your pocket and also for variety to collect cockroaches, beetles, spiders, smooth caterpillars, and other creeping things. The main dietary will be live insects, soft food, and ripe fruit. You can make a good soft food from crushed dog biscuit, ants' eggs and crissel, equal parts of each. According to convenience, any of the following table leavings can be offered: Meat and vegetables, milk puddings, boiled rice, etc. Of course, any meat leavings must be suitably minced. Bread and milk will certainly do this bird no hurt. Mynahs are large eaters, and the cage necessarily needs close attention to keep it presentable and sweet. A little meat dripping may be added to the soft food before the daily portion is moistened with boiling water. It should not be a wet sloggy mass, but just crumbly when moistened.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. S. Robinson.—Death due to fatty degeneration of the liver.

A. Buckler.—Death due to enteritis following a pre-existing liver disease.

E. Pearce Brown.—Bird's condition was in too bad a state to make a definite post-mortem. "Cage Birds" may be bought from most bookstalls.

I. P.S.—Septic fever.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Feeding a Squirrel (J. C. Foster).—The main food of a squirrel will consist of nuts and grain, but in nature they eat the eggs of small birds and other animal food. They should, therefore, be supplied with something of the sort in confinement. Eggs of sparrows, and a few mealworms, for instance. You may give also a little milk sop.

J. Pickering.—We cannot, we regret to say, give you the information. We should have thought you would have discovered a livestock (or bird) dealer in Washington by consulting the local directory when you are in that city. The import duty payable on wire cage fronts would surely only be trifling if anything at all; a local paper or the local authorities could best give you particulars.
